KEY TO HISTORY

TO THE KING.

May it please Your MAJESTY,

TO accept, what is most peculiarly Your Due, the Dedication of this Book.

Since 'tis the HISTORY of an eminent Part of Your Dominions, which had the Happiness to be under the Government of some of Your Royal Ancestors, for near Four Hundred Years together; and that too, as a distinct Kingdom by it self; and the First of the Saxon Heptarchy; the Honour of which, Kent still commemorates, by bearing the White Horse for the Arms of the County.

And as thoſe Illuſtrious Saxon Heroes, when above a Thouſand Years ago called in by the Britons to ſave them from Deſtruction, made Kent the firſt Place of their Entrance, and of their Settlement; ſo this County thinks it ſelf much more bleſs'd and honour'd now, by Your Majeſty's having firſt Landed here.

For as Kent hath ever had Your Majeſty's Intereſt entirely at Heart, and hath with Duty, Affection and Zeal, on all Occaſions, promoted it; and as it gratefully acknowledges the Deliverance it receiv'd by Your Majeſty's Acceſſion to the Throne of theſe Realms, as the greateſt of all Bleſſings, next to the Continuance of it; ſo nothing can be more pleaſing to it, than the Honour and Favour of Your Majeſty's Preſence; that we may Admire and Venerate that beneficent Goodneſs which always adorns Your Royal Aſpect, and commands the Love and Eſteem of all that behold You.

And permit me, GREAT SIRE, with all Duty and Humility to aſſure Your Majeſty, that as I have been, at, and ever ſince the late happy Revolution, invariably attached to that moſt Juſt and Glorious Cauſe, and to Your Majeſty's Title, Intereſt, and Government; ſo I will ever continue in the ſame Duty and Loyalty; and do the utmoſt I can to convince my Fellow Subjects, that notwithſtanding the reſtleſs Endeavours of ſuch as neither regard the Publick Good, nor their own, Your Majeſty's ſteady Deſigns, and wiſe Meaſures, will render all Your People eaſy and happy; ſecure our Commerce, and advance our National Honour and Power.

And ſo extenſive is Your Majeſty's Wiſdom, Goodneſs and Beneficence, that it is not confin'd only to Your own People: The Court of Vienna, and the Ottoman-Port, jointly acknowledge the Benefit of Your Mediation for the Peace they enjoy. And no one can now doubt, but that thoſe mighty mighty Alliances which Your Majeſty hath formed, will, in Concurrence with the Divine Bleſſing, ſoon ſecure an advantageous and laſting One for all EUROPE.

That Your Majeſty may be aſſiſted by the Divine Bleſſing in all theſe Your Great and Generous Deſigns, for the univerſal Good of Mankind, is, and ſhall always be the moſt hearty Prayer of,

SIRE,

YOUR MAJESTY'S

Moſt Dutiful, and Moſt Loyal

Subject and Servant,

JOHN HARRIS.

YOUR MAJESTY'S

MOST DUTIFUL AND MOST LOYAL

SUBJECT AND SERVANT,

JOHN HARRIS.

THE PREFACE.

IS now about Eight Years ſince I began this Work; and though I have employed in it, with the utmoſt Care and Diligence, a good deal of the beſt Part of my Life, I am diffident whether what I have done will anſwer every ones Expectation.

Not that I fear the Cenſure of ſuch as are really Judges, who are thoroughly acquainted with Things of this Nature, and who conſider the Labour and Difficulties of finiſhing ſuch an Hiſtory: But perhaps I may be obnoxious to the raſh Judgments of others, who though not equally qualified to diſtinguiſh, have Will and Power to do Prejudice, according as their Paſſions and Humours carry them.

And theſe have indeed already ſhew'd their Endeavours that way. They have often reported that this Book would never be finiſhed at all, and that I had dropp'd the Deſign. While, indeed, ſome others have been ſo judicious as to know, that the longer it was kept in Hand, the better it would be.

Sometimes alſo they have been pleaſed to repreſent it as only a Party Book; and at others, as a trifling Collection and an uſeleſs Repetition of what had been already better done by former Writers.

But when a good Part of it came to be Printed off, and to be ſeen and conſidered, theſe Objections and Calumnies began to diminiſh, and at length to diſappear. And I am ſure, I can ſay with the utmoſt Sincerity, that I never had any ſuch mean Deſigns nor Views; and that as I have done Juſtice to the Subject in general, as far as my Capacity could extend; ſo I have alſo to all Authors, Gentlemen, and Families, with the ſtricteſt Impartiality: And there is no Account of the Deſcent of any Manor or Eſtate in the County deficient, where I could get Information enough to bring it down to the preſent Poſſeſſors; and where either their own Perſonal Neglect, or Diſtruſt of me, hath not deprived me of Communications from them: Which very Communications alſo have been ſollicited; not only by Perſonal Applications, and by expreſs Words in my Paper of Propoſals; but alſo by repeated Advertiſements in the Publick Prints.

But notwithſtanding theſe Diſcouragements, I found Means to get a pretty tolerable Intelligence, even of thoſe Affairs; and of others of that Nature: And my Materials, upon Search and Application, increaſed ſo faſt upon me, that I found I could not, as I at firſt hoped and propoſed, bring them, by any Means, into the Compaſs of one Volume. But that the Work would extend it ſelf into another Book, very near as large as this.

However, by thus publiſhing this Volume Firſt, I think no manner of Injuſtice or Hardſhip is done to my Subſcribers: For as my Propoſal was to give them a Book of about Two Hundred Sheets for the Price there propoſed; this Volume, including the Copper Plates, contains more; without the Additional Price of Five Farthings per Sheet, there propoſed, for what ſhould exceed that Number.

The Subſcribers therefore, in Conſideration that ſome of them have been a long while out of their Money, ſhall have the Book at the Price propoſed, though it cannot be ſold ſo to others.

And whoever pleaſes to conſider the Price of Paper, and Rolling-Preſſes for the Copper Plates, will eaſily ſee, that notwithſtanding the Lords and Gentlemen have been at the Expence of having their ſeveral Seats Deſigned and Engraved, yet the Paper, and the working them off, hath been at my Charge: And exceeds that of ſo many Printed Sheets of Copy, provided neither the Maps, nor any other Coper Plates, had coſt me any Thing; as they indeed have been very expenſive; beſides my Expences in viſiting all Places in the County, and the Charge of Books, &c.

Having given this Account of the Expence of this Work, I next proceed to acknowledge the Helps and Aſſiſtance I have had in compoſing it; and to return the ſeveral Gentlemen my grateful Acknowledgments.

The famous Dr. Plott ſeems to have had a Deſign of Writing the Hiſtory of this County, after the Manner that he did thoſe of Oxfordſhire and Staffordſhire: And for this, as I am told by ſome of his Family, he had a Patent to be one of the Kings at Arms; and another, to be Regiſter of the Herald's-Office: Theſe were great Encouragements: But he died before he made any Progreſs in it.

All that I had the Favour of obtaining from his Papers of Collections, being only a Catalogue of ſome Manuſcripts relating to Kent, (which I deſign to Print at the End of the Second Volume, much Corrected and Enlarged by my own Enquiries and Reſearches,) and a Diſcourſe upon the Roman Ways in this County; which, in Company with Dr. Brown, he viſited in Perſon, in the Year 1690; as I have done ſince, ſeveral times, with due Care and Caution; and indeed I have alſo done ſo by almoſt all Parts of Kent.

From Sir Baſil Dixwell, of Brome in this County, Baronet, I had the Favour of many moſt uſeful and valuable Manuſcripts relating to the Cinque-Ports, and to Dover-Caſtle; and others alſo I had from the late Mr. Turner of Ileden, of the ſame Nature; from both which I had very good Aſſiſtance, with regard to the Accounts I have here given of thoſe Ports, &c.

I had alſo the great Favour of a General Order from the Right Honourable the Earl of Dorſet, Lord Warden of the Cinque-Ports; for all his Officers in Dover-Caſtle, and elſewhere, to communicate all Manuſcripts, Papers, Regiſters, &c. to me: And among other Helps and Encouragements to this Work, which his Lordſhip kindly obliged me with, I had the Peruſal of a fair Pedigree of his Ancient Family, from whence I took many Things of Uſe to me in my Deſign.

From Francis Barrell, Eſq; Recorder of Rocheſter, I had ſome very uſeful Manuſcripts relating to the State of that City, and to the Bridge; which I believe had been collected by Sir Richard Head.

And from our own Archives in Rocheſter Cathedral, I had thoſe Two moſt Ancient, Uſeful and Valuable Manuſcripts, the Textus Roffenſis; and the Cuſtumale Roffenſe: The former of which was begun about the Year 1115, and the latter about 1325; both of which being ſo often mentioned in the Body of this Hiſtory, there needs no further Account to be here given of them. And the Contents of the former I ſhall Publiſh under the Life of Ernulfus, that Biſhop of Rocheſter who compiled it.

We have alſo in the Archives of the Church of Rocheſter, many Hundreds of Original Charters; being Grants and Donations to the Priory of Rocheſter, Leeds-Abbey, Strode-Hoſpital, &c. from whence I gathered many very uſeful Collections, as will appear in ſeveral Parts of this, but much more in the Second Volume, where I treat largely of the Religious Houſes in this County.

The Learned Mr. Forſter, Rector of Crundale, though often mentioned in this Book, muſt not be omitted here; from whom I have received very great Help and Aſſiſtance in this Work; and that not only by his own Communications to me, but alſo by his Friendly Repreſentation of my Deſign to ſeveral Perſons that had taken Prejudice againſt it, and its Compoſer.

The Aſſiſtances I have had from ſeveral other Gentlemen, with Relation to the State of the Royal Navy, and the Four Docks, and to ſome Religious Houſes, Schools, Hoſpitals, Natural Hiſtory, &c. ſhall be particularly acknowledged in the next Volume, where thoſe Subjects are largely treated of. And though I hope and beg for many more from them, I muſt here mention the kind Communications I had from Roger Meredith, Eſq; of Leeds Abbey, Dr. Teniſon, and John Savage, Eſq; of Boughton Monchenſy. As alſo the many Friendſhips I have received from my old Friend, the Worthy William Dowe, of Lamberhurſt, Eſq; who hath not only promoted my Subſcriptions, and obtained me ſeveral uſeful Communications; but did alſo accompany me himſelf in my Perambulations (to uſe Mr. Lambard's Word) over ſeveral Parts of the County. I am obliged alſo with great Reſpect and Gratitude to acknowledge the Favour I had from the Lord Chief Baron Gilbert, of Ireland, a Gentleman of this County; who, when my Affairs detained me in that Kingdom, was ſo kind as to peruſe and correct my Diſcourſe of the Cinque-Ports, and of Gavelkind; of Romney-Marſh, and the Weald; and I had alſo the Advantage of free Recourſe to the Dering Library at Surenden; where are many Manuſcripts, and Collections relating to this County, of great Value; and from Mr. Fellows alſo, Jurat of Sandwich, I was favour'd with many Papers relating to the Affairs of that Place, and to the Cinque-Ports. I had alſo ſome good Helps from the Archbiſhop's Library at Lambeth, and from that of the Cathedral Church of Canterbury.

My worthy Friend John Godfrey, Eſq; of Norton-Court, did alſo oblige me with many uſeful Communications; as did the late Captain George Weller, of Tunbridge, with regard to the Ancient Liberties and Extent of the Lowy of that Name.

I am alſo in a particular Manner obliged to acknowledge the Friendſhip and Civility of Mr. Holmes, Keeper of the Records in the Tower of London, who gave me free Liberty of conſulting any Manuſcript in that Office.

As I muſt alſo the Kindneſs of Mr. Peter le Neve, Norroy King at Arms, and of Mr. Hare, Richmond Herald, who not only aſſiſted me in getting Materials from the Library brary of the College of Arms, but furniſhed me with many Things from their own private Collections.

From the obliging Brown Willis, of Whaddon-Hall in Bucks, Eſq; I had alſo the Liſts of the ſeveral Knights of the Shire, and of the Members for the Parliamentary Burghs in this County.

And thus having gratefully acknowledged the Aſſiſtances of my Friends, I ſhall proceed to acquaint you what you are to expect in this Volume, and what muſt be deferred till the next.

In the firſt Book, I treat of the Honour, Dignity, Name, Extent, Bounds, Firſt Inhabitants, and Diviſion of Kent: Its Hundreds and Liberties.

Next to this follows a large and accurate Account in an Alphabetical Order, of the ſeveral Cities, Towns and Pariſhes in the County; a Deſcription of the ſeveral Manors, and eminent Places; with the Deſcent of the Eſtates, generally ſpeaking, down to the preſent Poſſeſſors: Wherein, whatever I could collect, with regard to the Antiquities, and particular Hiſtories of each Place, hath been inſerted, in order to render what would elſe have been but a dry and tedious Topography, a tolerable Mixture of uſeful and entertaining Matter. For at the Places where they were begun or Perpetrated, I give you the Hiſtories of that famous Impoſtor, the Nun of Kent; of the Eminent Rebellions of Wat Tyler, and his Accomplices; of Jack Cade, and of Sir Thomas Wyat: The Hiſtory of Sir John Old-Caſtle: Occaſional Diſſertations on ſome Roman Antiquities found in Kent; Old Saxon Cuſtoms, Ports, Forts, &c. The Ancient Court of Shipway, &c. Some Saxon Wills; an Account of their Coins, Money, &c.

The Hiſtory of Dover-Peer, Rocheſter-Bridge; the Ancient Ordeal Tryals: The Liberty of the Lowy of Tunbridge, &c.

And here are introduced fair Copper Plates of the Seats and Houſes of the moſt eminent Nobility and Gentry of the County; a new Map of Kent, another of Romney-Marſh; Dover-Caſtle, &c. and of the Iſle of Thanet; a Map of the Ancient Beacons; with ſeveral other Plates of Antiquities, &c.

The Third Part of the Firſt Book, contains a large Account of that Ancient Track, called the Wild, or Weald of Kent; of Romney-Marſh, the Time of its Inning, its Laws, Charters, and Cuſtoms. Of the Riſe, and Courſe of the Rivers of Kent: A full Account of the Roman Ways, Stations, Camps, Caſtles, Ports and Forts of this County; and occaſionally, of ſome other Monuments of Antiquity.

The Second Book contains, (1.) The Civil Hiſtory of Kent; ſomething of its State before, but particularly, when the Romans came hither; with a large Account of Cæſar's Two Deſcents upon this County.

2. The Tranſactions of the Saxons in Kent; the Hiſtory of the Kings of Kent; with ſeveral of their Saxon Laws, publiſhed at Length; not before extant in our Language, nor in Lambard's Archaionomia.

3. The Tranſactions of the Danes in Kent; their ſeveral Invaſions of it; their Battels and Exploits here.

4. The Succeſſion and Hiſtory of the Earls of Kent. And,

5. Of the Sheriffs of this County; and of ſeveral Gentlemen of Kent, who have been in Eminent Poſts of the Law: A Liſt of the Kentiſh Gentlemen in King Henry the VIth's Reign, and of the Baronets: Of the Knights of the Shire, and the Members of Parliament, for the ſeveral Burghs and Cinque-Ports.

6. Next to this follows a Treatiſe of Gavelkind, ſhewing its Original, Name and Nature: To which is annexed, the Ancient Cuſtumal of Kent, in old French, and Engliſh.

7. The Hiſtory of the Cinque-Ports; treating largely of their Original, Deſign, Services, Laws, Courts, Cuſtoms, Charters and Privileges, with the Cauſes of their Decay, &c.

The Second Part of the Second Book, begins with the Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory of Kent: In which you have a particular Account,

1. Of the Archbiſhoprick and Dioceſe of Canterbury, and of the Archbiſhop's Election.

2. Of the Cathedral Church of Canterbury, and of the Ancient Palace of the Archbiſhop there.

3. Memoirs of the Lives of all the Archbiſhops of Canterbury, from Auſtin to the preſent Metropolitan.

And this Volume concludes with an Account of the Deans and Archdeacons, and with Liſts of the Prebendaries of the Church of Canterbury.

To which is annexed, a very full and accurate Index; with the Coats of Arms of the Ancient and Preſent Gentlemen of Kent, blazoned after each Name.

I have indeed given you no Index Authorum in any ſolemn Manner; nor have I, where I could avoid it, crowded the Margin, or Bottom of my Pages, with large and numerous Citations; chuſing rather to leave it to the Honeſt Reader's Courteſy and Candor, to judge what Pains I have taken in Compiling it, than to make a Pompous Shew of Quotations, or Authors; whom if they can't find out by the Work, that I have conſulted, I don't deſire my Margin ſhould ſhew. But this I will beg their Favour to believe, that I give them nothing, without being ſupported by the beſt Authority I could get.

The next Volume will begin with the Hiſtory of the Cathedral Church of Rocheſter; the Lives of the Biſhops, from the firſt, down to this preſent one; with Liſts of the Deans, Archdeacons, and Prebendaries of that Cathedral, carried down from the Beginning alſo to this preſent Time.

Next to this will follow an Account of ſuch Eminent Men of this County, as have been famous in Hiſtory, for Arts and Learning, or for Eminent Employments Civil or Military, and who are not before taken Notice of in this Volume.

The Second Part of the next Volume will contain the Hiſtory of all the Religious Houſes, Chantries, Chapels, Preceptories, and Commanderies; and of the Hoſpitals, Schools, and other Charitable Benefactions in this County; with their Founders, Times of Erection, Deſigns, and Regulations. This will be a very large Part, and will proceed in an Alphabetical Order, as that of the Towns and Pariſhes did in Vol. I.

The Third Part, will be the Hiſtory of the Royal Navy of Great-Britain; and of its Riſe, Progreſs, and Improvement; with large Obſervations on, and Compariſons between, the Ancient and Modern Shipping.

This Diſſertation, which I think perfectly, New, I was led into by conſidering the State of the Four Eminent Docks in this County; Chatham, Deptford, Woolwich, and Sheerneſs, Situated on the Two Eminent Rivers, Thames and Medway; and where our Ships of War are uſually Built and Repaired. And at the End ſhall be given as accurate a Liſt as I can form, of all the Ships of the Royal Navy, when Built, where, and by whom; with their Length, Breadth, Depth, Tuns, Guns, Men, &c.

The Fourth and laſt Part will contain the Natural Hiſtory of Kent; wherein I ſhall treat largely and carefully, on all Things relating to that Subject, of which the State and Produce of Kent can give me Inſtances. As in particular, of Tunbridge, and other Medicinal Waters, of the Iron and Coperas Works; and of whatever our Soil produces, either above or within its Surface; of the Improvements of all our Manufactures, as Hops, &c. with regard to Husbandry, Planting and Gardening; and to all Kinds of Mechanicks, Mills, Engines, &c.

And I muſt acquaint the Reader, that the Materials for all theſe Heads are got ready, and a good Part of them are Tranſcribed; and that this Second Volume will go to the Preſs in a ſhort Time after the Publication of this: And if I have no unavoidable Interruption, ſhall be Printed off with all poſſible Expedition.

And after having ſaid this, give me Leave to conclude this Preface nearly with thoſe Words which Dr. Plott uſed, at the End of his Natural Hiſtory of Staffordſhire.

" And thus ſhall conclude this Hiſtory of " Kent; in the Writing whereof, though I " dare not think, much leſs can aſſure the " Reader, that I have made no Miſtakes in " my Relations; yet I am inclined to believe, " there are none very material, I am ſure " none wilful. However, I do ſincerely pro- " miſe them never to offend in the like Man- " ner again, after the Edition of my Second " Volume; being fully reſolved never to pub- " liſh any more ſuch Hiſtories, (though I " think I never was ſo fit as now) unleſs " commanded by a Power which I cannot " reſiſt.

AN

An ODE in Praiſe of KENT.

Part of which was formerly Sung at a FEAST of the Gentlemen of that COUNTY.

Introduc'd with Inſtrumental Muſick.

SWeet Melody! the Charm repeat!
We watch the Birth of Sound.
To pleaſe the Mind's a Feaſt compleat:
Kent's Sons muſt, ev'ry Way, with Harmony be crown'd.
Again inform the willing Lyre,
With Notes that might Apollo charm,
Sweet and prevailing, like his Fire,
That pleaſe, and melt us, as they warm.
Lo! I confeſs the varied Pow'r;
Entranc'd, and rapp'd with Joy, I tow'r.
Energic Sounds! ſupport the Soul you raiſe,
Kent claims my Verſe this happy Hour.
Help, Genius of the Day, to praiſe,
The Darting of thy Rays.

Bleſt Land, Pride of the nobleſt Iſle,
On whom the World's bright Eye can ſmile!
The Parent Orb that round us rouls,
All views, illumines, and in-ſouls,
Thy fair well-temper'd Race admires:
Pleas'd with thy Bleſſings, pleas'd in thee,
With Elemental Harmony;
The Product of his genial Fires.

The Valiant, blended with the Wiſe;
The Charms of Mind, and Charms of Eyes,
Here reconcil'd are found:
Rich Towns for Trade, fair Plains for Sports;
Vales Fruitful, and commodious Ports,
With Wealth amphibious crown'd.
Here ſtill the gen'rous Deep and Soil
(Prolific Mines) give, free from Toil,
The Silver Scaly Tribe, and growing Golden Fleece.
All Dainties Heav'n like Manna yields,
While, on the Blue or verdant Fields,
Recruiting, they Encreaſe.

Along thy Fertile Sides,
The Swelling Thames with Plenty loaded glides;
Enriching thee with tributary Tides.
Safe there, and in thy Medway's watry Bed,
The floating Guard of Britain's Wealth and Trade,
In State triumphant rides.
Her Fleets their Being owe to thee;
Thou her ſure Bulwark; Europe's She.
Nor doſt thou raiſe thoſe Giant Frames alone,
(Whoſe Pow'r ev'n Neptune's ſelf muſt own:)
To rule where-e'er expanded Ocean rouls;
Thou fill'ſt thoſe Bodies with Heroick Souls.
They journey with the Sun, they join each Hemiſphere;
And ſpread alike thy Pow'r, and Bleſſings ev'rywhere.
So well ſet out for Peace and War,
What may not Albion dare!

Nor ſhall the Royal Pile unſung remain,
Where Kent enrich'd the Earth
With great Eliza's Birth.
The mighty Genius of thy Reign,
Thou Prior Empreſs of the Main,
Taught Britain to ſurround the Ball;
And Foes no Fleets but thine invincible to call.
Plac'd near the Stores of Naval War,
'Twas juſt thy Native Palace there,
Shou'd like a Phœnix riſe;
And on thy Shore, O Hoſpitable Land,
Still Sacred to Sea-Honour, ſtand,
The Port of Ancient Worth, thence wafted to the Skies.

Sweet Liberty, the Briton's Boaſt,
To thy Son's indulgent moſt,
Bids here Succeſſion be ſecure,
And Titles ſtill endure:
For Vertues with Eſtates come down,
And from the Father bleſs the Son.

Great Souls, with Plenty rais'd, aſpire:
A gen'rous Spirit, ev'n in Swains,
Enlarg'd with Eaſe, and Freedom Reigns,
That Heav'nly double Gift, the Food of manly Fire.
The Bleſſing flows, as Pleaſure glides with Health,
From thy reviving Springs;
And ſhar'd by all the happy Subject's Wealth,
Here magnifies the Kings.

Kent, early Pious, early Great,
Fair Albion's Front, her awful Head;
Her Neighbour's Envy, Wiſh, and Dread;
Thy ſelf a Royal State!
All Rock, all Fortreſs, to their Sight;
To thy bleſt Sons, all Eden, all Delight!
While fond of thee, untaught to yeild,
They're firſt to take, and laſt to quit the Field;
Secure the Eaſtern World you face:
Nor can the Greater Mate the Leſs.

The Firſt Great William, fortunate and brave,
Who came to Conquer, as the Laſt to Save,
When on to Kent with Victor Troops he rode,
Late of a Thouſand Ships the Load,
Britain, which He who half the Globe cou'd awe,
Great Cæſar, little more than ſaw,
Bow'd to the Norman Law.

The Sons of Kent alone the Tyde withſtood;
Of Right tenacious; ſingular in Good;
Unſhaken, tho' the only unſubdu'd.
In Arms collected all agree,
To Live and Die, like their Great Fathers, free.
Graſp'd with one Hand, the threatning Steel they ſway'd:
The other, Verdant Boughs diſplay'd.
In dire Array, thus dreadful from afar,
Invaſion's living Bar,
On the Brow of the threaten'd Land,
The moving Foreſt made a dreadful Stand.
The Warrior King, mov'd at the doubtful Sight,
So equal both for Friendſhip, or for Fight,
A Parley ſounds; pleas'd ev'n in Foes, to ſee
Spirits ſo worthy to be free.
They come, they anſwer'd, negligent of Life,
By Friendly Peace, or gen'rous Striſe,
To claim their dearer Liberty, and Right.
Undaunted Race, the Hero cry'd,
Such Virtue cannot be deny'd.
Take more from me than Foes can claim,
My Friendſhip; nay, my Conqu'ror's Name.
Thus to your Rights, and Valour true,
'Tis more, like you, to dare, than Kingdoms to ſubdue.

N. B. This Gentleman being, during his Life-time, very deſirous that this POEM ſhould be inſerted, I am obliged by Promiſe to him to do it here: And though ſome Things in it are ſhewn in this Hiſtory not to be conſiſtent with Truth; yet their having been generally received as true, is ſufficient to juſtify their being brought into a POEM.

THE HISTORY OF KENT.

BOOK I.

Of the Honour, Dignity, Name, Extent, Bounds, First Inhabitants, and Division of the COUNTY.

I. KENT hath been Eminent in many Reſpects above all other Counties in Great-Britain. It was probably the firſt peopled of any other. It was the firſt Place where Julius Cæſar ſet up the Roman Standards; and is by him ſaid to have been inhabited by a more Civil People, than any other Part of Britain: (a) Ex his omnibus, longè ſunt humaniſſimi qui Cantium incolunt. It was the firſt Place, into which the Saxons brought thoſe Forces which ſubdued England; and where the Chriſtian Religion was firſt eſtabliſhed among them, in the Time of the Heptarchy. And as it was in a manner an Entire Kingdom by it ſelf for almoſt 400 Years; ſo it became the Seat of an Archbiſhoprick, while only one Part of it was the See of another Biſhop, and had another City within it.

(a) De Bell. Belgico, l. 5.

And when you conſider the Advantage of its Situation, for Foreign Commerce and Trade; its Two Noble Rivers, the Thames and Medway, both Navigable for many Miles together within its Boundaries, and the Glorious Burden that each of them bears: The Freedom of its Cuſtoms and Tenures; the Honour of its having Four of the famous Cinque Ports, and the Court of Shepey, within it ſelf; for its having Four Docks, for the Building of, and its River, the Station of the Navy Royal: The Variety and Fertility of its Soil, and the Valour and Bravery of its Inhabitants; which hath long ſince (as ſome ſay, a Privilege granted them by King Henry II. others, by King Canutus) entitled them to Claim the Van-Guard in all Battels, where they engage in common with their Neighbours: (b) You will find no County in Britain, which hath been, and ſtill is ſo juſtly Eminent and Famous as Kent. Of which, thus ſings the Learned (c) Drayton, in his Poly-Albion:

(b) Seld. Notes on Polyalb. p. 62. & Song. xviij. p. 297. Joh. Sariſbury in Polycrat. & Malmſ.

(c) Song. xviij.

——— O Famous Kent, quoth She,
What County hath this Iſle that can compare with thee!
That haſt within thy ſelf as much as thou canſt wiſh,
Thy Conies, Veniſon, Fruit, thy Sorts of Fowl and Fiſh:
As what with Strength comports, thy Hay, thy Corn, thy Wood,
Nor any thing doth want that any where is good, &c.

II. And how it came to be called by that Name of Kent, is next to be enquir'd into.

Cæsar, Strabo, Diodorus Siculus, Ptolemy, &c. call it Cantium. Some think the (d) Κύνητα of Herodotus, are Cæsar's Cantij; but this I take to be only a Nominal Conjecture. That Angle of the British Land, which jets out into the Sea in Kent, and which Cambden calls the Kentish Foreland; and is what we call now the North Foreland, to distinguish it from another near Dover, called the South Foreland; this Point of Land was anciently called (e) Cantium. Most also of the Old Geographers called Kent, Angulus; because the Land runs out here with an Angle, or Corner, into the Sea. And thus between Lancaster and Westmoreland is a Bay, and a River running into it, which is called Kent (f); as are also the Sands on each Side the Mouth of it: Because the Sea runs in there with a Kind of Canton-Angle, or Corner. Thus also those which inhabit another Corner of England, are by Ptolomy called Cantæ. The Cangani lived in a Corner of Wales; and the Cantabri, in a Corner of the Celtiberians. And therefore, setting aside all other Etymologies, as that of Lambard's, who fancies it is derived from Cainc, a green Leaf, &c. which appear to me to be far-fetched and strained, I agree with the Judicious Mr. Cambden, that this County took its Name from the Word Canton, or Cant, which signifies a Corner, and is so used now by the Heralds; and in the same Sense are the Cantons of Switzerland nominated. Likewise a Fragment of Bread, a Parcel of Wood, a small Number of People, or Cattle, is called to this Day (in this County) a Cant, or Cantle; and Cantir is used in Scotland, in the same Sense. And thus Drayton, in his Polyalbion, p. 3. speaking of a Part of Cornwall;

That straitned Tongue of Land, where at Mount Mi[chael's Bay,
Rude Neptune coming in a Cantle forth doth [take.

Cantle, probably, comes from the British Word Cant, a Hundred; and thence Cantoning, or Dividing into Parcels (g). Nennius tells us, that the Saxons called Kent, Cant-guap-landd; which may be render'd, The Land of the Men living in the East-Corner of Britain, or in Kent.

Asser Menevensis (An. 851.) calls the People of Kent, Centaurij: As in some Old Charters of King Edgar, and others, recorded in our Tower Records, they are called Centigenè. For the Saxon C being pronounced like our K, it was most anciently by the Saxons written Cent, and afterwards Chent; but both were sounded like our Kent.

III. Kent is situated in the South East Part of Britain, over-against France; from whence its neareſt Distance is about 21 Miles. On the North Side, it hath the River Thames all along for its Boundary: Except that a little Part of it lies on the Essex-Side of that River, over against Woolwich; as is expres'd by the Prick'd Line, which is the Boundary in the Map. As Cornwal hath some Part of it lying on the other Side of the Tamar, in Devonshire. *

On the East Side of the County, it is bounded by the Sea; and on the South, partly by that, and by Sussex; from which, the River Rother divides it: And Part of that County, and Surrey, are also its Boundaries to the West.

Its Length, as Lombard accounts it, from Langley-Stile in the Parish of Beckenham, to Ramsgate in the Isle of Thanet, is about 53 Miles; but by the Maps, it is above 60. Kilburn reckons it from the West Part of Lewsham, to the East of St. Peter's in Thanet, about 52 Miles. But in the Middle Length of it, from the West Part of Brasted, to the East of Ringwold, it is but 47 Miles.

Its Breadth, from the River Rother South of Newenden, to Nourhead, or rather to North Inlet in the Isle of Grean, is a little above 26. And it is about 160 Miles in Compass. Kilburn reckons it 162, thus:

From the West-End of Deptford, to the East-End of the North Foreland in Thanet, going round by the River and the Sea, is about 61 Miles; and in a strait Line, about 51. From thence about to the Corner of Dengeness, is about 38 Miles; in a strait Line, 31. From thence round about to the End of Cowden, is about 39 Miles; but in a strait Line, 33. And thence round about to Deptford again, is about 24 Miles; but directly, not above 21.

IV. Tho' now it be no small County, yet its Extent formerly seems to have been something larger; and the Ground it hath lost, is much more considerable for Dignity and Quality, than its Quantity; tho' that be of no mean Estimation. For 'tis probable, that all the Land lying on the North Side of the Road from New-Cross thro' Peckham, and so to Lambeth-Ferry, was anciently within this County: And Ptolomy mentions the City of London it self to have been so. An Assertion, which tho' Mr. Burton (in his Commentary on (h) Antonine's Itinerary) softens, by thinking London might be in Adrian's Time under the Jurisdiction of Kent; and tho' the Learned Dr. Woodward (in his Observations on the Ancient Walls of this City) takes it to be a Mistake in that Geographer; yet it may be supported by many probable Arguments. Indeed, it seems not likely, that Ptolomy should be mistaken in his Account of London, since he had Knowledge enough of its Situation, to correct Marius Tyrius accurately, for Misplacing it; as Dr. Gale hath observed (i).

It appears, that Pope Gregory the Great (saith Dr. Gale) followed Ptolomy's Tables, and took Londonium for a City of Kent; and consequently would have made it the Seat of the Archbishoprick: But Austin, out of Complaisance to his Great Patron, King Ethelbert, would not obey him in this Point. But it is plain, from some other Instances, that Gregory knew nothing of Britain; and therefore I lay no Stress on this Argument alone.

Ravennas numbers London among such Cities as lay on the South Side of the Thames. And Higden, speaking of that Part of the Watling-street-Way which goes thro' that County, saith, Decurrebat ad Occidentem Westmonasterij, juxta Londonium, ultra Tamesium, per medium Cantij (k). But it must not be concealed, that Ravennas mentions also a Londinium, lying on the North Side of the Thames.

To reconcile which, I think the Conjecture of the Learned Dr. Gale, in the Place above mentioned, to be very probable: Which is, That the Famous City of London took its first Rise from a Place called by the same Name, and situated on the South Side of the Thames. This Londinium, he thinks to have been anciently a Roman Station, fixed there to prevent the Incursions of the Britons into Kent. The Place of it was probably near the Military Way, which crossed the Thames, and then entred Kent at the Horse-Ferry at Lambeth; as I shew in the Chapter about the Roman Ways.

Dr. Gale thinks also, this Kentish Londinium to have been the Station, where the Prætor Aulus Plautius kept the Roman Army, till the Emperor Claudius came to him; (tho' some think it rather in the Camp on Keston Down:) Which he concludes from what Dio saith, Lib. 60. viz. That the Britons leaving the Severn, went to the Thame, Thame, towards its Courſe into the Sea; thither the Romans followed them; and ſoon after the Germans ſwam over; the reſt croſſing the River at a Bridge which was placed higher up: but they loſt many of their Men in the Bogs and Marſhes. For which Reaſon Plautius proceeded no further, but ſent for Claudius to come to him into that ſafe Place, where he lay expecting him on the Bank of the Thames; and after his Arrival the Roman Army paſſed the River, gave the Britains Battel, took Camulodunum, &c.

After this Engagement, the Romans placed Camps and Stations on the Northſide of the Thames, driving the Britains before them, &c. And then afterwards, in Nero's Time, the preſent City of London, which was very eminent before for the Beauty and Healthfulneſs of its Situation; and for its Trade, and Plenty of Merchants, but was only a Prefecture and not a Colony, began to be a Roman Station and a Colony. The Prætorium being placed, as Dr. Gale thinks, at London Stone, which was both a Lapis Milliarii, and alſo a Columna Mercuriales, or Deus terminus in the Head of the Forum.

In this Tract of Land (which I judge to have been anciently within this County) between Lambeth and Southwark was the Royal Fisk or Treaſury placed. Here was a Place called Cyningſton, (i. e. Kingſtown) now Kinton. Here was the Caſtrum, the Publick Priſon, Park, Publick Edifices, and Fiſh-Ponds. And, as every one knows, that the Saxons called the Roman Caſtra, whether Stations or Manſions, by the Name of Burghs, ſo by this Title of Burgh hath Southwark always been diſtinguiſhed. That this Place alſo muſt have been a good while a Roman Camp or Station, is plain from the many Roman Urns and Coins, Opera Teſſelata, Bricks or Tyles, and other Ancient Ruins which have been frequently dug up hereabouts. And the Learned Dr. Gale tells us, that he himſelf had a large entire Urn with Fragments of Bones in it, which was found a little to the Southward of the Burgh, with many others which were broken. And the Learned and Curious Dr. Woodward, in his rare and uſeful Collection, hath a noble Janus (as 'tis uſually called) in Stone, which was dug up by a Gardiner within this Tract of Land. The Figure of which I thought proper here to inſert, both for its apparently great Antiquity, and for that I am apt to fancy it to have been the very Deus terminus which was placed near the Ferry at Lambeth, where the Roman Ways parted. What the Original of theſe Kinds of Figures was, I cannot ſtay here to enquire, nor I think have we Authority enough to determine. Thoſe who would ſee more, may conſult Spanheim's Numiſmata, Ger. Voſſius de Theolog. Gentel. Servius on Virgil, &c.

What is more to my preſent Purpoſe is; that Monfaucon in his Travels tells us, there were ſeveral Croſs-Ways in Old Rome, called Jani; where there ſtood a Statue of Janus, uſually with two, but ſometimes with 3 or more Faces.

And in further Confirmation of this Part of Surrey's having been formerly accounted within the Bounds of the County of Kent; it may be conſidered, that the Biſhops of Rocheſter were formerly Lords of the Manor of, and had the Palace of Lambeth, which now belongs to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury; to one of which Archbiſhops it was parted with by Exchange, viz. in the time of Hubert Walter, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and Gilbert Glanvile Biſhop of Rocheſter: And this Exchange was afterwards confirmed by King Richard the I. (m) Philpot alſo ſaith, that Hacham, a Place near Lambeth, now reckoned to be in Surry, was formerly in Kent; as was alſo the Manor of Bradinghurſt near Peckham-Rey in Camberwell. And there is, or was, a ſmall Bridge, as he alſo tells us, near which is a Way leading to Bradinghurſt, which by an Inquiſition taken in King Richard the IId's Time, was then found to be in Kent. And he further thinks, that the Reception of Priſoners out of Surrey being uſually made at New-Croſs, was the reaſon of that Place's being taken for the Bounds of Kent that way: And now the Line of Partition runs from thence directly Northward to the Thames.

(m) Philp. Vill. Cantian. p. 127.

And as Mr. Morton, in his Hiſtory of Northamptonſhire (n) tells us, That County was formerly larger than it is at preſent; we may on theſe probable Grounds allow the ſame to have been anciently the Caſe of Kent. But from hence, as Philpot obſerves, (o) we have not ground enough to ſuppoſe, Kentiſh-Town by Hamſtead in Middleſex to have ever been within this County; tho' it partake of the Cuſtom of Gavel-kind; and perhaps was at firſt Inhabited by ſome Kentiſh Families. But we may from what hath been ſaid, juſtly conclude, that Kent-Street took its Name from its lying within this County, and not only from its leading out of the City into it.

(o.) P. 161.

V. The County of Kent, lying of all others in Britain neareſt to the Continent; and it being moſt probable, that this Iſland was firſt Peopled from thence, it will naturally follow, that the firſt Inhabitants of Britain were ſeated in this County. And this would receive a very great Confirmation, if what many great Men have advanced be true in Fact; viz. That it was once joined to the Continent, by an Iſthmus which reached from Kent to about Calais in France.

Servius on Virgil concludes it to have been his Poet's Opinion from this Verſe, ——— Et penitus toto diviſos orbe Britannos.

And ſo one would think Claudian thought, by his Expreſſion of ——— Noſtro deducta Britannia Mundo.

Of this Opinion was Twine (o). And (p) Verſtegan endeavours to render it probable from theſe Reaſons:

(o) De Reb. Albion. & Britann.

1. Becauſe he thinks there were no Iſlands before the Flood, which he concludes from Gen. 1. where it is ſaid God ordered the Waters to be gathered together into one Place; and therefore it doth not ſeem that there was any Intercourſe between Land and Land, as now there is between Iſlands and the Main.

2. Becauſe Pliny, and ſeveral other good Authors ſay, that great Interchanges and Alterations have been made between the Land and the Sea; ſo that new Iſlands have appeared out of the Sea, others have been broken off from the main Land; and others actually joined to it which were not ſo before.

3. For this Opinion he cites the Authority of Dominicus Marius Niger, Servius, Honoratus, Dubartas, Twine, Ant. Volſeus, Dr. Richard White, and ſeveral others.

4. Becauſe the Cliffs on either ſide are alike, Chalky, filled with Flints, both with their Faces turned to the Sea, and towards one another, of the ſame Length, viz. about 6 Engliſh Miles; which therefore he takes to have been the Breadth of the Iſthmus. And the Cliffs not having their Deſcent by an eaſy Slope like common Hills, but being perpendicular, have a plain Face of being broken off one from another by ſome great Force or Violence. And this is the Caſe whereever there are high upright Cliffs towards the Sea, they have been made ſo by the Waſhing and Force of the Water, ſtrongly agitated by Tides, Winds, and Storms. He thinks alſo that this Iſthmus was not broken at the General Deluge in Noah's Time, but ſometime ſince. And he ventures to gueſs at the very Time when it was done, viz. When the Countries of Brabant and Flanders, which before were covered with the Sea, became Dry Land; which he ſuppoſes was effected, by the Waters leaving them to run through this new Channel made between Dover and Calais. But however he ſuppoſes this Rupture to have happened ſo long ago, as to have been before the Date of any of our Hiſtories. And ſo indeed it muſt have been, if at all; ſince there is a perfect Silence about it in all the Ancient Writers.

And by the means of this Iſthmus between Britain and France, he ſuppoſes Wolves to have got into our Iſland; which had it been always divided from the Main as it is now, is not ſo eaſy to be accounted for.

Mr. Burton, in his Comment on the Itinerary of Antoninus ſaith, The firſt that ever aſſerted this Diſruption of Britain from the Continent, was Dominicus Marius Niger (q) before-mentioned; for he rejects the Authority of Servius on Virgil, and the Paſſage above-cited out of Claudian, as miſtaken Senſes of the Authors. And Speed quotes one Vinianus for this Opinion, whom Burton ſhews to have been Vivianus the Lawyer. This Man's Authority is brought in by Mr. Richard White of Baſingſtoke, alſo, in his Hiſt. Brit. Lib. 1. Not. 11. To ſupport this Notion he ſuggeſts, that Britain might be denominated, or take its very Name from ſuch a Diviſion from the Continent; as if its Name came from the Hebrew פרד קין Perad Cain. And into this Kind of Etimology falls John Twine above-mentioned; for he will have Britain ſo called from Brich, which he ſaith in Welſh is the ſame with Guith, (whence Wight-Iſle) a Separation (r). And thus alſo Julius Scaliger thinks, that Sicily took its Name from its being cut off from Italy, not from Secare, but the old Word Sicilire (ſee Varro): as Rhegium in the Sicilian Streights was ſo called from περὶ τὸ Ῥῆξαι, to Break, becauſe it was broken off from the Land.

(r) Vid. Sammes Britann. Lib. 1. c. 4.

And thus Pliny ſaith was Cyprus broken off from Syria; Eubæa from Beotia; Atalante from Eubæa; Belbicum from Bithynia; and Leacoſia from Thrace. And no doubt America either anciently was, or is ſtill joined to the great Continent of Europe, Aſia, and Africa; or elſe it will be hard to account, how Lyons, Leopards, Foxes, Bears, Wolves, &c. ſhould get thither in ſuch Plenty, when yet none were found either in Bermudas, Cuba, Hiſpaniola, St. Domingo, or ſuch Iſlands remote from the Main. Mr. Cambden ſeems alſo ſeriouſly of this Opinion, (as is Mr. Selden in his Notes on Polyalbion) ſhewing firſt, that it was a received Notion among the Ancients, that ſuch Changes have been almoſt all over the Face of the Earth. Thus Ovid,

Vidi ego quod quondam fuerat ſolidiſſima Tellus
Eſſe Fretum; vidi factas ex Equore Terras.

Strabo thinks, that Necks or Iſthmi of Land have been formerly, and may again be worked through and deſtroyed by the Sea.

So alſo ſaith Seneca in 6 Nat. Queſt. judging all Spain to have been thus broken off from Africa; as Virgil ſaith Sicily was from Italy. To which Notion Julius Scaliger agrees:

Hæc Loca vi quondam & vaſtâ convulſa Ruinâ,
Tantum Ævi longinqua valet mutare vetuſtas,
Diſſiluiſſe ferunt; cum protinus utraque Tellus
Una foret, venit medio vi Pontus & Undis
Heſperium Siculo Latus abſcidit, arvaque & [Urbes
Litore diductas Anguſto interluit Æſtu.

And ſomebody hath prettily wreſted theſe Verſes, firſt ſpoken of Sicily, to this Purpoſe:

——— Britannia quondam
Galloque pars una fuit, ſed Pontus & Æſtus
Mutavere Situm, rupit confinia Nereus
Victor, & abſciſſos interluit Equore Montes.

And then Mr. Cambden enquires more particularly, 1. Whether the Nature of the Soil be the ſame on both Shores? Which indeed holds good here. For where the Sea is narroweſt, both Coaſts riſe with high Cliffs or Rocks almoſt of the ſame Matter and Colour; which hints that they have been broken through.

2. How broad the Sea may be between the Iſland and the Main? Which being not above 24 Miles, about the ſame Breadth with thoſe of Gibralter and Sicily, he thinks it probable, at firſt ſight, that the two Tracts of Land were ſevered by the Waves beating violently on each ſide of the Iſthmus. And methinks this Suggeſtion may be confirmed by the meeting of the two Tides near this Place: Of which more below.

3. How the Bottom is? Whether Sandy, Hilly, or Muddy, and whether in ſeveral Parts of ſuch narrow Seas, &c. don't lie Shelves of Sand? And on Enquiry of the Mariners, he ſaith, he heard there was one lying in the Middle of the Channel, (called Frowen Sboal) at Low-Water not three Fathom deep.

4. How deep ſuch Straits uſually are? That of Sicily, he ſaith, doth not exceed 80; and ours not 25 Fathom; tho' the Sea on both Sides be much deeper.

He concludes the Enquiry with a Doubt, as Verſtegan doth, how Wolves ſhould be capable of getting hither, unleſs there had formerly been a Paſſage for them by Land from the Continent.

The Careful and Induſtrious Mr. W. Somner (s); and that excellent Mathematician Dr. Wallis (t); both fall in with this Notion of Mr. Cambden's. And though I cannot agree with them in what they make the Original or Principal Foundation of their Opinion, viz. That the Bones and Teeth dug up at Chartham are a good Proof alone that the Sea was ever there ſince the Deluge of Noah, becauſe we have numberleſs Inſtances of the Exuviæ of Marine Animals, found in Places where the Sea could never come, but on ſo great an Occaſion; of which I ſhall give a more particular Account in the natural Hiſtory of this County. Nor do I think, that if there ever was an Æſtuary of the Sea, near the preſent Courſe of the Stoure, it amounts to a clear Proof of there having been formerly an Iſthmus between Dover and Calais, (tho' a Probable one I take it to be). I ſay, notwithſtanding this, yet I think there are other good Reaſons, to induce us to gueſs at leaſt, that the Sea did anciently flow up into that Valley; and that the old Courſe of the River Stoure, was really an Eſtuary of the Sea. One of which I judge may be well taken from the Name of this River, which anciently was written Æſtur, Æſture, Eſture, all no doubt from Æſtuarium.

The (u) digging up alſo of the two old Anchors, one at Weſtbore, a Village about 3 Miles Eaſtward from Canterbury, on the Brow of the Hill; and the other at Broomdown, a Place on the ſame ſide of the Level, Weſtward from the City, do plainly ſhew, that either the Sea hath been in this Valley, or that the River was once of a vaſtly larger Breadth and Depth than it is now. And Philpot ſaith, there was formerly a ſmall Navigation out of the Stoure to Bekeſbourn, a little Village lying about 3 or 4 Miles South-Eaſt from Canterbury, on the leſſer Stoure. And certain it is, that to this Day Bekesbourn is a Place endowed with the Privileges of the Cinque Ports; and as Lambard ſaith, formerly ſent 7 Ships into the Service of the Navy-Royal (x).

(u) Somner's Chartham News, p. 189.

Into

Into this Æſtuary, Dr. Wallis, and Mr. Somner think the Sea, while ſtopped by the ſuppoſed Iſthmus between France and Britain, did Anciently flow and diſcharge it ſelf; but that being in Proceſs of Time filled up by Slub, Sand, and Earth, thither brought and depoſited by the Sea, it was reduced to the State of a moſt fruitful Valley, as it is now. As perhaps about that Time, all that vaſt Tract of Land, of 14 Miles in Length, and 8 in Breadth, called Romney-Marſh, might begin to become, though not throughly Drained nor Inned till the Romans Time, and ſome of it not till a long time after. Which noble Plain containing now above 40000 Acres of excellent Paſture Land, was certainly once all Sea, the Salt-water flowing up to the Foot of the Hills: along by the Sides of which the old Courſe of the Rother went: For to this Day the Marſh lies lower than the Surface of the Sea at High-Water; and would be covered every Tide, if not kept out by Dym-Church-Wall, and other Banks, for ſeveral Miles together, with great Care and Charge. Perhaps alſo, as Mr. Somner ſuggeſts, there might be an Æſtuary flowing up towards Aſhford out of this Marſh, (which was then Sea) into which the Tide from the Britiſh Ocean ſet, as that from the German Sea did into the other Opening at or near Sandwich. And perhaps alſo, theſe two Æſtuaries might once meet and communicate one with another; and by their ſo doing form a kind of Iſthmus there out of the Earth, Mud, and Sand, which the Water would carry along with it; and when this once was done, each Æſtuary muſt ſwarve and fill up by Degrees, and the Sea by that Means become ſo much the more ſtraitned and confined, as that it might receive a new Addition of Weight of Water, Force and Strength, to break through the other Iſthmus between Britain and Gaul.

And Dr. Wallis ſuppoſes, that the German Ocean on the Eaſt-ſide, and the Britiſh Sea on the Weſtern, continually twice in 24 Hours running againſt the Iſthmus with a fierce and impetuous Tide, might eaſily in Proceſs of Time, beat it away, and work it ſelf a Paſſage through. And I think indeed, that the meeting of the Two Tides ſomewhere about the ſuppoſed Place of this Iſthmus, as Dr. Halley in his Map of the Channel makes them to do below Winchelſea and Eſtaples in France, but a little more to the Weſtward, is a probable Proof that there was formerly ſome ſuch thing; as is the Caſe of the Paſſage of the Sea between the Iſle of Wight, and the main Land of Hampſhire, which is thought to have broken off or divided that Iſland from the Main Land, and to have denominated it from ſuch a Diviſion in the Britiſh Language. And (y) Cambden ſaith, that Anciently the Bottom was ſo ſhallow, that the Britains uſed to carry over their Tin in Carts from the Main, to export it to France from the Iſland. And perhaps, as the Ground where this Iſthmus is ſuppoſed to have ſtood, is now higher or nearer the Surface of the Water than it is on each ſide, by ſome Fathoms, ſo no doubt it was at firſt much higher, and was worn down deeper by Degrees, by the continual Flux and Reflux of the Tides, as the Channel between Wight and the Main now is.

And Dr. Wallis thinks, that though the waſhing away, or diſruption of this Iſthmus between Britain and Gaul was ſo long ſince done, as not to fall within the Memory of, or to deſcend down by Tradition to our Ancient Hiſtorians; yet that it is commemorated obſcurely by what Plato (z) mentions, of an Iſland ſomewhere in the Atlantick Ocean, which by a Deluge and an Earthquake in the Space of a Night and a Day, was deſtroyed and ſwallowed up by the Sea. And whereby the Sea formerly was navigable thereabouts, was now become unſafe by reaſon of the Mud and Reliques of that obſorpted Iſland.

(z) Critias, Steph. Edit. p. 25.

And I cannot but think as the Doctor doth, that in this Relation of Plato's, which I take to be the real Narrative of an Ancient Tradition, and no Fable or Allegory, as on another Occaſion I have formerly obſerved (a), there are a good many Remains of this Story of the breaking of this Iſthmus.

(a) See the Introduction to Bibl. Navigant. & Itinerant. P. x.

For an Iſland of this Magnitude, thus broken off from the Continent, and ſeparated by a Fretum of above 20 Miles over, might very eaſily be ſuppoſed by the Vulgar to be abſorpt or ſwallowed up by the Sea; the People from Gaul could not ſee it at all Times, and never but obſcurely. The Remains of the Iſthmus might make it a dangerous Attempt for Men to croſs over either Way, as Plato ſaith it was.

And that they did not do ſo, ſeems plainly hinted to me from a Paſſage in Cæſar's Commentaries, (b) where he ſaith, that the Britiſh Druids were the firſt who profeſs'd the Religious Rites peculiar to the Prieſts of that Denomination; that they carried them over into Gaul; and that even then in his time, thoſe who would be beſt inſtructed in thoſe Myſteries muſt go over into Britain to learn them.

(b) De Bel. Belgic. Lib. VI.

Now from this Paſſage I thus argue; that ſince 'tis allowed generally, and ſhall be ſhewed below, that Britain was Peopled at firſt from Gaul; and yet that theſe Druidal Superſtitions were more eminent in Britain than in Gaul; 'tis probable the Diſruption of this Iſthmus had broken off, for a long time, all Correſpondence between the Gauls and the Britains, there being then probably no Veſſels ſtrong enough to make them venture a-croſs either to other. The natural Conſequence of which would be, that the Britains by loſing Commerce and Converſation with the People of the Continent, would grow every Day more Barbarous, Wild, and Superſtitious, eſpecially in the Inland Parts; as in Fact they were to a very great degree even in Cæſar's time, (though then the adjoining Inhabitants of both Britain and France had begun to correſpond, and were in ſome meaſure governed by one Prince Diutiacus) while thoſe of the Continent would grow more Polite and Civil, and conſequently leſs enſlaved to Superſtition and Idolatry. The Religion of the Druids might therefore be in a good meaſure loſt or diſuſed in Gaul; and the Memory of Britain being once joined to it be alſo ſunk and obliterated, as well as in Britain it ſelf. But when afterwards, at a long diſtance of Time they came to converſe, though they might underſtand a good many Words in each others Language, and find many Cuſtoms and Uſages ſtill remaining in common with one another; yet Druidiſm might be preſerved in a much greater Perfection among the Britains, and might by them be boaſted of as an Older and Purer Religion; and thence the Reputation of the Britiſh Druids, who perhaps were more Auſtere and Salvage than thoſe on the Continent, might be raiſed to the Height it was in Cæſar's Time. Tho' certain it is, that even then the Britiſh Druids went over once a Year to a Place conſecrated for that Purpoſe about the Middle of Gaul, and at a ſet Time, to hold a general Aſſembly of their Order: which I think fairly intimates, that the Superſtition of the Druids came Originally from Gaul, though the Britains might be the moſt ſtrict in the Obſervance of it. But I ſhall ſay no more of this Matter, which at beſt is but a probable Conjecture.

There are indeed many other concurrent Arguments to ſupport the Opinion of Britain's being firſt Peopled from Gaul, beſides that it hath the great Authority of Cæſar, Tacitus, Pliny, Strabo, Bede, and many other Ancient Writers of great Credit. But the Collation of the Cuſtoms, Manners, and Languages of both Nations, in which our great Cambden hath found ſo plain plain a Conformity, is an Argument of all others of the greateſt Force.

And here I muſt inſiſt more particularly upon one Cuſtom, which the Britains learned from the Gauls, which was their Chariot-Fight, and which they had carried to a very great degree of Perfection, eſpecially in this County of Kent, and in the other Southern Parts of England, lying over-againſt Gaul. Theſe were the Places beſt, and indeed almoſt only known to Cæſar; and therefore, as Tacitus (c) ſaith, That only ſome Nations of the Britains uſed Chariots in their Wars; ſo perhaps they were much more in uſe in Kent, than in any other Part of Britain.

(c) Quædam Nationes curru præliantur. In vit. Agricolæ.

When Cæſar made his firſt Deſcent here, (which was, as ſhall be ſhown in its proper Place, between Dover and Sandwich) he ſaith of the Kentiſh Men, (d) Conſilio Romanorum cognito, premiſſo Equitatu & Eſſedariis quo plerumque genere in preliis uti conſuerunt, reliquis Copiis ſubſecuti noſtros Navibus egredi prohibebant. When the Romans deſign of an Invaſion was known, they ſent their Horſe and Chariots before, (for that kind of Fighting in Chariots was what they moſt uſed in War) and then ordering their other Troops to follow, they attempted to hinder their Landing. And it is alſo of our Gallant Kentiſh Charioteers, that Cæſar gives the following fine and wonderful Account: (e) Genus hoc eſt ex eſſedis pugnæ, primo per omnes Partes perequitunt & Tela conjiciunt, atque ipſo terrore Equorum & Strepitu Rotarum Ordines plerumque perturbant. Et quum ſe inter equitum turmas inſinuavêre, ex eſſedis deſiliunt, & pedibus præliantur. Aurigæ interim paulum è prælio excedunt, atque ita ſe collocant, ut ſi illi a multitudine hoſtium premantur, expeditum ad ſuos receptum habeunt. Ita mobilitatem Equitûm & Stabilitatem Peditûm in præliis præſtant; ac tantum uſu quotidiano & exercitatione efficiunt, ut in delivi, ac precipiti loco incitatos equos ſuſtinere, & brevi moderari ac flectore & per Temonem percurrere, & in Jugo inſiſtere, & inde ſe in Currus citiſſimè recipere conſueverint.

This is the manner of their Chariot-fight in Battel: Firſt, they drive with them up and down every where to throw their Darts to the beſt Advantage; and by the Terror of their Horſes, and the Rattling of the Chariot-Wheels, they very frequently break and diſorder the Enemies Troops; and aſſoon as they can wind and work themſelves in among the Horſe, they boldly leap from their Chariots and fight on Foot. The Drivers, (who Tacitus ſaith, were Maſters, or moſt conſiderable Perſons, Honeſtiores is his Word) in the mean time retire with their Chariots a little out of the Battel; but always place themſelves ſo, that if their Friends ſhould happen to be diſtreſſed with Numbers they can eaſily and readily get to their Aſſiſtance. Thus they acquire the Speed and Expedition of Horſe, and yet maintain the Firmneſs and Steddineſs of Foot in any Engagement. And by daily Uſe and conſtant Exerciſe, they are ſo ready and expert at managing their Chariots, that they can ſtop, turn, and govern their Horſes, though running full ſpeed down a Precipice, or the ſteep Side of a Hill: Nay, if need require, they will run along the Pole, or ſtand upon the Yoke of their Horſes, and from thence have recourſe again with all poſſible ſpeed to their Chariots.

I take this Deſcription entirely to belong to the Kentiſh Chariots; for Cæſar, in his firſt Expedition hither, ſeems not to have gone out of this County; and it is in the Account of his firſt Deſcent that he thus relates the manner of the Britains fighting in Chariots.

Now this way of waging War undoubtedly our Countrymen had from their Neighbours the Gauls, as they had their Language and moſt of their other Cuſtoms. Mela ſaith of them (f) Dimicant Bigis & curribus Gallice armati, covinos vocant. Cæſar calls their Chariots Eſſeda; and that the Eſſedum was a Gaulick Chariot may be gathered from this Verſe of Virgil;

Belgica vel mollis melius feret eſſado collo.

On which Servius hath this Note: Belgica eſſeda Gallicana Vehicula: Nam Belgia civitas eſt in Gallia in qua hujuſmodi vehiculi uſus repertus eſt. And Philargrius ſaith, Eſſedum autem vehiculi vel currûs Genus quo ſoliti ſunt pugnare Galli. Schaffer (g) ſaith, the Britiſh Eſſedum was called Covinus in Belgium and Gaul, in which he agrees with Mela above-cited; and that the Word Eſſedum was uſed, and the Thing known at Rome before Cæſar's Expedition hither, is plain from one of Cicero's Epiſtles to Atticus, (b) where he ſaith, Vedius venit mihi obviam cum duobus Eſſedis.

(b) Lib. 6. Ep. 1.

Jornandes (i) tells us, the Belgic Eſſedum was a Currus falcatus, and a Biga, or drawn but by two Horſes; and that it was uſed in Fight by the Gauls, and after them by the Britains. Now Mela aſſerts, that the Britiſh Chariots were armed with Scythes and Hooks; and that it was a Biga, the Deſcription above given of it by Cæſar doth I think clearly ſhew. Thoſe who deſire to ſee more on this Subject of the Eſſedarii may conſult the Authors cited in the Margin (k).

(i) Lib. de Reb. Gothicis. c. 2.

The Reaſon for my inſiſting ſo long upon this hath been, becauſe this Chariot-Fight ſeems to have been carried to a very great Perfection by our Brave Kentiſh Britains, if not in a manner confined to them; and is a great Argument of what I have been endeavouring to eſtabliſh, viz. That our County had its firſt Inhabitants from Gaul, ſince they agreed with them in ſo remarkable a Circumſtance as this way of waging War. Though that the Gauls might have this Cuſtom from the Phænicians or Greeks, and that both thoſe Nations had been alſo long ago, and for a good while together converſant alſo in Britain, I do not in the leaſt doubt, tho' it is not my preſent Buſineſs to enquire. Thoſe who pleaſe to purſue this Argument farther, may conſult Bochart, Sammes, Cambden, &c.

And thus having, by way of Introduction, premiſed ſomething about this County in general; I next proceed to give you an Account of the ſeveral Diviſions it is uſually parted into, and then an exact Deſcription of each particular Place in an Alphabetical Order.

VI. Diviſion of the COUNTY.

The firſt and moſt eminent, and uſual Diviſion of this County, is into Eaſt and Weſt Kent.

The Weſt Diviſion contains the Laths of Sutton at Hone and Aylesford; and the Lower Diviſion, of the Lath of Scray.

The Eaſtern Diviſion contains the Upper Diviſion of the Lath of Scray, and both the Laths of St. Auguſtin and Shipway. Theſe Two Diviſions may be diſtinguiſhed in the Map; if you imagine, or make a prick'd Line to paſs from the Eaſt Side of the Iſle of Grean, down the Channel, and exclude from the Weſtern Diviſion the Churches of Queenborough, Iwade, Halſtow, Up-Church, Rainham, and Hartlip: Then let it paſs by the Eaſt Ends of the Churches of Stockbury, and Bicknor; and run it Eaſtward over the Churches of Wormſell and Frindſted, and under thoſe of Milſted, Kingſdown, Dodington, and Newingham. Next carry it on between the Churches of Eaſlyng and Ottrynden; and under that Church Weſtward, to the Eaſt Head of the Church of Lenham, and down thence by the Eaſt Side of the Church of Boughton Malherbe, to the Eaſt End of the Church of Hedcorn; and thence to the Weſt End of Smarden Church, and thence Eaſtward to the Weſt End of Betheriſden Church; and thence by the Eaſt End of the Church of Shadoxhurſt, to the Weſt End of that of Wareborne; and thence to the Weſt Side of Snargate Church, and on the Weſt Side alſo of, and under Appledore Church; and thence along the Channel Eaſt of the Church of Ebeny, and ſo down as the River goes Eaſtward of Newenden Church, and thence into the Channel.

Snargate

VII. The next Eminent Diviſion of this County, is into Five Lathes, or Lethes, (in Latin, Læſta) ſo called from the Saxon ȝelaðian, to gather together, or aſſemble; (And hence, very probably, is Leet alſo derived, in Court-Leet;) and this ſeems to have been a Sub-Diviſion appointed by King Alfred, when he divided England into Shires, for the more Ready and Expeditious Aſſembling of the County together, againſt the Incurſions of the Danes; and alſo for the better Execution of Juſtice. For formerly, the Trithing-Court, held in any Place, was called the Lathe; which Word is preſerved ſtill in the Court, held by the Bailiffs and Jurats of Romney-Marſh, at Dymchurch, and therefore called Dymchurch-Lathe. The Place where 'tis held, Philpot calls New-Hall.

Each Lathe ſeems to have had its Proper Officer, who was called the Lath-Reve, Ledgreve, and Trithing-Reve; when preſiding over either Three Hundreds, or poſſibly a Third Part of a County, &c. (a) And perhaps the Word Riding, in the Diviſions of Yorkſhire, may be but a Corruption of Trithing, or Triding. In this Lathe, or Trithing, Cauſes that could not be determined in the Hundred-Court, were brought: And here the Principal Men of ſeveral Hundreds being ſummon'd and aſſembled by the Lath-Reve, or Trithing-Reve, did debate and determine it, if they thought proper ſo to do: Or elſe they ſent it to the County-Court (b). Perhaps alſo our Word to Lade, or gather up Water, hath the ſame Original.

(b) Hicks Diſſert. Epiſt. p. 4. Spelman, &c.

In theſe Lathes are contained ſeveral Bailiwicks: So called, I ſuppoſe, for being under the Juriſdiction of the ſeveral Bailiffs of the Sheriff. For tho' now the Word Bailiff be uſed only for ſuch Officers as ſerve Writs, and do Baſe Offices within Franchiſes and Liberties; yet it was formerly applied to Men of much Higher Dignity and Authority: Bailiff, in French, being the ſame as Præfectus Provinciæ.

And under theſe,

Hundreds: Which were ſo called, becauſe they contained a Juriſdiction over an Hundred Pledges.

And under theſe there were,

Tithings: Which were ſo named, becauſe in each of them, in the Saxon Time, were Ten Perſons, (Houſe-keepers,) whereof each was Surety and Pledge one for another, that they ſhould behave themſelves orderly and well: And the Chief, or Principal, was called the Tithing-Man. Something of this remains to this Day, in our Court-Leets; where the Old Freoburghs, or Free Pledges, are ſtill called Franci Plegii.

In the following Account of the Lathes, Bailiwicks, Hundreds, &c. I follow Kilburn; who, as he wrote ſince Lambert, was very accurate in theſe Matters.

The County of Kent is divided into theſe Five Lathes, which in the Map are fairly diſtinguiſhed.

I. The Lath of Sutton at Hone.

Which hath in it Two Diviſions of Juſtices; the Upper, and the Lower.

II. The Lath of Aylesford.

The Diviſion or Partition of this from the former Lath, is much better ſeen by the Map, than Words can deſcribe it. But thoſe who pleaſe, may ſee in Kilburn, the Track which the Line of Separation ought to make, after the manner above given you, in diſtinguiſhing Eaſt from Weſt Kent.

And having thus given you a particular Account of the uſual Diviſions of this County; the Knowledge of which will be very uſeful to ſuch Gentlemen as are in the Commiſſion of the Peace, Lawyers, Attorneys, &c. I proceed next to treat of each particular Pariſh in an Alphabetical Order.

BOOK I. PART II.

ACRISE lies towards the South-Eaſt of Kent, by the Stoure, about half a Mile South-Eaſt of Eleham, in the Bailiwick of Stowting, Lath of Shipway, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath; in the Deanery of Eleham, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Liberty of Eleham claims over ſo much of it as is in the Upper half Hundred of Loningborow. And the Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims over the Manor of Brandred. Part thereof is in the Hundred of Folkſtone; and the Reſt in that of Loningburgh; in which latter the Church ſtandeth, and is called St. Martins. It is a fair ſmall Church of only one Iſle. A Rectory (b). 'Tis but a ſmall Pariſh. In the 20th Year of King William the Firſt, it was held of Ankettellus de Roſſe, whence it went to the Coſentons of Coſenton in Alesford, to hold of the Barony of Roſſe, and of his Manor of Horton near Fermingham. And William de Coſington was one of the Kentiſh Gentlemen pardoned by King John, for ſwearing to Lewis the Dolphin, Anno Domini 1366, as appears from the Private Evidences of Coſington. Charles King of Navarre ſettled a Thouſand Crowns per Annum on Sir Stephen de Coſington, and William his Son, for their Services to him in his Wars. The laſt of this Family holding this Manor was Sir John de Coſington, who about the latter End of King Henry the Eighth left Three Daughters only, Married to Duke, Wood, and Alexander Hamon; and Hamon had Acriſe for his Partition. In this Name it continued, till in the beginning of King James, it went again by a Daughter (Katherine) to Sir Robert Lewknor; and one of his Deſcendants ſold it to Thomas Papillon, Eſq; Father to the preſent Poſſeſſor Philip Papillon, Eſq;

Bandred is a Manor in this Pariſh, which formerly belonged to the Abby of St. Radigunds; and at the Suppreſſion it was exchanged in the 29th Year of King Henry the Eighth with the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and remains ſtill part of the Revenue of that See.

In this Pariſh near the Church, Philip Papillon, Eſq; hath a handſome Seat; as he hath another good one at Leigh by Blackheath. He is Member of Parliament for the Port of Dover, as he hath been many Years. His firſt Lady was Anne Jolliffe, of whom there is a fair Monument againſt the Wall in this Church; which, with the Chancel, was Pewed and Beautified at the Charge of this Gentleman and his Father.

ADDINGTON lies in the Middle of the Weſt ſide of the County by the Medway, about a Mile and a half North-Weſt from Weſt Malling, in the Bailiwick of Hoo, and Hundred of Larkfield, Lath of Alesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and South Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath; in the Deanry of Malling, and Dioceſe of Rocheſter: The Church is called St. Margarets, and hath a handſome Tower.

The Names of many Places in this County, as well as in other Places, end in the Syllable Ton or Tun, probably from the Saxon ƀun, originally a Hedge or Fence; and thence a Town, Village, or Street, and this derived from ƀun a Mountain or Hill; for moſt of the ancient Towns were built on Hills or Aſcents. Cluverius, in his Germania Antiqua ſaith alſo, that Tuun and Tuyn (whence Town, Ton, Tun,) ſignifies originally an Incloſure; and in this Senſe is the Norman Word Bourg or Bourgade; and the primary Signification of Burg is a Row or Street, a Collection of Houſes placed together but not walled round. The Living is a Rectory in the Patronage of the (c) Wattons.

Roger de Mandeville was very anciently Lord of the Fee here, as the old Deeds without Date, and now, ſaith Philpot, in the Hands of Mr. Watton, do teſtify. But this very ancient Family was gone before King Edward the Second's Time. This Place being then in the Poſſeſſion of Robert At Chequer, but in a ſhort time, as appears by the Book of Ayd, he alienated it to Nicholas Dagworth; and it then held of the Honour of Swanſcamp Caſtle, as being the Capital Seat of the Barony of (d) Mountchenſey. Before the End of King Edward the Third, it was again ſold to Sir Hugh Segrave: He in the Seventh Year of Richard the Second parted with it to Richard Charles, deſcended from Edward Charles, Captain and Admiral of the Seas from the Thames Mouth Northward, in the Reign of Edward the Fourth. This Richard Charles left only Two Daughters; one Alice, Married to William Snayth, and Joan to Richard Ormskirk. On the Diviſion of the Eſtate, this Manor went to Snayth, but he leaving only one Daughter, ſhe by Marriage carried carried it into the Family of Watton, where it remained in Philpot's Time, and I ſuppoſe doth ſtill.

In this Church are Memorials of Richard Charles and Alice his Wife. He died Anno Domini, 1370. Of William Snayth, Lord of Addington, (and who had been Sheriff of Kent) 1409. William Watton, Lord Patron of this Church, 1444. Of William Watton, Lord of this Village, 1464. Of Robert Watton, Eſq; Lord of this Place, and Patron of the Church, 1470. And of John Northwood, Eſq; of Northwood, and Heir to the Eſtate there, 1416. Which was once ſo eminent a Manor, that in Edward the Confeſſor's time, 100 Burgeſſes of the City of Canterbury owed Suit to it. A Braſs Plate there is over Thomas Chaworth, one of the Clerks in Chancery, Married a Watton but the Date is gone.

In a Place in this Pariſh called the Warren, I ſaw Six or Seven large Stones erected in a Circle, they are now about Five or Six Foot above the Ground; and the old Clark tells me, that formerly there ſtood an Oak in the middle of them: If ſo they might be only deſigned for Seats.

Here is an Eyle-bourn at this Place which People call Ere-well, breaking out once in Seven or Eight Years, which they will have to preſage Deaths and Dearths, and I know not what. When it comes, they dig a Dyke for it, and turn it along by the Highway-ſide; and when this Water mingles with that of their little Trout Rivulet, it makes their Trouts Red, which otherwiſe are White.

ADISHAM, (Eadeſham, Edeſham, Adeſham) lies towards the Eaſt End of Kent, about Four Miles and an Half from Canterbury, in the Bailiwick of Bridge, and Petham, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath; in the Deanery of Bridge, and Dioceſe of Canterury.

The Liberty of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury claims here over the Manor of Adiſham; which in Anno Domini, 616, was given to that Church by Ethelbald, Son of Ethelbert the firſt Chriſtian King of Kent, and was anciently an Hundred of it ſelf; and after the Diſſolution, was in the Thirty-third Year of King Henry the Eighth, given to the Dean and Chapter of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury again. The Church is called St. Innocents, with a Tower Steeple, but nothing in it remarkable, but Memorials of Mr. Smith, and two other Rectors here, pretty ancient. 'Tis a Rectory, and to it hath annexed the Chapel of Staple (e). But the Liberty of St. Auſtin claims over the whole Pariſh, becauſe 'tis in the Hundred of Downhamford, which belonged to that Abbey. And the Grant running, that it was given Libera ab omnibus Servitiis & Fiſcali Tributo exceptis Tribus iſtis Conſuetudinibus expeditione cum-muni Labore (de quo nullus excipiabator) Pontis Conſtructione & Arcis. And this being a Grant, as they pretended, very Ancient and Eminent for this Freedom, it was common in ſucceeding Grants to put in theſe three Letters, L. S. A. which ſignified Liberè ſicut Adiſham. It hath been for ſome Hundreds of Years Leaſed out from the Church to the Auſtins, as the Manor of Godmerſham alſo hath been.

There was anciently a Gavel-Corn or Rent-Corn reſerved out of the Manor of Adiſham to the Church of Canterbury, as Somner ſhews out of their Leiger-Book (f).

(f) Gavel-Kind, P. 16.

ALKHAM, Alcham: Ham is a frequent Termination for the Names of Places; and ſignifies originally a Covering, and thence a Houſe. This Place lies towards the S. E. Part of Kent, about 2 Miles Weſtward from Dover, in the Bailiwick of Stowting, Hundred of Folkſtone, Lath of Shipway, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery of Dover, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Church is dedicated to St. Anthony. The Tithes are impropriated to the Archbiſhop, in whoſe Gift the Vicarage is (g). The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims over it.

Darell ſaith, Alkham was given by the Crown for the Repair and Maintenance of Averanches, or Manſel's Tower in Dover-Caſtle.

Places here of Note are,

1. Malmains, uſually called Smallmains; is a Manor that uſed to have Hollmeade annexed to it; and in the Twentieth Year of King Edward the Third, was in the Poſſeſſion of Thomas, Son of Nicholas de Malmains, who paid Aid for his Lands here at making the Black-Prince Knight. But in the beginning of King Henry the Fourth this Eſtate was got into the Poſſeſſion of John Alkham, probably ſo called for his Reſidence here; and he held it in Caſtle-Guard Tenure of Dover-Caſtle, and paid a Supply for his Lands here at the Marriage of Blanch, Daughter to that King, from which Tax or Aſſeſſment ſeveral Lands in this County have gained the Name of Blanch-Lands. In Alkham's Poſſeſſion Malmains continued till the beginning of King Henry the Seventh, and then Peter Alkham ſold it to John Warren Gentleman; from which Name, in the End of King Henry the Eighth it was alienated to Brown; and thence to Luſhington. But Hollmeade was ſold to Wollet, a Name, ſaith Philpot, of Eminence, both here and at Elham.

2. Hoptons, is another Place in Alkham, which once was the Inheritance of Peter de Hall; but it appears by the Book of Ayd, that in the twentieth Year of King Edward the Third, it was come into the Poſſeſſion of William de Bourn, in whoſe Family it tarried till the beginning of King Henry the Sixth, and then was alienated to Baker of Caldham; and by a Daughter of his went in Marriage to Robert Brandred; and thence, about the latter End of King Edward the Fourth, was ſold to Brown of Bechworth Caſtle in Surry; and from thence in King James the Firſt's Time was alienated to Godman; from whence I believe it went into the Name of Michel; for Anno 1706 Thomas Michel, Eſq; ſold the Manor to Jacob Desbouverie, Eſq; Member of Parliament for the Port of Hithe, in this County.

3. Evering, which was anciently the Poſſeſſion of a Family of that Name, who are derived from the Ancient Lords of Folkſtone called Averenches; and whoſe Coat of Armour was, Or, Five Cheverons Az.; and they were ſo eminent as to have one of the Turrets in Dover Caſtle called by their Name.

This Place was held in King Henry the Second's Time as a whole Knight's Fee by Wolwardus de Evering, and of the Lords of Folkſtone. And when Philpot wrote his Villare Cantianum, which was 1656, the Eſtate was ſtill in that Ancient Name.

In this Pariſh is an Eylebourn riſing in a Bottom, at a Place called Dillingdore, whoſe Irruption the Inhabitants will have to be a certain Preſage, either of ſome great Mortality, or Dearth and Scarcity of Proviſions. Indeed from no apparent Head or Spring, it ſends out ſometimes ſuch vaſt Quantities of Water, that a Veſſel of conſiderable Burden may be born by the Stream, which uſually goes down to Chilton, and ſo by the Dover River finds an Outlet into the Sea.

But of the Cauſe and Nature of theſe Eylebourns, I muſt defer ſpeaking, till I come to the Natural Hiſtory of this County.

ALDINGTON (Aldintune,) lies towards the South Eaſt Part of Kent, about Four Miles and a half South Eaſt from Aſhford, in the Bailiwick wick and Lath of Shipway; in the East Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath; in the Deanery of Limpne, and Dioceſe of Canterbury: And the Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims there.

Part of this Pariſh is in the Hundred of Bircholt Franchiſe, and the Reſidue in the Hundred of Strete; in which latter Hundred the Church ſtandeth, and is called St. Martin's. In the Middle of the North Iſle is, or was a Tombſtone (old) over James Godfrey, and Katherine his Wife.

Kilburn ſaith, he could not find Aldington among the Names of ſuch Places as belonged to the Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury: But he found, that in the 31ſt of K. Henry VIII. Thomas Cranmer, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, by Deed enrolled in the Augmentation-Office, granted the Manor of Aldington to the King. And King Charles I. granted the Manor-Houſe, and Farm-Lands thereunto belonging, to hold of His Manor of East Greenwich, in Free Soccage.

The famous Eraſmus, of Roterdam, was Miniſter of this Pariſh; being preſented by Archbiſhop Warham. For 'tis in the Gift of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury; a Rectory; and, with the Chapel of Smeeth annexed, is rated in the King's Books at 38 l. 6 s. 8 d.

Richard Maſters (who was hanged at Tyburn, 25 Hen. VIII. for Treaſon; being one of the Accomplices with Elizabeth Barton, of this Pariſh, who was called the Holy Maid of Kent;) was alſo Rector of Aldington.

This Town was given to the Church of Canterbury, by Edgiva, Mother to King Edmond, and King Edred, A D. 961.

The Archbiſhops of Canterbury had here a fair Seat; in the Repairing and Enlarging of which, John Morton, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, in King Henry the VIIth's Reign, laid out great Sums of Money. And here was a Park and Chace, belonging to the Archbiſhops; which was called Aldington-Frith.

Here alſo was a Famous Chapel in this Pariſh, which was dedicated to the Bleſſed Virgin, and was called the Chapel of our Lady of Court of Streete, for Court at Strete. As the Inhabitants told Leland, it was once a Town of ſome Faſhion; and they ſhew the Ruins of a Caſtle, which ſtood near the Chapel; and they preſerve and ſhew a Mace, and a Horn, as Badges of its having been once a Corporation. But Leland himſelf thinks it to have been only a Part of the Port of Limne. This Chapel was the Place, where the Holy Maid of Kent acted the chiefeſt of her Impoſtures: Whoſe Hiſtory, take as follows.

The Story of the Holy Maid of Kent.

'A. D. 1525. One Elizabeth Barton, Servant 'to Thomas Knob, of this Pariſh, was much trou-'bled for about Seven Months with Hyſterical 'Fits, and with the uſual Symptoms of Riſings 'in her Throat, Faintings, Deliria, &c. And 'it happening, that a Child of her Maſter's, 'that was ſick in a Cradle by her, being near 'Death, juſt as ſhe was come out of one of 'her Fits; ſhe asked, Whether it were dead, or 'not? And hearing it was alive, ſhe ſaid, it 'would ſoon die; which it really did. This Suc-'ceſs in Divination, which, together with her 'odd Fits, were the Object of the People's 'Wonder, made her ſet up for a Propheteſs. 'And ſoon after this, ſhe pretended to tell 'Things which were done at Church, Court, and 'other Places, where ſhe could not be preſent, 'nor have any apparent Information; and to 'talk about Religious Matters, as Heaven, 'Hell, and Purgatory. She preached againſt 'Vice, and Evil-Living; exhorted to frequent 'the Church, to hear Maſſes, to uſe frequent 'Confeſſions, and Prayers to our Lady, and all 'Saints; and to all the Superſtitions of the Po-'piſh Religion.

'In her Trances, ſhe would often ſay, that 'ſhe would go Home; and ſometimes when ſhe 'came out of them, that ſhe had been at Home. 'And being asked, where her Home was; ſhe 'ſaid it was in Heaven; where St. Michael 'weighed Souls, and St. Peter carried the Keys; 'and where ſhe had the Company of our Lady 'of Court of Strete; who had commanded her, 'to offer a Taper up to her in her Chapel; 'and that then ſhe ſhould immediately be cu-'red. And ſhe diſcover'd great Pleaſure, in 'the Thoughts of being talk'd of for the Mira-'cle: And ſhe ſaid, Our Lady would ſhew more 'Miracles there ſhortly: And that if any one ſhould 'chance to depart this Life ſuddenly, or by Miſ-'chance, or in deadly Sin; if he vowed heartily to 'our Good Lady at Court of Strete, he ſhould be 'reſtored to Life again, to receive Shrift and Houſell; 'and ſhould after depart this World with God's Bleſ-'ſing.

'She could tell alſo in particular, on any 'Night, what Meat the Hermit of that Chapel 'had for his Supper: And many other Things 'ſhe told concerning him, to the great Admi-'ration of thoſe that came about her.

'After ſome Time, ſhe went her ſelf to this 'Chapel, and made her Offering; but tho' 'put in good Hopes, ſhe was not preſently cu-'red; there being further Uſe to be made of 'her. For the Fame of this wonderful Maiden 'was now ſpread all about: And coming to 'the Ears of Warham, then Archbiſhop of Can-'terbury, he order'd Dr. Bocking, Mr. Hadley, 'and Barnes, Three of the Monks of Chriſt-'Church in Canterbury, with Father Lewes, and 'his Official of Canterbury, and the Parſon of 'Aldington, to examine into the Matter, and 'make their Report to him.

'Theſe Commiſſioners finding her a thorough 'Catholick, encouraged her all they could poſ-'ſibly; and ſolemnly went with her in Proceſ-'ſion to the Chapel, attended by ſeveral Per-'ſons of Quality of both Sexes, and a Mob of '3000 People.

'When ſhe came before the Image of our 'Lady, ſhe fell down before it, in one of her 'Fits; delivering Rhimes and Speeches, all 'tending to the Honour of that Saint. She 'wiſhed alſo, that there were a Singing Prieſt 'to attend the Chapel; and that She her ſelf 'were put into ſome Religious Houſe; which 'ſhe ſaid alſo was the Will of our Lady.

'On the Report made by theſe wicked Com-'miſſioners, the Archbiſhop order'd the Wench 'to be put into the Nunnery of St. Sepulchres, in 'Canterbury; where ſhe continued with her old 'Fits and Trances, and (as was pretended) 'working continual Miracles, on all ſuch as 'would but make a good profitable Vow to our 'Lady at Court of Strete. The Hermit thri-'ved well on the Offerings, and the Convent 'were much pleaſed with the New Nun. And 'thus Matters went glibly for divers Years toge-'ther.

'But at laſt this Woman began to meddle 'with the Affairs of King Henry the VIIIth's 'Divorce from Queen Katherine; which the 'Romiſh Clergy run her into, to prevent his 'Marriage with Anna Bullen. And one time ſhe 'deliver'd in Extaſy, That if that Prince pro-'ceeded on his Divorce, He ſhould not be King 'of England a Month after it.

'This Account coming to Court, the Queen's 'Friends made very much of it; and the King 'was reſolved to have the Matter further exa'mined into; which was immediately and effectually done: And She her self, and her Adherents, (viz. Richard Maſter, Parſon of Aldington; Edward Bocking, D. D. and Richard Dering, Monks of Canterbury; Edward Thwaits, Gentleman; Thomas Laurence, Regiſter to the Archdeacon of Canterbury; Henry Gold, Parſon of Aldermary, in London; Hugh Rich, Obſervant Fryar; Richard Risby, and Thomas Gold, Gentlemen;) all confeſſing, on their Examination in the Star-Chamber, the whole Matter to be a Contrivance and Impoſture; were firſt ſentenced to ſtand at Paul's Croſs, on a Scaffold built on purpoſe for them, all the Sermon-Time; and to deliver to the Preacher Papers of their Confeſſions. Which was done accordingly.

'And about Chriſtmas after, in the Year 1534, the Parliament took this Matter into Conſideration: And here the Nun, and ſome of her Accomplices, as Bocking, Maſter, Dering, Gold, (the Prieſt) Rich, and Risby, were attainted of High Treaſon, and afterwards hanged and beheaded; and the Nun's Head was ſet upon London-Bridge.

'And John Fiſher, Biſhop of Rocheſter; John Adeſon, his Chaplain; Thomas Gold, and Edward Thwaits; Thomas Laurence, Regiſter of Canterbury, and Thomas Abell, Prieſt; were attainted likewiſe for Miſpriſion, or Concealment of the Treaſon aforeſaid.

There is little doubt to be made, but that Archbiſhop Warham himſelf (who was a violent perſecuting Papiſt,) did under-hand countenance this Impoſture; as alſo did Sir Thomas More. And Biſhop Fiſher was ſo obſtinate in the Matter, that tho' after the Executions were over, Secretary Cromwell ſent his Brother to him firſt, and after wrote to him, to ask the King's Pardon for the Encouragement he had given this Wench; yet he would not do it, nor make any Submiſſion; and went on at laſt to draw a greater Miſchief upon himſelf. But More afterwards owned her to be an Impoſtor; as may be ſeen in his Letter about her, in Biſhop Burnet's Hiſtory of the Reformation. Vol. II.

The Officers relating to the Manors of Romney-Marſh, are choſen at Aldington annually.

And in this Place is a petrifying Spring, near Ruffins-Hill.

Aldington is within the Diviſion of Juſtices of the Corporation of Romney-Marſh; the Liberty whereof claims over it.

Places of Note,

1. Ruffins-Hall, was once the Seat of ſome of the Ancient Family of the Godfreys; whoſe Eſtate deſcended, by Two Daughters, to the Clerks of Kingſnoth, and to the Blechendens. Theſe Godfreys ſeem to have been of the Family of Godfrey Le Falconer, the Son of Balder; to whom King Henry II. granted much Land in theſe Parts; which they held by Serjeantry, by the Service of Keeping Two Hawks, for the King, and his Succeſſors.

2. Hurſt, or Herſt; which formerly was a Pariſh by it ſelf, whoſe Church was dedicated to St. Leonard. The Manor is called Falconers Hurſt; no doubt, from Godfrey Le Falconer above-mentioned. But in time it came to be called Michel Grove; and in Philpot's Time, was in the Poſſeſſion of the Shelleys, of Michel Grove in Suſſex.

3. Cobbes-Place: A Manor here, which formerly belonged to a Family of that Name; but by Alice, Daughter of Edward Cobb, Eſq; about the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth, it went in Marriage to Sir John Norton, of Northwood; and Sir Thomas Norton, a Deſcendant of his, ſold it to White.

ALHALLOWS, lies at the N. Side of Kent, near the Iſle of Grean, in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Hoo, and Lath of Aylesford; Weſt Diviſion of the County, and North one of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery of Rocheſter, and Dioceſe of the ſame.

The Liberty of the Biſhop of Rocheſter claims here.

The Church is dedicated to All-Saints; and is a fair one, with a large Chancel. A Vicarage, in the Gift of the Church of Rocheſter; Rated in the King's Books, at 8 l. 7 s. 11 d.

Places obſervable here, are,

1. Shawſted. This Place, and the adjoining Manor of Shawſted, did of old belong to the Family of De la Pole. John De la Pole paid Aid for it, at making the Black Prince Knight, in the 20th Year of K. Edward III. And in his Family the Poſſeſſion of this Eſtate continued, till the Reign of King Henry the IVth; and then it was ſold to Zouch, of Haringworth: In which Name it ſtaid, till John Lord De la Zouch miſcarrying at Boſworth-Field, in the Cauſe of King Richard III. againſt K. Henry VII. loſt it by Attainder to the Crown. And this Eſtate was then granted to Sir Henry Wyat: And from him, with the Addition of,

2. Windlebill, another Manor in this Pariſh, (which was granted to the Family by King Henry the VIIIth, on the Suppreſſion of the Monaſteries, and which before belonged to the Abbey of Reading) deſcended to his Grandſon, Sir Thomas Wyat: But he being attainted, and executed for Treaſon, in the Second Year of Q. Mary, this Eſtate came to the Crown again; and there ſtaid, till King James I. in the Beginning of his Reign, granted both Shawſted and Windlebill to the City of London. And the City ſold them to Sir William Garaway, Father to Sir Henry Garaway; one of whoſe Family was Poſſeſſor of them in Philpot's Time.

3. Place-Houſe, or Alhallows-Place, in this Pariſh; was anciently Part of the Eſtate of the Pimps, of Pimps-Court, in the Pariſh of Looſe by Maidſtone. Philip de Pimp was one of thoſe Men at Arms, which the Prior of Rocheſter was ordered to ſend out, for the Guard of the Sea-Coaſts at Genlade, or Yenlade, in the Hundred of Hoo, (which I take to be now what is called the North Ynlet, or Inlet) in the 11th of King Edward III.

In the 14th Year of K. Edward the IVth, Thomas Pimp, Senior, was buried here in Alhallows Church. He had Two Sons, William and John; and Three Daughters; Elizabeth, unmarried; and Alice, a Nun in, and Margery, Lady Prioreſs of Malling-Abbey. Not long after, this Eſtate came to the Family of Coppinger; from whence, by a Female Heir, it went to Sir Harbottle Grimſtone, of Eſſex.

In the Church, are Two Monuments of the Coppinger Family; one of which married into the Houſe of Cobham.

ALLINGTON, (Aſlington,) in the Textus Roffenſis Alentune; lies towards the Middle of Kent, by the Medway, about a Mile North from Maidſtone; in the Bailiwick of Hoo, Hundred of Larkfield, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and South one of Juſtices in this Lath.

The Liberty of Maidſtone claims over it. 'Tis in the Dioceſe of Rocheſter, and Deanery of Malling.

A Rectory, in the King's Gift; Rated at 6 l. 16 s. 8 d.

See an Account of the Caſtle here, with the Manor, in that Part of this Hiſtory, where the Caſtles are treated of.

St. ALPHAGE, is a Pariſh, one Part of which is in Kent, (viz. the Burgh of Staplegate, or Stablegate;) and in the Bailiwick of Bridge and Petham; Hundred of Weſt-Gate, Lath of St. Auguſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath; and in the Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury. But the Church is in the County of, and City of Canterbury.

All the Pariſh is in the Deanery and Dioceſe of Canterbury.

In the Church are Memorials of the Interment of Piers, Parmenter, Lovelych, Stuppeny; and in the S. Chancel, of Henry Gosborn. He gave Twenty Marks towards Repairing the City-Walls; and by Two Wives had 25 Children. Alſo of Eugham, Caxton, Reeves, Prude, and Staplegate.

A Rectory, in the Patronage of the Archbiſhop; and rated in the King's Books, at 8 l. 13 s. 4 d.

ALL-SAINTS, in Canterbury, is a Rectory; Value 7 l. in the King's Book. His Majeſty Patron.

In the Church are no Ancient Monuments, or Inſcriptions; but one of Roger Brent, Thrice Mayor of, and a good Benefactor to, the City; buried in 1486.

The Churchyard of this Church was laid to it but of late Days: For in King Edward the IIId's Reign, it was in private Hands. And Part of it did anciently belong to Eaſtbridge Hoſpital, in Canterbury (a).

(a) Somner's Canterb. p. 167.

ALL-SAINTS, in Thanet, was formerly a Vicarage, and Chapel of Eaſe to the Mother-Church of Reculver; whoſe Vicar had the ſame Juriſdiction over it, as the Commiſſary of Canterbury hath now. In Token of its Subjection to Reculver, it paid the Vicar a Penſion of 2 l. 3 s. 4 d. per Annum; and the Pariſhioners were liable to the Repairs of the Mother-Church (b). The Church hath been long ſince deſolate; and is not rated in the (Printed) King's Book of the Value of Livings.

(b) Somner's Rom. Ports, p. 85.

Some think this the ſame with Birchington; but in all the old Maps, 'tis placed different. And perhaps when it was deſtroy'd by the Flowing of the Sea, Birchington-Church, or Chapel, might be erected to ſupply its Defect.

St. ANDREWS, in the City of Canterbury. A Rectory, valued at 13 l. 6 s. 8 d. in the King's Books; Archbiſhop Patron.

In the Church are Memorials of the Interment of Bolney, Melroſe, and Fanting, about 200 Years ſince.

Thomas Petit, of this Pariſh, A. D. 1498, gave by his Will Five Marks, towards making a new Steeple, and a new Roof to this Church. To which alſo, one John Swan contributed.

Here was formerly a Chancery, founded by one William Butler.

APLEDORE, (Apuldre, Apultree, Apoldre,) very probably from Polder, which ſignified formerly a Mooriſh Situation, or a Marſhy, Fenny Place (c). And I have never met with it written with a double p; ſo that its Derivation from Appletree is as forced, as the Soil is improper for the Fruit (d). No doubt, it was at firſt written Æppolope; and by Corruption, Apeldre.

It lies at the South Side of Kent, by the River Rother, about Four Miles and a half South-Eaſt from Tenterden. 'Tis in the Bailiwick of the Seven Hundreds; and Part of it (viz. from the Rhee-Wall, to Red-Hill) is in the Liberty of New Romney, and Diviſion of Juſtices of that Town and Port; the reſt is in the Hundred of Blackborn.

Some ſmall Part of it is in the Liberty of Romney-Marſh, and Diviſion of Juſtices of that Corporation; but the reſt of the Pariſh is in the Lower Diviſion of Juſtices of the Lath of Scray, in which Lath all the ſaid Pariſh is.

It ſtands likewiſe in the Weſt Diviſion of the County, Dioceſe of Canterbury, and Deanery of Limpne.

The Church is dedicated to St. Peter and Paul; and, as the Tradition goes, was built in the Place of, and on the Ruins of the Caſtle.

The great Tithes are appropriated to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, in whoſe Gift the Vicarage is; and, with the Chapel of Ebeney (in the Iſle of Oxney) annexed to it, is rated at 21 l. per An. in the King's Books.

There is a Fair held here on the 11th of January; and a Market was formerly kept, but now diſuſed.

The Liberty of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury, claims over the Manor of Apledore; which was given to that Church, by Eadſine, Archdeacon there, An. 1032, as ſome ſay. But Somner (e) ſhews, that K. Canutus, and Ælfgiva his Queen, gave it to Eadſin, for the Uſe of the Church; inſerting the very Charter it ſelf, in Saxon and Engliſh, by which it appears that it was Foſter-Land, or given to the Monks ad Cibum, for their Proviſions. Which appears alſo from Domeſday; and that it lay in the Hundred of Blackſtone, then accounted within the Lath of Limware, or Shipway, as it is now called.

(e) Rom. Ports, p. 72.

On the Diſſolution, King Henry the VIIIth regranted it to the ſaid Church, in the 33d Year of his Reign.

But the Burgh of Great Kenarton (tho' in this Pariſh) is out of this Liberty. Which hath in it a Court-Leet over Two Burghs, viz. Town-Burgh, and Hoth-Burgh; the Borſholders whereof are there choſen; and not at the Court-Leet holden for the Hundred of Blackborn. Nor do the Inhabitants of theſe Burghs owe any Service to the Court-Leet; only a Conſtable may be choſen out of either of theſe Burghs, for that Hundred.

The Liberty of St. Auſtin claims alſo in this Pariſh.

The Marſhes about this Town were inned, A. D. 1349; the doing which, coſt the Church of Canterbury 350 l.

For Apledore-Caſtle, ſee the Account of Caſtles and Forts, &c.

And for the Actions of the Danes here, ſee the Civil Hiſtory of this County, where the Danes in Kent are particularly treated of.

Mr. Somner (f), with great Probability, ſuppoſes the River Rother, or Limen, (by ſome called Apledore-Water) to have had formerly a direct and continued Current by this Place, to Old and New Romney; on the Weſt Side whereof meeting with the Æſtuary, it preſently diſembogued, and fell into the Sea; which anciently came up thereabouts, with ſo wide and large a Mouth, that in the Year 774, it appears, by a Charter of King Offa, (in which, the Manor of Lydd is given to Archbiſhop Janibert,) that that Place did then border on the Sea, both Eaſtward and Northward; of which more at large, when I ſpeak of the Portus Lemanis. And 'tis probable, that the Sea then flowed up the Rother, or Limen, as high into the Land, as the Place called Red-Hill; along by the North-Eaſt Side of what is now called the Rhee (or Rey) Wall; that is, the Wall by the River: So that Apledore might not then lye above Four Miles from the Mouth of the River, or where it opened into the Æſtuary.

(f) Rom. Ports and Forts, p. 49.

In

In King Henry the Third's Reign was a Licenſe granted to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury: Obſternere quandam antiquam Trancheam, qua ducitur a Brachio maris vocato Apledore, verſus villam de Romney. And in a Writ in King Edward the Third's Reign, mentioned by Dugdale, are theſe Words, (a) Exercitus eo pervenerat, qui olim in Limenis, In oſtio conſedit apud Apuldore. And 'tis probable, there was a Paſſage over the River, between Apledore and Romney, at a Place ſtill called Allaves-Bridge; of old indeed it was written Alolves-bridge, and perhaps took its Name from that Earl Alofe (or ſome ſuch Great Man) who gave his Name to Boſton Alofe in this County: Of which more there.

(a) Hiſt. Inbank. P. 43.

The Place where the Danes firſt landed was probably not at Apuldre, but ſomewhere before you come up to it. And about two Miles ſhort, under the Hill at Kennardington, there are ſome Remains of old Works; but at length they came hither and fortified themſelves; but whereabouts the Place of their Entrenchment or Caſtle was is uncertain; ſome think on Windmill-Hill, where many old Foundations have been dug up. Others imagine, that after they had deſtroyed the old Caſtle of Apuldre, they went four Miles further to Barrow-hill in Ebeney, in the Iſle of Oxney, where they ſay hath been a Caſtle. Others carry them to Woodchurch, four Miles another Way. But I think the only Account we can rely upon is that given us by the Saxon Chronicle; of which more in the Account of Danes in Kent.

Places of Note in Apuldre, are

1. Hornes Place, a Seat for many Hundred Years of a Family of the Name of Horne. William Horne was one of the Conſervators of the Peace in the Firſt Year of King Richard the Second; and Michael Horne was Sheriff of Kent in the Seventh Year of King Henry the Fourth, and held his Shrievalty here; but by a Deſcendant of his, Anne Horne, it went in Marriage to Benedict Guldeford, Eſq; who refuſing the Oath of Supremacy, and flying out of the Kingdom, about the Twelfth or Thirteenth Year of Queen Elizabeth, this Manor was confiſcated to the Crown; and not long after was granted to Mr. Choute, whoſe Grandſon Edward Choute, Eſq; was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

2. Dean-Court, an Ancient Seat of a Family of the Name of Apledore. But about the End of King Edward the Third, Elaith, only Daughter and Heir of Thomas de Apledore, carried it in Marriage to William Roper, Eſq; with the adjacent Marſh. In Philpot's Time it continued in that Name, the Lord Tenham being the Poſſeſſor.

3. Frenchay, a Manor which formerly had Owners of that Name. But from King Edward the Third's time to that of King Henry the Eighth it was in the Poſſeſſion of the Hauts. The laſt of which Sir William Haut leaving only Two Daughters, Joan the Youngeſt ſhared this Eſtate, and carried it in Marriage to Sir Thomas Wiat, who being attainted in the Second Year of Queen Mary, forfeited it to the Crown. And Queen Elizabeth in her Twenty-fourth Year granted it back to one of the Name, George Wiat, Eſq;: And his Son Sir Francis ſold it to Tho. Lloyd of Gore-Court in Otham, Eſq; who, Anno 1636, parted with it the ſame way to Sir Edward Hales of Tunſtall, Baronet. And his Grandſon, Sir Edward Hales was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

ASH near Sandwich lies towards the Eaſt End of Kent, about two Miles Weſtward from Sandwich; in the Bailiwick of Eaſtry, Hundred of Wingham, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery of Bridge, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. And the Church is called St. Nicholas, being originally, and till the Year 1682, a Chapel of Eaſe to Wingham, as Richborough Chapel was to this. A handſome large Church with a Spire-Steeple, and Chancel.

There are in this Church very Ancient Memorials of the Interment of Goſhall, Laverick, (who lye croſs-Legged like Knights of Jeruſalem, in the South Chancel) of St. Nicholas, Septvans, Harfleet, Clitherow, Kiriell, Hougham, Peke, Brook, Toldervy, &c. William Lord Latimer, in the Thirty-Eighth Year of King Edward the Third, got a Charter for a Market at Aſh on Thurſdays; and a Fair for Three Days at Lady-day. The Tithes are impropriate to the Archbiſhop who appoints the Curate here. 'Tis not valued in the King's Books, and ſo pays no Firſt Fruits.

Places of Note here;

1. Welmeſtone, which lies partly in this Pariſh, and partly in Wingham; and though now obſcure, was Anciently one of the Seats of Reſidence of the great Family of the Septvans; William de Septvans dying poſſeſſed of it in the Twenty-fifth Year of King Edward the Third; and in this Name it continued till the latter End of King Henry the Eighth, and then was exchanged for other Lands with Sir Walter Henly, who not long after ſold this Seat to Alday; and the Manor it ſelf to Solley. Alday ſold it again to Mr. Benedict Barnham; by one of whoſe Four Daughters, and Co-Heirs, it went by Marriage to the Earl of Caſtlehaven. And ſome of his Deſcendants ſold it to Brigham, in which Name I ſuppoſe it was in Philpot's Time.

2. Goſhall, once the Reſidence of a Family of good Antiquity of that Name, Sir John Goſhall, a worthy Knight, in the Time of King Edward the Third, and King Richard the Second, living here; and lies buried in the Chancel of Aſh Church in compleat Armour, with his Skeleton underneath, being one of thoſe Two that lye Croſs-Leg'd, the other being Sir John Laverick. The Female Heir of this Family Married one of the St. Nicholas of the Iſle of Thanet, from whence by a Daughter again it went to John Dynely, Eſq; Anceſtor to Chriſtopher Roper, Baron of Tenham, who ſold Goſhall to Sir Edward Monins, and thence it went the ſame way by a Deſcendant of that Family to Sir Henry, the Father of the preſent Sir Robert Furneſe, Baronet.

Here was about Ten Years ago a rough Stone Cheſt, or Coffin dug up, with a Cover of the ſame, much like that mentioned to be found at Wingham. See Wingham.

3. Checquers, was a very Ancient Seat of a Branch of the Family of the Septvans, who from their Reſidence here had the Sir-Names of Chequer, or Atchequer, and are frequently ſo ſtiled in old Deeds and Records. But after it had remained for many Generations in the Name of Septvans and Chequer, this Place at laſt went by a Daughter in Marriage to Alday; where after having ſtaid a while it went by Sale to Mr. Thomas Harfleet, whoſe Deſcendants were in Poſſeſſion of it in Philpot's Time.

4. Hell's Twitham, is a Place, that before the beginning of King Edward the Third, was in the Poſſeſſion of a Family of the Name of Hells, but then paſſed out of it into that of Twitham; For Bertram de Twitham died poſſeſſed of it in the Third Year of King Edward the Third's Reign. But by Maud, Sole Daughter to Alanus, Son of Theobald Twitham, it went by Marriage in the Fourth Year of King Richard the Second, into the Poſſeſſion of Simon Septvans, in whoſe Name it continued as long as to Philpot's Time.

5. Overland, ſo called Mr. Somner thinks from the Saxon Oꝛeꝛ, a Brink or Margin, becauſe it lies along on the Bank of the Stour. This Place, in the Twenty-fifth Year of King Henry the Third, was by Grant from that Prince given to Bertram de Crioll, and ſtaid in that Family of the Criolls till about the beginning of King Edward the Firſt; and then was alienated to that of Leybourn; and was poſſeſſed by Juliana the great Heireſs of Roger Lord Leybourn. And Her Second Husband, William de Clinton, Earl of Huntington, had it at his Death in Right of his Wife, in the Twenty-Eighth Year of King Edward the Third; but after this, Juliana having no Iſſue by either Husband, it eſcheated to the Crown, and there ſtaid till King Richard the Second gave it to Simon de Burley, Knight of the Garter, and Lord Warden of the Five Ports. But on his Attainder in the Tenth Year of that King's coming to the Crown, again, it was by that Prince granted to the Abbey of Childrens Langley, where it continued till the Suppreſſion: and then in the Thirty-fifth Year of King Henry the Eighth was granted to Sir Thomas Moile, and Sir Walter Henley, who joined in a Sale to Harfleet; and Harfleet ſold it to Bargrave, who parted with it the ſame way to Sollay. And he ſold it to Mr. John Ward of London, whoſe Widow Catherine Ward held it in Dower in Philpot's Time.

Here was Anciently a Chapel of Eaſe to Aſh Church, ſaith Somner, (b) as Aſh it ſelf was to Wingham.

(b) Rom. Forts, P. 7.

6. Goldſtanton, or as now pronounced Goldſtone, in this Pariſh was Anciently Part of the Eſtate of the Family of Leybourn, and was in the Fiftieth Year of King Henry the Third poſſeſſed by Roger de Leybourn, who was pardoned by the Pacification called Dictum de Kenelworth, for eſpouſing the Cauſe of Simon de Montfort. And his great Grand-daughter Juliana de Leybourn dying without Iſſue in the Forty-third Year of King Edward the Third it eſcheated to the Crown, together with Overland, above-mentioned; and with that was granted by King Richard the Second to Simon de Burley; on whoſe Attainder, reverting to the Crown, it was ſettled on the Abbey of Childrens Langley. After the Diſſolution, King Henry the Eighth granted it to Thomas Lord Cromwell, Earl of Eſſex, on whoſe Attainder in the Thirty-ſecond of that King, reverting to the Crown, it was given in the Thirty-fourth Year of King Henry the Eighth to Vincent Engham, Eſq; whoſe Deſcendant Sir Thomas Engham ſold it to Mr. Courcelis of London; and from him it went the ſame way to Sir William Wilde, ſometime Recorder of London, and afterwards a Judge, in whoſe Son William, the Poſſeſſion will be after his Mother, the preſent Lady Wilde.

7. Nevil's-Fleet, was anciently called Butlers-Fleet, being, as appears by the Book of Ayd, anciently in the Poſſeſſion of a Family of that Name; and who married into the Ancient Family of Heronden of Heronden in Eaſtry, in King Richard the Second's Time. But in the Twentieth Year of King Edward the Third, when that Book was taken, William Lord Latimer of Corbie was in Poſſeſſion of it; he was Knight of the Garter, and Lord Warden of the Five Ports, and from him it was called Latimer's Fleet. His Daughter and Heir Married John Lord Nevill, from whom it came to be called Nevill's-Fleet. And in this Family it continued till the beginning of Edward the Fourth, and then was alienated to Cromer; and James Cromer, in the Eleventh Year of King Henry the Seventh, Sold it to John Iſaac, from whom it went the ſame way to Kendall; and thence was Sold to Sir John Fogge, who about the End of King Henry the Eighth conveyed it to Ralph, whence it went to Spracklin; and by Sir Adam Spracklin was Sold to Harfleet, the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

Here was alſo another Chapel to Aſh, as ſaith Somner, (c).

(c) R. Fort. P. 7.

8. Molland, or Moland's, was once the Seat of a Family of this Sir-name, but they were extinct before the End of King Edward the Second, at which Time it came to be in the Poſſeſſion of Harfleet, alias Septvans, who added much to the Buildings of the Houſe; and whoſe Arms are yet remaining, with thoſe of the Henley's, Stoughton's, &c. who Marry'd into this Family, in the Glaſs Windows of the Parlor there. William de Septvans was a Soldier under King Edward the Third, in his Wars in France, and died 1401; and by his Will, which is regiſtred in the Prerogative Office in Canterbury, manumitted divers of his Villains or Slaves; his Son Sir William Septvans died 1448, and is Buried in Chriſt-Church in Canterbury. And in this Family did Mollands continue till the Reign of King Henry the Eighth, and then one Robert Read was in Poſſeſſion of it. But in the beginning of Queen Elizabeth it came to the Harfleets again, and was in their Poſſeſſion Anno 1659; but one of that Name Sold it to Singleton; and 'tis now held in Joynture by Mary the Relict of Dr. Thomas Singleton of Molland, a Lady of fine Endowments both of Mind and Body.

Many oft his Name and Family of Septvans, or Harfleet, lie buried in the Church of Aſh. And Philpot ſaith, that thoſe Three Altar-Tombs in the Church-Yard, and thoſe on each ſide the North-Door, are all in Memory of this Family of the Septvans, or Harfleets, and had once Braſs Inſcriptions expreſſing the ſame.

The Septvans have been in Commiſſion for the Peace, &c. ever ſince the Time of King Edward the Firſt, and before; and are often written de Septem vannis, though their Arms are but Three Vanns or Screens.

This Place ſeems to have had its Name of Molland, from its high Situation, that in Saxon ſignifying the ſame as Upland.

9. Wingham-Barton, is an eminent Manor in this Pariſh, which once belonged to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury; and when John Peckham founded his College of Wingham, Anno Domini, 1282, there was an Exhibition ſettled on that Fraternity ariſing out of this Manor; and from hence ſome ſuppoſe that it took the Name of Wingham-Barton, if it were not ſo called to diſtinguiſh it from another Barton called Firmins Barton, lying near Canterbury.

But in the Twenty-ninth Year of King Henry the Eighth, Thomas Archbiſhop of Canterbury exchanged this Manor with the Crown; where it continued till Queen Elizabeth granted it to Sir Roger Manwood, whoſe Son Sir Peter, by Truſtees paſſed it away to Sir William Curteen of London, and he gave it in Dower with his Daughter, Married to Henry Earl of Kent; who at his Death ordered it to be Sold for Payment of Debts; as not long after it actually was to Mr. James Thurbane of Sandwich, a Family which hath been eminent in the Cinque-Ports, as long ago as the Year 1331. But the Manor-Houſe was in the Fourth Year of King Edward the Sixth granted to Sir Anthony St. Leger; and his Deſcendant Sir Anthony St. Leger of Boughton, about the beginning of King Charles the Firſt, Sold it to Mr. Vincent Denn of Wenderton, who gave it to his Nephew Mr. Thomas Denn; and he by Will ſettled it on his Brother Mr. John Denn, who dying without Iſſue it was divided between his Four Siſters, and was, ſaith Philpot deſigned to be Sold to pay Debts & Legacies; but who bought it I can't tell.

Mr. Strype, in his Life of Cranmer, makes this Place to be in the Pariſh of Alresford, and ſaith, Philpot is miſtaken in ſaying it was exchanged with the Crown by Cranmer, for that it was let to Sir Edward Bainton for Ninety-nine Years, by that Archbiſhop at the King's Soilicitation. But in the former Part of this 'tis plain Mr. Strype is miſtaken himſelf.

10. Chilton is another Place in Aſh, which once was the Seat of Sir William Chilton, who dyed poſſeſſed of it in the Thirty-firſt Year of King Edward the Firſt. After this, in the Fourth Year of King Edward the Third it came into the Family of Baade; and from thence, in the Thirty-Seventh Year of King Edward the Third it went to Thomas Wolton; after which it came to the Septvans or Harfleets, who were in Poſſeſſion of it in Philpot's Time.

11. Hells, or Hells-Court, (Hells Sable a Bend Argent) is another Manor here, which anciently was the Seat of a Family of this Name. For Thomas de Hells had a Charter of Free-Warren to his Manor of Hells in the Eighteenth Year of King Edward the Firſt. Bertram de Hells was Lieutenant of Dover-Caſtle under Reginald Lord Cobham, who was Lord Warden of the Cinque-Ports, and Conſtable of Dover-Caſtle in King Edward the Second's Time. Gilbert de Hells of Hells-Court was Sheriff of Kent, in the Thirtieth Year of King Edward the Third; and in this Name did this Manor continue till the Time of King Edward the Fourth, and then it was Sold to Wroth; in which Family it ſtaid till King Henry the Seventh, towards the End of whoſe Reign it was Sold to Peake, where it continued in Philpot's Time.

12. Laverocks, is another Seat in Aſh, which once was in the Poſſeſſion of a Family of this Sirname, and who were Proprietaries here for many Deſcents: One of this Name, as was obſerved before, lies buried (croſs-Leg'd) in the Chancel of Aſh, and his Arms were once to be ſeen on his Shield. But in the Eighteenth Year of King Henry the VIIth, Antony Laverock dying without Iſſue Male, his Daughter Farnell carried it in Marriage to Edward Morris, Eſq; and then He and She both conveyed it to Peke, in one of which Family it was in Philpot's Time.

13. Fleet is a Manor in Aſh, which was very Anciently Part of the Eſtate of the Veres, Earls of Oxford. But Hugh de Vere, Duke of Ireland, and Earl of Oxford, after the Battle near Burford, where he aimed at ſupporting the Cauſe of King Richard the Second, againſt the Nobles, in the Tenth Year of that King's Reign, in endeavouring to ſave himſelf by Flight, was drowned; and ſo this Eſtate in the Sixteenth of that King came to the Crown. But it ſeems to have been reſtored again to the Family by King Henry the Fourth; for Matilda this Man's Mother, and Wife of Thomas Earl of Oxford, had it at her Death, from whom it went down to John Earl of Oxford, who aſſerting the Cauſe of the Houſe of Lancaſter, was routed, with the Earl of Warwick, at the Battel of Barnet; and eſcaping thence, was attainted afterwards in the Twelfth Year of King Edward the Fourth, and ſo forfeited this Manor of Fleet to the Crown. But King Henry the Seventh, after the Battle of Boſworth Field, where he gain'd both the Victory and the Crown of England, reſtored it to this Earl again. In his Family it continued till the beginning of Queen Elizabeth, and then, Gurſon, one Part of it, was Sold by John Earl of Oxford to Hamon, and the other Parts to Peyton, and to Harfleet; in which Families they continued in Philpot's Time.

14. Richborough was formerly reckoned as a Chapel to Aſh, as that was it ſelf to Wingham; and therefore 'tis probable there was once a Chapel in the Hill, whoſe Track hath been ſaid to be ſeen in the Corn-fields, &c. As Somner ſaith (d).

(d) Canterb. P. 129.

About Forty Years ago, in a Sand-Pit by Gilton-Town in this Pariſh, (as I was informed at the Place) there were ſeveral Pieces of Ancient Gold Coins or Medals found.

As to the Famous Caſtle of Richborough here, I ſhall give a large Account of it in the Chapter of Caſtles, Forts, &c.

ASH by Wrotham, or as Philpot calls it, Juxat Faukham, anciently Aiſce, as in the T. R. lies towards the Weſt Side of Kent, about three Miles North from Wrotham, in the Bailiwick of Sutton-Dartford, Hundred of Axtone, anciently written Claceſtane, Lath of Sutton at Hone; in the Deanry of Rocheſter, and Dioceſe of the ſame. The Church is dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul. The Liberty of the Dutchy of Lancaſter claims here.

'Tis a Rectory, Value in the King's Books, 9*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.* Patron —— Bowes, Eſq;

The Manor of Aſh was formerly the Inheritance of the Latimers; for William de Latimer held it in the Thirtieth Year of King Edward the Firſt, who obtained a Charter of Free-Warren for it, and held it of Roger de Mowbray. After the Latimers, it went into the Noble Family of Grandiſon; for as appears by the Book of Ayd, Otho de Grandiſon held it at making the Black-Prince a Knight, in the Twentieth Year of King Edward the Third. In the Reign of King Richard the Second, it was in the Poſſeſſion of the Family of Creſſel, which had large Revenues both here and at Chiſleburſt and Hartley. But this Eſtate ſtaid not long in this Name; for in the Fourth Year of King Henry the Fourth, it belonged to the Knights Hoſpitallers; who held it at the Marriage of Blanch, that Prince's Daughter. Here it ſtaid, and was accounted one of the principal Manors of this Order, till the general Diſſolution in King Henry the Eighth's Time, when it went to the Crown; and in the Second Year of King Edward the Sixth, was granted to Sir Martin Bowes, whoſe Son Richard had only Two Daughters; Elizabeth, Married to William Buggin, and Anne to Sir Edmond Fowler, who divided his Eſtate between them; and on the Partition, this fell to the ſhare of Fowler, whoſe Deſcendants held it in Philpot's Time.

2. South-Aſh is a Manor here, which anciently belonged to a Family of this Name. For it appears by the Book of Ayd that John at South-Aſh paid for this Manor at making the Black Prince Knight. But before this a good while, this Eſtate was in the Poſſeſſion of the Hodſoll's; and 'tis probable one of this Family by living here got the Name of Aſh. And in Philpot's Time this Manor was in the Poſſeſſion of Mr. William Hodſoll.

The Priory of St. Hellens in London had once ſome Intereſt in South-Aſh, as appears by the Rolls in the Fourth Year of King Henry the Fourth. But I ſuppoſe at the Suppreſſion it went with the Manor of Aſh.

3. Hodſoll and Halywell, are two little Manors in this Pariſh; the Latter of which was the Seat of the Family of Hodſoll, who have been in Poſſeſſion of them for many Ages, and continued ſo in Philpot's Time; Mr. William Hodſoll being then the Proprietor of theſe, and of South-Aſh.

4. North-Aſh is another Manor in Aſh, which was once a Limb of that Great One of St. John's at Sutton at Hone, and for many Ages belonged to the Knights Hoſpitallers of England. But on the Suppreſſion, in King Henry the Eighth's Time, it was granted to Sir Maurice Dennis; by a Daughter of whom it went to Wrote; and he paſſed it away to Thomas Smith, Eſq; who, on his Deceaſe gave it to his Second Son Sir Thomas Smith, in whoſe Deſcendant it was in Philpot's Time.

5. Scotgrove, was very anciently the Eſtate of a Family whoſe Name was Torpell; for it appears by Rot. Eſc. N. 27. that Mabilia, Widow of John de Torpell, (and who held it in King Henry the Third's Time) died poſſeſſed of it in King Edward the Firſt's. From this Name it went into that of Catwick; for John de Catwick held it, and paid Aid for it at making the Black Prince Knight, in the Twentieth Year of King Edward the Third. About the Time of King Richard the Second the Frankenhams were in poſſeſſion of this Place; but about the latter End of King Henry the Fifth were ſucceeded in it by the Poynings; and Sir Edward Poynings died poſſeſſed of of it in the Twelfth Year of King Henry the Eighth. But he dying without any Heir, this Manor eſcheated to the Crown; and was by that King granted to William Lewknor, Eſq; and one of his Family ſold it to Vane; and from that Name it went the ſame way to Mr. Walter of Faukham.

In the Church is a handſome Altar-Piece, the Gift of the preſent Rector Mr. Samuel Atwood. And there are many Memorials of the Ancient Family of the Hodſoll's here, whoſe Arms are Az, a Feſs Wavy, between three Stone Fountains, Argent. And in the South Iſle, a Memorial of Anne, Wife of Sir Edmond Fowler of this Pariſh, 1645.

ASHERST, in the Textus Roffenſis written Aiſcherſt. Herſt or Hurſt is a Termination uſual in this and many other Counties for the Names of Places, and ſignifies Wood. It lies at the South-Weſt Edge of Kent adjoining to Suſſex, about Five Miles South-Weſt from Tunbridge; in the Bailiwick of the Lowy of Tundbridge; Hundred of Wachlingſtone; Lath of Aylesford; Weſt Diviſion of the County; and South one of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Dioceſe of Rocheſter, and Deanery of Malling. 'Tis a Rectory in the Gift of the Crown, Value in the King's Books 5*l*. 4*s*. 10*d*. The Church is but ſmall, and the Steeple a poor Wooden one; nothing remarkable in it. The Arms of Sir John Rivers, who gave the Dyal, are over the Porch.

But this Church was once famous for a Miraculous Rood or Crucifix, which the Vulgar were made believe did actually grow, not only as to the Hair upon its Head, but even in the Bulk and Stature of the Body. And by the Reſort of People to ſee this Impoſture, Lombard ſaith, (e) the Prieſt of the Pariſh got a large Sum of Money; and ſo tho' the Rood was only imagined to grow bigger, the Man that kept the Shew grew really richer.

The Liberty of the Dutchy of Lancaſter claims at Chafford in this Pariſh.

1. This Place, with the Manor of Buckland annexed to it, was at the making of Domeſday-Survey in the Poſſeſſion of Philip de Gerund, and in that Name it continued a good while, but at laſt by a Daughter it went into the Family of Chalfunt, and Henry Chalfunt held it (as appears by Rot. Eſc. N. 14.) in the Forty-fifth of King Edward the Third. In King Henry the Sixth's Reign by a Daughter of this Family, it went into that of Hadde, one of which Name in the beginning of King Henry the Eighth ſold it to Waller of Gromebridge; hence it paſſed after ſome time and the ſame way, into the Poſſeſſion of Thomas Earl of Dorſet, Lord Treaſurer of England. And one of his Deſcendants Sold it to the Rivers of Chafford in this Pariſh, who were the Poſſeſſors in Philpot's Time.

2. Chafford is alſo a Manor here, which once was in the Poſſeſſion of the Roes or Rowes of Rowes-Place in Ailsford: From ſome of which Name it went but I know not whether by Marriage, Will, or Sale, to that of Rivers, deſcended from the Rivers of River-Hill in Hantſhire, and is now in the Poſſeſſion of Sir George Rivers, Baronet, who lives here in a fair Seat very well ſituated; the Dirtineſs of the County, and Badneſs of the Ways conſidered.

ASHFORD, ſometimes written Eſhford, Eſhetisford, Etiſhford, Echetiford, ſaith Kilburn, lies towards the South-Eaſt Part of Kent, by a River anciently (ſaith Kilburn) called Eſhe or Eſhet, now the Stoure, (but Lambard thinks it ſhould not have that Name till after it hath paſſed this Town) about three Miles and a half Southward from Wye; in the Bailiwick of Chart and Longbridge, Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in the Lath of Shipway. The Town and Liberty of Aſhford have a Conſtable of their own; but the reſt of the Pariſh is in the Hundred of Chart and Longbridge. Every Tueſday Three Weeks, is kept in this Town a Court of Record for Actions, wherein the Debt and Damages do not exceed the Sum of Twenty Marks. The Juriſdiction of which extends it ſelf all over the Pariſh except the Burgh of Henwood, alias Hewet, (over which the Liberty of Wye claims) and the Burgh of Rudlow, over which the Liberty of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury claims.

The Church, which is called St. Maries, is a fair large Edifice, and was formerly a Collegiate one. The College here being founded by one Sir John Fogg of this County, who was a Privy-Counſellor, and Comptroller of the Houſhold, and ſeveral of whoſe Family are Interred here. (See an Account of it, and of a Chantry here, in the Chapter of Religious Houſes, Hoſpitals, &c.)

The great Tithes are impropriated to the Dean and Chapter of Rocheſter, in whoſe Gift the Vicarage is. In the King's Books, 28*l*. 4*s*. 6*d*.

There was formerly very fine painted Glaſs in the Windows of this Church, as the Pictures of King Edward the Third, of the Black-Prince, Richard Duke of Gloceſter, Earl Rivers, Lord Haſtings, &c. And in the Chancel is, or was, a Monument of Elizabeth, Counteſs of Atholl, and Daughter to the Lord Ferrers of Groby, who died 1375; ſhe was Wife to the famous David Strabolgy. Here are, or alſo were, Memorials of ſome of the Family of Valoigns, very ancient.

The Town of Aſhford is Neat, and of a good Form, and lies upon a River which receive the Confluence of ſeveral Brooks, both on the North-Weſt and South-Eaſt Side; one coming from Weſt-Well Charing, and Lenham; and the other from Poſtling, Stowting, and Brook.

It hath a Market on Saturday, and Two Fairs on May the 6th, and on Auguſt the 29.

A terrible Earthquake was felt here on May the 1ſt, Anno Domini 1580.

Places of Note here are,

1. The Manor of Aſhford, which in the Twenty-Seventh of King Henry the Third, was part of the Eſtate of Simon de Crioll, who obtained a Charter of Free-Warren for it: And Maud de Crioll, his Widow, died ſeized of it in the Fifty-ſecond Year of Henry the Third, leaving it to her Son William de Kerioll, (ſo Philpot writes the Name now; and perhaps about this time it might put on that Form which it kept ever after) who in purſuance of a Deſign of his Mother's, changed this Manor for Stockton in Huntingtonſhire, and Rumford in Eſſex, with Roger de Leybourn, whoſe Great Grand-daughter Juliana de Leybourn carried it in Marriage to her Second Husband William de Clinton, Earl of Huntingdon; and he died poſſeſſed of it in the Twenty-Eighth Year of Edward the Third (f). But this mighty Heireſs dying her ſelf without any Iſſue or Kindred, this, with all her Eſtate, eſcheated to the Crown; and was by King Edward the Third, in the Forty-Third Year of his Reign given to the Dean and Canons of the Church of St. Stephen's in Weſtminſter; which Gift was afterwards confirmed by King Richard the Second in the Twelfth and Twenty-firſt Years of his Reign. Here it continued till the Diſſolution of the Monaſtries; and then was granted by King Henry the Eighth, together with Weſture, (which Cardinal Kemp had ſettled on his College at Wye) to Sir Anthony Aucher, and Jo. Polſted; and they, not many Years after, joined in a Sale of them to Sir Andrew Judde; whoſe only Daughter, Alice, carried them in Marriage to Sir Thomas Smith; whoſe Great Grandſon, the Lord Strangford, was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

The Lord of the Manor of Aſhford, ought anciently to have repaired the Houſe, in that Corner of Dover-Caſtle, which is next the Poſtern, and towards the Long Wall.

2. Repton, which was once the Seat of that Ancient Family of the Valoigns. Here reſided Waretius de Valoigns, in the 45th Year of Henry the IIId; and Rualonus de Valoigns was Sheriff of Kent, in the firſt Year of K. Henry II. and lived ſometimes here, and ſometimes at Tremworth. The laſt of this Family, at this Place, was another Waretius de Valoigns, who left only Two Daughters; one of which married Sir Thomas Fogg, and by that means carried this Seat and Eſtate into that Family. And here it continued for many Generations. But about the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, it was ſold by George Fogg, Eſq; to Sir Michael Sondes; who parted with it the ſame way, to John Tuſton, Eſq; whoſe Great Grandſon, John Tuſton, Earl of Thanet, was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

3. Merdall, is a Manor here, which formerly belonged to the Family of the Corbies: But Robert Corby (of Boughton-Malherbe,) gave it in Marriage with Joan, his only Daughter and Heir, to Sir Nicholas Wotton, who was Twice Lord-Mayor of London. In this Name it continued a good while; but at laſt it was ſold to Mr. Hawker, of Challock, an Ancient Family there: And from thence it went the ſame way to Sprot; and he ſold it to Sir Thomas Finch; whoſe Son, Heneage Finch, Earl of Winchelſea, was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

AYLESFORD; written by theſe ſeveral Names:

Eilesford, Ailesfort, Elſtre Anglesford, [i. e. the Paſſage of the Angles, or Engliſh,] Episford, Æglestborpe, Eglesford; and in Britiſh, Saſſenaigh baibail, from the Overthrow of the Saxons here.

'Tis corruptly written alſo, Alresford, Alenceſter, Allepord, and Aelſtrea.

It lies towards the Middle of Kent, by the Medway, about Three Miles North-Weſt from Maidſtone; in the Bailiwick of Hoo, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and South Diviſion of Juſtices in the Lath.

That Part of the Pariſh, which lies on the North Side of the River, is in Ancient Demeſne, and hath a Conſtable of it ſelf: But the South Side, on the other Side of the River, (viz. the Manor of Preſton, and Milhale,) is in the Hundred of Larkfield.

The Church ſtandeth in Ancient Demeſne; is dedicated to St. Peter, and was given to the Church of Rocheſter by King Henry I.

In this Church is a fair Monument, of White Marble, of Sir Paul Rycaut, Son of Sir Peter Rycaut, 1700;

Another, with the Effigies of Sir Thomas Colepeper, and his Lady, Great Grandfather of the preſent Sir Thomas Colepeper, Baronet, Member of Parliament for the Town of Maidſtone. The Date, 1604.

Another, of Sir John Banks, Baronet, who married a Daughter of Sir John Dethick, of Norfolk. 1699.

Two Figures on a Plate of Braſs, of John Coſington, Eſq; and Sarah his Wife; 1416.

This Pariſh is in the Dioceſe and Deanery of Rocheſter; the Liberty of the Biſhop of that See claiming over it; only in Milhale, the Liberty of Maidſtone claims.

'Tis a Vicarage; the Church of Rocheſter Patrons. Value in the King's Books, 10*l*.

There is a Fair here, June 29.

In this Place, Vortimer, Son of Vortiger, being made King in the Room of his Father, (who was depoſed, for being too much in the Intereſt of the Saxons) A. D. 455. fought a famous Battel, againſt Hengiſt and Horſa, the Two Saxon Generals; his own Brother Catigern, and Horſa, killing one another, Hand to Hand; and the Saxons being routed, and driven as far as the Iſle of Thanet; as you will find more at large hereafter, in my Account of the Saxons in Britain.

Horſa was buried at, and gave Name to Horſted, a Place not far from hence, near Rocheſter. And Catigern was buried, with great State and Magnificence, probably in the Grounds belonging to Tottington Manor: And over his Body, the Britons erected thoſe Four mighty Stones, (ſomething after the manner of Stonehenge,) whoſe Figure I have here annexed; and it is by the Common People called Kit's Cotty-Houſe, and is a very Ancient and Noble Monument. Plate I. Fig. 2.

This Place of Aylesford hath been famous alſo for a great Victory, obtain'd by King Alfred over the Danes, at Fernham, in this Pariſh; whom he drove as far as, and into the Thames, and drowned many of them there, A. D. 893.

And A. D. 1016, Edmond Ironſide fiercely purſued the Danes, from Otford to this Town; where, as moſt believe, he would have given them a total Overthrow, had it not been for the Treacherous Council of Edric, Duke of Mercia: But however, he ſlew many of them, driving the reſt into the Iſle of Sheppey. See the Account of the Danes in Kent.

Places of Note here:

1. The Priory, a Houſe of Carmelites; whoſe Founder ſee in the Account of the Religious Houſes. On the Suppreſſion, the Royalty of this was granted by King Henry the VIIIth to Sir Thomas Wiat; on whoſe Son's Attainder, in Queen Mary's Time, it came to the Crown again; and was (by Q. Elizabeth) granted to Mr. John Sidley; who bequeath'd it to his Brother, Sir William Sidley. But from this Name, it was ſold to Sir Peter Rycaut; whoſe Heir, Anno 1657, convey'd it to Mr. Caleb Banks, of Maidſtone. By the Marriage of one of which Name, it went to the Right Honourable the Earl of Aylesford, the preſent Poſſeſſor.

2. Tottington and Eccles, are Two Manors in this Pariſh, which anciently belonged to the Family of Rokesly; by whoſe Heir General, they went to that of Poynings: And Richard Lord Poynings, in the 11th of King Richard II. held the Manor of Tottington, and gave the Tithes of it to the Priory of St. Andrews (a) in Rocheſter. And this Manor, together with the other of Eccles, one of his Succeſſors gave in the Time of K. Henry the VIth, in Frank Marriage with his Daughter, to G. Palmer, of the Court-Lodge in Snodland, Eſq; From which Family, they were ſold to Warcup, deſcended from the Warcups of Cumberland. Thence it was ſold to Sidley, of South-Fleet; whoſe Succeſſor ſold Eccles to Ricaut, and Tottington to Madox. (a) T. Roffenſis.

From this Place of Eccles, probably this Pariſh was called Eglesford; and from thence, by the uſual Change of the ſ into ȳ among the Saxons, Aylesford.

3. Coſington, was a Seat of great Eminence and Antiquity, which gave Name to a Family ſo called: Stephen de Coſington being made Knight Banneret by King Edward the Iſt, in the 20th Year of his Reign, for his Signal Service at Carlaverock in Scotland. And he had alſo a Charter of Free-Warren granted him, for all his Lands at Coſington, Acris, and South Burton, (uſually called South Blabden) in Eleham in Kent.

The

The Manor it ſelf held in Knights-Service of the Barony of Roſs, of Horton-Kirby in this County; from whom they received it by Ancient Feoffment; and bear, (in Similitude, ſaith Philpot, of their Lords the Roſſes) the ſame Charge in their Arms, only the Colours different: The Roſſes Coat being, Or 3 Roſes Gules; and theirs, Az. 3 Roſes Or. But in King Henry the VIIIth's Time, this Family ended in Sir John Coſington's Three Daughters; who were married to Duke, Hamond, and Wood; and this Manor went to Duke, in whoſe Family it continued in Philpot's Time.

There was a Free Chapel (dedicated to St. Blaze, as I ſuppoſe; there being a Wood here, which ſtill bears the Name of Blaze-Wood;) belonging to this Houſe, and founded by Sir Stephen de Coſington; as alſo another annex'd to Tottington, and founded by Richard Lord Poynings, in the 11th Year of King Richard the IId: Both which are now quite gone to Ruin.

Here is an Alms-Houſe, for a Warden and Six Brothers and Siſters; founded by Sir John, Father of the late Sir Charles Sidley; now of about 20 l. per Annum.

And there is a very fair and large Stone-Bridge, over the Medway; the Arches whereof are ſo high, that a large Hoy can paſs through, with her Maſt lower'd down.

4. Preſton. A Seat of great Antiquity, having been ſo long in the Family of Colepeper, that it rivals even Bayhall in Pembury. Sir Thomas Colepeper was Governor of Winchelſea, under King Edward the IId; and was beheaded by him, for Defending that Town for the Barons.

Walter Colepeper, (whoſe Arms were the ſame, as now the Colepepers bear) was living in that King's Reign, and Part of K. Edward the Iſt's; there being Deeds extant, ſealed with the Bend Engrailed, ſo long ago. And this being then a new Thing, argues them to have been a Family of Dignity, as well as Riches; for they had great Eſtates at Farleigh, Peckham, Wrotham, and divers other Places, in the 1ſt Year of King Edward III.

John Colepeper was a Judge in King Henry the VIth's Time; whoſe Daughter and Heir married to Harrington, and carried into that Family a great Eſtate.

This Seat is ſtill in the Poſſeſſion of this Ancient Family; being now the Reſidence of Sir Thomas Colepeper, Knight and Baronet.

On a Stone Window-Caſe of a large Barn of Sir Thomas Colepeper, at this Houſe of Preſton, is carved T. C. with the Arms of Colepeper between thoſe Letters; and this Date, in that Manner which the following Numeral Figures expreſs; viz.

And the very ſame was on an old Stone-Portal, on the Left Hand of the New Gate before the Houſe, and leading to the Road.

And this Date aſcertains the Uſe of the Numeral Figures here in Kent, 31 Years before the Time that Dr. Wallis gives them from an ancient Chimney-Piece; of which he gives a Figure, in his Hiſtory of Algebra.

And if we may allow the Figures on the Top of each other Page of that Noble and Ancient MS. our Textus Roffenſis, to be of the ſame Age with the Text it ſelf, (as by the Appearance of them, one would think might be done;) That will bring the Date of the Uſe of the Arabick Numeral Characters in England, to be about the Year of Chriſt 1120. For Ernulfus Biſhop of Rocheſter, the induſtrious Compiler of the greateſt Part of that Book, was Conſecrated, A. D. 1115; and died, A. D. 1123, or 1124: And becauſe he was Aged 84 at his Death, 'tis probable this Work might be begun at his firſt Coming to the See, and ſo be finiſhed about the Year 1120.

1 2 3 8 9 6 ∧ 8 9.

And ſuch like Figures as thoſe Three, that are here different from the preſent Form, I have met with in ſome other Ancient MSS. and particularly in one now in the Hands of the Worthy and Curious John Godfrey, Eſq; F. R. S. whoſe Seat is at Norton-Court, in Norton Pariſh, in this County.

5 Roes-Place, was formerly the Seat and Original of the Ancient Family of Roe: And from hence came the Roes of Chafford, in Aſhurſt, in this County; and thoſe in Eſſex; and he that was Lord-Mayor of London. But about Queen Elizabeth's Time, this Place came into the Family of Taylor; and that ending in a Female Heir, this Manor went by her in Marriage to Warcup; in which Name it was in Philpot's Time.

AYNSFORD. See Eynesford.

BADLESMERE, uſually pronounced Bâſmere, lies towards the North-Eaſt Side of Kent, about Three Miles and a Half South from Feverſham, in the Bailiwick and Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Upper one of Juſtices in that Lath.

'Tis in the Deanery of Oſpringe, and Dioceſe of Canterbury.

The Church is dedicated to St. Leonard; being now ſmall, of only One Iſle, and no Steeple; (the old Side-Iſles and Chancels being taken down) but 'tis now new Pewed, and Whited very neatly.

A Rectory; Value 5 l. in the King's Books.

The Liberty of St. Auſtin claims here; becauſe it is in the Hundred of Feverſham, which belonged to that Abbey.

In King William the Iſt's Reign, Hugh de Crevequer was Lord of this Place, and one of the Eight Lieutenants of Dover-Caſtle, under John de Fiennes.

Afterwards it became the Seat of the Great and Eminent Family of Badleſmere; of whom, Giles Lord Badleſmere was killed in a Battel againſt the Welch, A. D. 1258.

Guncelin de Badleſmere died poſſeſs'd of this Manor, in the 29th Year of Edward the Iſt; as appears by Rot. Eſc. N. 50.; and was buried in the Church here; his Effigies being cut out in Wood, in a Croſs-Legg'd Poſture, like a Knight Templer, or ſome one under the Vow of the Holy War, was laid upon his Tomb: But by the Careleſneſs of a Glazier, who was working in the Church, and making a Fire to heat his Iron, it was burnt: As I find by ſome Papers, communicated to me by my good Friend, John Godfrey, Eſq; of Norton-Court. Yet Part of the Figure, and the Carving of his Name, remained in Philpot's Time.

But no Memorials of this Family are now remaining; except a Star and Garter, carved fairly on a Wooden Board, which formerly (as now) made the End of a Pew in the Church; on the Back of it is this Date, 1411.

Oppoſite to it is another ſuch Board, put to the like Uſe; on which is carved a Circle, within a Triangle, and ſome Latin Words, (as uſual) to expreſs the Trinity in Unity of the Divine Nature.

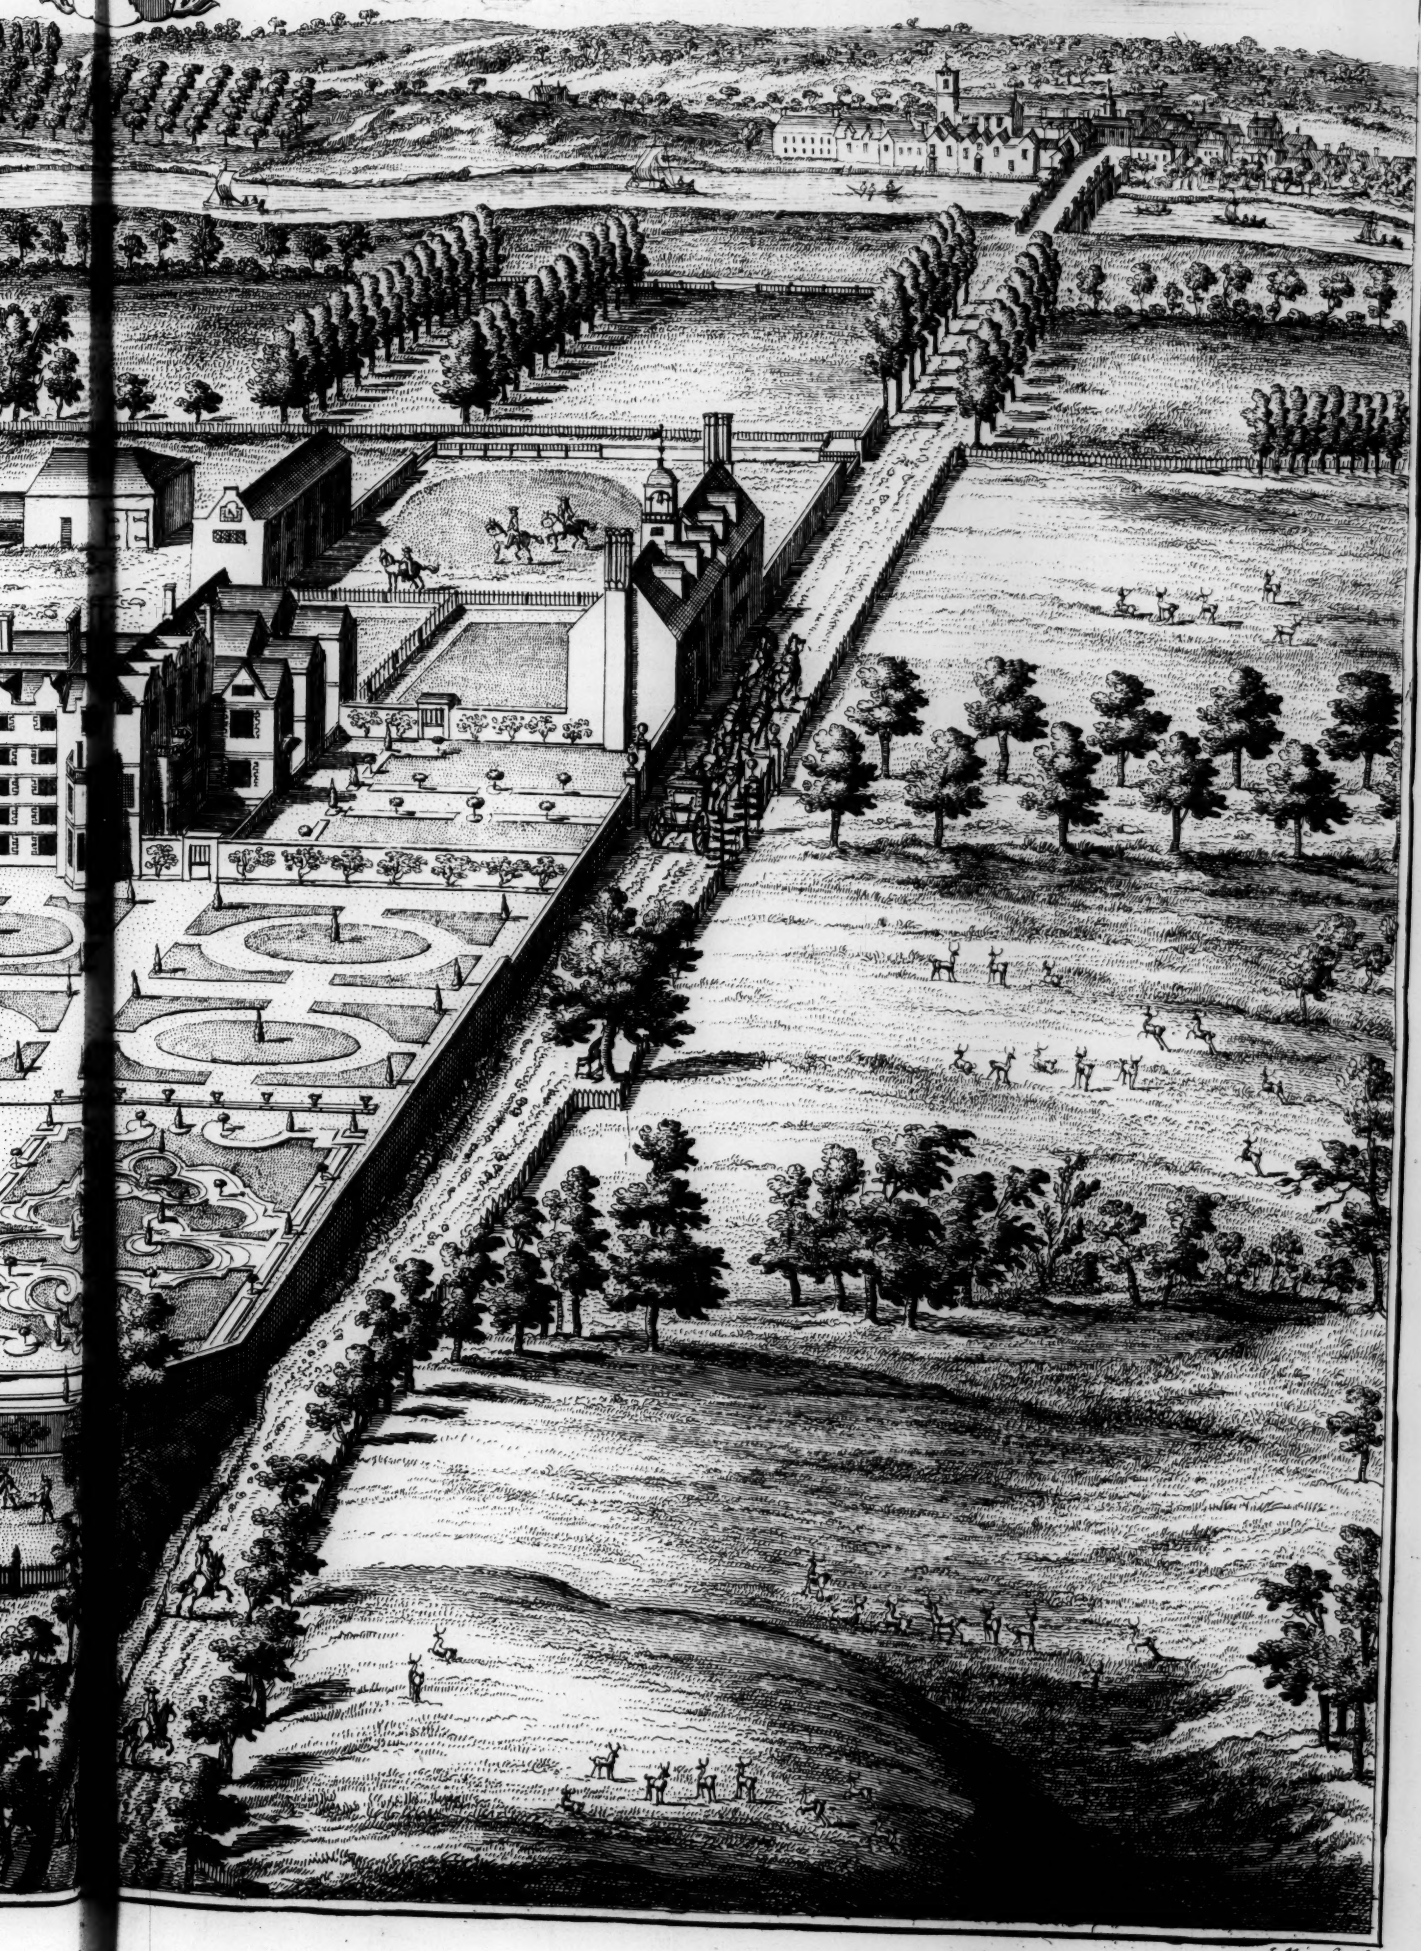
S.r THOMAS COLEPEPER Ba



I. Kip Sculp.

The Unfortunate Great Grandſon of this Gunceline, was Bartholomew Lord Badleſmere; who was Steward of the Hoſtell to King Edward the IId; as he ſtyles himſelf, in a Grant of Privileges to the City of London, to which he is Witneſs. He was Governor of Leeds-Caſtle; and his Lieutenant was Thomas Colepeper; who refuſing Entrance into the Caſtle, to Iſabel, Queen to King Edward the IId, and denying her Lodging, and any Kind of Accommodation; She exaſperated the King ſo far, that he beſieged it, and took it by Force, hanged up Colepeper, and afterwards beheaded Badleſmere at Canterbury.

His Son Giles (by Margaret de Clare) was by King Edward IIId, in his Second Year, reſtored to his Eſtate and Dignity by Patent. For which, to ſhew his Thanks to Heaven, according to the Religion of thoſe Times, he erected here a Houſe for Black Auſtin Canons; as appears by the Record in Parliament, in the 13th Year of K. Edward the IIId, Membr. 6. (a). He died Childleſs, in the 12th of K. Edward III. as Cambden ſaith; (whom I follow, rather than Philpot) ſo that the Patrimony was divided among his Four Siſters: The Youngeſt of which, Maud, marrying John de Vere, Earl of Oxford, carried all the Eſtate here, not ſettled on the Monaſtery, to him. He died poſſeſs'd of it in the 34th Year of King Edward the IIId. And one of his Succeſſors, (viz. John Earl of Oxford) who was attainted of Treaſon, in the 12th Year of Edward the IVth, for Engaging for the Houſe of Lancaſter, in the Battel of Barnet; but was afterwards reſtored to his Blood and Eſtate, but he ſeems not to have had this Barony and Manor: For on the Suppreſſion of the Monaſtery here, it eſcheated to the Crown; and was by King Henry the VIIIth granted to Sir Robert Southwell; who in the Second Year of Edward VI. ſold it to Sir Anthony Aucher, who bequeathed it to his Son John. But he dying without Male-Iſſue; by his only Daughter Anne, it went in Marriage to Sir Humphry Gilbert; and he, about the Middle of Q. Elizabeth's Reign, ſold it to Sir Michael Sondes; whoſe Deſcendant, Sir George Sondes, Knight of the Bath, leaving only Two Daughters, it went by the younger, the Lady Katherine, in Marriage, to the Right Honourable the preſent Earl of Rockingham; whoſe worthy Son and Heir, Edward Lord Sondes, of Lee's-Court, is the preſent Poſſeſſor.

Goddiſland is another Manor here, which anciently had Owners of that Name, who were reſident upon it. John de Goddiſland paid Aid for it, at making the Black Prince Knight, in the 20th Year of K. Edward the IIId. And after this Family was extinct here, it came into the Poſſeſſion of the Atwoods: And Robert Atwood died ſeized of it in the 6th Year of King Richard the IId. After this it came into the Name of Sawyer; and about King Henry the VIIth's Time, into that of Cheyney, where it continued till Queen Elizabeth's Reign; and then Henry Lord Cheyney ſold it to Snode. And thence, in King Charles the Iſt's Time, it went the ſame way to Franklyn; in whoſe Poſſeſſion, I ſuppoſe, it was in Philpot's Time.

BAPCHILD, (anciently Becanceld, Becanceald, i. e. a cold Place bearing Beeches;) lies towards the North Side of Kent, about a Mile and a half from Milton, in that Bailiwick and Hundred, Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Upper one of Juſtices in that Lath.

'Tis in the Deanery of Sittingbourn, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; and the Church is called St. Laurence. It is very ſmall, of only Two Iſles. In the Windows is a Pall, the Arms of the See of Canterbury; and other Remains of good Painted Glaſs. A Spire-Steeple.

It is a Vicarage; Royal Value 8 l.

Near the Way-ſide here, was formerly a Chapel, or Oratory; whoſe Ruins (Philpot ſaith) were viſible in his Time; where ſuch Pilgrims as viſited the Shrine of Thomas Becket of Canterbury, uſed to offer up their Devotions, before they advanced any farther in their Journey.

Philpot conjectures, that this Chapel was erected in Memory of the Council held here by Brightwald, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, in the Reign of Wightred, (or, as ſome write him, Muthred,) King of Kent, A. D. 692; as may be ſeen in Sir Henry Spelman's Concilia Anglicana. At this Famous Council were preſent, Five Kentiſh Abbeſſes; viz. St. Mildred, Ethelred, Æte, Wilnolde, and Hereſwide; who ſubſcribed their Names (with Croſſes) to the Conſtitutions; and in an Order before all the Presbyters, and before one Botred, who was a Biſhop.

At Radfeild, in this Pariſh, was anciently alſo another Free Chapel, whoſe Ruins are yet remaining, but the Founder and Uſes are unknown: But on the General Suppreſſion, the Lands annexed to it, were, by King Edward the VIth, given to one John Bateman; and his Succeſſor did (by Will) bequeath this Eſtate to John Bateman of Wormſell.

Places of Note here.

1. The Manor of Bap-Child did anciently belong to the Savages of Bobbing; for Arnold de Savage was in Poſſeſſion of it in the 49th Year of K. Edward the IIId: And in this Name it continued, till by a Daughter (Eleanor) it went to her Second Husband, William Clifford, Eſq; In which Family, it ſtaid till about the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth; and then was ſold to William Coting; and after that, to William Biggs, in whoſe Family it was in Philpot's Time.

2. Potts-Court, vulgarly called Petts-Court: Here was anciently Part of the Demeſne belonging to the Priory of Dartford, and continued ſo till the General Suppreſſion; after which, coming to the Crown, it was (in his laſt Year) granted by King Edward the VIth to Sir Thomas Cheyney; whoſe Son, Henry Lord Cheyney, ſold it to Richard Thornhill, Eſq; in whoſe Family it was in Philpot's Time.

3. Morris-Court, is another Place of Note in Bap-Child, which anciently was the Seat of a Family of the Name of Morris; as appears, ſaith Philpot, by the Old Deeds belonging to this Eſtate. But about the End of King Henry the IVth's Reign, this Family was extinct; and the Eſtate was ſold to Engeham: In which Name, from King Henry the Vth, till Queen Elizabeth's Time, it continued; but then was ſold to Wolgate, whoſe Anceſtors lived at Wolgate-Green in Throwley. Thence it went to Tilghman, deſcended from the Ancient Family of the Tilghmans, of Snodland: And hence it went the ſame way to Carſelock, of Feverſham; but in this Name it went out for want of Iſſue; and was by Will ſettled on the Knowlers, and ſome others, who were the Poſſeſſors in Philpot's Time.

BARFRISTON, vulgò Barſon; The Bare, or Open Cold Town. A Rectory; Royal Value 7 l. 14 s. per Annum.

It lies at the Eaſt Part of Kent, about Five Miles South-Weſt from Sandwich, in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Eaſtry, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. In the Deanery of Sandwich, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; and the Church is called St. Mary's.

The Church is ſmall, but the moſt finely adorned on the Outſide, with Carved-Work in Stone, with Circular Arches and Windows, of any in the County; and ſhews it to have been not only an Ancient, but a very Curious Building. There is alſo a fine Arch within Side, between the Nave (or Body of the Church) and the Chancel; in which is a Monument of Thomas Boys, of Fredvile, Eſq; 1592.

This Place was anciently held by the Caſtle-Guard Tenure of Dover-Caſtle, by John de Wybarn: But about the latter End of the Reign of King Henry the IVth, it came into the Poſſeſſion of Harward; and out of that Name went by Sale, about the End of King Henry the VIth, to Sir Thomas Brown, of Beechworth-Caſtle. And about the Beginning of K. Henry the VIIIth's Reign, Part of it was ſold to Wood; but the Manor ſtill continued in Brown, till the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth; and then was ſold to Mr. Thomas Bois, who lies buried here. But his Deſcendant, Mr. John Bois, ſold it in K. Charles the Iſt's Reign, to Mr. Anthony Percival, of Dover, where it continued in Philpot's Time.

Hartanger and Soles, are Two other Manors in this Pariſh, which once had Owners of thoſe Names. The former held in the Family of Hartanger, till King Edward the IId's Reign; and then was ſold to Perot of Knowlton; and by a Daughter of that Family, went to Langley of Warwickſhire. And in this Name it ſtay'd, till about the End of King Henry the VIth, and then was ſold to Sir Thomas Brown, abovementioned; whoſe Deſcendant, in King Henry the VIIth's Time, ſold it to Richard Merryweather, in whoſe Family it remained in Philpot's Time.

Soles ſtaid longer in the Family of that Name; for John Soles died poſſeſſed of it in the 49th Year of K. Edward the IIId, as appears by Rot. Eſc. N. 40. parte ſecundâ. But in the Fourth Year of K. Henry IV. it became (ſome how) the Inheritance of Thomas Newbregge, of Fordwich; in which Name it ſtay'd till the Beginning of K. Henry the VIIth; and then was ſold to Mr. William Bois, Anceſtor to Mr. John Bois, of Node; who ſold ſome of it to Sir Anthony Percival, in King Charles the Iſt's Reign, and left the reſt to his Son and Heir, John Bois, Eſq;

The following Account, which I have from a good Hand, with what you will find related (by the ſame Authority) of Coldred, a Pariſh in this Neighbourhood; muſt give this Part of Kent the Reputation of being a very Healthful Place.

In the Year 1700, the Miniſter of this Pariſh was buried at the Age of 96: He that preached his Funeral-Sermon, was 82; He that read the Service, 87. The Pariſh-Clerk was of the ſame Age, but then abſent: The Sexton 86, and his Wife above 80. And ſeveral of the Neighbouring Pariſh of Coldred were at this Funeral, who were above 100 Years old.

BARHAM, Berham, [Lambard thinks it ſignifies the Town of the Bores] lies about the Middle of the Eaſt Part of Kent, near the Stoure, about Three Miles and a half North-Eaſt from Eleham, in the Bailiwick of Bridge and Petham, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery of Bridge, and Dioceſe of Canterbury.

The Church is dedicated to St. John the Baptiſt. 'Tis a Rectory; but annexed to Biſhopsbourn, and ſo not valued in the King's Books. In which were Memorials of Sir - - - - - Diggs, and ſeveral others of that Family.

It was anciently a Hundred of it ſelf, but now is in that of Kingbamford.

The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims here. The Church and Chancel are both Neat and Handſome.

A. D. 809, King Kenulph gave to the Archbiſhop and Church of Canterbury, Seven Plow-Lands in Berham.

And after, in 824, Wilfred Archbiſhop of Canterbury gave to the ſaid Church Two Manors, in Exchange for the ſame.

A. D. 830, one Werhard, a Prieſt, gave to that Church Thirty-ſix Plow-Lands, lying in this Pariſh; which ſome ſay had been formerly taken from the ſame Church.

BARHAM-DOWN. Here, as 'tis moſt natural to conclude from his own Account, Julius Cæſar encamped after his firſt Landing in Britain, and was by the Kentiſh Men driven back to his Ships; as you will find at large elſewhere.

Here alſo, A. D. 1212, King John encamped with 60000 Men, to oppoſe the French, who threaten'd to invade England. And ſome ſay, that here it was that he ſurrender'd his Crown to Pandulfus, the Pope's Legate: But that ſeems a Miſtake. Tho' here Pandulfus had his firſt Audience of him. For after he had ſent Two Knights-Templers, to obtain Audience here, the King granted it, and went with him from hence to Dover, where that Diſhonourable Surrender was made.

For hearing that Philip the French King, at the Pope's Inſtigation, had got an Army ready to invade his Kingdom; King John was preparing to attack him, both on the Sea, and on the Land; but having juſt Reaſon to ſuſpect Treachery at Home, as well as Danger from Abroad, He was the more ready to hearken to the Perſuaſions of the Legate; and ſo, out of Fear, ſealed that Golden Bull of Submiſſion. Which as ſoon as the French King underſtood, he went back again, in a great Rage, with his Army; having loſt his Navy, (which was burnt in Calais by the Earl of Sarisbury) and the Hopes he had of Conquering this Kingdom.

'Tis not at all likely, that the Old Camp here, with Three Ditches, (on the Side of a Wood) was caſt up by Julius Cæſar. For tho' 'tis more than probable, that he encamped here ſome time after his firſt Landing; yet it doth not ſeem, by his own Account of the Matter, that he had Time enough to make ſuch an Intrenchment.

And yet, by the Antiquities which have been found here, one would think that this Camp is a Roman Work. Lambard mentions a Roman Urn, dug up here by Sir Chriſtopher Hales, then Maſter of the Rolls; and I have heard of ſeveral others. But indeed, the Roman Military Way paſſing over this Down, (on which are ſeveral Tumuli, or Barrows, which were caſt up (probably) over the Bones of ſome Roman Commanders;) will account for the Urns, &c. found here, without forcing us to conclude the Camp to have been a Roman one; for it may have been either a Daniſh, or a Saxon Fortification.

As King Henry the Iſt and Duke Henry were going over this Place, (Barham-Down,) towards Canterbury, a Deſign was formed by the Flemings to murder the latter. But William Earl of Norfolk, King Stephen's Son, being one of the Conſpirators, happen'd to break his Leg here, by a Fall from his Horſe: Upon which the others were ſo amazed, (as thinking it a Judgment upon him from Heaven,) that the Deſign was fruſtrated.

On this Place alſo, in the 49th of K. Henry the IIId, was a mighty Army of Horſe and Foot gather'd together, to oppoſe the Landing of ſuch Foreigners, as the Queen had procured to aſſiſt the Barons againſt the King. But that Deſign did not go on; the Strangers being all ſent back again from Dam, where they intended to have embark'd.

Here alſo in K. Henry the IIId's Reign, Simon Earl of Leiceſter, General of the Barons Army, prepared a very conſiderable Number of Forces againſt

Places of Note here.

1. Barham-Court. The Manor of Barham did anciently belong to a Family called Fitz-Urſe, and who took the Name of Barham on them, becauſe Randolph Fitz-Urſe was one of thoſe that murdered Thomas à Becket, as Philpot ſaith. But Cambden ſaith, he fled into Ireland, and there took the Name of Mac Mahon. This Manor continued in the Name of Barham until King Charles the Firſt's Time; and then it went by Purchaſe to Dr. Charles Fotherby, Father to Sir John Fotherby, the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

2. Shelving-Borow is another Manor and Seat here, which anciently belonged to a Family of the Name of Shelving. For John de Shelving was poſſeſſed of it in the Seventeenth Year of King Edward the Second. But ſoon after this, by a Daughter, it went into the Name of Haut. And about the End of King Henry the Eighth's Reign, Sir William Haut leaving only Two Daughters, one of them, Elizabeth, carried this Eſtate to Sir Thomas Colepeper of Bedgbury. But he in King Edward the Sixth's Time ſold it to Mantle, and thence it went the ſame way to Carliſle, and then to Hopday, the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

3. Diggs-Court, with the appendant Manor of Brome, was once the Seat of the Ancient Family of Diggs or Digge, one of which in the Reign of King Richard the Firſt, had the Aldermanry of Newingate in Canterbury. John Biggs, 1258, was a great Benefactor to the Franciſcans, then newly ſettled at Canterbury; and bought for them an Iſland in that City called Bennewight. Adomarus Digge, of this Place, was a Judge in King Edward the Second's Reign, and had much Land about Rainham, and Newington, where a Marſh ſtill bears his Name being called Digg's-Marſh. John Diggs of Digg's-Court was Sheriff of Kent in the Second Year of King Henry the Fourth; and his Grandſon John in the Fourth Year of King Edward the Fourth; and his Son of the ſame Name in the Eleventh Year of King Henry the Seventh; and his Son James held the ſame Office in the Second Year of King Henry the Eighth. But his Son Thomas Diggs ſold this Seat to Captain Thomas Halſey of London, who ſoon after alienated it to Sir Thomas Soam, ; and he to Collonel John Dixwell, for the Uſe of his Nephew Baſil Dixwell of Brome, Eſq; in which Family it ſtill continues, being now the fine Seat of the Worthy Sir Baſil Dixwell, Baronet.

BARMING, (Berming, Bermeling,) Eaſt, lies toward the Middle of Kent by the Medway, about two Miles and a half South-Weſt from Maidſtone, in the Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Eaſt Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath; In the Deanery of Malling, and Dioceſe of Rocheſter. The Liberty of Maidſtone claims over it. The Church is called St. Margarets, in which there is nothing remarkable of Antiquity: It is ſmall, but hath a neat Tower, and a Spire Steeple. A Rectory, the King is Patron. Royal Value 12*l.* 17*s.* 2*d.*

About half a Mile more to the South-Weſt lies Weſt Berming, where Kilburn ſaith, the Ruins of a Church and Church-yard were viſible in his Time near the Court-Lodge; that is, to explain it now the firſt time the Word occurs, near the Houſe where the Manor-Court, or Court-Baron was wont to be kept; for that I take to be the Meaning of the Word Court-Lodge, ſo very common in this County for a Gentleman's Seat, or an old Manſion-Houſe.

Places of Note here,

1. Eaſt and Weſt Berming were in the Reign of King Edward the Firſt in the Poſſeſſion of William de Bermeling, who ſeems to have taken his Sirname from hence; he had alſo the Advowſon of the Church; and after him Robert de Bermling held it in the Thirty firſt Year of King Edward the Firſt, as appears by Rot. Eſc. N. 123. After this Family were extinct, or parted with this Eſtate, it came into the Poſſeſſion of the Freminghams; and John Fremingham had it in the Twelfth Year of King Henry the Fourth. Next it went into the Name of Pimpe, a Family of great Eminence in this Part of Kent; and Reginald Pimp died poſſeſſed of them in the Sixteenth Year of King Henry the Sixth. From this Name it went ſoon after by Sale into the Family of Stafford, who were Dukes of Buckingham, and Earls of Stafford. But Edward Stafford, Duke of Buckingham, forfeited it with his Life to the Crown, being attainted and executed for High-Treaſon in the Twelfth Year of King Henry the Eighth, by the Contrivance of Cardinal Woolſey. This Duke was the laſt Perſon that had (I think) the Title of High Conſtable of England. The King granted theſe Manors to Sir John Rainsford, one of his Privy-Council, whoſe Son Henry ſold them to Sir Henry Iſley, who alſo had the Misfortune to forfeit them to the Crown, by engaging with Sir Thomas Wiat in that ill-managed Conſpiracy which coſt both of them their Lives. Sir Henry was executed at Sevenoke, and died with great Bravery and Conſtancy of Mind. Queen Mary then granted this Eſtate to Sir John Baker, her Attorney-General, whoſe Deſcendant Sir John Baker was in Poſſeſſion of it in Philpot's Time.

2. Hall's Place is a Seat in this Pariſh which gave Name to a Family reſiding here, and formerly writing themſelves At-Hall. But before the End of King Edward the Third, it went from this Name into that of Colepeper of Preſton; ſome part of it having been alſo ſold to Clive; and one John Clive, about the Seventh Year of Henry the Fourth, ſold his Part to Peter Colepeper; and he Three Years after alienated that and Hall's-Place to Sampſon Maſcall; and one of that Family who are derived from the Maſcall's in Brenchley, about the End of Queen Elizabeth's Reign parted with it the ſame way to Alchome, derived from the Alchomes of Alchome in Rotherfield in Suſſex, and in one of that Name the Fee-Simple continued in Philpot's Time, though the Uſe and Profits of it had for many Years, he ſaith, been in the Poſſeſſion of one Mr. Cock of Stepney, and his Deſcendants.

3. St. Hellens is a Place in Eaſt Berming, which formerly was a Branch of the Revenue of St. Hellens in London; but on the Diſſolution of the Abbies it was granted by King Henry the Eighth to Richard Callowhill; and he in the Thirty-fifth of that King's Reign ſold it to Gabriel Caldham; and he parted with it the ſame way, and the next Year to William Rowe; one of his Deſcendants ſold it to Mr. Stephen Pearſe, and he to Sir Robert Brett, who dying in the Nineteenth Year of King James the Firſt, bequeathed it to Robert Lynde, Eſq; and he joining with Stephen Pearſe in a concurrent Deed of Sale, conveyed it to Sir Oliver Boteler; whoſe Grandſon Sir Oliver Boteler, Baronet, was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

BEKESBOURNE lies towards the Eaſt Part of Kent by the Stoure, about two Miles and a half from Canterbury, Eaſtward, in the Bailiwick of Bridge and Petham, Lath of St. Auſtin, and Eaſt Diviſion of the County. 'Tis a Member of the Town and Port of Haſting in Suſſex, the Liberty of which Place, and that of the Cinque-Ports claims over it. 'Tis in the Deanery of Bridge, and Dioceſe of Canterbury.

The Church is dedicated to St. Peter. A Vicarage; the Archbiſhop Patron; Royal Value 6*l*. made ſo in the Forty-third Year of King Edward the Third.

Archbiſhop Parker Repaired and Beautified the Chancel, and obtained an Augmentation to the Vicarage, of Ten Pounds, Four Quarters of Wheat, and Sixteen of Barley, per Annum. It was diſtinguiſhed from the other Bourn, which Philpot ſaith are link'd to each other by the River Leving, by its being the Patrimony of the Bekes. Richard de Beke held his Lands here in Grand Serjeantry to find one Ship each Time King Henry the Third ſhould croſs the Seas, as appears by the Teſta de Nevil in the Exchequer. Perhaps the Stoure might once be Navigable thus far.

The Archbiſhop of Canterbury had once a ſmall but fine Manor Houſe here, very conveniently ſituated for a Receſs; it was purchaſed by Archbiſhop Cranmer with the Money that he ſold Biſhopsbourne for; and hither he retired when Queen Mary came to the Crown, but went in a while to Ford, and thence was ſent to the Tower. The River is ſo contrived to come round it that it was well ſupplyed with Trouts. The Gate-houſe and High-Walls of the Gardens are ſtill ſtanding.

But Mr. Strype ſaith, this Houſe was his Son's after him; if ſo, it muſt be his own Private Eſtate, and ſo the former Account of its being bought by Cranmer muſt be a Miſtake. But I judge Mr. Strype ſhould mean the Houſe againſt the Gardens of the Palace here, which Parker bought, he ſaith, of one William Whiting; and it was ſold by his Son.

This Palace was demoliſhed 1658, and now no Part but the Gate-houſe is ſtanding; on which are the Arms and Motto of Archbiſhop Parker.

Anno Domini 1558, Cranmer finiſhed the Gate-houſe that is now ſtanding here, as he had done ſeveral other Parts before. His Name T. C. and Motto, Noſce Teipſum & Deum, being on two Stones ſet in the Brickwork.

Bekesbourn-Manor was firſt given to the Church of Canterbury about the Year 1400.

Garwington is a Manor and Seat in this Pariſh which once had Owners of this Name, and who held their Eſtate here by Knights Service of the Abbot of St. Auſtins. Thomas Garwington was a Man of good Note here in the Twentieth Year of King Edward the Third. But in his Grandſon the Male Line determined; and Joan his Niece, who had Married Richard Haut, a Cadit of the Hauts of Hautsbourn, was his Heir general; but her Son Richard Haut leaving only a Daughter Margery, it went by her to her Huſband William Iſaac of Hopland; and his Succeſſor's Daughter carried it alſo in Marriage, firſt to Sidley, and then to Sir Henry Palmer, whoſe Deſcendant Sir Henry Palmer ſold it to Lieutenant-Collonel Prude that was killed at Maeſtricht; whoſe two Grand-Daughters, and Co-heirs, joined in a Sale of it to Mr. George Curtis in Philpot's Time.

I can't but take notice of what Lambard ſaith of this Place's being obliged to find Seven Ships in the Service of the Cinque-Ports; becauſe 'tis not conſiſtent with his other Account, nor indeed with the Reaſon of Things; it being but a Limb to Haſting, and that finding but Five Ships; However, Philpot ſaith expreſly, that there was a ſmall Navigation from the Stour hither in King Edward the Third's Reign.

There was a Chantry in this Church which was Founded Anno Domini 1314, by one James of Bourne; but the Revenues of it, with the Conſent of Archbiſhop Iſlip, in 1362, were tranſlated to Cokyn's Hoſpital, united to Eaſtbridge in Canterbury, by one Bartholomew of Bourne aforeſaid.

Thomas Goldſtone, Prior of Chriſt-Church, about Anno Domini, 1500, well repaired the Manor-Houſe here; and built a Chapel, which in 1508 was Conſecrated by John Thornton, Suffragan Biſhop of Dover, and Dedicated to the Bleſſed Virgin.

BECKENHAM, or as in the Textus Roffenſis, Beccenham, the Town of Beeches, lies at the Weſt Side of Kent, adjoyning to Surrey, by the River Ravensbourn, about two Miles Weſt from Bromley; ſome ſmall Part of it is in Surrey. But that which is in this County is in the Bailiwick of Sutton-Bromley; Hundred of Bromley and Beckenham; Lath of Sutton at Hone; Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Upper one of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery of Dartford, and Dioceſe of Rocheſter. And the Church is Dedicated to St. George.

A Rectory, Royal Value 16*l*. 18*s*. 10*d*.

The Liberty of the Biſhop of Rocheſter claims over it.

Dr. Cave thinks this to have been the Place which was anciently called Becanceld, or as he would read it Becanfeld, where ſeveral Councils have been held; but it ſeems rather to have been Bapchild, as is the general Opinion of the Learned.

Places of Note in Bekenham,

1. This Place was anciently the Eſtate of a Family, which in Latin were called de Rupella, in French de la Rochell, and in Engliſh Rokely. Richard de Rokely died Seized of this Manor in the Fifth Year of King Edward the Firſt. His Son Philip left only one Daughter Iſolda de la Rokely, who carried this Manor to her Husband Mr. William Bruin, by whom ſhe had Iſſue Sir Maurice Bruin, who was Chamberlain to King Edward the Third, and was called to Parliament as a Baron. After this Eſtate had continued long in this Family, Sir Henry Bruin, about the beginning of King Edward the Fourth, left Two Daughters only, who were Co-Heirs. Elizabeth the Youngeſt Married firſt Thomas Tirrell of Heron in Eſſex, Eſq; and carried this Part of her Father's Inheritance to him. After this ſhe Married Sir William Brandon, Knight, who was Standard-Bearer to King Henry the Seventh at the Battel of Boſworth-Field, and was there killed. His Son was the famous Sir Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk, who had this Place in Leaſe from the Heir of Tirrell, and lived here ſome time. And here it was that he entertained King Henry the Eighth with great Magnificence when he went once to pay a Viſit to his Repudiated Wife Anne of Cleves, reſiding then at Hever in this County. But the Fee-ſimple of this Manor deſcended to Humphrey, Grandſon of the above-mentioned Thomas Tirrell; and he in the Thirty-fifth Year of King Henry the Eighth paſſed away one Moiety of it to Ralph Warren, and the other to Henry Park. Warren ſoon alienated his Part to Bradbury; from whom about the End of Queen Elizabeth it paſſed by Sale to Mr. Serjeant Gent, who gave it in Dower with his Daughter to Sir George Dalſton of Cumberland; he Sold it to Sir Patrick Carwin of the ſame County; and he in a ſhort time conveyed it the ſame way to Sir Oliver St. John, and from him it deſcended to Sir Walter St. John, Baronet. The other Half, by Park's only Daughter, went to Mr. Robert Leigh of Cheſhire, whoſe Succeſſor about the End of King James the Firſt, alienated it to Mr. Henry Snelgrave, who Sold it alſo to Sir Walter St. John; and he by that Means being poſſeſſed of the whole Manor exchanged it for other Lands with his Brother Mr. Henry St. John.

2. Langley,

2. Langley, is a Seat in this Pariſh, which in the Twelfth Year of King Edward the Second belonged to John de Malmains, who had a Charter of Free-Warren then for this Eſtate. He ſold it to Henry de Cliffe; and from that Name about the End of King Edward the Third it went the ſame way to Langley, which Family gave Name to the Seat, and by ſome of which it was Rebuilt. The laſt of the Langleys here was Ralph Langley, who with many other Gentlemen of this County, was ſummoned to appear before Robert Poynings and John Perry, in the Twelfth Year of King Henry the Sixth, to diſclaim the Title of the Houſe of York. He died Anno 1451, and ordered Langley to be Sold for the Payment of his Debts. John Violett was the Purchaſer; and his Family enjoyed it till the beginning of King Henry the Eighth, and then it was ſold to John Stiles, Eſq; who much enlarged the Houſe with good Building. And in Philpot's Time it was in the Poſſeſſion of his Succeſſor Sir Humphry Stiles, Knight and Baronet; and in that Family it ſtill continues.

3. Kelſeys is another Seat in Beckenham, which in King Henry the Third's Time belonged to a Family of this Name; and from hence Philpot thinks the Kelſeys of Surrey were derived. But about the End of King Richard the Second, the Brograves were got into Poſſeſſion of this Place by Purchaſe. In old Deeds they are written Burgrave, and ſometimes Boroughgrave.

In the Year 1479, a Licenſe was granted to William Brograve by the Biſhop of Rocheſter, to erect a Chapel at his Manor-Houſe at Kelſeys; the Remains of which were viſible in Philpot's Time; when alſo, Martha, Widow of Mr. Thomas Brograve, was by Joynture in Poſſeſſion of this Eſtate and Seat.

4. Foxgrove, is a Place here which had anciently Poſſeſſors of this Name; for John de Foxgrove paid Ayd for it at making the Black-Prince Knight. From this Family it went into that of Bartholomew Lord Burwaſh; whoſe Son of the ſame Name in the Forty-third Year of King Edward the Third, ſold it to Sir Walter de Pavely, in whoſe Family it ſtaid till the End of King Richard the Second, and then was conveyed to Vaux of the County of Northampton, from which Family about the End of King Henry the Sixth, it went the ſame way to that of Greene; and thence, in the beginning of King Henry the Eighth to the Name of Bevorſea. From hence it was ſold again to Hollingworth (Luke) who alſo, about the beginning of King Edward the Sixth, alienated it to Sir John Cliff of London; and he Dying without Male Iſſue, Joan his only Daughter carried it to her Husband John Leigh of Addington, Eſq; And Chriſtian, Widow of Sir Francis Leigh of Eaſt Peckham, was in Poſſeſſion of it in Philpot's Time.

BENENDEN lies towards the Middle of the South Part of Kent, about three Miles South-Eaſt from Cranbrook; in the Bailiwick of the Seven Hundreds; Lath of Scray; Weſt Diviſion of the County; and lower One of Juſtices in that Lath.

So much of it as is in the Burgh of Benenden is in the Hundred of Rolvenden. But that Part which lies in the Burghs of Hevenden or Ibornden, is in the Hundred of Brackley. That Part lying in the North Burgh, is in Selbrittenden Hundred. And what lies in the Burgh of Crothal is in the Hundred of Cranbrook.

'Tis a Vicarage, in the Gift of Sir John Norris. Royal Value 17*l*. 12*s*. 6*d*. and is in the Deanery of Charing, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Church is Dedicated to St. George, and ſtands in Rolvenden Hundred; in which are Monuments and Memorials of the Interment of Guldeford of Hamſted, and of Moore ſometime Lord of Benenden.

At Hempſted is a Place called the Merry-Tree, which is reputed to be the Higheſt Ground of all the Wild of Kent.

The Steeple of the Church here ſtands off from it, being built of Stone at the Bottom, and the reſt of Wood. The Spire is high, and the Workmanſhip within ſide very good.

The Liberties of St. Auſtin, and of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury, claims here.

Places of Note here,

1. Benenden. In Doomſday-Book, Benenden is recorded to have been poſſeſſed by one Gudricus, &c. in Allodio ſuo; i. e. it was perfectly Free-Land of Inheritance, without any Feudal Services, or Servile Obligations to any Lord connected with it, and Alienable or Bequeathable without any ones Leave.

Afterwards we find (a) Benenden poſſeſſed by Perſons of that Name. John de Benenden held a Knight's-Fee here, in the Twentieth Year of King Edward the Third. But from this Family, by Joan, a Female Heir, it went to Sir William Brenchley, Lord Chief Juſtice of the Common-Pleas. He died about 1446, and She about Seven Years after, and are both Buried in Chriſt-Church in Canterbury.

(a) Benenden Az. a Lobſter Or.

Another Female Heir of this Name, carried this Eſtate to Moore of More-Court in Ivy-Church, who on this Match tranſplanted themſelves from that Place where they had been for many Generations, and built a Houſe here which they called

2. More-Court. But in the Firſt Year of Queen Mary, John More, Eſq; Sold it to Mr. William Watts; from whom it deſcended to one of the ſame Name, and who was in Poſſeſſion in Philpot's Time.

3. Hemſtede is a Manor and Seat here, which in the Twentieth Year of King Henry the Third, was in the Poſſeſſion of Robert de Hemſtede; but in the Twentieth Year of King Edward the Third it was become the Inheritance of James de Echingham of Suſſex. Next, about the beginning of King Richard the Second, it was in the Poſſeſſion of Sir Robert Belknap the Judge. But on his Attainder becoming forfeited to the Crown, it was granted by that Prince to William de Guldford, who was Sheriff of Kent in his Eleventh Year. This Family had been eminent long before this in the County, and were Poſſeſſors of the Manors of Wickham near Lydd, in the Twentieth Year of King Edward the Third, as appears by the Book of Ayd, and probably took their Name from Guldeford by Rye in Suſſex. After William Guldford had got the Grant of Hempſtede, he made it his Seat; and his Succeſſors ſoon improved it by Building, and have ever ſince continued Reſident there, till Sir Robert Guldford, Baronet, lately Sold it to Sir John Norris, Member of Parliament for Rye.

This Family of Guildford have been very eminent in this County. Sir John Guildford lies buried in Canterbury Church, who was Comptroller of the Houſhold to King Edward the Fourth. His Son Sir Richard was made Knight of the Garter by King Henry the Seventh. And his Son Sir Edward was Mareſchal of Calais, Lord Warden of the Five Ports, Maſter of the Ordnance, and Father to Jane, Dutcheſs of Northumberland, who was Mother to the Earls of Warwick and Leiceſter, as alſo to Guilford Dudley, who was Beheaded with his Wife Jane. Sir Henry Guildford was made Knight of the Garter by King Henry the Eighth; and had on a Canton the Arms of Granada added to his Coat by Ferdinando King of Spain, for his worthy Service in recovering that Kingdom from the Moors. And from that Sir John Guildford, firſt mentioned, Weaver ſaith, there do proceed by Females, the Families of Darel, Gage, Brown, Walſingham, Cromer, Iſaac, and Iſley, all of good Note hereabouts in the preceding Ages.

Darel,

4. Great Maytham is a Manor here, which once was part of the Eſtate of the Noble Family of Malmains, whoſe principal Seat was at Malmains in Stoke, in the Hundred of Hoo.

Nicholas, Grandſon of John Malmains, who held this Place in the Twentieth Year of King Henry the Third, paid Ayd for it at making the Black-Prince Knight. But it ſtaid not much longer in this Name; for in the Fourth Year of King Henry the Fourth, it was got into the Poſſeſſion of Nicholas Carew, in whoſe Family it continued till about the latter End of King Henry the Eighth, and then was Sold to Thomas Lord Cromwell, afterwards made Earl of Eſſex. But on his Attainder in the Thirty-ſecond of that Prince it came to the Crown, and was granted to Sir Walter Henley of Courſeborne, King's Serjeant at Law; who not long after gave it to Thomas Colepeper of Bedgbury, Eſq; who Married Hellen one of his Daughters. He, in the laſt of King Edward the Sixth, ſold part of the Land belonging to it to Parker and Franklyn. But the Manor continued in Colepeper of Bedgbury, till King Charles the Firſt's Time, and then was granted to Mr. Alderman Wright, being forfeited to the Crown for Non-Payment of the Water-Scots, &c. in Romney-Marſh. And by Margaret his Daughter, it went in Marriage to Richard Cordall of London, Eſq; the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

5. Lowden or Little Maytham, is a Manor which was in the Twentieth Year of King Edward the Third, part of the Eſtate of Sir Richard At Leeze. But as appears by the Roll of Blanch-Lands in the Exchequer, in the Fourth Year of King Henry the Fourth, it was come into the Poſſeſſion of Thomas Aucher, who paid Ayd for it at the Marriage of Blanch that King's Daughter. From him it went to his Grandſon John Aucher of Loſenham in Newenden, Eſq; And by the Marriage of Anne his only Daughter, to William, ſecond Son of Sir John Colepeper of Bedgbury; in which Family it continued till Sir John Colepeper of Loſenham, created Lord Colepeper at Oxford, paſſed it away to Mr. More his Brother in Law, who I ſuppoſe poſſeſſed it in Philpot's Time.

The Termination Den, in which the Name of this Place ends, is very common to Places in the Wilde of Kent; it ſignified at firſt a Part of that great Wood, which was fenced off, and given by the King to ſome particular Perſon; of which more when I ſpeak of the Wilde or Wealde.

BERSTEDE, in ſome Old Manuſcript written Berghſtede, becauſe perhaps there may formerly have been a Caſtle here, which the Ruins of Moat-Hall do ſeem to ſhew.

It lies near the Middle of Kent by the River Medway, about two Miles and a half Eaſtward from Maidſtone; in the Bailiwick of Eyborne; Lath of Aylesford; Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Eaſt Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. Part of it is in the Hundred of Eyborne, and the Reſt in that of Maidſtone. 'Tis in the Deanery of Sutton, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Church ſtands in the Hundred of Eyborne, and is Dedicated to the Holy Croſs. The great Tithes are impropriated to the Church of Rocheſter, which preſents to the Vicarage, which is valued in the King's Books at 6*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.*

In the Church are Memorials of Henry Brookhall, the laſt of that Family at Aldington in Thurnham; ſeveral Monuments of the Cages, and one of Robert Fludd, M. D.

In ſome Ancient Rentals, there is mention made of Lands belonging to the Fraternity of Berſted, which ſhews, that formerly there was ſome kind of College or Fraternity here. Perhaps it might belong to the adjacent Priory of Leeds.

That anciently there were many ſuch kind of Brotherhoods, appears plain to me, by the Stalls which I have often obſerved in the Chancels of ſeveral Churches in this County and elſewhere; and yet we have no particular Account of their having been Collegiate, like Maidſtone, Wye, Wingham, &c.

A Fair is kept here on Holy-Rood Day, viz. September the Fourteenth; and a Court-Baron, uſually held at Mote-Place, formerly called Stone-houſe.

Places of Note here,

1. Part of the Manor of Leeds lies in Berſted; it is divided into Six Brandes, which here are called Yokes, viz. Church-Yoke, Ferinland-Yoke, Mill-Yoke, Ruſſerker-Yoke, Stockwell-Yoke, and Lees-Yoke; and each Yoke had a particular Docket for gathering the Quit-Rents.

2. Berſted was once the Seat of the Noble Family of the Crevequers, before they removed to Leeds-Caſtle. And it continued in that Name till Haman de Crevequer forfeited it to the Crown, by being engaged with Simon de Mountfort, Earl of Leiceſter, againſt King Henry the Third, tho' he himſelf was pardoned at the Pacification of Killingworth. But this Place continued in the Crown till the Tenth Year of King Edward the Second, and then was exchanged for other Lands with Bartholomew Lord Bedeleſmere. And he forfeited it to the Crown again, with much other Land, in the Fifteenth Year of King Edward the Second. Here it continued till the Fourth Year of Edward the Sixth, and then as an Appendant to the Manor of Leed's Caſtle, it was granted to Sir Anthony St. Leger, whoſe great Grandſon Sir William, about the latter End of King James the Firſt, exchanged it with Sir Richard Smith, for Salmeſton in the Iſle of Thanet, (which Sir Richard is Buried in Aſhford Church, with a fair Monument, and is ſaid to be of Leed's Caſtle) whence it went to Sir Thomas Colepeper of Hollingbourn by Sale. And his Son Sir Cheyney Colepeper was in Poſſeſſion of it in Philpot's Time.

3. Mill-Gate is a Place here which once was a Manor, and the Eſtate of a Family of the Name of Coloigne; in proceſs of Time called Colaney. And it was in the Poſſeſſion of Thomas Colaney in the Fourteenth Year of King Edward the Fourth. But in King Henry the Seventh's Reign it was come to Stonehouſe, a Family whoſe Ancient Seat was at Haſlewood in Boughton Malherbe. About the beginning of Queen Elizabeth it left that Name, and was ſold to Sir Thomas Floyd, Receiver to that Princeſs, who Rebuilt the Seat, and much enlarged it. But his Grandſon, Thomas Floyd, Eſq; in King Charles the Firſt's Time, ſold it to ——— Cage, Eſq; the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

4. Moat-Place, in the Parliament Survey called Moat-hall, formerly Stone-houſe, belonged firſt to the Priory of Leeds; and at the Suppreſſion of the Monaſtries, was given to the Dean and Chapter of Rocheſter. Philpot thinks, this Place gave Name to the ſeveral Families of Stone-houſe in Kent, Berks, Bucks, &c. But he is groſly miſtaken, in ſaying it ever belonged to Chriſt-Church in Canterbury, tho' that Church hath indeed a Piece of Land in this Pariſh.

BETHERISDEN, (Beatriciden) ſaith Kilburn, and likely, the Church being Dedicated to St. Beatrice, lies towards the South Side of Kent, about four Miles and a half Southward from Aſhford. So much of it as is in the Burghs of Hales, Bridge, Engeham, or Pevenden, is in the Hundred of Blackbourn; Bailiwick of the Seven Hundreds; and Weſt Diviſion of the County. And the Reſt is in in the Hundred of Chart and Longbridge, and partly in that of Calehill; and alſo in the Bailiwick of Chart and Longbridge, and Eaſt Diviſion of the County. 'Tis all in the Lath of Scray, and Diviſion of Juſtices in the Lath of Shipway; in the Dioceſe of Canterbury, and Deanery of Charing.

The Church ſtands in the Hundred of Chart and Longbridge, and is dedicated to St. Beatrice. 'Tis a Vicarage, in the Archbiſhop of Canterbury's Gift, who hath the Great Tythes. Valued at 12 l. per Annum.

In the Church are the Arms of Surenden, an Ancient Family here in King Edward the IId's Time, and Owners of the Seat called Surenden; which is now the Habitation of the Chutes, (Sir George).

The Liberties of St. Auſtin, and of the Dean of Canterbury, claim here; as doth alſo that of Wye, over the Burgh of Snode-Hill.

A Fair is kept here, on St. Margaret's Day, July 20.

Places of Note here.

1. Betheriſden-Lovelace, is a Place here, which once belonged to a Family called Grenſted, now uſually Greenſtreet. Henry de Grenſted, the laſt of the Name, lived here in good Repute in King Edward the IId and IIId's Reign; but at length ſold this Eſtate to Kivet: And thence, in the 41ſt Year of K. Edward the IIId, it was ſold again to John Lovelace, who built this Seat. From this Family, the Lovelaces of Bayford, and the Lord Lovelace of Hurley in Berks, (Philpot ſaith) are derived. The laſt of this Name here, was Colonel Richard Lovelace, Eldeſt Son to Sir William; who alienated it to Mr. Richard Hulſe, deſcended (ſaith Philpot) from the Ancient Family of the Hulſes in Cheſhire.

2. Surenden is a Seat here, which is elder than that at Pluckley, tho' they both belonged to the ſame Family of Surenden, (in old Deeds, frequently written Suthrinden) and which continued here till King Henry the VIth's Time. Some of the Eſtate of that Family, in this Pariſh, was in King Henry the IVth's Reign ſold to John Goldwell. But John, Son of Robert Surenden, parted with the reſt, in the Beginning of King Henry the VIth, to Cardinal Kemp, who ſettled it on his College of Wye. After the Suppreſſion of the Religious Houſes, King Henry the VIIIth granted it to Sir Maurice Dennus, Captain of Calais; and he, in the Second Year of K. Edward the VIth, ſold it to Sir Anthony Aucher; who, in Two Years more, alienated it to Philip Chowte, Eſq; who had been Standard-Bearer to King Henry the VIIIth, at the Siege of Boloign; and had then an Augmentation to his Arms given him, for his good Services there; viz. On a Canton Parte per Pale, Argent and Vert, A Lion Paſſant, Guardant, Gules. And in this Family it continued in Philpot's Time, and doth ſtill, I ſuppoſe.

And the Place came to be called Surenden-Chowte, becauſe the Chowtes made many Improvements to it, by Additional Buildings, &c.

3. Frith, is another Place in this Pariſh, which anciently belonged to the Family of the Maneys; but it was a younger Branch, iſſued out from that of Tunſtall; as appears, ſaith Philpot, by an old Will in Latin of John de Maney, who died poſſeſs'd of this Place, in the Fiftieth Year of King Edward the IIId.

After this Family, it came into the Poſſeſſion of the Darells of Calehill. John Darell was poſſeſs'd of it in King Henry the VIth's Time: And in this Family it ſtay'd, till about the End of K. Henry the VIIIth; and then it was ſold to Gibbons, deſcended from Hole in Rolvenden. The laſt of which Name, at this Place, was Thomas Gibbons; whoſe Daughter Lydia carried this Eſtate in Marriage to Edward Chowte, of Surrenden, Eſquire. The Arms of both whom are in the Church, Impaled as follows:

Maney. Parte per Pale Argent & Sable; 3 Chevrons between 3 Cinque-Foils, all counterchanged.

Gibbons. Sable a Lyon Rampant Or, between 3 Eſcallops Argent.

In the North Chancel of this Church, (ſaith Philpot) belonging to the Lovelaces, was a Perpetual Chantry, founded by Richard Lovelace, Merchant of London, about the 38th Year of K. Henry VI.

All over this Pariſh almoſt, they dig a Grey Marble, filled very thick with Shells, chiefly of the Turbinated ſort; which is pretty hard, and holds a good Poliſh.

BEWSFEILD, alias Whitefeild, (Beauxfeild, Beauville,) lies at the Eaſt Part of Kent, about Three Miles and a half Northward from Dover, in the Bailiwick of Stowting, Hundred of Bewsborough, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath.

The Liberty of St. Auſtin, and That of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, claim here. The Great Tythes impropriate to him, who preſents to the Vicarage. Royal Value, 6 l. per Annum.

The Church is dedicated to St. Peter; and is in the Deanery of Dover, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. 'Tis a ſmall Pariſh.

Places of Note in it, are,

1. Beauxfeild, anciently the Eſtate of the Lord Giles Badleſmere; who gave it in Marriage with his Daughter Elizabeth, to John Northwood, of Milton; where, after continuing for many Deſcents, it came at laſt to John Northwood, of Northwood in Milton: Who, about the End of K. Henry the VIIIth's Time, ſold it to John Bois, Eſq; Anceſtor to the Bois of Fredvile; in which Family it remained in Philpot's Time.

2. Linacre, is a Manor here, which was the Seat of a Family of that Sirname; and from which, the Linacre in King Henry the VIIIth's Reign, who compoſed the Latin Grammar, was (ſaith Philpot) extracted: Tho' the Name was gone from hence long before; for John Monins had it in Poſſeſſion in King Edward the Third's Reign: And in that Family it continued, till about the Beginning of King Henry the Eighth; and then was ſold to Chelesford, of Chelesford; and thence it went the ſame way, to John Bois, Eſq; of Fredvile; whoſe Deſcendants were in Poſſeſſion of it in Philpot's Time.

BEXLEY; in the Textus Roffenſis, Bixle: But 'tis ſometimes written Bekeſley; and therefore probably ſo called, from its lying near the Becc, i. e. the River Cray, in the Ley, or Field.

It lies towards the North-Weſt Part of Kent, by the River Cray, about Two Miles South-Weſt from Dartford; in the Bailiwick of Sutton-Dartford, Lath of Sutton at Hone, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Upper one of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Hundred of Ruxley, (or rather Rokeſley) Deanery of Shoreham, and Dioceſe of Rocheſter; but 'tis a Peculiar of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury's.

The Church is very handſome and fine, with an elegant Altar-Piece, given by the late Vicar, Mr. Huntingdon, who was Miniſter here above Forty Years.

But the Clerk told me, that 30 s. of it came from a Gentleman, whoſe Arms I ſaw in the Church, and ſeem very ancient. They are, A Croſs engrailed within a Border, and charged with 6 Crowns: To the Croſs, a Bugle-Horn hanging.

In the Church are Memorials of the Interment of Sparrow, Biſhop Shelley, Champneis, Auſtin, Brett, &c.

Places of Note here:

1. Bexley-Manor. A. D. 805, K. Kenulfus gave Bexley to Archbiſhop Wilfred (a). And ſome of his Succeſſors obtain'd a Market, to be held here on Tueſday, and a Fair on Sept. 14.; as appears by Pat. 9. Edw. II. N. 49.

(a) Somner. Cant. App. 37.

And here this Manor ſtay'd till the 29th of Henry the VIIIth; and then was exchanged by Archbiſhop Cranmer with the Crown, for other Lands.

In King James the Iſt's Time, it was granted to Sir John Spillman, the King's Jeweller, a Gentleman of German Extraction; who, not long after, ſold it to that moſt Learned and Judicious Antiquary, Mr. William Cambden, Clarenceux King at Arms; who, by his Laſt Will and Teſtament, gave it to the Univerſity of Oxford, for the Eſtabliſhment of an Hiſtory-Profeſſorſhip there for ever.

2. Blinden-Court, in Old Deeds written Bladindon, is an Eſtate here, which once had Owners of that Name. For Jordanus de Bladindon, or Blindon, in the Firſt Year of King Richard the IId, ſold it to Walſingham: In which Name it ſtay'd, till about the End of King Henry the IVth; and then went the ſame way to Ferbie, of Paul's Cray: One of whoſe Deſcendants, about the Beginning of K. Henry the VIth, ſold it to William Marſhall; and he, in a ſhort time, to Rawlins: Where it continued till about the Middle of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, and then was demiſed to May. And from him, in a few Years, it went by Sale to Wroth: One of whoſe Family, John Wroth, Eſq; of the Wroths of Durants, in Eſſex, was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

3. Halls-Place, was anciently the Eſtate of a Family named At-Hall; the laſt of which here, Thomas At-Hall, in the 41ſt Year of King Edward the Third, ſold it to Thomas Shelley, of Gayſam in Weſterham. And in this Family it continued till the 29th Year of King Henry the VIIIth; and then William, Son of John Shelley, ſold it to Sir John Champneys, of London: Whoſe Grandſon, Richard Champneys, Eſq; parted with it the ſame way to Robert Auſtin, of London, Eſquire. It now remains in the Poſſeſſion of the Lady Auſtin, Relict of Sir John Auſtin; and is a very Handſome Seat, and finely ſituated.

4. By the River-ſide in this Town of Bexley, is, or was an Old Houſe, which formerly was the Seat of an Ancient Family, called Lamienby, alias Sparrow: The laſt of which Name was Thomas Lamienby; whoſe ſole Heir (Agnes) was married to Mr. James Goldwell, extracted from the Goldwells of Great Chart, in this County; by whom, and his Heirs, a fair Houſe was built in this Pariſh, which was called Lamienby-Goldwell; and which was in the Poſſeſſion of John Goldwell, one of this Family, in Philpot's Time.

The Little River Cray runs thro' the Town, and affords very good Trouts.

BICKNOR, lies towards the North Part of Kent, about Four Miles North-Weſt from Lenham, up the Hill. Part of it is in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Eyeborn, Lath of Aylesford, and Weſt Diviſion of the County: And the reſt is in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Milton, Lath of Scray, and Eaſt Diviſion of the County. Tis all in the Eaſt Diviſion of Juſtices, in the Lath of Aylesford, in the Deanery of Sittingbourn, and Dioceſe of Canterbury.

The Church ſtands in the Hundred of Eyeborn. 'Tis a poor little Church; Mr. Barclay Incumbent; and the King Patron.

This Place was anciently the Habitation of a Family of the Name of Bicknor. Sir John, and Sir Thomas de Bicknor, were made Knights-Bannerets at Carlaverock-Caſtle in Scotland; and accompanied King Edward the Firſt, in his famous Expedition thither, in the 28th Year of his Reign.

But in the next Reign, this Manor and Eſtate was got into the Poſſeſſion of Roger de Leybourn, Baron of Leybourn-Caſtle; whoſe only Daughter Juliana dying Childleſs, in the 43d Year of K. Edward the Third; this (with a very great Quantity of other Lands) eſcheated to the Crown, and by that King was ſettled on the Abbey of St. Mary Grace, on Tower-Hill, London; and after the Suppreſſion, was granted to Chriſtopher Sampſon, who (in the Second Year of King Edward the VIth) ſold it to Sir Thomas Wiat: Who ſent it the ſame way to Reader; and he (about the End of Queen Elizabeth) ſold it to Terry. From whence it went to Alderſey, partly by Sale, and partly by Alliance; and in Philpot's Time, was in the Poſſeſſion of Mr. Farnham Alderſey, Second Brother to Terrey Alderſey, of Wanton-Court, Eſquire. And in that Family it ſtill continues.

BIDBOROUGH, lies towards the South-Weſt Part of Kent, about Two Miles South-Weſtward from Tunbridge Town; in the Bailiwick of the Lowy of Tunbridge, Hundred of Wachling-Stone, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and South Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath.

'Tis in the Deanery of Malling, and Dioceſe of Rocheſter; and the Church is dedicated to St. Laurence.

Places of Note here:

1. There was once a Family called Chauney, which owned Lands in this Pariſh; and Thomas Le Chauney paid Aid for them, at making the Black Prince Knight; and in this Name it continued till the Latter End of King Henry the Fourth.

After

After this it went into the Name of Palmer; where it ſtay'd till K. Henry the VIIIth's Time; and then was ſold to John Vane, Eſq; : Whoſe Deſcendant, Sir Ralph Vane, being attainted and hanged in the Fifth Year of King Edward the VIth, for Engaging in the Deſigns of the Ambitious Duke of Northumberland, it became forfeited to the Crown; and Queen Elizabeth, in her firſt Year, granted it to Henry Cary, Lord Hunſdon; and thence went along with the Manor of Bidborough (mention'd below) to Berkley, and thence to Smith.

2. Bidborough-Manor, was in the Poſſeſſion anciently of the Lords of Tunbridge, as Clare, Audley, and Stafford; but was forfeited to the Crown by the Duke of Buckingham, in the 12th Year of King Henry the VIIIth. And by Queen Elizabeth, in her 1ſt Year, was granted to Henry Cary, Lord Hunſdon; whoſe Son, George Cary Lord Hunſdon, dying without Iſſue-Male, his Daughter Elizabeth carried it in Marriage to Thomas Lord Berkley: And he, in the Beginning of K. James the Iſt's Reign, ſold the whole Manor to Sir Thomas Smith; whoſe Grandſon, Mr. Robert Smith, died poſſeſs'd of it in Philpot's Time.

3. There is a Houſe in this Pariſh, called Bounds, (in the Old Deeds, Bunds;) becauſe it was placed juſt at the Bounds of the Lowy of Tunbridge.

What that Lowy is; and how far it extended; and how obtained; I ſhew at large, in the Account of Tunbridge.

BIDDENDEN, lies towards the South Part of Kent, about Four Miles and a half North-Eaſtward from Cranbrook, in the Bailiwick of the Seven Hundreds, Lath of Scray, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Lower one of Juſtices in that Lath.

So much of it as is in the Burghs of Ibornden, Worſenden, Hevenden, Omenden, Stephurſt, or Walchinden, is in the Hundred of Berkley; and the reſt, being in the Burgh of the Out-Bounds of Smith's Ditch, is in the Hundred of Cranbrook. The Borſholder of the aforeſaid Burgh of Worſenden, is choſen at the Court-Leet held at Boreham, in this County: And the Burgh of Wachlinden hath a Court-Leet of its own, held in this Pariſh, at which the Borſholder of that Burgh is choſen. So that neither of the Two laſt Borſholders is choſen at the Court-Leet, held for the ſaid Hundred of Berkley; nor do the Inhabitants of thoſe Burghs attend at that Court. But at that Court-Leet, may be choſen a Conſtable of that Hundred, out of either of thoſe Burghs.

The Liberty of St. Auſtin claims in this Pariſh; but that of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims over the Dens of Biddenden, and Speldherſt, as held of the Manor of Shorland.

The Liberty of Wye claims over the Burgh of Wachinden; and that of the Dean of Canterbury, over ſo much of this Pariſh, as is in the Manor of Godmerſham.

This Place is in the Deanery of Charing, and Dioceſe of Canterbury.

A Fair is kept here, on October 28.

The Church ſtands in the Hundred of Berkley, and is called All-Saints. The Rectory of the Archbiſhop's Patronage. Royal Value, 35 l. per Annum.

The North Chancel of the Church is ſaid to have belonged to the Family of Mayney, and after them, to that of Henden; who were ſucceſſively Owners of the Houſe in the Town, called The Place. And in the North Side of the Chancel, is a very Ancient Monument of John Mayney, Eſq; : And on the South Side, another of John Mayney, Eſq; who died Sheriff of Kent, in the Year 1566.

The Free-School here was founded by one of this Family, (probably John Mayney,) in the Year 1522.

In the Middle-Chancel are Memorials of the Family of Everden, Allord, and Randolph; and in the South one, of Fleet, Boddenden, and Selyard; and in the Eaſt Window, the Arms of Moyle, formerly one of the Juſtices of the Common-Pleas.

Places of Note in this Pariſh:

1. Biddenden-Place, was a Seat here, which formerly gave Name to an Ancient Family; long ſince extinct; and who were ſucceeded here by the Mayneys. John, Son of Sir John de Mayney, died ſeized of this Manor, and other Lands adjacent, in the 50th Year of King Edward the Third. And here it continued for many Generations; till Sir Anthony Mayney (but ſome Years ſince, ſaith Philpot, whoſe Book is printed in 1656) ſold it to Sir Edward Henden, Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer; who bequeathed it to his Nephew, Sir John Henden: And his Son and Heir, Edward Henden, Eſq; was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

2. Allards, is another Ancient Seat in this Pariſh, which of old belonged to a Family of that Name; and from whence that Gervas Alarar, or Allard, was deſcended, who was Captain and Admiral of the Navy ſet forth by the Cinque-Ports, in the Firſt Year of K. Edward I. And by a Daughter of that Name, it went in Marriage to Terrey Alderſey, of Swanton-Court, in Bredgar, Eſquire.

3. Caſtwiſell, is an Eſtate and Manor here, which formerly was in the Poſſeſſion of a Family of that Name; John de Caſtwiſell being mentioned by Philpot, as a Witneſs to Deeds of Sale relating to this Manor. But in K. Edward the IIId's Time, the Moyles (who were extracted, ſaith Philpot, from the Moyles of Moyles-Court, at Bodmin in Cornwall) were Proprietors of it. For Sir Walter Moyle, Knight, in the Sixth Year of that King, granted Lands held of the Manor of Caſtwiſell, to Reginald and William Sands. And in King Henry the VIth's Reign, Margaret, Relict of William Scapis, of Burmerſh, granted to Walter Moyle (the Judge) all her Land in Biddenden. And by other Deeds dated in K. Henry the VIIIth's Time, it appears, that Thomas Moyle of Eaſtwell, Gentleman, convey'd this Eſtate to Stephen Rogers, Gentleman; whoſe Deſcendant, Mr. Jonathan Rogers, was the Poſſeſſor of it in Philpot's Time.

BILSINGTON, lies towards the South-Eaſt Part of the County of Kent, near Romney-Marſh, about Four Miles and a half South-Eaſt from Aſhford; in the Bailiwick and Lath of Shipway, Hundred of New-Church, and Eaſt Diviſion of the County; in the Deanery of Limpne, and Dioceſe of Canterbury.

The Church is dedicated to St. Peter and Paul, and ſtands out of the Liberties of the Marſh. It was appropriated to the Priory here, by Archbiſhop Iſlip.

The Liberty of Romney-Marſh, and of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, claim here. That Part which is not within the Liberty of the Marſh, is in the Diviſion of Juſtices in the Lath of Shipway; the reſt is in the Diviſion of Juſtices of the Corporation of Romney-Marſh.

A Fair is kept here on Midſummer-Day, and is uſually called Woodcock Fair.

As for the Priory here, ſee an Account of it amongſt the Religious Houſes.

Places of Note here.

1. Eaſt-Bilſington, was anciently Part of the Eſtate of John Manſell, a Perſon of great Eminence in King Henry the IIId's Reign; being then Lord Warden of the Cinque-Ports, Conſtable of Dover-Caſtle, Provoſt of Beverley, and Treaſurer of the Church of York. But in the Twenty-ſeventh Year of that Prince, he ſettled his Eſtate here on the Priory, of which he was the Founder, and which he dedicated to the Bleſſed Virgin, and filled with White Remonſtrant Canons, ſaith Philpot. But Kilburn ſaith, they were Black Canons, of the Order of St. Auſtin.

On the Suppreſſion, King Henry the VIIIth granted it to Sir Anthony St. Leger, of Ulcomb: In whoſe Family it continued till Queen Elizabeth; and then his Son, Sir Warham St. Leger, ſold it to Sir Francis Barnham, of London; whoſe Grandſon, Mr. Robert Barnham, was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time. But it is ſince come into the Family of the Riders, of Boughton-Monchelſey.

This Manor holds of the Crown, by the Service of Preſenting to the King Three Maple-Cups on his Coronation-Day; which was performed to King Charles the IId, by Eraſmus Smith, on the Behalf of Mr. Robert Barnham abovementioned.

2. Nether-Bilſington, is a Manor here, which anciently belonged to a Family called Staplegate, of Staplegate in Natingdon. Edmond de Staplegate, about the Middle of K. Edward the IIId, purchaſed it of Richard Fitz Allan, Earl of Arundel, whoſe Anceſtors had it many Years before. His Son and Heir, Edmond de Staplegate, was poſſeſs'd of this Place in the Firſt Year of King Richard the IId, and claimed to be Chief Butler to that Prince at his Coronation; becauſe he held this Manor by the Tenure of Grand Serjeantry, to diſcharge that Office. But to diſanul this Claim, Richard Earl of Arundel exhibits a Petition and Plea, aſſerting that the Office of Chief Butler was never ſo annexed to this Manor: That his Family and Anceſtors had enjoy'd it both before, and ſince the Alienation of it; and therefore demanded it as his Proper Right. The Iſſue was, that the Earl ſhould Officiate at that Time; with a ſalvo jure, that it ſhould not infringe the Right of Staplegate, nor any other that ſhould pretend a Right or Title to it for the future.

But this Manor continued in the Name of Staplegate, till about the Beginning of King Henry the VIth, and then was ſold to Cheyney; and Sir John Cheyney died poſſeſs'd of it, in the Seventh Year of King Edward the IVth. From whom it came down to Henry Lord Cheyney; who about the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, ſold it to Sir Francis Barnham, of London, abovenamed; and in his Grandſon, Mr. Robert Barnham's Poſſeſſion, it continued in Philpot's Time; and is now, as the former, in the Poſſeſſion of the Riders abovementioned; to whom it deſcended, by the Marriage of a Barnham.

BIRCHINGTON, (Birchingſtone,) lies at the North-Eaſt Side of Kent, in the Iſle of Thanet, about Six Miles North and by Weſt from Sandwich; in the Bailiwick of Bridge and Petham, Lath of St. Auſtin, and Eaſt Diviſion of the County. 'Tis a Member of the Town and Port of Dover, and ſo within the Diviſion of Juſtices of the ſame.

The Liberty of St. Auſtin claims there; and that of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury, over as much of it as is in the Manor of Brokes-End; being given to that Church in the 33d Year of K. Henry the VIIIth, by that Prince. But the Liberty of the Cinque-Ports, and of the ſaid Town and Port, claims alſo over the ſame.

'Tis in the Deanery of Weſtbere, and Dioceſe of Canterbury.

In King Henry the VIIIth's Time, being attempted to be aſſeſſed to the Subſidies, as lying in the Foreign; the King annexed it to Dover, by Letters-Patents.

Places of Note in it, are,

1. Gorend, which is in this Pariſh; tho' once it had a Church of its own, which was deſtroyed by the Fall of the Cliffs, it ſtanding very near the Sea: After which the Church of All-Saints was built; which is that now ſtanding.

This Pariſh was called ſometimes Birchington in Gorend; and ſometimes Gorend in Birchington: But now they are all one, and moſt uſually called Birchington.

This Gorend is the firſt Place, as is ſuppoſed, that ever was united to Dover; and hath been ſo ever ſince the Time of King Edward the Firſt.

2. Quekes, was formerly the Seat of an Ancient Family of this Name; by a long Deſcent, coming in King Henry the VIIth's Reign, to John Quekes, and ending in a Daughter of his, who was married to Criſpe of Oxfordſhire; Henry Criſpe, Eſq; of this Family, was Sheriff of Kent in the 28th Year of King Henry the VIIIth, and afterwards Knighted; and, as Philpot ſaith, was ſo eminent here, as to be uſually ſtiled Governor of the Iſle of Thanet. And in the Poſſeſſion of Henry Criſpe, Eſq; a Deſcendant from him, was this Manor in Philpot's Time.

3. Weſtgate, was once Part of the great Eſtate of the Family of Leybourn, of Leybourn-Caſtle. Roger de Leybourn died poſſeſs'd of this Manor, in the Third Year of King Edward the IId: And his Son, of the ſame Name, left an only Daughter, Juliana Leybourn, who was firſt married to John de Haſtings, near Kinſman to Laurence de Haſtings, Earl of Pembroke; and after that, to William de Clinton, Earl of Huntingdon; but ſurvived both her Husbands, and died without Iſſue, in the 43d Year of K. Edward III.

She gave this Weſtgate Eſtate to the Abbey of St. Auſtin in Canterbury, where it ſtay'd till the General Diſſolution; and then King Henry the VIIIth, in his 35th Year, gave it to Sir Thomas Moyle; who not long after ſold it to Bere, a Family of good Note in this Iſland formerly: Richard de Bere being one of the Recognitores Magnæ Aſſiſæ for Kent, in the Second Year of King John.

From this Family it went, about the End of Queen Elizabeth, to Denn of Denn-Hill in Kingſton; whoſe Succeſſor, Mr. Thomas Denn, of Denn-Hill, in King Charles the Firſt's Reign, was Reader of the Middle-Temple, and Recorder of Canterbury; but left only Four Daughters: Of which, Thomaſin married Sir Nicholas Criſpe; Bridget married Sir John Darell, of Cale-Hill; Dorothy was the Wife of Mr. Roger Lucan; and Mary married Vincent Denn, Eſquire. But on the Diviſion of the Eſtate, Weſtgate went with Thomaſin to Sir Nicholas Criſpe.

There was anciently a Pariſh called Wood, or Wood-Church, which was annexed to Birchington: An Account of which ſee below, under Wood, or Wood-Church.

Here was born Stephen de Birchington, a Monk of Canterbury; who compiled a Hiſtory of the Archbiſhops of that See. Vid. Angl. Sacr. Vol. I. in Præfat.

There appears, I think, no Ground for the vulgar Saying, that the Emperor Claudius landed here at Weſtgate. (See Thenet.)

BIRCHOLT,

BIRCHOLT, was formerly a Parish by it self in this County, but the Church is long since demolished; there being none standing since 1578, and but Four Dwelling Houses. Yet it seems to have been once so considerable a Place, as to have denominated Two Hundreds; viz. Bircholt Barony in which it stood, and Bircholt Franchise, which lies a little below it to the South Eastward. It was in the Deanery of Elham, and Lath of Scray. A Rectory, Valued in the King's Books at 2*l.* 10*s.* 10*d.*

BIRLING, (Bearlinges, Berlinges, in Textus Roffensis) lies towards the Middle of Kent by the Medway, about two Miles North from West Malling; in the Bailiwick of Hoo; Hundred of Larkfeild; Lath of Ailesford; West Division of the County, and South Division of Justices in the Lath. In the Diocese of Rochester, and Deanery of Malling. The Church was dedicated to All-Saints. The Church and Chancel are large. In the Glass Windows are the Arms of Nevil, Lord Bergavenny, and Knight of the Garter. The Vicarage is in the Gift of the present Lord Bergavenny, the first Baron in England. Royal Value 6*l.* 9*s.* 6*d.*

This Parish anciently was to contribute to the Repair of the Ninth Arch of Rochester-Bridge.

Kilburn saith, here was a fair Seat belonging to the Lord Bergavenny, which formerly was the Lord Say's.

It appears by Doomsday-Book, that Birling then belonged to one Ralph de Curva Spina or Crookthorn; whose ancient Seat was Comport or Comford, at Comport or Comford Park in this Parish. About the End of King Henry the Second, this Family seems to have been extinct here, and then this Manor came into the Name of Crescie. And William de Crescie had a Grant of Liberties here in the Fifth Year of King John, but they were not long Possessors of it; for in the End of King Henry the Third it was come into the Name of Say. William de Say was engaged in the Cause of Simon de Montfort, Earl of Leicester; after whose Ruin at the Battle of Evesham, this Gentleman was pardoned in the Pacification at Kenelworth, and died possessed of this Estate, in the Twenty-third Year of King Edward the First; as appears by Rot. Esc. P. 48. And in some old Deeds this Place is called Caput, Baroniæ de Say. Jeffrey de Say, this Man's Successor, had View of Frank Pledge here in the Eighth Year of King Edward the Second, and died possess'd of it in the Twenty-third Year of King Edward the Third. From his Son William, who died Ten Years after his Father, it went to his Grandson John de Say; and in two Descents after, it came to Jeffrey Lord Say; who about the End of King Richard the Second, sold it to (a) Richard Fitz Allan, Earl of Arundell, Lord Treasurer, and High Admiral of England; whose Son Thomas Fitz Allan, Earl of Arundell, was also Lord Treasurer, and died Anno 1416, without Issue. But Joan, one of his Sisters, marryed William Beauchamp, who was summoned to Parliament as Baron of Abergevenny, in the Sixteenth Year of King Richard the Second, and carried this Estate to her Husband; whose Son Richard Beauchamp was created Earl of Worcester, Anno 1420, and died without Male-Issue in the Ninth Year of King Henry the Fifth. Elizabeth, his only Daughter, Married Richard Nevil; who in her Right became Baron of Abergevenny, and died possessed of Birling and Comfort Park in the Sixteenth Year of King Edward the Fourth. From him it went to his great Grandson Henry Lord Abergavenny, who dying Childless in the Ninth Year of Queen Elizabeth, gave it to his Kinsman Sir Edward Nevill, who was afterwards Baron of Abergevenny; and in Philpot's Time, his great Grandchild John Nevill, Lord Abergevenny, had this Manor and Park in Possession; and 'tis now in the Possession of the Right Honourable George Nevill, Baron of Bergavenny, the first Protestant Baron of his Family.

(a) Rot. Esc. N. 67.

Camden saith, this was formerly the Barony of the Maminots, and then of the Saies, whose Estate by Females went to the Families of Clinton, Fienes, and Aulton. At this Place, and about Ryarsh, are fine Springs of very good Water.

On Birling-Place being said to be Caput Baroniæ de Say, Philpot takes Occasion to enquire how many Knights Fees made up a Tenure per Baroniam; the common Opinion about which was formerly, that it consisted of Thirteen and a Half. But besides the uncertainty in the Value of the Quantity of Land which make up a Knight's Fee, some asserting it to be 50*l.* some 30*l.* some 25*l.* and the Law-Books generally 20*l. per Annum*, as consisting of Eight Carucates, Sullinges or Plow-Lands; and each of these containing 100 Acres, which anciently was thought as much as could be plowed in one Year by a Team of Oxen: Besides this Uncertainty, I say, the Tenure it self, which is supposed to be compounded of these Knights Fees, is altogether as uncertain. For unless, saith he, it be that Manuscript called Methodus Tenendi Parliamentum, and which is no older than the Reign of King Edward the Third, there is no Record to fix or state it. Walter de Mayney, as appears by the Red Book in the Exchequer, held Twenty Knights Fees, and yet was no Baron. And Walter de Wahull had Thirty, and John de Port Fifty, without that Title. Whereas Roger de Leybourn, who Married the Co-heir of Vipont, and was really a Baron, making a Recognisance of his Service, in the Ninth Year of King Edward the First, (b) had but two Knights Fees. So that it appears, there was no Quantity of Land necessary, to constitute a Barony, but the King by his Writ of Summons called whom he pleased to that Dignity.

The Textus Roffensis mentions Padlesworth as a Chapel to Birling, which see under Padlesworth. But whether Beamlinges, and Beamlingetes, named there, be the same Place with this, or a distinct Parish from it, I can't find enough to determine.

BISHOPSBOURNE, lies towards the East Part of Kent, by the River Stoure, about three Miles South-East from Canterbury; in the Bailiwick of Bridge and Petham. It was anciently in the Hundred of Berham, but now is in that of Kinghamford; Lath of St. Austin, East Division of the County, and Division of Justices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery of Bridge, and Diocese of Canterbury; and the Church is called St. Maries, in which are Memorials of the Hewet's, and of the Auchers, an Ancient Family in these Parts; and Sir Hewet Aucher hath now a very fine new built Brick House in this Parish. 'Tis a Rectory, in the Patronage of the Archbishop of Canterbury; and, with the Chapel of Berham annexed, is rated in the King's Books at 39*l.* 19*s.* 2*d.*

In this Church also is a fine Altar-Piece, and Pulpit; and a fair Monument, with the Effigies of that Excellent Person Richard Hooker, Author of Five Books at least, if not of all, The Laws of Ecclesiastical Polity; who was Rector of this Church, and was Buried here. The Monument was set up for him by Sir William Cowper, with an Epitaph in his Praise in English Verse. But of this Eminent Divine, Mr. Hooker, see a further Account under the Title of Learned and Famous Men in Kent.

The Liberty of the Archbishop of Canterbury claims over the Manor of Bishopsbourn.

1. The Termination of Bourn in the Name of this Place, expresses its being situate upon the River, Brook, or Bourn, which is here the leſſer Stoure; and that is the Caſe of all Places, whoſe Names end in Bourn, buſne or buſn: And probably it was called Biſhopsbourn becauſe it was given to Chriſtchurch in Canterbury, at the Requeſt of Athelard, Archbiſhop of that Province, by Kenulf King of Mercia, Anno Domini 789; though Philpot ſaith, there is a mention in the Charter that it was given to that Church by one Aldham a Citizen of Canterbury. After this, in the Year 84, Archbiſhop Wilfred exchanged Eaſtry for this Bourn, with the Priory of Chriſt-church; and it continued part of the Revenues of that See till King Henry the VIIIth's Reign, and then Archbiſhop Cranmer exchanged it for other Lands with Sir Thomas Colepeper of Bedgebury, who in the Thirty-fourth Year of that King ſold it to Sir Anthony Aucher, the Anceſtor of the preſent Sir Hewet Aucher.

2. Hautsbourn is a Place here, which before it had the Appellation of Haut, gave Name to a Family of the Name of Bourn; for John de Bourn lived here, and had a Charter of Free-Warren granted to him in the Seventeenth Year of King Edward the Firſt. But by a Daughter of that Name, this Eſtate went into the Family of Shelving, and thence it came to be called Shelvingbourn. And in Proceſs of Time, by another Daughter of this Family, who was Married to Edward Haut, it got the preſent Name of Hautsbourn; and it continued in the Family of Haut till about the latter End of King Henry the VIIIth; and then Sir William Haut dying without Male-Iſſue, one of his Daughters (Elizabeth) carried this Manor in Marriage to Sir Thomas Colepeper of Bedgebury; who ſoon after ſold it to Sir Anthony Aucher, the Anceſtor of the preſent Sir Hewet Aucher. And this Family Philpot ſaith are derived from Aucherus, an eminent Saxon, who being Alderman or Governor of Kent, defeated the Danes in a Battle about Sandwich, in this County; of which ſee more in Loſenham a Manor in Newenden, and under the Title of Danes in Kent.

3. Burſted is a Place in Biſhopsbourn, which anciently was written Burghſted, (i. e. the Place of the Barrow) and was the Inheritance of a Family of that Name. But ſince that, for ſeveral Deſcents, it hath been in the Poſſeſſion of Denne, a younger Branch of the Family of the Denns of Denne-Hill in this County; and here it remained in Philpot's Time.

BLACKMANSTONE is a Pariſh, whoſe Church is now demoliſhed, and was ſo in 1530. It lies in Romney-Marſh, about Three Miles Northward from New-Romney, in the Bailiwick and Lath of Shipway, Hundred of Worth, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices of the Corporation of Romney-Marſh; the Liberty whereof claims over the ſame. 'Tis in the Deanery of Limpney, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. 'Tis now a Sine-Cure, in the Gift of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and rated in the King's Books at 4*l. per Annum*.

This Place was formerly the Inheritance of a Family of good Note in theſe Parts, of the Name of Marins or Marings.

Thomas de Marings died poſſeſſed of it in the Twenty-ſixth Year of King Edward the Firſt. But by the End of King Edward the Third, it was got into the Poſſeſſion of the Hauts, of Hautsbourn in Biſhopsbourn. And here it continued a good while; till Joan, one of the Two Daughters, and Co-Heirs of Sir Thomas Haut, carried it in Marriage to Sir Thomas Wiat; who forfeited it, with his Life, to the Crown, in the Second Year of Queen Mary the Firſt; where it lay till Queen Elizabeth, in her Twenty-ninth Year, granted it to Roger Parker, Eſq; who was one of her Pages; and he ſold it to Sir William Hall of Bibrook in Kennington; and his Son Nevill Hall, Eſq; parted with it the ſame way to Sir Edward Hales, Knight and Baronet, whoſe Grandſon Sir Edward Hales of Tunſtal was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

BOBBING lies towards the North ſide of Kent, about a Mile and Half Weſtward from Milton, in that Bailiwick and Hundred, Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and upper one of Juſtices in that Lath.

'Tis in the Deanery of Sittingbourn, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Church is called St. Bartholomews, and was in the Eighteenth Year of King Henry the IIId given by that Prince to the Monaſtry of St. Mary and St. Sexburgh in the Iſle of Sheppey, which Grant was afterwards confirmed by King Henry the Fourth in the firſt Year of his Reign.

A Fair is kept here on Auguſt the 24th, being St. Bartholomew's Feſtival.

In the Church are Ancient Memorials of the Interment of Clifford, and ſeveral of the Family of Savage and Bourn. Of Sir Arnold Savage and his Lady 1410; another Sir Arnold Savage, his Son, 1425; of Joan, Daughter of John Bourn, 1436; Mary Cobbes, Daughter of Sir Edmund Pelham of Catsfeild in Suſſex, 1625; Two Sons of Sir Humphry Tufton, 1657; Henry Sandford, Eſq; 1660, a fair White Marble Monument of him and his Lady. Sir George Moor, Baronet, Married a Sandford, 1678; Poole 1675.

'Tis a Vicarage, and not rated at all in the King's Books.

Places of Note,

Bobbing-Place, or Court, was formerly the Seat of the Illuſtrious Family of Savage. Roger de Savage obtained a Charter of Free-Warren for his Lands at Bobbing, Milſted, and elſewhere, in the Fifth Year of King Edward the IId. His Father, Sir John de Savage, was aſſiſting to King Edward the Firſt at the famous Siege of Carlaverock in Scotland; himſelf and his Brother Thomas Savage being there, were made Knights Bannerets. Sir Arnold Savage, his Grand-Child, was Sheriff of Kent in the Fourth and Ninth Years of King Richard the IId; and was afterwards Speaker of the Parliament, in the Second Year of King Henry the IVth, and Privy-Counſellor to that Prince. His Daughter Eleanor Married Sir Reginald Cobham, but had no Iſſue by him; and afterwards Married William Clifford, Eſq; Son of Sir Lewis Clifford, Knight of the Garter, deſcended from the Cliffords of Clifford-Caſtle in Herefordſhire. He, on the Deceaſe of his Wife's only Brother, Sir Arnold Savage, who died without Iſſue, in her Right, had Poſſeſſion of this Eſtate at Bobbing, and was the Sheriff of Kent in the Fourth Year of King Henry the Vth, as alſo again in the Thirteenth Year of King Henry the VIth. His Deſcendant Robert Clifford, Eſq; who was Brother to Richard Clifford, firſt Arch-Deacon of Canterbury, and then Biſhop of Worceſter and London, was Knight of the Shire for Kent in the Eighth Year of King Henry the IVth. William Clifford above-mentioned, had Two Sons, Lewes and John: Lewes had Iſſue Alexander Clifford, Eſq; who was Sheriff of Kent in the Fifth Year of King Edward the IVth, and lived at Bobbing-Court; and his Son Lewes was alſo in the ſame Poſt in the Thirteenth Year of King Henry the VIIth. His Deſcendant Henry Clifford, Eſq; paſſed away his Intereſt here to Sir Coniers Clifford, and the Lady Mary his Wife (Widow of Southwell). After Clifford's Death ſhe Married Sir Anthony St. Leger of Ireland, by whom ſhe had Sir Anthony St. Leger of Wierton-Houſe in Boughton Montchenſey; who by a Right derived from the Donation of his Mother, divided this Manor of Bobbing between his Two Half Brothers, Henry and Coniers Clifford. But at laſt all joined in a Sale to Sir Edward Duke, of Coſington; and he not long after conveyed it the ſame way to Sir Richard Gurney, of London; and he to his Brother-in-Law, Capt. Henry Sandford, Eſq; Hence, by the Marriage of a Daughter, it came (as I am informed) to Moore; whoſe Widow carried it to Mr. ------ Crawford, Governor of Sheerneſs. He ſold it to Tyndall, who parted with the Houſe to a Carpenter, and he hath ſince pulled it down.

There is another Seat in this Pariſh, which formerly belonged to the Tufton's, but it is now in the Poſſeſſion of one Mr. Soale a Ship-Builder, who dwells in it. It ſeems to be a good old Houſe, but not very large.

BONNINGTON lies towards the South-Eaſt Part of Kent, near Romney-Marſh, about Five Miles South-Eaſt from Aſhford, in the Bailiwick and Lath of Shipway, Hundred of Street, and Eaſt Diviſion of the County. 'Tis in the Deanery of Lympne, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Church ſtands out of the Liberty of the Marſh, and is called St. Rumwolds, becauſe dedicated to a Boy-Saint of that Name, whoſe Story is this (a).

(a) Nov. Legenda Angliæ, Lamb. Peramb. 249.

'Alkfrid, a Pagan King of Northumberland, having Married Kineburgh, a Chriſtian Woman, Daughter to Penda King of Mercia, could not obtain the Enjoyment of her till he turned Chriſtian. He conſented with ſome Difficulty, and was Baptized. Soon after this ſhe proved with Child, and was delivered of a Son on the Road as ſhe was going to pay a Viſit to her Father Penda; the Place was a fair Meadow at Sutton. This Boy, as ſoon as ever he was Born, cried out, with a Voice as loud as Garagantua's on the ſame Occaſion, and Three Times together, I am a Chriſtian. And having made this early Declaration he went on accordingly, and made a Fair, Plain, and full Confeſſion of his Faith; deſired to be Baptized, choſe his Godfathers, named himſelf Rumwalde, and pointed to the Standers by to fetch him a great Hollow-Stone which ſtood hard by, to ſerve him for a Font. They endeavoured to fetch him the Stone but were not able to move it. When this forward Youth perceived that, he order'd his Godfathers who were Two ſtrong Prieſts, to go and fetch it, which they eaſily did. In this Font, thus miraculouſly brought, was our young Saint Baptized; after which he diſcourſed with great Learning and Knowledge about the Popiſh Religion; and then, bequeathing his Body to remain at Sutton one Year, at Brackley two, and then at Buckingham for ever after; at the End of three Days he died.

What Tricks were play'd with a Stone Image of this Baby Saint, you will find in my Account of Boxley-Abbey.

The Liberty of Romney-Marſh claims in ſome Parts of this Pariſh, and therefore they are in the Diviſion of Juſtices of the Corporation of the Marſh, but the Reſt is in the Diviſion of Juſtices of the Lath of Shipway.

Here was a Court-Leet uſually held for the Burghs of Bonnington and Hamme, at which the Borſholders of thoſe Burghs were Elected; but it had been diſcontinued about 77 Years in Kilburn's Time, viz. A. D. 1659; only the Memory of it is continued by a great old Oak ſtanding in the High-Way, and now called the Lawday-Oak, becauſe the Court-Leet was kept there. The Pariſh is a Rectory; and the Royal Value 10*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

1. The Manor of Bonnington anciently belonged to the Knights Templars; and when that Order was ſuppreſſed in the Second Year of King Edward the IId, about Fifteen Years after it was ſettled on the Knights Hoſpitallers of St. John at Jeruſalem, and in their Poſſeſſion it ſtaid till the general Diſſolution of the Monaſtries, and then was in the Thirty-fifth Year of King Henry the VIIIth granted to Sir Thomas Moyle, who not long after ſold it to Sir James Hales of the Dungeon near Canterbury; and his Deſcendant Sir James Hales, exchanged it for other Lands with Sir Chriſtopher Mann of Canterbury, who had with it the Advowſon of the Living.

2. Singleton is another Manor here, which anciently had Owners of the Name of the Pariſh, for Nicholas Bonnington paid Aid for it at making the Black-Prince Knight. Next it came by Purchaſe into the Breſlands Poſſeſſion, a Family which had a plentiful Eſtate in Eaſt Kent, and held it about the End of King Henry the IVth, and then ſold it to Cobbe, whoſe Arms were in the Glaſs Windows of Bonnington and Limne (b). But about the beginning of Queen Elizabeth, Edward Cobbe, Eſq; leaving an only Daughter Alice, ſhe carried it in Marriage to Sir John Norton of Northwood. Hence it went by Sale to White, whoſe Deſcendant was the Poſſeſſor of it in Philpot's Time.

BORDEN lies towards the North-ſide of the Middle of Kent, about two Miles and a Half South-Weſtward from Milton, in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Milton, Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and upper one of Juſtices in that Lath. In the Deanery of Sittingbourn, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Church is dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul, of three Iſles, a low Tower, and no Steeple. In it are Memorials of Fyge about 200 Years ſince, of Nicholas Jove, 1587; and two Monuments, one for Dr. Robert Plott, who wrote the Natural Hiſtories of Oxford and Staffordſhire, and another of his Father: And alſo of one Mr. Barrow, who gave a Charity to the Poor here, not taking Alms, of about 400*l. per Annum*, and this is now eſtabliſhed by a Decree in Chancery.

'Tis a Vicarage in the Gift of Sir Benjamin Tichbourn of Herefordſhire, and Valued in the King's Books at 8*l.* 7*s.*

Places of Note here.

1. Criols and Poyles are two Manors here, which were always united together, and were formerly part of the great Eſtate of Bertram de Criol; whoſe Son (John) dying without Iſſue, Joan his Siſter became his Heir, and carried theſe Manors in Marriage to Sir Richard Rokeſley. But he left alſo only one Daughter (Joan), who carried it the ſame way to her Husband, Thomas de Poynings; and in this Name it continued till the Twelfth Year of King Henry the VIIIth, and then Sir Edward Poynings dying without any lawful Iſſue, or Kindred, that could claim his Eſtate, it eſcheated to the Crown, and was granted to Sir Thomas Wiat, who loſt it by Attainder in the Second Year of Queen Mary. But Queen Elizabeth reſtored it again to his Son George Wiat, Eſq; but it was only for Life; for King James the Firſt afterwards granted the Reverſion, in the Sixteenth Year of his Reign, to Thomas Hooker and John Spencer, Gent.; who afterwards joined in a Fine, and ſettled it on the Heirs of the aforeſaid Mr. George Wiat: And in King Charles the Firſt's Time, Sir Francis Wiat was found to be the proper Heir; who, with his Lady's Conſent, ſold it to Mr. Iſaac Seward, the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

Sutton-Barne is a ſmall Manor in this Pariſh, which in King Edward the IId's Reign, was in the Poſſeſſion of Sir John Savage, and who had a Charter of Free-Warren for his Eſtate here. But by an Heir-General of this Family it went with with Bobbing to the Cliffords, and in that Name continued till the End of King Henry the VIIIth, and then was paſſed away to Platt (ſo Philpot writes the Name) Anceſtor to Mr. Platt of Borden, the Father of Dr. Platt; and the Widow of the Doctor is now in Poſſeſſion of it.

BORESFEILD, (Bordfeild or Bourdfeild) in the Hundred of Eyhorne, was formerly a Pariſh by it ſelf; the Ruins of the Church and Church-Yard being yet viſible in Philpot's Time. But of late it hath been incorporated into Otterden or Ottringden (which ſee) and is now accounted only as a Hamlet in that Pariſh.

Boresfeild did once, for many Deſcents, belong to the Lords Cobham of Sterborough; but in the Eleventh Year of King Edward the IVth, by Anne, Daughter of Thomas Lord Cobham, it went in Marriage to Edward Borough, who in her Right became Lord Borough of Sterborough. But his Grandſon, Thomas Lord Borough, in the Twenty-fifth of Queen Elizabeth, ſold it to John Pakenham, who not long after alienated it to John Lewin, Eſq; by a Daughter of which Family it went to Rogers of Somerſetſhire; and by another Daughter of that Name, it became the Poſſeſſion of Charles Cavendiſh, Viſcount Mansfeld, and Heir to William, Created Duke of New-Caſtle at Oxford by King Charles the Firſt.

BOREHAM, (Burham, Burgham,) in the Textus Roffenſis, Burcham; lies towards the Middle of Kent, by the Medway, about three Miles and a half South from Rocheſter, in the Bailiwick of Hoo, Hundred of Larkfeild, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and South one of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery and Dioceſe of Rocheſter. The Church is called St. Maries; is ſmall, but hath a large Tower. In it are no Inſcriptions nor Monuments, but of Robert Ware, 1506. Remains of ſome painted Glaſs in the Windows. The Church ſtands alone down by the ſide of the River, with only one Houſe by it called the Court-Lodge, becauſe no doubt the Court-Baron uſed to be held here.

In the Conqueror's Time, this Place was in the Poſſeſſion of Ralph Crookthorn, (or de Curva Spina,) and afterwards in that of Jeffry de Say, who died poſſeſſed of it in the Twenty-third Year of King Edward the Firſt. And in this Family it continued, and was eſteemed as Part of their Barony of Birling. But by Joan, one of the Heirs of Jeffery Lord Say, in King Richard the IId's Time, it went in Marriage to Sir William Fiennes; and by another Heir General of Fiennes Lord Dacres, it went to Leonard. And William Leonard, Son and Heir of Francis Leonard, a Younger Branch of that Houſe in Philpot's Time, ſold it to Mr. Francis Barnham, and Mr. John Maplesden.

Formerly there was a Fountain in this Pariſh (ſaith Philpot) at a Place called Haly or Haly-Garden, which was accounted mighty Sacred by the Common-People, and had very uncommon Virtues aſcribed to it. And in the Seventeenth Year of King Richard the IId, the Fryars Carmelites of Aylesford, obtained a Grant by Letters Patents to bring the Water from Haly-Garden into their Monaſtry; which ſhews its Reputation to have been very eminent.

The Pariſh is a Vicarage, and rated in the King's Books at 8*l. per Annum*.

BOUGHTON-ALUPH, Bocton Aluſe, Aluph, lies towards the South-Eaſt Part of Kent, by the greater Stoure, about a Mile and a half from Wye towards the North-Weſt. 'Tis in the Bailiwick of Chart and Longbridge, Hundred of Wye, Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in the Lath of Shipway.

The Liberty of Wye claims over it; and 'tis in the Deanery of Bridge, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Church is called All-Saints, and hath a Low Tower ſtanding on Four Pillars in the Middle of the Church. 'Tis a Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 6*l.* 4*s.* 10*d.* The Church is fair and large, of three Iſles in Length, and a Croſs-one, a good Chancel. In it are Memorials of ſeveral of the Families of Moyle and Buckwell; who Married into the Families of Toke, Fotherby and Clerk, as alſo of Auſtin, who Married a Gyles of Shelvich.

The Patron of the Church is Mr. Moyle Britain, and he had it by the Marriage of a Moyle.

Places of Note here.

1. The Manor of Boughton, or Bocton, had the Addition of Aluph, from one Alulfus a Saxon, who was the Owner of it in the time of the Heptarchy. After the Conqueſt it came into the Family of Burgherſt, now vulgarly called Burwaſh. Robert de Burgherſt died poſſeſſed of it in the Thirty-third Year of King Edward the Firſt; and was one of thoſe that attended on that Victorious Prince, at the famous Siege of Carlaverick in Scotland. His Son Stephen de Burgherſt, had a Charter of Free-Warren for this Manor in the Firſt Year of King Edward the IIId; and was a Man of ſo much Note, that he had the Conduct of King Edward's Army at the Battle of Creſſey, and he was ſummoned to ſit in Parliament as a Baron. His Son Bartholomew Lord Burgherſt, was Lord Chamberlain of the Houſehold to that Prince, and often ſummoned as a Peer to Parliament. But in the Forty-third Year of King Edward the IIId, he ſold this Eſtate to Walter de Pavely; who in the beginning of King Richard the IId ſent it the ſame way to Trivet; and Sir Thomas Trivet, in the Fifteenth Year of King Richard the IId, ſold it to Lewis Clifford; one of whoſe Deſcendants Lewis Clifford, Eſq; by a Fine Levied in the Twelfth Year of King Henry the VIth, conveyed it to William Wenlock; and he not long after ſold it to the Right Honourable Richard Beauchamp, Baron of Bergavenny; whoſe Son, of the ſame Name, left only one Daughter Elizabeth, who by Marrying with Edward Nevil, carried this Eſtate and that Title to that Family, in which the latter now continues. But about the End of King Henry the VIIIth's Reign this Manor was alienated to Sir Thomas Moyle; who dying without Iſſue Male, his Daughter Catherine carried it in Marriage to her Husband Sir Thomas Finch, in the Deſcendants of which Family it continued in Philpot's Time, and I ſuppoſe doth ſtill, being part of the Eſtate of the Earl of Winchelſea.

Seaton, Ulley, and Potberry, are three ſmall Manors in this Pariſh; the firſt of which held of the Crown in Grand Serjeantry by the Service of being Regius Vantarius quando Rex iverit in Vaſconiam, donec peruſas fuerit Pari Solutarum Pretio 4*d* (a). i. e. "To be the King's Precurſor "or Forefoot-Man when he ſhall go into Gaſ- "cony, until he ſhall have worn out a Pair of "Shoes of 4*d.* Price. And Blunt ſaith, that he was alſo to Lead three Grey-hounds.

All theſe Three Manors were once part of the Eſtate of the Criols: For Bertram de Criol died ſeized of them in the Twenty-third Year of King Edward the Firſt; and his only Daughter Joan carried them in Marriage to Richard de Rokeſley, and by Defect of Iſſue Male in him, his Daughter Joan tranſplanted them the ſame way to Thomas de Poynings. In this Family they ſtaid till King Richard the IId's Reign, and then by Eleanor, a Daughter of the Poyning's Family, it went to Henry Earl of Northumberland, one of whoſe Succeſſors in the Twenty-third Year of King

K. Henry the VIIIth alienated them to Sir Thomas Cheyney, William Walſingham, and William Fitz Williams; and they joined in a Sale to Sir Chriſtopher Hales, whoſe Son Sir James ſold them to Sir Thomas Moyle, by whoſe Daughter they went to Finch, as the Manor of Boughton abovementioned did.

3. Buckwell here is no Manor, was once the Seat of a Family of the Name of Bekewel: Henry Bekewell dying poſſeſſed of it in the Tenth Year of King Edward III. After this it came into the Name of Wode, and tarried there till about the Twenty-fourth Year of King Henry the VIth; and then by Robert Wode it was ſold to John Moile, Eſq; in whoſe Family it continued in Philpot's Time.

The Manor belonging to it was of old the Inheritance of the Burghurſts. But Bartholomew Lord Burgherſt, Knight of the Garter in the Forty-third Year of King Edward the IIId ſold it to Sir Walter de Pavely, Knight alſo of the ſame Order; and he parted with it the ſame way to Sir Robert Belknop, on whoſe Impeachment for High Treaſon in King Richard the IId's Time, it was forfeited to the Crown, and by that King was ſettled on the Dean and Prebendaries of Weſtminſter. And upon the Diſſolution King Henry the VIIIth granted it to John Moyle, Eſq; in whom it remained with the Seat of Buckwell in Philpot's Time.

Barton is another Manor, partly ſituate in this Pariſh, and partly in Wye, and had once Owners of the Name of Barton, who held it till King Henry the VIth's Reign, and then it was ſold to Kempe the Cardinal, who ſettled it on his New College of Wye, and there it ſtaid till the general Diſſolution of the Abbeys; and in the Twenty-Ninth Year of King Henry the VIIIth was granted to Sir Thomas Moyle, who parted with it to his Brother Mr. Walter Moyle; and his Deſcendant Mr. Robert Moyle was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

5. Wilmington, is another Ancient Manor and Seat in this Pariſh, which formerly belonged to the Family of Corby; for Robert de Corby died poſſeſs'd of it, in the 39th Year of King Edward the IIId. Afterwards it went into the Name of Chivaler; William Chivaler dying ſeized of it, in the Firſt Year of King Richard the Second.

Next it came into the Poſſeſſion of John Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk; who dying in the Battel of Boſworth Field (1486) without Iſſue, it eſcheated to the Crown; where it ſtay'd, till King Edward the VIth granted it to Paget; and thence it was ſold to Barrow, the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

When I ſaw this Church, I could not but take notice of a Braſs-Plate over a good, honeſt, Orthodox Vicar here, on which was this Inſcription;

Credo ſicut Mater Eccleſia tenetur credere, & credit.

BOUGHTON under the Blean, (Bocton, Boctune,) lies towards the North-Eaſt Part of Kent, about Two Miles and a half South-Eaſtward from Feverſham; in the Bailiwick and Lath of Scray, Hundred of Boughton under the Blean, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Upper one of Juſtices in that Lath.

It is in the Deanery of Oſpringe, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; and the Church is dedicated to St. Peter and Paul. In which are, or were Monuments, of the Interment of Golkins and Beſt, about 250 Years ago; and ſeveral Memorials of the Family of Petit, and of Farewell.

The Church is impropriate to the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury; Archbiſhop Patron. A Vicarage, Rated in the King's Books, at 9 l. 4 s. 8 d. ½.

The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims over the Manor of Boughton; for it appears by the Conqueror's Survey, that this Manor did then belong to that Prelate.

Places here of Note, are,

1. Boughton, or Bocton-Court, did anciently belong to a Family of this Name, whoſe Seat was here. For it appears by Old Deeds, that John de Bocton held this Eſtate, in the Reigns of King Edward the IId, and King Edward the IIId. Afterwards, from the Swayfords, (who were Proprietors of it,) it took the Name of Swayford. And from them, it went into the Poſſeſſion of the Bingers, (afterwards called Bengers,) and from whom the Bengers of Hougham were derived. After it had ſtaid in this Name from the Beginning of King Henry the Vth, to that of King Henry the VIIth, it went to the Hales; and from thence, by Sale, to Wood; and from that Name, the ſame way, to Rowth. And Sir John Rowth was in Poſſeſſion of it in Philpot's Time.

2. Butlers, alias Brinley, or Brenley; once the Seat of Sir Laurence de Brinley, who lived here in King Edward the Firſt's Time. And in this Family the Eſtate continued for many Deſcents; but at length was ſold by one of them to John Roper, a Younger Brother of the Ropers of St. Dunſtan's; in whoſe Poſterity it ſtay'd a while, and then (by a Daughter) went into the Name of Ayres; and thence, by a Daughter alſo, to the Family of the Rowths; and was in Philpot's Time, in the Poſſeſſion of Sir John Rowth, deſcended from the Rowths of Derbyſhire; who lies buried in the South-Chancel, with a fair Monument. By one of whoſe Daughters, (Margaret) who married a Bois, it was deviſed by Will to John Farewell, Eſq; deſcended from an Ancient and Knightly Family of that Name in Somerſetſhire; and his Deſcendant, George Farewell, Eſq; is the preſent Poſſeſſor.

3. Naſh-Court, in this Pariſh, is a very Ancient Seat, and for ſome Hundreds of Years was the Reſidence of the Hawkins; and deſcended regularly down into the Poſſeſſion of Sir Thomas Hawkins, who tranſlated Cauſſinus's Holy Court out of French into Engliſh.

In the Church is a fair Monument, with Two Figures, of Sir Thomas Hawkins, and his Lady, who was a Petyt; 1616.

Another Tomb of Hawkins; 1587.

4. Colkins, which was built by John Colkin, originally a Citizen of Canterbury; and he died poſſeſs'd of it, in the 10th Year of King Edward the IIId, as Philpot ſaith. Several of this Family lie interr'd in the Church of Boughton: Their Arms, a Griffin Segreant. William Colkin, and Anne his Wife, lie buried here, A. D. 1460. And not long after their Deceaſe, this Eſtate was ſold to Henry Petyt, Father to Cirjacus, or Sidrach Petyt; who drew a Survey of all the Manors in Kent, which held of the Crown, in the 28th Year of King Henry the VIIIth; of one of whoſe Family, Colkins was ſtill the Inheritance in Philpot's Time.

5. Dane-Court, was anciently the Poſſeſſion of Sir Allan de Dane, who reſided here in King Edward the IIId's Time. And this Eſtate ſeems to have continued here, till about the Reign of King Henry the IVth; and then it came to be the Inheritance of Fogg; and Sir John Fogg died poſſeſſed of it, in the 17th Year of King Henry the VIIth. But his Son, Sir John Fogg, ſold it to Petyt of Colkins; in whoſe Family it remained in Philpot's Time.

In the VIIIth Year of King Richard the IId, here was an Hoſpital, and a Chapel founded by Thomas At-Hurſt; and dedicated to St. Nicholas, for the Uſe of Lazars, and poor Leprous People.

The Blean was formerly accounted a Foreſt, having wild Boars and Bears in it; and was much larger, extending to Harbledown. One Part of it (viz. Boſingdene) was bought by Clarenbald, firſt Abbot of Feverſham, for the Uſe of the Abbey; and continued with it till the Diſſolution.

This Pariſh was at firſt a Rectory; and was by Hamon de Crevequer given to Cokyn's Hoſpital in Canterbury; and the Donation was confirmed by Stephen Langton, Archbiſhop of Canterbury. But afterwards, A. D. 1375, Simon Sudbury, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, founded here a Perpetual Vicarage.

The Church is large and fair, with Three Iſles, and a good Stone-Tower; on which formerly ſtood a Spire, but not many Years ago it fell down.

BOUGHTON-MALHERBE, alias Bocton Malherbe, lies near the Middle of the County, about a Mile and a half Southward from Lenham, in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Eyeborn, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Eaſt one of the Juſtices in that Lath. In the Dioceſe of Canterbury, and Deanery of Charing.

The Church is dedicated to St. Nicholas; Mr. Stanhope, Rector; Earl of Cheſterfield, Patron.

Kilburn thinks this Place took its Name from the bad Paſturage hereabouts. But certain it is, there was an Eminent Family of this Name in Devonſhire: For Philpot finds Sir William de Malherb, Witneſs to a Deed of Reginald de Mohun, by which he gives much Land to the Abbey of Axminſter. Vid. Pat. 14. Hen. III. Memb. 33. parte primâ. But whether that Gentleman had ever any Concerns here, appears not.

In King Henry the IIId's Time, this Place was Part of the Eſtate of Robert de Gatton; whoſe Father, Robert de Gatton, was one of the Recognitores Magnæ Aſſiſæ, in the Second Year of King John. This Gentleman dying in the 48th Year of King Henry the IIId, left it to his Son, Hamo de Gatton; whoſe Daughter and Co-heir Elizabeth, carried this Manor to William de Dene; who in the 10th Year of King Edward the IId, obtained a Charter of Free-Warren for his Lands here: But not long after he ſold it to Robert Corby; who in the 36th Year of King Edward the IIId, had a Royal Licenſe to build here, after a fortified manner, (Kernellare and Turrellare, are the Words of the Grant;) the Manor-Houſe at Boughton. He therefore, no doubt, built that very large and magnificent Houſe, the Ruins of which now only remain: But by the Hall, and a Dining-Room, which are ſtill ſtanding, it appears to have been a Noble Houſe. They uſed to ſhew a Room, where Queen Elizabeth lay for ſome Time, about the Year 1588.

His Son and Heir, Richard Corby, left only a Daughter, (Joan,) who married Sir Nicholas Wotton, who was twice Lord-Mayor of London; viz. in the Years 1416, and 1431; and lies buried in this Church. In which Eminent Family it deſcended, till it came to Thomas Lord Wotton; whoſe Lady Dowager, Mary, was Daughter, and one of the Coheirs of Sir Arthur Throgmorton, of Paulers Perry in Northamptonſhire, and had this Eſtate in Jointure. But her Right in this Manor, and Colbridge, (in this Pariſh) are transferr'd to her Eldeſt Daughter, the Lady Katherine Stanhope; in which Family of Cheſterfield it ſtill continues.

Of this Family of the Wottons, was Nicholas Wotton, L. L. D. who was Privy-Councellor to King Henry the VIIIth, Edward the VIth, and the Two ſucceeding Queens; was Nine times Ambaſſador in Foreign Courts; and Thrice employ'd in a Treaty of Peace, between the Engliſh, French, and Scots. Sir Edward Wotton alſo, his Nephew's Son, was Lord Comptroller to Queen Elizabeth; and created Baron Wotton of Merlay, by King James I.

Kilburn ſaith, that the Archbiſhops of Canterbury were ſometime Owners of the Manor of Boughton.

Wormſell was always an Appendant to this Manor.

Places here of Note, are,

1. Colbridge-Caſtle, under the Hill towards Hedcorn, is now quite demoliſhed; but in King Henry the IIId's Time belonged to Sir Fulke Peyforer, who had a Royal Licenſe to fortify and embattel his Manſion-Houſe at Colbridge. But the Dering MS. ſaith, the Caſtle here was built in King Edward the IIId's Time, by one Colebridge; whoſe Succeſſors not having Male-Iſſue, gave it to St. Stephen's in Weſtminſter.

After ſome Time, this Place came into the Poſſeſſion of Roger Lord Leybourn; whoſe ſole Heir, Juliana Leybourn, carried it (by Marriage) to William Clinton, Earl of Huntingdon; who dying in the 28th Year of King Edward the IIId, without Iſſue, and his Lady alſo having no Heir, it eſcheated to the Crown: And ſo King Richard the IId, in the 21ſt Year of his Reign, granted it to the Royal Chapel of St. Stephen in Weſtminſter; where it continued till the Diſſolution. After which, in the Second Year of King Edward the VIth, it was granted to Sir Edward Wotton; from whence it went, with the other Eſtate here, into the Cheſterfield Family.

I was told here, that the Stones of Colebridge-Caſtle were uſed to build,

2. Chilſton, or Bocton-Place, an Eminent Seat and Manor in this Pariſh, which was (in the 55th Year of K. Henry the IIId,) the Eſtate of Henry Huſſey, who had then a Charter of Free-Warren granted for it. His Grandſon, Henry, died poſſeſs'd of it alſo, in the 6th Year of King Edward the IIId. And in this Family it long continued; till Henry Huſſey, Eſq; at laſt ſold it to John Parkhurſt: Whoſe Succeſſor, Sir William Parkhurſt, alienated it to Richard Northwood; and his Son, Alexander Northwood, ſold it to Cleggat; and he ſoon to Mr. Manley of London: And he, not long after, convey'd it to Mr. Edward Hales, Grandſon to Sir Edward Hales, of Tunſtall, Knight and Baronet. Whence, by Sale, it became the Seat of William Hamilton, Eſq; Brother to the Right Honourable the Earl of Abercorn. His Mother, the Honourable Mrs. Hamilton, purchaſed it, and ſettled it on the Family; as She did alſo the Manor of Lenham. Mr. Hamilton, by building good Part of it anew, and by making a fine Canal, and good Walks and Gardens, hath very much improved and beautified it.

In the South Iſle of the Chancel, is a very old Figure of a Man in Armour, with a Shield and a great Sword; and lying croſs-legg'd, like a Knight-Templar, or one under the Vow of the Cruſado at leaſt; with his Lady lying by him. The People call him Colebrook; and ſay he lived at Colebridge-Caſtle: But 'tis very probable, 'tis either Sir Fulke Peyforer himſelf, or a Son of his.

There are Memorials in the Church, of,

Dr. Lionel Sharp, Chaplain to Queen Elizabeth, Prince Henry, and King James the Iſt. He died in the Year 1630.

Of Sir Thomas Wotton; [Argent a Saltre engrailed Sable].

3. Beaulies, is a Manor in this Pariſh, which came the ſame way with Chilſton abovemention'd, into the Poſſeſſion of William Hamilton, Eſq; as ſhould have been mentioned above.

BOUGHTON-MONCHELSEA, or Monchenſie; vulgarly called Boughton-Quarry, on the Account of the great Quantity of good Free-ſtone, here dug up and wrought.

It lies about the Middle of Kent, Three Miles Southward from Maidſtone; in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Eyhorn, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Eaſt one of Juſtices in that Lath. The Liberties of St. Auſtin, and of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury, claim here.

'Tis in the Deanery of Sutton, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; and the Church is dedicated to St. Peter. 'Tis a Vicarage, in the Gift of the Church of Rocheſter, who are the Impropriators. Value in the King's Books, 7 l. 13 s. 4 d. per Annum.

Places of Note here;

1. The Manor of Boughton Monchenſey, was once the Poſſeſſion of an Eminent Family of the Name of Monchenſey, and from whence this Pariſh of Boughton had this Name of Diſtinction: For the common Pronunciation of Monchelſea is a Corruption.

The principal Seat of the Monchenſeys (in Latin, De Monte-Caniſio) was at Swanſcombe, in this County; where a larger Account will be given of them. Tho' they had this Manor early, yet they parted with it in the Beginning of King Henry's Reign, to the Houghams, of Hougham by Dover. And Robert de Hougham died poſſeſs'd of it, in the 23d Year of King Henry the IIId: Whoſe Son (of the ſame Name) leaving only Daughters, one of them (Bennet) carried this Eſtate in Marriage to John de Shelving. But this Name here alſo ended in Two Daughters, Helen and Joan: The former of which married John de Bourn; and the latter John Brampton, alias Detling, of Detling-Court. Before the End of K. Richard the IId, the Family of Bourn ended in a Daughter, who was married to Haut, of Hauts-Place in Petham; by which Match, Edward Haut held ſome Part of this Manor, in the 8th Year of King Henry the IVth. But towards the End of King Henry the VIth's Reign, it was got into the Poſſeſſion of Reginald Peckham, Eſquire.

The other Part of this Eſtate, which went to Brampton, by a Daughter (Bennet Brampton, alias Detling) went to Thomas At-Town, of Town-Place: Who left Three Daughters, by one of which (her Name Bennet alſo) it devolved in Marriage to William Wotton, of Addington; who convey'd his Part to Reginald Peckham abovementioned: And his Son's Widow died poſſeſs'd of the entire Manor, in the 7th Year of King Henry VII.

Her Son, Thomas Peckham, left another called Reginald Peckham; who about the End of King Henry the VIIIth's Reign, ſold it to Sir Thomas Wyat; and he, not long after, ſent it the ſame way to Robert Rudſton, Eſq; of whoſe Family there are Two Monuments in the Church here. But Rudſton himſelf, by being concerned with Wyat in his Rebellion, forfeited it to the Crown. But he was reſtored to it again by Q. Mary; and much improved the Ancient Seat here, by new Buildings, in the Years 1565, and 1576. His Son, Belknap Rudſton, Eſq; ſettled it by his laſt Will and Teſtament on his Kinſman, Sir Francis Barnham. From whoſe Deſcendants, it came by Marriage into the Family of Rider; and is now the Seat of Sir Barnham Rider.

'Tis a good Houſe, and the Situation very pleaſant, having a very fine Proſpect from it, into the Wild of Kent and Suſſex. You may ſee from the Hills of Folkſtone, as far as Tunbridge, a vaſt Plain underneath you, adorned with beautiful Woods, and enriched with Encloſures of ſome of the beſt Land in England.

2. Wierton-Houſe, is a Seat here, which took its Name from Adam de Wierton, (as Philpot ſaith) who was Poſſeſſor of it in the Reign of King Henry the IIId; and his Family continued here till about the latter end of King Richard the IId, and then it was ſold to Robert Purſe. And probably, either this very Man, or his Son of the ſame Name, (for he was Poſſeſſor of this Place) lies buried in this Church, in the North Iſle, 1452, and was a great Benefactor to it: For he built that North Iſle, and the Belfrey; and his Picture was in the Glaſs-Windows there, till deſtroyed by the Ignorant Zealots in the late Civil Wars. And there is ſtill remaining a Hand, holding a Purſe; which was either his Coat of Arms, by way of Rebus, as the Heralds call it; or rather perhaps an Alluſion to his Bounty, as well as to his Name.

But this Seat ſtay'd not long in this Name after this, before Robert Purſe ('tis likely the Benefactor's Son) ſold it to Richard Norton; whoſe Wife (Margaret) lies buried under the Seat, or Pew belonging to Wierton-Houſe, 1407. In this Family this Houſe continued, till King Charles the Firſt's Reign; and then was ſold to Sir Anthony St. Leger, of Ireland; whoſe Son, of the ſame Name, was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

3. Holbrook, is a Place here, which anciently belonged to a Family of the Name of Halebrook, who held it in Poſſeſſion till about the Beginning of King Henry the Fifth's Reign; and then ſome how, it came to be the Eſtate of the Hauts, of Hautsbourn: Where it ſtay'd till about the End of King Henry the Eighth; and then William Haut leaving only Two Daughters, One of them (Joan) carried it in Marriage to Sir Thomas Wyat. But in King Edward the Sixth's Reign, he and his Lady joined in a Sale of it to Smith; one of whoſe Deſcendants was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

BOXLEY, (in the Textus Roffenſis, Boxle, and Boxele;) lies near the Middle of Kent, about Two Miles Northward from Maidſtone; in the Bailiwick of Eyborn, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Eaſt one of Juſtices in that Lath.

The Liberty of Maidſtone claimeth over it.

'Tis alſo in the Deanery of Sutton, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; and the Church is called All-Saints. 'Tis a ſmall one; but neat. The Stairs are remaining ſtill, that led formerly up to a Rood-Loft, as is common in ſeveral Churches in this County.

'Tis a Vicarage, Rated in the King's Books at 12 l. 10 s. 2 d. in the Gift of the Church of Rocheſter; to which the Great Tythes are impropriated. The Incumbent, Mr. Thomas Sprat, Archdeacon of Rocheſter, hath built here a new Vicarage-Houſe very neat. In the Garden is a ſmall Canal, and two Caſcades of Water, which come from a lovely Spring, iſſuing out of the Bottom of the Chalk-Hills. This Spring hath what they uſually call a great petrifying Faculty; i. e. it will cruſt over ſuch Bodies as are thrown into it, with a ſtony Caſe, or fill up their Pores with ſtony Particles. And yet they find no Inconvenience in uſing it for Brewing, Culinary Uſes, and Drinking it alone. But of this more in the Natural Hiſtory Part.

In the Chancel of the Church, are Monuments of the Family of Wyat; and Memorials of Grimſtone, Thurnham, Higford, Charlton; and of William Surlt, 1451.

In this Pariſh, on Pinnenden (now corruptly called Pickenden) Heath, is the Houſe where the County-Court is uſually held: And here the Gentlemen of the County and the Freeholders meet, to chuſe Knights of the Shire for Kent; tho' ſometimes they take the Poll at Maidſtone. And here, in King William the Iſt's Reign, was a mighty Aſſembly of the Nobility and Biſhops, to determine ſome Conſiderable Matters in Diſpute, between Lanfranc Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and Odo Biſhop of Bayon, the Conqueror's Brother. The whole Proceſs is recorded in our Famous MS. called the Textus Roffenſis, with this Title:

And tho' this hath been printed already two or three times, by Dugdale (a), Selden (b), Wharton (c), and in part by Dr. Hickes in his Theſaurus; yet is it ſo Remarkable a Tranſaction, ſo Uſeful and Curious a Piece of Antiquity, that I doubt not of the Reader's Thanks, for giving it him here, in the Account of the Place where this Famous Meeting was held.

Poſtea verò, non multo tempore, contigit præfatum Lanfrancum, Cadomenſis Eccleſiæ Abbatem, juſſu Regis in Angliam quoq; venire; atq; in Archiepiſcopatum Cantuarberiæ, Domino diſponente, totius Angliæ Regni Primatem ſullimatum eſſe. Ubi dum aliquandiu reſideret, & antiquas Eccleſiæ ſuæ terras multas ſibi deeſſe inveniret; & ſuorum negligentia Anteceſſorum illas diſtributas atque diſtractas fuiſſe reperiſſet; diligenter inquiſitâ & bene cognitâ veritate, Regem quam citiùs potuit, & non pigrè inde requiſivit.

Præcepit ergo Rex Comitatum totum, abſque morâ conſidere; & homines comitatus omnes Francigenas, & precipuè Anglos, in antiquis Legibus & Conſuetudinibus peritos in unum convenire. Qui cum convenerunt apud Pinendenam, omnes pariter conſederunt.

Et quum multa Placita de Diratiocinationibus terrarum & verba de Conſuetudinibus Legum, inter Archiepiſcopum & prædictum Baiocenſem Epiſcopum, ibi ſurrexerunt: Et etiam inter Conſuetudines Regales & Archiepiſcopales, quæ primâ die expediri non potuerunt, eâ cauſâ totus Comitatus per tres dies fuit ibi detentus.

In illis tribus diebus, diratiocinavit ibi Lanfrancus Archiepiſcopus plures terras, quas tunc tenuerunt homines ipſius Epiſcopi; viz. Herbertus filius Juonis, Turoldus de Hroveceſtriâ, Radulfus de Curvâ Spinâ, & alij plures de hominibus ſuis; cum omnibus Conſuetudinibus & Rebus quæ ad eaſdem terras pertinebant; ſuper ipſum Baiocenſem Epiſcopum, & ſuper ipſos prædictos homines illius: Et alios, ſcilicet Detlinges, Eſtoces, Preſtuna, Danituna, & multas alias minutas terras.

Et ſuper Hugonem de Monte forti dirutiocinavit Hrocinges & Broc:

Et ſuper Radulfum de Curvâ Spind, 60 Solidatas de Paſtura in Grean: Et omnes illas terras, & alias diratiocinavit ita liberas & quietas, quod in illa die qua ipſum Placitum finitum fuit: Non remanſit homo in toto Regno Angliæ, qui aliquid inde calumniaretur; neque ſuper ipſas Terras etiam parvum quicquam clamaret.

Et in eodem Placito, non ſolùm iſtas prænominatas, & alias Terras, ſed & omnes Libertates Eccleſiæ ſuæ renovavit, & renovatas ibi diratiocinavit; Soca, Saca, Toll, Team, Flymena, Fyrmthe, Grichbrece, Foreſteal, Hamifare, Infangennetheof, cum omnibus aliis Conſuetudinibus paribus iſtis, vel minoribus iſtis; in Terris & in Aquis, in Sylvis, in Viis, & in Pratis, & in omnibus aliis rebus, infra Civitatem & extra, infra Burgum & extra, & in omnibus aliis locis.

Et ab omnibus illis probis & ſapientibus hominibus qui affuerunt, fuit ibi Diratiocinatum, & etiam à toto Comitatu concordatum atque judicatum: Quod ſicut Ipſe Rex tenet ſuas Terras liberas & quietas in ſuo Dominico; ita Archiepiſcopus Cantuarberiæ tenet ſuas Terras omninò liberas & quietas, in ſuo Dominico.

Huic Placito interfuerunt Goisfridus Epiſcopus Conſtantienſis; qui in loco Regis fuit, & Juſticiam illam tenuit.

Lanfrancus Archiepiſcopus; qui, ut dictum eſt, placitavit, & totum diratiocinavit.

Comes Cantiæ, viz. prædictus Odo Baiocenſis Epiſcopus.

Erneſtus Epiſcopus de Hroveceſtra.

Agelricus Epiſcopus de Ciceſtra; Vir antiquiſſimus, & Legum Terræ ſapientiſſimus; qui ex præcepto Regis advectus fuit, ad ipſas antiquas Legum Conſuetudines diſcutiendas & edocendas, in una Quadriga.

Ricardus de Tunebrigge.

Hugo de Monte forti.

Willielmus de Arces.

Haimo Vicecomes: Et alij multi Barones Regis, & ipſius Archiepiſcopi, atque illorum Epiſcoporum homines multi.

Et alij aliorum Comitatum homines; etiam cum toto iſto Comitatu, multæ & magnæ Auctoritatis; Viri Francigeni ſcilicet & Angli.

In horum omnium præſentiâ, multis & apertiſſimis rationibus demonſtratum fuit;

Quod Rex Anglorum nullas Conſuetudines habet in omnibus Terris Cantuarienſis Eccleſiæ, niſi ſolummodo Tres. Et illæ Tres quas habet Conſuetudines, hæ ſunt:

Una; Si quis homo Archiepiſcopi effodit illam Regalem Viam, quæ vadit inter Civitatem & Civitatem.

Altera;

Altera ; Si quis Arborem incidit, juxta Regalem Viam, & eam ſuper ipſam Viam dejecerit : De iſtis duabus Conſuetudinibus qui culpabiles inventi fuerint, atque detenti dum talia faciunt ; ſive Vadimonium acceptum ab eis fuerit, ſive non ; tamen inſecutione Miniſtri Regis, & per Vadimonium, emendabunt quæ juſtè emendanda ſunt.

Tertia Conſuetudo talis eſt : Si quis in ipſa Regali Via Sanguinem fuderit, aut Homicidium, vel aliud aliquid fecerit, quod nullatenus fieri licet ; ſi dum hoc facit deprehenſus atque detentus fuerit, Regi emendabit. Si vero deprehenſus ibi non fuerit, & inde abſque vade data ſemel abierit ; Rex ab eo nihil juſtè exigere poterit.

Similiter fuit oſtenſum in eodem Placito, quod Archiepiſcopus Cantuarienſis Eccleſiæ, in omnibus Terris Regis & Comitis, debet multas Conſuetudines juſtè habere.

Etenim ab illo die quo clauditur Alla, uſque ad Octavas Paſchæ, ſi quis Sanguinem fuderit, Archiepiſcopo emendabit : Et in omni tempore, tam extra Quadrigeſimam quam infra, quicunque illam Culpam fecerit, quam Cildwite vocatur ; Archiepiſcopus aut totam, aut dimidiam Emendationis partem habeat : Infra Quadrigeſimam quidem totam, & extra aut totam aut dimidiam Emendationem.

Habet etiam in iiſdem Terris omnibus, quæcunque ad Curam & Salutem Animarum videntur pertinere.

Hujus Placiti, multis Teſtibus multiſque Rationibus determinatum finem poſtquam Rex audivit, laudavit ; laudans, cum Conſenſu omnium Principum ſuorum confirmavit.

Et ut deinceps incorruptum perſeveraret, firmiter præcepit ;

Quod propterea ſcriptum eſt hic, ut & futuræ in æternum memoriæ perficiat, & ipſi futuri ejuſdem Eccleſiæ Chriſti Cantuarberiæ Succeſſores ſciant, quæ & quanta indignitatibus ipſius Eccleſiæ à Deo tenere, atq; à Regibus & Principibus hujus Regni, æterno jure debeant exigere.

Places of Note here,

1. Boxley-Manor. King Richard the Firſt, in the firſt Year of his Reign, gave the Manor of Boxley to the Abbey here ; of which ſee an Account in its proper Place. And it was Part of the Duty of the Lord of this Manor, to repair that Houſe within the Caſtle of Dover which ſtood next the old Gate or Port (a).

On the Suppreſſion of the Abbey, the Houſe with the Demeſne adjacent, was given by King Henry the VIIIth to Sir Thomas Wiat ; whoſe unfortunate Son, in Queen Mary's Reign, forfeiting it to the Crown, that Princeſs granted his Eſtate out in Parcels to ſeveral of his Sons : And this Manor of Boxley, with ſome other ſmall Pieces were given back to the Lady Joan his Widow ; in which Family it was in Philpot's Time, and ſtill continues.

2. Newenham-Court is a Manor in Boxley, which in the Thirtieth Year of King William the Firſt, (as appears by Doomſday-Book) was Part of the Revenue of that Lofty Prelate Odo, Biſhop of Bayon, and Earl of Kent ; and perhaps one of his uſual Places of Reſidence. At his Death it came to the Crown ; and was probably, as a Part of Boxley, exchanged by King Stephen with William de Ipre for his Manor of Feverſham, and ſo might be ſettled by that Gentleman on his Abbey of Boxley ; though it be not mentioned in the Charter, becauſe it might be done afterwards by Will. However, to this Abbey it actually belonged ; and at the general Suppreſſion was granted, with the Manor of Boxley above-mentioned, to Sir Thomas Wiat. And by the Attainder of his Son Sir Thomas Wiat, came to the Crown in the Second Year of Queen Mary ; and there it ſtaid till Queen Elizabeth granted it to John Aſtley, Eſq; whoſe Son Sir John Aſtley alienated it to his Kinſman, Sir Norton Knatchbull, Knight and Baronet.

3. Wavering, is a Manor here which was formerly held by Knight's Service. For Wantius de Shelving, Son of John de Shelving, and Hellen de Bourn, Daughter and Heir of John de Bourn, held it by the Tenure of finding a Horſe for the King's Army in Wales ; Cum uno Saccho & Brochiâ pro Eſquilar ipſius Domini Regis, as it is expreſſed in the Latin Record, taken, (ſaith Philpot,) in the Third Year of King Edward the Third. Saccus was a Bag or Sack, to carry Dry Proviſions, or other Needments ; and Brochia was a great Can, Pitcher, or Bottle to carry Drink in. Eſquilar I take to be a Miſtake for Eſcuier or Eſquire. After this Man's Deceaſe, his Heir John de Shelving enjoyed part of this Manor as his Right ; but had it not entirely till he Married Benedicta, Daughter and Co-heir of Robert de Hougham, who likewiſe held ſome Part of it : But then it went entire to her Son William Shelving ; whoſe only Daughter carried it in Marriage to Edward Haut, of Haut's Place in Petham, Eſq; who was Sheriff of Kent in the Eighth Year of King Henry the IVth. But his great Grandſon, Sir William Haut of Hautsbourn, leaving only two Daughters, by Joan, one of them, it went in Marriage to Sir Thomas Wiat ; but by his Attainder in the Second Year of Queen Mary coming to the Crown, it was in the Twenty-fourth Year of Queen Elizabeth reſtored (with the Manor of Boxley) to the Lady Joan Wiat, his Widow, and to her Son George Wiat for Three Lives. And King Charles the Firſt ſold the Reverſion to Mr. Stephen Alcock, who parted with the Fee-Simple to Sir Francis Wiat.

4. Vinters is another Place here, which gave Name to, and was the Seat of a very ancient Family in theſe Parts. Roger Vinter, who lived here, was one of the Conſervators of the Peace for the County of Kent in the Eighteenth Year of King Edward the IIId. But his Heir (John Vinter) ſold it in the Tenth Year of King Henry the IVth to Fremingham ; from which Name, by a Daughter, it went to Iſley of Sandrich, and there continued till Sir Henry Iſley forfeited it to the Crown by his being unhappily concerned in Sir Thomas Wiat's Rebellion. Queen Mary granted it to Cutts, and he ſold it to Sir Cavaliero Mayeot, and he to Covert, and he to Sir William Tufton ; whoſe Second Son, Sir Charles Tufton, was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

The City of London had good reaſon to reſpect this Place of Boxley. For in the Fifteenth Year of his Reign, King Edward the IId lay here at the Abbey, and granted from hence to this great City a Charter to Elect a Mayor every Year out of their own Body ; whereas before they were governed by a Bailiff, or Præpoſitus, a perpetual Officer placed over them by the King.

During the Time of the Abbey's flouriſhing State, there was a Market held here at a Place called Farthings ; and all round the Site of the Abbey, are found to this Day Ruins of Buildings ; and all Kinds of Utenſils are frequently dug up, which ſeems to ſhew that there was a Village or Town round about this Religious Houſe. The Story of the famous Rood of Boxley, and the other Cheat of the Stone Image of St. Rumwald, you will have under the Account of the Abbey here.

There is a famous Mine of Fuller's-Earth in this Pariſh, which is wrought by the ingenious Mr. John Watts of Groves. The Vein lies about 30 Foot deep, and is about 7 Foot thick. There are two Sorts of it, the Blue, and the Dark Gray ; the latter of which lying under the former, is the beſt. Over it is a Sand, and neither in that nor in the Fuller's-Earth, are any Marine Remains, as Shells, &c. found, though very uſual in other Places. But about Eight Years ago, near this preſent Vein of Fuller's-Earth, which is now in working, a Roman Urn was found; as there have been others on Goddern-Hill, where formerly I believe there hath been ſome Caſtle or Keep, and probably a Watch-Tower, becauſe you may ſee thence a great way all round about.

There is a Coney-Warren in this Pariſh, but the Rabbets are not ſo good as thoſe at Romney-Braborn, &c. nor are they any where ſo good in a Chalky Soil as in other Places, for they eat Dry and Hard.

BRABORNE, lies towards the South-Eaſt Part of Kent, about Four Miles and a Half Eaſtward from Aſhford; in the Bailiwick of Chart and Longbridge, Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in the Lath of Shipway. Part of it is in the Hundred of Bircholt Barony; and the Reſt, viz. the Burgh of Cockleſcomb, is in the Hundred of Wye, and that Liberty claims over it.

'Tis all in the Deanery of Eleham, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Church ſtands in the Hundred of Bircholt Barony, and is called St. Maries; in which are, or were Memorials of the Interment of ſeveral of the Ancient Family of the Scots, who Married into the Poynings, ſome of which lye here alſo; one of which was Sir John, who was Comptroller of the Houſhold to King Edward the IVth. Another, a Knight buried about 350 Years ago; and William Scot, Eſq; 1433. As alſo of the Family of Gower, and of Paſhley of Tiſehurſt in Suſſex, a Family of great Antiquity.

'Tis a Vicarage, impropriate to the See of Canterbury; Rated in the King's Books at 11*l.* 12*s.* 4*d.* The Archbiſhop Patron.

Places of Note are,

1. This Place of Braborne, Anno Domini 864, was in the Poſſeſſion of a Lady of the Name of Salburga; who ordered by her Will, that the Occupiers of Brabourn ſhould give ſo much Malt, Oxen, Sheep, &c. yearly to the Monks of St. Auſtins in Canterbury, on Condition that they ſhould ſing daily for the Good of her Soul, the Pſalm Exaudiat Te Dominus, &c. In King Henry the Firſt's Time, it was in the Poſſeſſion of Robert de Montfort, but by one of his Daughters it went in Marriage to Robert de Vere. In King Henry the IIId's Reign, it became the Inheritance of William de Montchenſie; and his only Daughter carried it to William de Valence, Earl of Pembroke, whoſe Son Aymer de Valence obtained a Charter with great Privileges for this Manor of Braborne in the Sixth Year of King Edward the Second. By Joan his Siſter and Co-heir, it went to John Comin Earl of Badzenoth, and by his Daughter Joan to David de Strabolgie, Earl of Atholl; whoſe Grandſon David de Strabolgie dying without Iſſue Male, in the Forty-ninth Year of King Edward the IIId, it went again by a Daughter to Sir Thomas Percy; and thence again by another Daughter, to John Halſham of Halſham in Suſſex. But Sir Hugh Halſham dying without Male Iſſue alſo, in the Twentieth Year of King Henry the VIth, by his only Daughter (Joan) it went to John Lewknor of Suſſex, Eſq; who in the Fifth Year of King Edward the IVth, ſold it to Sir John Scott above-mentioned, Comptroller of the Houſhold to that Prince. And in this Name the Poſſeſſion continued uninterrupted to Philpot's Time.

2. Bircholt is a Place here which gives Name to the whole Hundred, and in King John's and King Henry the IIId's Time, was in the Poſſeſſion of a Family of this Name; and which ſtaid here till King Edward the IIId's Reign, as appears by the Book of Aid. In King Henry the IVth's Reign, it became the Inheritance of Halk or Hawk, of Weſt-Hawks in Kingſnoth, where it ſtaid till Philpot's Time.

3. Heminge is a Place in Brabourn, which anciently had Owners of that Sirname. And after having continued near 300 Years in that Family, was by W. Heminge ſold, in the Second Year of King Edward the VIth, to Peter Nott, and in that Name it continued in Philpot's Time.

4. Hampton had alſo once Owners of that Name, and of good Antiquity; and who continued here till about the beginning of King Henry the VIth, and then it was ſold to Shelley; from which Name, by an Heir-General, it went to May; and thence, by another, to Edolph; and again, the ſame Way to Wilcocks; and once more, by Martha, his Elder Daughter, to Dr. Edward Ratcliff; whoſe Succeſſor, Sir Edward Ratcliff was in Poſſeſſion of it in Philpot's Time

5. Combe is another Manor in Braborne, on which was a Seat of a Family of this Name. Richard de Combe, and Simon his Son, were Aſſiſtants to Sir John Northwood, when he was Sheriff of Kent, in the Twentieth Year of King Edward the Firſt. The laſt of the Name of Combe dying without Iſſue Male, a Daughter carried it in Marriage to Scot of Scot's-Hall. And the Manor-Houſe now called Combe, alias Brabourne-Combe, with the Lands belonging to it, and divers others in Braborn, Haſtingleigh, and Smeath, were by Act of Parliament in the late Queen's Time, veſted in Truſtees for the Uſe of Francis Pemberton, Eſq; and his Heirs, in Satisfaction of a Debt owing from George Scott, Eſq; whoſe firſt Wife was Siſter to the ſaid Francis; and by Virtue hereof the ſaid Eſtate was ſold to Brook Bridges, Eſq; Senior, in which Sale all Parties concerned did concur.

Mr. Evelyn, in his Book of Foreſt-Trees, mentions a Yew ſtanding in this Church-Yard, which was 58 Foot and 11 Inches in Compaſs, and would bear near 20 Foot in Diameter.

One would think by the Name of this Place, that it lay at firſt near the Brook or Bourn, which comes down from Stouting, and runs into the Stourc at Sellinge.

BRASTED, (Bradeſtede, i. e. the Broad-Place) lies at the Weſt Side of Kent, near Surrey, about a Mile and half North-Eaſt from Weſtram; in the Bailiwick of Sutton-Bromley, Lath of Sutton at Hone, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Lower one of Juſtices in that Lath.

'Tis in the Dioceſe of Rocheſter, and Deanery of Shoreham, and ſo is a Peculiar to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

'Tis a Rectory; Valued in the King's Books at 22*l.* 16*s.* 8*d.*

Part of it (which is called the Ville of Braſted, by Kilburn) hath a Conſtable of its own; and in this the Church ſtandeth: And the other Part is in the Hundred of Weſtram and Eatonbridge, ſaith Kilburn. But Philpot and Lea's Map ſay, in that of Codſheath. A Fair is kept here on Aſcenſion-Day or Holy-Thurſday.

Places of Note here.

(1.) Braſted was anciently a Manor belonging to the great Family of Clare, who were Earls of Gloceſter and Hertford, and held it in Grand Serjeantry of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, as Stewards to that Prelate on his Inthronization and Inſtalment. Richard de Clere died poſſeſſed of it in the Forty-ſeventh Year of King Henry the IIId; and Gilbert de Clere, in the Twenty-fourth Year of King Edward the Firſt (a). But Richard

(a) Rot. Eſc. Num. 107.

Richard de Clere dying in the Nineteenth Year of King Edward the IId, left an only Daughter, who Married Hugh de Audley, and made him thereby not only Lord of this Manor, but Earl of Gloceſter. His only Daughter, (likewiſe Margaret,) carried this Eſtate, and the former Title of Earl of Gloceſter, to her Husband Ralph Stafford, Earl of Stafford. And here it continued till the Attainder of Edward Stafford, Duke of Buckingham, in the Thirteenth Year of King Henry the VIIIth. But that Prince then granted it to Sir Henry Iſley; who being concerned with Sir Thomas Wiat in Queen Maries Reign, forfeited it to the Crown; and ſhe granted it to John Lenard, Eſq; whoſe Succeſſor, Francis Lenard Lord Dacres, was in Poſſeſſion of it in Philpot's Time.

2. Crow-Place is another Manor here, which anciently was called Stockets; and was then ſo named from a Family of that Name, who were in Poſſeſſion of it as long ago as King Edward the Firſt; for then Walter de Stocket, ſometimes written Stock and Stoke, held it as a Quarter Part of a Knight's Fee; but by a Daughter it went in Marriage to Crow, about King Richard the IId's Reign, and in this Name continued till King Charles the Firſt's Time; and then Mr. William Crow, Father to Sir Sackvile Crow, ſold it to Sir Robert Heath, who died Lord Chief Juſtice of the King's Bench in that Reign; and in the Poſſeſſion of his Son Mr. Edward Heath, it was in Philpot's Time.

BREDGATE, (Bradgate, and ſometimes Bredgar) lies towards the North Part of Kent, about two Miles and a half Southward from Milton, in the Bailiwick and Hundred of that Name, Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Upper one of Juſtices in that Lath; in the Deanery of Sittingbourn, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Church is Dedicated to St. John the Baptiſt, and was made Collegiate; a College being founded here about 300 Years ago, by Robert of Bredgar, Parſon of the Pariſh, Tho. Joceline, and John at Vies.

'Tis now a Vicarage, and Rated in the King's Books at 9*l per Annum*.

Places of Note here,

1. Bredgar Manor was, after the Diſſolution of the College here by King Henry the VIIIth, by Exchange with the Crown for other Lands, in the Twenty-Ninth Year of that King, annexed to the Revenues of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

2. Bexon, from whence the Burgh of Bexon, or Bexon-Street, takes its Name, was once the Eſtate of a Family ſo called. John de Bexon lived here in King Edward the IId's Reign; whoſe Picture was formerly extant in the Glaſs-Windows of this Church. He had likewiſe a Son here of the ſame Name, John de Bexon; But about the Time of King Richard the IId, this Eſtate got into the Name of Tong, derived from the Tongs, of the Place called Tong in this Neighbourhood; and in this Family it remained in Philpot's Time.

3. Swanton-Court, was once Part of the great Eſtate of the Leybourns, Lords of Leybourn-Caſtle. But the famous Juliana de Leybourn, called uſually the Infanta of Kent, after having been twice Married, dying without any Iſſue, and alſo without any Kindred, in the Forty-Third Year of King Edward the Third, this Eſtate, with all her Lands, eſcheated to the Crown; and was Five Years after by that Prince, ſettled on the Abbey of Grace upon Tower-Hill in London. But at the general Suppreſſion of the Monaſtries, King Henry the VIIIth, in his 36th Year, granted it to Chriſtopher Sampſon; who, in the Second Year of King Edward the VIth, ſold it to Sir Thomas Wiat; and on his Attainder, in the Second Year of Queen Mary the Firſt, being forfeited to the Crown, it was granted to Reader; who ſold it ſoon after to Alderſey, of the Family of the Alderſeys of Cheſhire; and Terrey Alderſey, Eſq; was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

4. Manns is a Place here, where anciently was a Seat belonging to a Family of the Name of Man; and perhaps this was the Original from whence the Mans of Canterbury were derived, as Philpot on good Grounds thinks.

St. Mary Breadman's, ſee St. Maries.

BREDHERST, (Bradherſt, i. e. Broadwood; and the Situation of it is ſuch, lying obſcure among Woods) lies about the Middle of the North Part of Kent, about Four Miles South-Eaſt from Rocheſter; in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Eyhorn, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Eaſt Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath.

The Liberty of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury, claims over ſo much of it as is in the Manor of Hollingbourn.

'Tis in the Deanery of Sutton, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; and the Church is Dedicated to St. Peter; which is only a Chapel, and a Peculiar of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury. 'Tis not rated in the King's Books.

Bradherſt, and the Two ſmall Manors of Peteſworth and Meresworth, (vulgarly called Meresborough) were once Part of the great Eſtate of the Lords Leybourn; and eſcheating to the Crown by Juliana de Leybourn's dying without Iſſue, or Kindred, (as is above-mentioned,) were granted to the Abbey of St. Mary-Grace, on Tower-Hill, London. On the general Diſſolution of the Monaſtries, they came to the Crown again, and ſtaid there till King Edward the VIth granted them to Sir Thomas Cheyney; whoſe Son, the Lord Cheyney of Tuddington, ſold them to Mr. Richard Thornhill, in the Thirteenth Year of Queen Elizabeth; and that Family were in Poſſeſſion of them in Philpot's Time.

In Bradherſt-Church is a Braſs-Plate, with a Figure in Armour, over William, one of the great Family of the Norwoods; whence it is probable, they might have formerly ſome Seat here. His Four Sons are likewiſe buried there by him. There is alſo another over Thomas Kemſley, of Kemſley-Street, in this Pariſh, Eſq; 1586.

BRENCHLEY, in the Textus Roffenſis, Brœnceſle; a Place ſituate in the Ley or Fields, near the Brand, Burne or River; lies towards the South-Weſt Part of Kent, about Three Miles and a half North-Weſtward from Goudherſt; in the Bailiwick of Twiford, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and South one of Juſtices in that Lath. Part of it is in the Hundred of Brenchley and Horſmanden, and Part of it in the Hundred of Twiford; and ſome of it, (viz. the Burgh of Rugmerhil) is in Antient Demeſne of Aylesford. 'Tis in the Deanery of Malling, and Dioceſe of Rocheſter. The Church ſtands in the Hundred of Brenchley and Horſmanden, and is called All-Saints; in which are ſeveral Memorials of the Interment of Perſons of the Family of Roberts; of Elizabeth Fane, Daughter of Sir Walter Henley of Courſeborn; firſt Marryed to Waller, and then to Fane of Tudeley, 1566, and of the Courthopes, of Whileigh in Suſſex. 'Tis a Vicarage; Rated in the King's Books at 12*l*. 19*s*. 2*d*.

The Rectory was given by Richard de Clare, to the Canons of St. Mary Magdalen in Tunbridge. The Manor, which was annexed to it, was (on the Diſſolution of the Monaſtries) granted in the Thirty-firſt Year of King Henry the VIIIth, to Sir Paul Sidney; who not long after ſold it to William Waller, Eſq; and from that Family it went went to the Courthops; where it continued in Philpot's Time.

1. The Manor of Brenchley, was anciently Part of the vaſt Eſtate of the Clares, Earls of Gloceſter and Hertford. And Robert de Clare died poſſeſſed of it in the Twenty-firſt Year of King Edward the Firſt; whoſe Son Gilbert de Clare, dying without Iſſue in the Eighth Year of King Edward the Second, Hugh de Audley, in Right of his Wife, (who was Siſter and Heir to Gilbert,) entred upon this Eſtate; and Margaret, his only Daughter and Heir, carried it in Marriage to Ralph Earl of Stafford; in which Family it continued, till Edward Stafford, Duke of Buckingham, being Attainted and Executed in the Twelfth Year of King Henry the VIIIth, forfeited it to the Crown; and then that Prince, in his Thirty-firſt Year, granted it to Paul Sidnor; who not long after ſold it to William Lambard, Eſq; the Judicious and Learned Author of the Perambulation of Kent, and of the Archaeonomia. This Gentleman ſettled it on that Hoſpital at Greenwich, which is commonly called Queen Elizabeth's College; but with this Limitation, that the Heirs-Male of his Family ſhould always be the Leſſees of it; and if there ſhould be a Proſpect of a Failure, then the laſt of the Lambard-Family to have a Power to diſpoſe of it by Will. And by virtue of this Reſervation, were the Lamberts of Sevenoke the Tenants in Philpot's Time, and I ſuppoſe are ſtill.

2. Bokingfold is an eminent Manor here, which anciently belonged to the Chantry of the Free Chapel, founded here by Hamon de Crevequer, with the Demeſne appertaining to it, in the Forty-firſt Year of King Edward the Third; and it continued in this Uſe till the general Suppreſſion of the Religious Houſes, and then was in the Thirty-firſt Year of King Henry the VIIIth, granted to Paul Sidnor, Eſq; who not long after ſold it to Sir John Gates; and he had a Confirmation of it from the Crown, in the Firſt Year of King Edward the VIth; but being Attainted and Executed afterwards, for engaging with John Dudley, Duke of Northumberland, in the Cauſe of the Lady Jane Gray, it was forfeited to the Crown; and was by Queen Elizabeth granted to Catherine Tongue; who ſold it to Revell, and he to Colepeper; whence it went the ſame way to Dyke, and thence to Benedict Barnham; by one of whoſe Four Daughters and Co-heirs, it went to Soam; and he ſold it to Mr. George Brown, formerly of Spelmonden in this County, but in Philpot's Time, of Buckland in Surrey.

There was formerly a Park here at Bokinfeild; which (in the Second Year of King Edward the IId) was held by Bartholomew de Badleſmere, together with the Manor, in Fee of that Prince, and alſo the Advowſon of the Free Chapel of the ſame; which therefore muſt be, before it came to be the Eſtate of the Crevequers. King Edward the IId, in his Nineteenth Year, being on his Journey to France, (whither he was going to do Homage for his Dutchy of Aquitain,) retired to this Place, and repoſed himſelf here ſome time; and cauſed here many Perſons to be indicted, for their unlawful Hunting in this Park (a).

(a) Philp. Vill. Cant. p. 74.

3. Criol's-Court is a Manor in Brenchley, which by Joan, Daughter of Bertrom de Criol, and Heir-General of her Brother John de Criol, came to Sir Richard de Rokeſley; and by his Daughter and Heir (Joan) to Thomas de Poynings; whoſe Deſcendant, Sir Edward Poynings, dying without Iſſue, in the Twefth Year of King Henry the VIIIth, it eſcheated with the reſt of his Eſtate to the Crown; and was by that Prince, in his Thirty-firſt Year, granted to Paul Sidnor, Eſq; his Agent in Spain; and he not long after, ſold it to William Lambard, above-mentioned; who ſettled it, with the Manor of Brenchley, on the Hoſpital of Greenwich, with the ſame Limitations.

4. Parrocks is another Manor in this Pariſh, which anciently had Owners of that Name, and who continued in Poſſeſſion of it till the latter End of King Henry the VIIth's Reign; and then it was ſold to William Hextall, Eſq; whoſe only Daughter and Heir, Margaret, carried it (and much other Land,) to William Whettenhall, Eſq; and his Deſcendant, Sir Richard Whettenhall, in the Twelfth Year of Queen Elizabeth, ſold it to William Brook, Lord Cobham; and he parted with it the ſame way to Sir Thomas Nevill; whoſe Grandſon, the Earl of Weſtmorland, was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

5. Maſcalls, Cap-grove or Cap-grave, and Chekeſwell, are Three Manors here, which, in the Twentieth Year of King Edward the IIId, were in the Poſſeſſion of John de Capgrave; probably the Anceſtor of John Capgrave, the Monk of Canterbury, who is ſo much celebrated by Pitſeus, and lived about the Year 1484. But in the Reign of King Richard the IId, theſe Manors were come to be the Eſtate of Vaux; one of which Family, about the End of King Henry the VIth's Reign, alienated them to Humphrey Stafford, Duke of Buckingham; and by his Grandſon's Attainder, in the Twelfth Year of King Henry the VIIIth, they became forfeited with the reſt of his Eſtate to the Crown; which ſoon after granted them to Edward Ferrers, Eſq; and he ſold them to Whettenhall, Thence about the Beginning of King James the Firſt, they were alienated to Ouldſworth; and he ſold them to Bertie; and he to Mr. Charles Tucker, whoſe Son was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

6. Moat-Lands is an Eſtate here, which formerly belonged to a Family which took their Name from this Pariſh; one of which was Sir William Brenchley, Lord Chief Juſtice of the Common-Pleas, and who Founded a Chantry in the Body of the Church in Canterbury Cathedral: But he dying, (1446,) without Iſſue, theſe Lands left the Name; and in the Beginning of King Edward the IVth, it was got into the Poſſeſſion of Moore, who had Married a Daughter of that Family; from hence it was ſold to the Roberts, who were the Proprietors of it in Philpot's Time.

6. Catts-Place, a Seat formerly belonging to, and taking its Name probably from, Hugh de Catt; in whoſe Family it continued for many Deſcents, even till King Henry the VIth's Reign, and then was ſold to Tilden of Tilden's-Place in Marden; where it continued till King Charles the Firſt's Time, and then was ſold to Baſſage, the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

7. Vanes is a Seat here alſo, which Philpot ſaith, gave Name to the great Family of the Vanes. Robert Vane, or Fane, paid Aid for it in the Twentieth Year of King Edward the IIId; and in this Noble Family it hath ever ſince continued.

BRENZET, a Place Seated on the Bran or Bourn, lies towards the South-Eaſt-ſide of Kent, in Romney-Marſh, about Four Miles North-Weſtward from New-Romney; in the Bailiwick and Lath of Shipway, and Eaſt Diviſion of the County. Part of it lying upon the Ree-Wall, is in the Liberty of the Town and Port of New Romney, and Diviſion of Juſtices of the Corporation of that Town and Port; the Liberty whereof, and of the Cinque-Ports, claiming over the ſame; but the reſt is in the Hundred of Aylesbridge. And one Part of this Reſidue the Liberty of the Marſh claims over; which therefore is in the Diviſion of the Juſtices of the Corporation of Romney-Marſh; and the other Part of it is in the the Diviſion of Juſtices of the Lath of Shipway.

The Liberty of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury claims alſo in this Pariſh.

It is in the Deanery and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Church ſtands in the Liberty of the Marſh; and is dedicated to St. Eanſwithe.

This Saint was Daughter to Eadbald, Son of Ethelbert, the Sixth King of Kent. In the Nova Legenda Angliæ, you will find many Miracles wrought by her: As that She ſtretch'd out three Foot in length a Beam of Timber, which the Carpenters found to be ſo much too ſhort. That ſhe haled and drew Water over the Hills and Rocks, from Sweeton (a Place about a Mile from Folkſtone) to a Religious Houſe, which ſhe had perſwaded her Father to build there. Beſides theſe, ſhe did all common Miracles; as Healing the Sick, Caſting out Devils, &c. and ſo eaſily came to be Sainted.

'Tis a Vicarage, and Rated in the King's Books at 6*l.* 19*s. per Annum*.

This Place having had the ſame Owners with Newington Bell-Houſe, near Hithe, (which ſee there) was formerly called Newington Brenſet.

There is, or was alſo in Philpot's Time, an Old Houſe in this Pariſh, which for ſeveral Deſcents was the Seat of the Ancient Family of the Edolphs, or Edulfs, before they moved to Hinx-Hill, by Aſhford. But in King Charles the Iſt's Time, a Deſcendant of this Family ſold this Eſtate to Mr. John Fagge, of Brenzet, Grandfather of John Fagge, of Wiſton in Suſſex; who was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

BRIDGE, (Bredge, Bregg, Brigge,) lies towards the Eaſt Part of Kent, by the Stoure; and no doubt took its Name from a Bridge that was anciently here over that River, in the Road between Dover and Canterbury. It is about Two Miles and a half South-Eaſtward from Canterbury, in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Bridge and Petham, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. The Liberty of St. Auſtin claims here. 'Tis in the Deanery of Bridge, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; and the Church is dedicated to St. Peter.

'Tis a Chapel, annexed to Patricksbourn, and ſo not valued in the King's Books.

In the Chancel are ſome Remains of old Inſcriptions and Imagery; and in the Church, Memorials of the Interment of ſome of the Name of Brame, and Bargrave.

This Place ſeems to have been conſiderable formerly, as giving Name to the Hundred, and the Deanery.

Places of Note here:

1. Bridge-Manor, was once the Inheritance of the Family of Cheyney. Sir Alexander de Cheyney was Owner of it in K. Edward the Iſt's Reign, and was one of thoſe Eminent Gentlemen of this County, who accompanied that King in his Expedition againſt Scotland; and for his Services, was made Knight-Banneret, at Carlaverock, in that Kingdom. And here this Eſtate continued till about the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign; and then Henry Lord Cheyney ſold it to William Patrick, Eſq; whoſe Grandſon, Sir Edward Patrick, parted with it the ſame way to Mr. Arnold Brame, of Dover; the Executors of whoſe Son, Mr. Walter Brame, ſold it to Mr. Taylor of Bifrons, the preſent Poſſeſſor.

2. Blackmanbury, alias Bridge-Place, is a noted Seat in Bridge, which once had the Garwintons of Bekesbourn for its Owners; the laſt of which was Thomas Garwinton, who died poſſeſs'd of it in the 11th Year of King Henry the IVth. But by a Daughter of his, it went in Marriage to one of the Hauts of Hautsbourn; and by another Female of that Name, to the Iſaacks, who had alſo ſome Eſtate here many Ages before that.

From this Family, Part of it went ſome how to the Lawrences, deſcended from a Family of that Name in Dorſetſhire: And about the Middle of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, they both joined in a Sale of it to William Patrick, Eſq; Grandfather to Sir Edward abovementioned; who parted with this, and Bridge, to Mr. Arnold Brame, of Dover. And that Gentleman, upon the Old Foundation, erected that magnificent Houſe, which was in its Splendor in Philpot's Time; and is now called Bridge-Place, and is become the Eſtate of Mr. Taylor of Bifrons, with the Manor and Royalty, and the Advowſon of the Living, by the ſame Means as Bridge-Manor did.

3. Bereacre is another Manor here, which in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, was in the Poſſeſſion of one Walter Kancia (a): But this Family was extinguiſhed here, before the 20th Year of King Edward the IIId; for then it was the Eſtate of John de Bereacre; and he paid Aid for it, at making the Black Prince Knight.

(a) Rot. Eſc. N. 7.

After this, it went into the Poſſeſſion of the Litchfields, who had much other Land about Eaſtry, Tilmanſtone, and Betſhanger; and in this Name it continued till the 22d Year of King Edward the IVth; and then Roger Litchfield ſold it to William Haut; whoſe Son, Richard Haut, leaving only a Daughter, (Margery,) it went by Marriage of her, to William Iſaack. And from this Name, about the latter End of King Henry the VIIIth, it was ſold to Petyt and Weekes; who, not many Years after, joined in a Sale of it to Nailor of Renvile: And from him it was convey'd (the ſame way) to Smith and Watkins; who, I ſuppoſe, were in Poſſeſſion of it in Philpot's Time.

The Roman Military Way from Canterbury to Dover, runs thro' this Town; and about Three Quarters of a Mile before you come to Bridge-ſtreet, it appears entire and high, and continues ſo almoſt to the Town's End; as it doth beyond it again on Barham-Down.

BROMFIELD, lies near the Middle of Kent, about Two Miles and a half Weſtward from Lenham; in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Eyhorn, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Eaſt Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. In the Deanery of Sutton, and Dioceſe of Canterbury.

The Church is dedicated to St. Margaret. 'Tis in the Nature of a Chapel only, and ſo not Rated in the King's Books.

BROMEHILL, alias Promehill, lies at the South Side of Kent, adjoining to the Sea, about Three Miles South-Weſt from Lidd. Moſt part of it (ſaith Kilburn) is in Suſſex; but ſo much of it as is in Kent, is in the Bailiwick and Lath of Shipway, and Liberty of the Cinque-Ports.

'Tis ſaid to be a Member of New-Romney; but is claimed by Lidd, to belong to them; which it ſelf is alſo a Member of the ſame.

'Tis in the Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices of the Two Towns of Romney or Lidd.

It was anciently a pretty Town, and much reſorted to; but was drowned by the Sea in King Edward the Iſt's Reign.

The Author of the Miſcellanea Aulica, p. 251, 253, 254, ſaith, That about a Hundred Years ago, Bromehill was ſurrounded with the Sea, and wholly drowned: So that all Monuments being defaced, (tho' ſome Footſteps of the Church and Houſes ſtill remain,) the King claimed it, and leaſed it out.

Kent-

Kent-Wall divides this Pariſh, between Suſſex and Kent. The Church ſtood in Suſſex, within a Level of 200 Acres of Freſh Marſh, inned by it ſelf, and called Crouches-Innings: And the Ruins of it were viſible in the Year 1637.

A. D. 1627, all this Part was overflow'd by the Sea, to the Damage of above 2000 Acres of Land.

Tradition will have this Place to have been once ſo conſiderable, as to have had in it above 50 Inns and Taverns. Derings MSS.

The Sea was driven in here with that prodigious Violence (a), in King Edward the Iſt's Reign, when this Place was deſtroyed, that it quite changed the Chanel of the River Rother, and opened a new Mouth for it at Rye; and thereby deſerted and impoveriſhed New-Romney, where it diſembogued before; but of this more in another Place.

BROMLEY, in the Textus Roffenſis, Bromleage; in Birtrick's Will, Bromleah; lies at the Weſt Part of Kent near Surrey, by the River Ravensburn; about 8 or 9 Miles Southward from London: In the Bailiwick of Sutton-Bromley, Hundred of Bromley and Beckenham, Lath of Sutton at Hone, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Upper one of Juſtices in that Lath.

The Liberty of the Biſhop of Rocheſter claims over it.

'Tis alſo in the Deanery of Dartford, and Dioceſe of Rocheſter; and the Church is dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul.

(b) Fun. Monum.

Wever (b) ſaith, he learnt by Tradition, that in the Wall of this Church was once the Picture of Richard Le Wendover, once Parſon of this Pariſh, and afterwards Biſhop of Rocheſter, 1238. He died 1250, and was buried at Weſtminſter by the King's expreſs Command.

See more of him in the Lives of the Biſhops of Rocheſter.

There is alſo in the Church a Memorial in French, of the Interment of Walter de Henche, Miniſter here; 1360.

Philpot ſaith, Bromley was given to the Church of Rocheſter, A. D. 1300, by one John Cater, a Goldſmith of London, as appears by the Records of the Church of Rocheſter. Of this I can find nothing. But in our Textus Roffenſis, is a Grant of ten Plough-Lands in Bromley, to that Church, by King Edgar, A. D. 955. The Words are, Decem Manſas, quod Cantigene dicunt x Sullinga, in illo loco ubi jamdudum Solicole illius Regionis nomen poſuerunt, æt Bromleage, &c. Et iſtis Terminis circumgirata eſt Terra ſuperſcripta, & multis nota. ÆPERT on eaſtan Cyſelhyrſtes gemero, ðonne on Croptunes gemero, ðonne ðanon ſugebeorges gemero: ðonne ſuðhealfe Cyſſentanes gemero forð beſeand ſetlan. ðonne beſtan Vchammes gemeru 7 beohha Hammes gemeru; ðonne benorðan beninga Hammes gemeru 7 Modinghammes gemero; 7 ðonon eſt eaſt on Cinges gemero; ðaet on Cyſelhyrſt.

Firſt on the Eaſt, Chiſſelhurſt is the Bounds of it; then Croptunes, (perhaps Paul's Cray); thence it abuts to Sugebeorge, or Sowborough, now called Southborough; thence to part of Keſton, and by Weſt Wickham, and ſo round to Mottingham; and then Eaſtward, till you come to Chiſſelhurſt again.

Some Land in this Pariſh of Bromley was alſo given to Rocheſter-Church, by one Britrick, an Eminent Saxon, and his Wife Elſwithe; as appears by their laſt Will and Teſtament (c), which you will find at large, when I ſpeak of Meopham in this County. This Gift was to take place after the Death of one Brightware.

In the Year 998, as appears by the Textus Roffenſis, F. 157, where the Grant is regiſtred, there is Six Plow-Lands in Bromley, given, or rather reſtored to the Church of Rocheſter, by King Ethelred, and with the Benefit of Pannage in the Wild, or Wood of Andred. The Bounds of which Lands are there given in Saxon, and are the ſame with thoſe above-mentioned; though there the Quantity be ſaid to be Ten Sullings, or Plow-Lands, and here but Six. This Eſtate King Ethelred, by the Advice of one Ethelſine, had, in his younger Days taken away from the Church, and now reſtored it again. And at this Number of Six Plow-Lands, the Manor of Bromley ſtood in the Doomſday-Survey. See Textus Roffenſis, P. 209.

The Living is in the Nature of a Chapel, and not valued in the King's Books.

Places of Note here,

1. Sundridge; in this Pariſh is a Seat which was formerly the Reſidence of a Noble Family of the Name of Blund. For Peter le Blund was Conſtable of the Tower of London in the Thirty-fourth Year of King Henry the IIId. And Ralph Le Blund; his great Grandſon, paid Aid for this Eſtate, which he held from the Biſhop of Rocheſter as a whole Knights Fee, in the Twentieth Year of King Edward the IIId, at making the Black-Prince, Knight. By a Female Heir it went from this Family to that of Willoughby; where ſtaying ſome Years, it went by Sale to Booth; and from that Name, by a Female Heir, it went in Marriage to the Betenhams of Pluckley; in whoſe Poſſeſſion it continued in Philpot's Time.

2. Simpſon is a Seat here alſo, which formerly was in the Poſſeſſion of the Bankewells, a Family of great Note in theſe Parts. John de Bankewell had a Charter of Free-Warren for his Lands in Bromley, in the Thirty-firſt Year of King Edward the Firſt; and Thomas de Bankewell died ſeized of it, in the Thirty-fifth Year of King Edward the Third. But after this Name was extinct here, this Houſe came into the Poſſeſſion of the Clarks; and one William Clark had a Licenſe from King Henry the Vth, to Embattle and Build a ſtrong Houſe here, and to Moat it round; which he did, and the Moat is ſupply'd by a Running Spring. But about the End of the next Reign, this Place was ſold to John Simpſon, who much improved the former Fabrick, and made it be called after his Name. But in an Age or Two after, it was alienated to John Stiles of Beckenham, Eſq; from whom it deſcended to Sir Humphry Stiles, Knight and Baronet, and Cupbearer to King Charles the Firſt; in whoſe Poſſeſſion it was in Philpot's Time.

3. The Biſhop of Rocheſter's Houſe here is very pleaſantly ſituated, with good Gardens and other Conveniencies.

There is a Well in the Biſhop's Park here, called St. Blaze's-Well, which anciently had a Chapel by it that was dedicated to St. Blaſius; and this, ſaith Philpot, uſed to be much frequented at Whitſuntide; becauſe Lucas, who was Legat here from Pope Sixtus the IVth, granted an Indulgence, or Remiſſion of Forty Days Penance, to all ſuch as ſhould viſit this Chapel, and perform their Devotions here, in the Three Holy Days at Whitſuntide or Pentecoſt.

BROOKE, (Broc) lies towards the South-Eaſt Part of Kent, about Two Miles Southwards from Wye, in the Bailiwick of Chart and Longbridge, Hundred of Wye, Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in the Lath of Shipway. 'Tis in the Deanry of Bridge, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; and the Church is called St. Maries, which is ſmall, and without any Monuments or Antiquities. The Living is a Rectory, in the Gift of the Church of Canterbury, valued in the King's Books at 7*l.* 7*s.*

The

The Liberty of Wye claims over it; and that of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury, over ſo much of this Pariſh as lies within the Manor of Brooke; which Manor was anciently a Hundred by it ſelf; and was given to the Church of Canterbury by King Henry the Iſt, or rather confirmed by the Grant of that Prince; and afterwards by another of King Henry the IId: For it had been given to them before, by one Karlemane, or Charleman, a Prieſt.

After the Diſſolution of the Abbeys, King Henry the VIIIth, in his 33d Year, gave it to the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury, who are the preſent Poſſeſſors of it.

Here is a fine Stream of Excellent Water, which comes down from the Romantick Valley of Pickarsdane.

BRUCKLAND, or rather Brookland, becauſe of its lying near the Brook (or River) which formerly ran from Apledore to Romney, by the Rey, or Ree-Wall; ſtands at the South-Eaſt Part of Kent, about Three Miles and a half Weſtward from New-Romney; in the Bailiwick and Lath of Shipway, Hundred of Aloesbridge, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. In the Deanery of Limpne, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; and the Church is dedicated to St. Auſtin.

The Liberty of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury claims here; as alſo doth that of St. Auſtin over the Rectory of the Pariſh: Which is impropriated to the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury, who therefore Preſent to the Vicarage; which is rated at 17 l. 12 s. 10 d. in the King's Books.

A Fair is kept here on the 1ſt of Auguſt.

The Manor of this Place was anciently the Patrimony of a good Family, whoſe Name was Paſſeley, and whoſe Seat was at Thevegate in Smethe. Edmund de Paſſeley had it in Poſſeſſion in the 19th Year of King Edward the IId; as appears by Rot. Eſc. N. 57. And in the End of King Henry the IVth's Reign, John de Paſſeley ſold it to the Lord Cobham of Sterborough. By Anne, only Daughter to Thomas Lord Cobham, who died in the 11th Year of King Edward the IVth, it went in Marriage to Edward Borough; who, in Right of his Wife, became Lord Borough of Sterborough, as well as Lord of this Manor. But his Grandſon, Thomas Lord Borough, about the Middle of Queen Elizabeth, alienated it to Eversfield, of Suſſex; and thence it went the ſame way, and in a little time, to the Godfreys of Lidd; and thence, not long after, it was ſold to Wood: Who, about the Beginning of King James the Iſt, ſold it to Mr. John Fagge, Grandfather to another of that Name; who was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

BUCKLAND by Dover, lies at the Eaſt Part of Kent, about a Mile and a half North-Weſt from Dover; in the Bailiwick of Stowting, Lath of St. Auſtin, Hundred of Beusborough, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery of Dover, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Church is called St. Andrews. The Liberty of St. Auſtin, and of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, claim here.

A Fair is kept here on Auguſt the 24th.

The Parſonage, by Conſent of Simon Iſlip, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, was appropriated to the Priory of Dover, about 350 Years ſince.

'Tis only a Chapel, and ſo not valued in the King's Books.

The Manor of this Place was of old Part of the mighty Eſtate of Hamon de Crevequer, who died poſſeſs'd of it in the 47th Year of King Henry the IIId.

After this, it came into the Family of the Wilghebies, or Willoughbies: For Thomas de Willoughby was ſeized of it, at his Death, in the 7th Year of King Edward the IId. But in the next Reign, it was become the Poſſeſſion of the Barries, of Sevington. For Agnes, Wife of William Barry, died poſſeſs'd of it in the 48th Year of King Edward the IIId; as appears by Rot. Eſc. N. 7. And after this, it came to the Callards, or Calwards, (afterwards called Collards) who held it for ſeveral Deſcents; John Collard, Eſq; being one of thoſe who accompanied Sir Henry Guldford, in the Spaniſh Wars, againſt the Moors; and for his ſignal Service there, had this Coat of Arms aſſigned him; viz. Girony, of 8 Pieces Or, and Sables; over all, 3 Blackmoors Heads couped.

But in King James the Iſt's Reign, this Eſtate was ſold from this Family to Fogge; and he ſold it (not long after) to Mr. William Sherman, of Croydon, Steward to the Archbiſhops Abbot and Laud; where, I ſuppoſe, it continued in Philpot's Time.

Dudmanſcombe is a Manor here, which anciently belonged to the Priory of St. Martin in Dover; and after the Suppreſſion, was exchanged by the Crown, with Thomas Cranmer, Archbiſhop of Canterbury; and ſo became a Part of the Revenue of that See, in the 29th Year of King Henry the VIIIth.

BUCKLAND near Feverſham, lies towards the North Part of Kent, about Three Miles Weſtward from Feverſham; in the Bailiwick and Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Upper one of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Hundred of Feverſham; and ſo in the Liberty of St. Auſtin's: But the Liberty of the Dean of Canterbury claims over the Manor of Clopton.

'Tis in the Deanery of Oſpringe, and Dioceſe of Canterbury.

'Tis a Rectory; and Rated in the King's Books at 5 l. 13 s. 4 d. per Annum.

In King Henry the IIId's Time, this (a) Place was in the Poſſeſſion of a Family of this Name; John de Buckland, in the 20th Year of that Prince, being Owner of it; as appears by Teſta de Nevil. But this Name, before the End of King Edward the IId, gave place to that of the Frogenhalls, of Frogenhall in Tenham: In which Family it continued, till the Beginning of King Henry the VIIth's Reign.

(a) Sidrach Petit's Inqueſt into the Manors of Kent.

One of this Ancient Family (viz. John, Son of Richard Frogenhall, Eſq;) was with Edmund Brook, Lord Cobham, the General of the Kentiſh Forces under Richard Earl of Warwick, at the famous Battel of Northampton; where the Houſe of Lancaſter loſt the Day, principally by the Valour of our Kentiſh Gentlemen. His Son, Thomas Frogenhall, ſold it to Gedding; and Gedding, in the 25th Year of King Henry the VIIIth, convey'd it the ſame way to Henry At-Sea, of Heme. And here it ſtay'd till the 10th Year of King James the Iſt; and then William At-Sea, his Grandſon, ſold it to ----- Saker of Feverſham; and his Son (Mr. Chriſtopher Saker,) to Sir Baſil Dixwell; of Terlingham of Folkſtone, Baronet; who (on his Deceaſe, in 1641,) gave it to his Kinſman, Mr. John Dixwell, the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

This Church, tho' now almoſt down, (ſo that there was no Preaching in it when I was there;) hath a fair Spire-Steeple ſtill ſtanding.

BURMARSH; (Borough-Merſh, Burgh-Marſh,) lies at the South-Eaſt Part of Kent, in Romney-Marſh, about Three Miles towards the South-Weſt from Hithe; in the Bailiwick and Lath of Shipway, Hundred of Worth, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices of the Corporation of Romney-Marſh; within which Liberty it is. But the Liberty of St. Auſtin claims over the Manor of Burmarſh.

'Tis

'Tis in the Deanery of Limpne, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Church is called All-Saints. A Rectory; Valued in the King's Books at 20 l. 10 s. 6 d.

The Manor of Burmarſh did anciently belong to the Abbey of St. Auſtin's in Canterbury, which had here a Houſe called Abbots-Court; becauſe the Abbot uſed to reſide here, when he came to ſurvey the Eſtate in the Marſh belonging to that great Monaſtery. Upon the Suppreſſion, K. Henry the VIIIth granted it to William Finch, Eſq; in the 35th Year of his Reign; whoſe Deſcendant Sir Thomas Finch, Earl of Winchelſea, in King Charles the Iſt's Time (ſaith Philpot) ſold it to Sir Ralph Whitfeild, Serjeant at Law; whoſe Son and Heir, Sir Herbert Whitfeild, was in Poſſeſſion of it in Philpot's Time.

BYRCHOLT, is a Place which anciently (no doubt) was of ſome Note; ſince probably both the Hundred of Byrcholt-Barony, and that of Byrcholt-Franchiſe adjoining to it, took their Denomination from hence. But tho' it were once a Pariſh by it ſelf, the Church hath been down a great while: For to an Inquiſition made A. D. 1578, the Return was, No Church ſtanding; but 4 Dwelling-Houſes, and 14 Communicants. Which is all I can ſay of it.

CANTERBURY, was called by Ninnius and the Britains, Caer Kent, i. e. the City of Kent; in Latin, Durovernum, no doubt from Dur-wbern in the Britiſh Language, which ſignifies a Swift River; it being ſeated upon the Stoure, which runs thro' it with a ſwift Current. In Ptolomy, the Name is corrupted into Δαρόβερνον; and in ſome Copies of the Itinerary of Antonine, it's written Durorvernum, and Dururvennum; and in the Peutingerian Tables, Duraverus. Bede, and others, call it Dorobernia; and now uſually in Latin, 'tis called Cantuaria.

In the Saxon Language, it was uſually called Cant-paра-bÿrig; that is, the City of the Men of Kent; and ſometimes Ricer-heaрoð-Burh; that is, the Head or Capital of the Kingdom; as it was, while the Saxon Heptarchy flouriſhed; and the Seat of their Kings, till King Ethelbert gave it (with the Royalties) to Auſtin the Monk: Who was the firſt Archbiſhop of Canterbury; and fixed a Seat here, for himſelf and his Succeſſors.

In the Saxon Chronicle, it is alſo called Cantawic, and Dorwitceaſtre.

That this City was famous in the Time of the Romans being in Britain, not only its Name in the Itinerary, but the many Coins (and other Antiquities) frequently dug up here, do plainly ſhew. It ſeems now, like the City of London (a), to ſtand upon Raiſed Ground; for in digging for Wells, Vaults, and Cellars, they have often met with old Arches, ſome turned with Roman Brick, and Foundations one upon another, to a great Depth; with Piles of Wood deep driven into the Ground: And even at the Bull-ſtake Market, Tanners Pits, and Utenſils belonging to that Trade, as ſome think; or perhaps rather, Roman Ciſterns (to hold Water) have been found. As have Wells alſo, at 10 or 15 Foot deep, having Curbs of Wood to them.

Many Roman Pavements, done with their Bricks or Tiles, have been met with in digging; and ſome of fine Moſaick Work. And 'tis probable, there may be a great Treaſure of Antiquities, in Duroverno Subterraneo, at the Depth of about 10, or 12 Foot.

That Canterbury was a City of Note in the Romans Time, is ſufficiently confirmed alſo, by the Three Roman Ways that go from it; (one over Barham-Down, to Dover; a Second towards Sandwich; and the other towards the Portus Lemanis;) as well as by the Watling-ſtreet-Way entring it, paſſing thro' it, and giving Name to a Street in it. Remains of all which Old Ways are ſtill plainly in Being; and of which I ſhall give a further Account in its proper Place.

It appears from King Ethelbert's Grant of St. Auſtin's Abbey, (if we may judge that Grant genuine) that this City was then walled. And a much better Evidence of the Antiquity of its Wall, it draws from the Roman Bricks, that are frequently found in it; as at Riding-Gate; at the Place in the Wall where Queningate once ſtood; and in the Remains of the Wall behind St. Mildred's Church, &c.

This Wall was probably much injured by the Danes in King Ethelred's Time, who then burnt and ſacked this City.

But 'tis probable Archbiſhop Lanfranc repaired the Breaches again: For in K. Stephen's Time, it appears (by Malmsbury) to have been walled quite round.

The whole Compaſs of the Walls of the City, is 583 Perches, 32010 Yards, or 96030 Feet.

In the Wall are 21 Turrets, or Watch-Towers.

It was not paved, till about the 17th Year of King Edward the IVth; when an Act of Parliament was made for that Purpoſe.

There are now but Six Gates, and Three Poſterns remaining.

The Gates are,

1. St. Michael's, or Burgate, leading to Sandwich.

2. Newingate, by St. George's Church. This was built for a more direct Paſſage into the Dover-Road.

3. Riding-gate. Into this lead the Two Roman Ways, from Dover, and from the Portus Lemanis: And the Street leading from it into the City, bears to this Day the Old Name of Watling-ſtreet.

4. Worthgate.

5. Weſtgate. This hath been a long Time, and is now, the common Gaol for Malefactors. This, and Newingate, have each a Portcluſe, commonly called a Portcullis; and are machecollated at the Top; i. e. have a Paſſage there, to throw down ſcalding Water, melted Lead, &c. on an Enemy that ſhall come under it.

For the Term Machecollare, ſee Coke upon Littleton, L. 1. C. 1. §. 1.

6. North-gate; which ſtands under a Part of St. Mary's Church.

The Town-Ditch was anciently 150 Foot over.

It appears by Domeſday-Book, that there was then but One Hundred in Canterbury: For ſpeaking of Northwood, it ſaith, it was of the Hundred of Canterbury. But it was ſoon after (viz. in King Richard the Iſt's Reign) divided into Hundreds, Berths, or (as they are now called) Wards; viz. Six in Number, anſwering to the Gates, and denominated from thence.

Each of theſe Wards was anciently governed by an Alderman; who held a Court every Three Weeks, which was called the Hundred-Court, and ſometimes the Wardmote. And it was called alſo the Portmote; becauſe, perhaps, held of old near the Gate; as the Juriſdiction was called Portſoka.

This Office of Alderman was formerly not Elective, but Demiſable, and Deviſable, like a Freehold; and deſcended (without Alienation) to the Heir at Law. But by degrees theſe Aldermanries were all bought by, or ſome how got into the City; and were made Eligible by the Mayor and Commonalty: And by a New Ordina-

Ordination in K. Henry the VIIth's Time, Two Aldermen were appointed to every Ward.

There was anciently a Royal Exchange (Cambium Regis) in this famous City of Canterbury; whose Site was in All-Saints Pariſh, where now the George-Inn is: And it was ſtanding till King Edward the IIId's Time, who gave it to Eaſtbridge-Hoſpital. It certainly was in being here in King Henry the IIId's Time; who, in the 6th Year of his Reign, prohibited any Exchange of Plate, or other Maſſes of Silver to be made, but at his Exchanges of London and Canterbury.

There was alſo a Mint here formerly; which ſtood on ſome Part of that Ground where now the Crown-Inn is.

Another Mint is mentioned to have been in the Pariſh of St. Mary Bredman; and another in the Pariſh of St. George, over-againſt the Pillory of the City.

Theſe Mints were here very anciently: King Ethelſtane appointing Seven here, as he had Eight at London. Of theſe Seven, the King had Four, the Archbiſhop Two, and the Abbot of St. Auſtin's One.

In King John's Time, the Profit of the Mint here exceeded that at London; as Mr. Madox ſhews, in his Hiſtory of the Exchequer.

There was alſo a Mint by the Court-Gate of Chriſt-Church, where K. Henry the VIIIth Coined Money, for his Service in the French War.

The Jews had formerly a Synagogue, or School in Canterbury; which ſeems to have been where now the Stone Parlour of the New King's-Head-Inn ſtands; for that being Arched under, and an Aſcent to it with Stone Steps ſtill remaining, ſeems to have been a part of the very Synagogue.

The Jews here were ſo eminent for their Extorting Uſury, that in ſeveral Old Charters, Uſury is called by the Name Judaiſmum. There is alſo a Lane called Jury-Lane, from the Houſes of the Jews then Living in it.

In the principal Street of the City is the Court-Hall, called formerly (ſince King Henry the VIth's Time) the Guild-Hall, but anciently the Speech-Houſe: Which Name alſo was hence given to the Priſon for Criminals; which was of old juſt by it.

Here is a Court kept every Monday, for deciding Differences, and redreſſing Grievances between Man and Man. And every other Tueſday a Burgmote is held here, for the well governing and tranſacting the Affairs of the City.

Stable-Gate is a Burgh or Hamlet, laid to the City by a Charter of King Henry the VIth, but excepted from the Franchiſe of the ſame, as being a Parcel of the Vill of Weſtgate, and of the Free Liberty of the Archbiſhop, to whom of old it belonged. Here 'tis ſuppoſed, Auſtin the Monk, and his Companions firſt Lodged, before King Ethelbert gave them his Palace. On this Account it was made a Place of Sanctuary for Criminals, even after Indictment, if they could fly hither. Thomas Spot ſaith, King Ethelbert gave this to Auſtin. Here was formerly an Oratory for the King's Houſhold.

In North-Gate Pariſh, in or near Water-lock-Lane, was anciently a Houſe of the Knights-Templers.

And very near to which, if not on Part of their Ground, ſtood the Houſe, where Edward the Black-Prince placed a Chantry of Prieſts, Part of which is ſtill ſtanding; and that Prince's Arms are yet viſible over an old Porch opening to the Lane, which leads from Stable-gate, Weſtward, towards the Lane which goes down to the Abbots-Mill.

In Worth-Gate-Ward was anciently an Hoſpital for poor Prieſts, now called the Hoſpital of Bridewell: Another Hoſpital Erected by one Mayner, an Alderman and Mayor of this City, on which now ſtands Cotton's-Hoſpital.

In Riding-Gate-Ward is an old Manor called uſually the Dunghill, often the Dungeon; and formerly Danzon, Dangon, Dangun, and Daungeon; all which probably are Words only corrupted from Danian. This having certainly been either a Work caſt up, to defend the City againſt the Danes; or by the Danes againſt the City; as the Boly-Hill ſeems to have been againſt the Caſtle of Rocheſter. 'Tis probable, that anciently it lay all without the City; but for its better Security was, in Time, taken within its Walls. The Manor of Dungeon, of old, did belong to the Family of Chich, to whom the Aldermanry of Burgate alſo anciently belonged. After them, it went to the Brents; than to the Butlers of Heronden in Eaſtry; thence to the Hales; and now it is in the Poſſeſſion of Henry Lee, Eſq;

In Burgate-Ward was the Market-Croſs at the Bull-Stake, (a Place where formerly they uſed to bait Bulls) which was Erected by John Coppyn of Whitſtaple, and William Bigg of this City, Anno Domini 1446, as appears by a Braſs Inſcription on one of the Columns. It was pulled down in the Year 1645. And there certainly was a Croſs here much more ancient than even this in this Place.

Here is now a Market held on Wedneſdays and Saturdays, and it was formerly very eminent for Poultry; ſo that a Part of the Street juſt by it, hath been anciently called by the Name of the Poultry. And many other peculiar Markets were formerly kept in this City; as the Wheat-Market, in St. Paul's Pariſh without Burgate. The Ruſh-Market at the Red-Well, by the Palace Back-Gate; the Cloth-Market in St. George's-Street, by the Auſtin-Fryars-Gate: Below this Cloth-Market was, and is ſtill, the Fleſh-Market, Butchery or Shambles: And lower down yet, in the High-Street by St. Mary Bredmans-Church, was formerly a Fiſh-Market, and that before the Year 1187. And that which is now the Place of Execution for the City, a little without Newingate, was anciently called Salt-Hill, from that Commodity being ſold there; and afterwards Oaten-Hill, from its being a Market for Oats. Another Market was alſo formerly kept at the Nunnery, at the meeting of the Four Ways; for the Field againſt the Nunnery to the Southward, where they dig for Chalk, is called Market-Field: It ſeems to have been a Market for Live Cattle; as not far from it there is one to this Day. And there was a Market alſo kept in Wincheap, which ſeems to have been for Wines, and to take its Name from thence.

The Cuſtom of paying Tythe for Houſes in this City, is ſomething peculiar; being 10*d.* in every Noble of the Annual Rent; and payable Quarterly; only in St. Andrews-Pariſh, they pay 10*d.* ½.

Mr. Somner ſaith, he knows not the Date of the Riſe of this Modus: But anciently he ſhews, that it was the Cuſtom for every Houſe of 10*s.* per Annum Rent, to offer a Farthing; of 20*s.* Rent, one Half Penny; and for 40*s.* Rent, a Penny; on every Sunday and Holiday throughout the Year.

The Chief Magiſtrate in this Ancient City is, in ſome Charters to Chriſt-Church, which are Dated Anno Domini, 780, ſtiled Præfectus. In the Year 956, he is called the Port-Reeve. And in 1011, the Time of the Daniſh Maſſacre here, his Title is Præpoſitus; and ſo he is called alſo in Doomſday-Survey. And before the Conqueſt, the City belonged to the King: But after, in Lanfrank's Time, (as alſo in Anſelm's,) it belonged to the Archbiſhop. The former of theſe Two holding it in Fee-farm; the latter freely, ex Solido, in the Nature of an Allodium. But notwithſtanding this, there was a Port-Reeve to govern the City. And in proceſs of Time, there were Two of them; but both put in by the Archbiſhop, biſhop, or by the King, (for ſome how or other Canterbury was got into the Crown again, though William Rufus gave it abſolutely to Anſelm) till the Eighteenth Year of King Henry the Third; and then that Prince, by his Charter, granted the Town to the Citizens in Fee-farm; and infranchiſed them with the Liberty and Power of chuſing Annually Two Bailiffs of their own. And thus the City continued to be governed by Bailiffs till the Twenty-ſixth Year of King Henry the VIth; and then, by a New Charter, a Mayor became the Title of the Chief Magiſtrate; who was Elected by the Citizens as the Bailiffs were before; and in this State it ſtill continues.

A Liſt of the GOVERNORS of this City, as I find them in Mr. Batteley's Book of Canterbury, P. 179, here follows.

A LIST of the PROVOSTS, BAILIFFS, and MAYORS, of the City of Canterbury.

Places of Note in Canterbury.

1. Doddingdale, (now called Morton) is a Manor in Canterbury, which anciently had Owners of the Name of Dodingdale. Hamo, the Son of Guido de Dodingdale, was a Benefactor, and gave the Tithes of Dodingdale to the Abbey of St. Auſtins; but it appears to have been only for a Term of Years; becauſe 'tis plain, by the Records, that in King Henry the IId's Reign, Robert de Marci gave the ſame Portion of Tithes to the Hoſpital of St. Laurence in this City. After this it came into the Poſſeſſion of ſome of the Name of Morton; and took that Name from them, as Philpot ſaith. But Elias de Morton ſold it to Hugh Fitz Vinon, of a Family which once had a large Eſtate about Selling, Monkes-Horton, &c. And Eugenia, a Daughter of his, ſold it to Nicholas de Twitham, in the Twentieth Year of King Henry the IIId; he ſent it quickly the ſame Way to Robert de Polre; after whom it ſeems to have come into the Poſſeſſion of John Chiche, about the Year 1330. But in the Twenty-ſixth of King Henry the VIth, it was the Eſtate of Hardreſs and Iſaack; who then joined in a Deed of Sale of it to William Say, for the Uſe of Robert Rigden; but here it ſtaid not long before it was conveyed to William Barton and John White, and they joined in a Sale of it to Edward Pargate; and a Deſcendant of his, Edward Pargate, in the Twenty-fifth Year of King Henry the VIIIth, ſold it to Peter Bruin; and in this Name it continued ſome time: But Henry Bruin dying without Iſſue, gave it to his Siſter Jane Bugge; and ſhe in the Firſt Year of King James the Firſt, ſold it to her Kinſman John Bruin, who in Three or Four Years time ſent it the ſame way to William Denne; by whoſe only Daughter, Margaret, it went in Marriage to Edward Hougham; whoſe Two Daughters, (Elizabeth, Married to Mr. Edward Roſe of Chiſtlet; and Anne, the Wife of Mr. John Bettenham of Canterbury) were Coheirs to this Eſtate in Philpot's Time.

2. The Moat, alias Wyke, you will find an Account of in St. Martin's Pariſh, and under that Name.

Of the Cathedral, Caſtle, Abbey of St. Auſtins, and the other Religious Houſes, I ſpeak particularly in their proper Places.

In this City it was, that King Vortiger firſt entertained the Saxons Hengiſt and Horſa.

Archbiſhop Theodorus, by Licenſe from Pope Vitalian, eſtabliſhed here a kind of College or School; in which he placed Profeſſors of all the Liberal Sciences. And this was the Pattern followed after by Sigebert King of the Eaſt-Angles; who built a College ſomewhere, but whether it were at Cambridge or not is uncerttain; certain it is, that Canterbury School, or College, was before it.

'Tis ſaid, that Archbiſhop Sudbury raiſed the Walls of this City, and the Towers from Weſtgate to the North; but it ſeems not to have been entirely Walled round, becauſe as Thorn tells us, King Richard the IId gave 250 Marks towards Ditching and Encloſing it: And when Simon Burley was Warden of the Ports, he ordered the Plate and Jewels belonging to Chriſt-Church and St. Auſtin's Monaſtries, to be kept in Dover-Caſtle, becauſe he thought them not ſafe in an Unwalled City. And yet, Archbiſhop Parker, in his Antiquit. Britan. P. 24, ſaith, Muro Cinctum Auguſtino Ethelbertus cum Regalibus Paribus, Privilegiiſque donavit. And the Roman Bricks which are found in the Walls, as is above obſerved, do indicate that it was Walled even in the Romans Time.

This Place hath had a great many Misfortunes by Fire, Invaſions of Enemies, and other Accidents.

The Author of the Additions to the Chronicle of Aſſer Menevenſis ſaith, it was ſorely waſted by Fire, Anno Domini, 754.

And in Anno Domini 918, Elfleda the Mercian Heroine, Daughter of King Ceolwulfe, beſieged and burnt the City, Killing and Expelling the Danes who were then in Poſſeſſion of it. In Revenge of which, the Danes, in the Reign of King

King Ethelred, beſieged, took, and burnt the City again, as not long before they had extorted 30000*l.* of the Inhabitants, to ſave it from the like Fate. In King Henry the IId's Reign, Anno 1116, the very Year as Lambard obſerves, that their famous St. Becket was made Archbiſhop of Canterbury, their City was entirely conſumed by Fire. Bede ſaith, a good Part of it was burnt down in Archbiſhop Mellitus's Time, which was about the Year 620; and that he mirrculouſly ſtopped the Progreſs of the Fire by interpoſing his Body againſt it, and praying for its Extinction. And a great Fire was here alſo in King Henry the VIIIth's Reign, which conſumed a great many Houſes, and with them ſome Books of Value, which one of the Monks of St. Auſtins had brought from abroad.

Here was anciently a famous Palace of the Archbiſhop; not that which King Ethelbert firſt gave to Auſtin at Staplegate, but his own Dwelling-Houſe which he left him when he went to reſide at Reculver; and this was the uſual Court of the Kings his Predeceſſors. This was burnt by the Danes, Anno Domini, 1011, and rebuilt by Lanfrank. Archbiſhop Hubert pulled a good Part of this down, but in its Room he built a ſtately Hall and other Offices, which Lambard ſaith were to be ſeen in his Time; but it was not perfected till the Time of Archbiſhop Boniface, who finiſhed the whole Subſtantially and Beaufully: Tho' ſome (a) ſay, Stephen Langton had finiſhed the Great Hall before him.

(a) Harpſfield Eccl. Hiſt.

Stow ſaith, it was burnt to the Ground, December the 18th, A. D. 1543; and in it Archbiſhop Cranmer's Brother-in-Law, and ſeveral other Men.

When Archbiſhop Parker came to the See, he repaired, and almoſt new built this Houſe again; for he expended near 1500 Pound on the Work; (a great Sum in thoſe Days:) And on the Queen's Birth-Day, 1573, feaſted Her Majeſty, and a great Company of the Nobility, and Foreign Miniſters here: As before, in 1519, the Emperor Charles, and K. Henry the VIIIth, had been ſumptuouſly treated in this Palace.

In the late Civil Wars it was pulled down; and hath ever ſince been converted into Tenements, and in that State it now continues.

But the Arms of Archbiſhop Parker are ſtill remaining in Stone, on the upper Part of the Wall, at the South End of the Palace. Vid. Battely's Cant. p. 45.

A particular Account of the Cathedral-Church of Canterbury, I ſhall give you in the Introduction to the Lives of the Archbiſhops.

And the other Churches in this City are treated of, under their Proper Names; as the Hoſpitals, Schools, &c. are among the Religious Houſes, Hoſpitals, Schools, &c.

The Decay of this Palace, and the Archbiſhops uſually Reſiding at Lambeth, and eſpecially the Suppreſſion of the Religious Houſes, have been the Occaſion of the Decay of the Wealth and Grandeur of this City, and have reduced it now to a very mean State; and there is no Likelihood of its ever Recovering any thing of its Ancient Riches and Splendor.

In the 25th Year of King Edward the IIId, a Staple was (by Act of Parliament) ſet up at Canterbury, in Honour of Thomas Becket (b); and thereby the Merchants were obliged to carry their Staple-Commodities (ſuch as Wool, Leather, Lead, Tin, Cloth, &c.) to this Market: But how long it ſtay'd here, I don't find; for it was in the King's Power to alter the Place of the Staple, as he often did; but ſuch Alteration was confirmed by Acts of Parliament.

(b) Abridgment of the Tower-Records.

About the End of the Year 1568, Duke D' Alva perſecuting (with the utmoſt Cruelty and Barbarity) the Inhabitants of the Low-Countries; many of them fled over hither, and were very kindly, and wiſely received by Queen Elizabeth; and permitted to ſettle in this City, at Sandwich, and Maidſtone in this County, and in ſeveral other Parts of the Nation. Theſe diſtreſſed Foreigners brought over with them ſeveral uſeful and beneficial Manufactures; as the Making of Bays and Says, and other Linen and Woollen Works. Or, to give it you in their own Words, expreſſed in an Article given in by them to the Mayor and Aldermen of this City; Artes ad quas exercendas ſunt vocati, & in quibus laborare cupit tota Societas, ſub veſtro Favore & Protectione, ſunt, Florence-Serges, Bombaſin, D. of Aſcot Serges, &c. of Orleance, Frotz, Silk-Weaver: Moukade, Mantua's, Bays, &c. Stuff-Moukades.

At Maidſtone, they ſet up the Trade of Thread-making, and at Sandwich, publick Gardening, for Sale; which I believe was the firſt time any Garden-Stuff was ever ſold in the Markets in this Kingdom.

Thoſe which ſettled here, wove all Sorts of plain and fine, flower'd and wrought Silks; and have now brought that Curious Art to ſuch a Degree of Perfection, that the Engliſh Silks equal, if not exceed, for Fineneſs and Curious Workmanſhip, any that are in the World. All which Improvements are owing to theſe Walloons.

About Fifty Years ago, there were very few Maſter-Weavers of that Company (or Occupation) in London, but who were Foreigners, or their Deſcendants: Tho' now indeed, of late Years, the Engliſh (who are very good at following, and improving upon others Inventions) are much more numerous than the Foreigners.

And it was the Perſecutions abroad, that brought in hither alſo, the Wool-Combers, Silk-Dyers, and Silk-Throwers, and many other ſuch like Trades, which depend upon Weaving, &c. By which means, a great Number of our own Poor are kept employed, in London, and many other Places in England; and great Quantities of Raw and Thrown Silk, are imported from Turkey and Italy, in Exchange for our Woollen Manufactures, to the very great Enriching of this Kingdom.

Theſe induſtrious and ingenious Refugees had (and have) a Church allowed them, under the Cathedral at Canterbury. They pay all Parochial Duties; and maintain their own Miniſters, and their own Poor. And therefore I can't but be offended, to find Mr. Somner, in his Hiſtory of Canterbury, p. 97. grumbling at their Increaſe and Proſperity. Nor do I think the Treatment, ſome of their Miniſters met with from Archbiſhop Laud, doth add any Luſtre to his Character.

At firſt thoſe who ſettled here conſiſted of about Eighteen Families.

The Names of thoſe who petition'd the Mayor and Aldermen of Canterbury, and the ſeveral Articles of it, do here follow.

CAPELL near Folkstone, (Capell-Ferne,) lies towards the South-East Part of Kent, near the Sea, about Two Miles and a half North-East from Folkstone; in the Bailiwick of Stowting, Hundred of Folkstone, Lath of Shipway, East Division of the County, and Division of Justices in that Lath.

'Tis in the Diocese of Canterbury, and Deanry of Dover; and the Church is dedicated to St. Mary.

The Liberty of the Archbishop of Canterbury claims here.

'Tis a Chapel only; and usually called Ferne, or Ferme, and annexed to Alcham.

This Place was anciently Part of the Estate of that great Family of the Averenches: But near the End of King John's Reign, Matilda, an only Daughter of that Name, carried this (with the Two Little Manors of Halton, and Wolverton, alias Wolton) into the Possession of her Husband, Hamon de Crevequer, who was called the Great Lord of Kent. But his Son and Heir, Hamon de Crevequer, dying (about the 47th Year of King Henry the IIId) without Issue, that Prince seized upon all his Estate; because he had been in actual Arms against him. However, by the Act of Pacification, made at Kenelworth, it was (in the 50th Year of that King) restored to his Four Sisters. The first of which was married to John de Lenham; the next to Nicholas de Sandwich; and after that, to John de Legrave: The Third, to Bertram de Criol; and the Fourth to William de Patteshall.

On the Division, Capell, and the Two Manors above-mentioned) went to Criol; and by his Daughter and Heir, they went to Sir Richard Rokesley; and by an only one of his, to Thomas de Poynings; in whose Family they continued, till King Henry the VIIIth's Time: And then Sir Edward Poynings, in the 12th Year of that Prince, settled them on his Natural Daughter, in Marriage with Edward Lord Clinton; to whom also they were confirm'd by Grant from the Crown, in the 30th Year of King Henry the VIIIth. But in the 2d Year of Queen Mary, they were sold to Mr. Henry Herdson; whose Grandson, Francis Herdson, conveyed them to his Uncle, Mr. John Herdson; who dying without Issue, left them to his Kinsman, Sir Basil Dixwell, of Broom in Barnham: And in his Possession they were in Philpot's Time.

Caldham, is another Manor in this Parish, of old possess'd by a Family of that Name: But in King Richard the IId's Time, it was passed away to that of Baker, a Name of great Note hereabouts; and had a peculiar Chancel in Folkstone Church. John Baker was Gentleman-Porter of Calais, in the Reigns of King Henry the Vth and VIth: But dying without Heirs-Male; by Marrying a Daughter to Robert Brandred, gave him Possession of this Estate. He sold it to Sir Thomas Brown; whose Grandson, Sir Matthew Brown, in the 36th Year of King Henry the VIIIth, exchanged it for other Lands with that Prince. And he granted it to William Wilford, John Bennet, and George Briggs: And they all agreed in a Sale of it to John Tufton, Esq; Ancestor to the Right Honourable John Earl of Thanet, who was the Possessor in Philpot's Time.

CAPELL near Tunbridge, lies towards the South-West Part of Kent, about Three Miles East from Tunbridge. Part of it is in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Twyford; and the rest is in the Bailiwick of the Lowy of Tunbridge, in the Hundred of Wachlingstone, and Hadlow Borough.

'Tis all of it in the Lath of Aylesford, West Division of the County, and South one of Justices in that Lath.

'Tis in the Diocese of Rochester, and Deanery of Malling.

The Church stands in Hadlow-Borough, and was dedicated to S. Thomas the Martyr; by whom, I suppose, is meant Thomas Becket.

Philpot saith nothing of this Place. 'Tis not valued in the King's Books. And, I suppose, (answering to its Name) was only a Chapel annexed to some other Place; but to what I don't find.

CHALKE, (Chealke,) lies at the North Part of Kent, near the Thames, about Two Miles and a half Eastward from Gravesend; in the Bailiwick of Hoo, Hundred of Shamell, Lath of Aylesford, West Division of the County, and North one of Justices in that Lath.

It is in the Deanery and Diocese of Rochester; and the Church is dedicated to the Blessed Virgin.

'Tis a Vicarage; Valued in the King's Books at 6 l. 3 s. 8 d. per Annum.

By some Ruins which I saw about the Church, I judge it to have been much larger formerly, than it is at present. In it are Memorials of the Interment of William Martin, Esq; 1416, a good Benefactor to this Parish.

The Tythes of this Parish, saith Kilburn, were given to the Church of Rochester by King Henry the 1st: But I believe it was not the Tythes of the whole Parish. For in our Cust. Roffense, a MS. written about 1320, I find mention made only of Half the Tythe of the Demesne of Hugo de Nova Villa, in Chealke; and the Tythes of his Tenants there, as belonging to that Church: And in our Dotation-Charter, given us by King Henry the VIIIth, 'tis called only a Portion of Tythes.

It

It appears, ſaith Philpot, by Kirby's Inqueſt of Kent, a MS. in the Exchequer, and written in the 9th Year of King Edward the Iſt; That Chalke was formerly Part of the Eſtate belonging to the Abbey of Bermondſey, near London. And here it continued till the General Diſſolution; and then was granted by K. Henry the VIIIth to George Lord Brook: Whoſe Great Grandſon, Sir William Brook, dying (1643) without Iſſue-Male, it went to his Kinſman, Sir John Brook: And he ſold it to James Duke of Lenox; whoſe Son, Eſme Stuart Duke of Lenox, was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

Places of Note here:

Felborough, Clam-Lane, and Rainhurſt, are Three Places here, which formerly were Part of the Eſtate of the Family of Cobham: Henry de Cobham held them, in the 9th Year of King Edward the Iſt; as appears by Kirby's Inqueſt of Kent. And in this Family they continued, till the Reign of King Henry the VIth; but then they got into the Poſſeſſion of Brent: And in the 8th Year of King Henry the VIIth, John Brent, Eſq; ſold them to Sir Henry Wiat; whoſe Grandſon, Sir Thomas, forfeited them to the Crown in the 2d Year of Queen Mary. And Queen Elizabeth, in her 37th Year, granted them by Leaſe to Sir Peter Manwood: He paſſed them to Manfield; and he to Mr. James Criſpe. But the Fee-Simple remaining ſtill in the Crown; King Charles the Iſt, An. 1630, granted them to the City of London; who ſold them to the ſaid Mr. James Criſpe: And he, by his laſt Will and Teſtament, deviſed them to his Two Sons, Mr. Thomas and James Criſpe; and there theſe Lands continued in Philpot's Time.

CHALLOCK, lies towards the South-Eaſt Part of Kent, about Two Miles North-Weſtward from Wye; in the Bailiwick and Lath of Scray, Hundred of Felborough, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in the Lath of Shipway. 'Tis in the Deanery of Bridge, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; and the Church is dedicated to St. Coſmus and Damianus. It was founded, or rebuilt, by one of the Eminent Family of the Apuldorefeilds; whoſe Arms are, or were, in the Glaſs-Windows of the Church, and in the Stone-Work, in ſeveral Places; viz. a Croſs voided.

The Church is only a Chapel annexed to Godmerſham, and ſo not Rated in the King's Books.

A Fair is kept here on September 27, being the Day of the Church's Dedication. It was granted by King William the Firſt: And the Advantage of it belongs to the Lords of the Manor of Wye.

Places here of Note, are,

1. Otterpley; which was an Eminent Seat belonging to the Ancient Family of Apuldorefeild. In the 38th Year of King Henry the IIId, Henry de Apuldorefeild was Poſſeſſor of this Place. His Great Grandſon, Henry, was Sheriff of Kent in the 50th Year of King Edward the IIId, and held his Shrievalty here at Challock. His Houſe was near Eaſtwell, in the Earl of Winchelſea's Upper Park; called from him, Apuldorefeild's Garden.

From this Name, this Manor went, (in Part at leaſt) even before his being Sheriff, to Edmund de Haut; for he died poſſeſſed of it in the 44th Year of King Edward III.

In the Beginning of King Richard the IId's Reign, it was got into the Name of Poynings: And Richard Lord Poynings leaving only a Daughter, (Eleanor,) it went by her in Marriage (in the 11th Year of King Richard the IId) to Henry Piercy, Earl of Northumberland: And in this Family it ſtaid, till the 23d Year of King Henry the VIIIth; and then Henry Earl of Northumberland ſold it to Sir Thomas Cheyney, William Walſingham, and William Fitz-Williams; who ſoon joined in a Conveyance of it to Sir Chriſtopher Hales. And his Son, Sir James Hales, about the End of that Prince's Reign, ſold it to Sir Thomas Moyle; by whoſe Daughter (Katherine,) it went in Marriage to Sir Thomas Finch; and from him, by Deſcent, into the Family of the Earl of Winchelſea.

2. Loringden is a Place here, which ſeems once to have had Owners of that Name; there being a Place in this Pariſh, which now is called Loringden's Foreſtall. And there is a Tradition of ſuch a Family ſtill remaining among the People, ſaith Philpot, concerning a Combat, which a Loringden was to have fought with one of the Apuldorefeilds of Otterpley; about his Building a Chapel in the Valley, which Loringden pretended was on his Ground. But this Name was extinct here about King Henry the IVth's Reign: And then this Place came into the Poſſeſſion of the Cadmans; ſome of which Name (about the Middle of King Henry the VIth) were alſo the Proprietors of,

3. Dean, another Place here; which anciently was the Eſtate of a Family which wrote it ſelf At-Dean, and ſometimes A-Dean; and at laſt Dean.

Both theſe Places, by the Marriage of a Daughter of the Name of Cadman, went to Plomer; and from thence were ſold to Pierce; in which Family the Poſſeſſion continued in Philpot's Time.

4. Black Foreſtall is a Place in this Pariſh, from whence you may ſee both the Seas; viz. to the Buoy in the Nore one way, and over Romney-Marſh (towards Rye) the other way.

5. Badſted, which was once the Seat of a Family whoſe Name was Luckin, as I find by the Dering MS.

CHARING, (anciently Cering, Cerringes, and Cherringes,) lies towards the South-Eaſt Part of Kent, about Four Miles to the South-Eaſtward from Leneham; in the Bailiwick of Chart and Longbridge, Hundred of Calehill, Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in the Lath of Shipway.

'Tis in the Deanery of Charing, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; and the Church is dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul: Which is a fair large Building, with a very good Tower.

The Rectory is impropriate to the Church of St. Paul's, London; and, with the annexed Chapel of Egerton, is valued in the King's Books at 47 l. 5 s. 4 d. The Vicarage is in their Gift, and valued at 13 l. per Annum.

The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims over the Manor of Charing.

A. D. 1500, the Church was much damaged by Fire; which was occaſioned (ſaith Weaver) by Firing a Gun at a Pigeon; and the Monuments of Brent, an Ancient Family here, were defaced by it: But the Arms of Hugh Brent, Eſq; and the Badge of King Edward the IVth, which is a Roſe, do, or did lately remain on the Stones of the Belfrey; which was rebuilt by that Gentleman with thoſe Materials, it being before of Wood.

The Chapel at the South-Side of the Chancel was built by Amy Brent, in King Richard the IId's Reign, and then alſo was much impaired by the Fire; but was repaired again by the Derings, into whoſe Family the Ancient Houſe of the Brents (in this Pariſh) came by Marriage of one of that Name.

There is alſo a Place in this Church, called Burleigh Chantry, mentioned by Philpot, p. 107, as being built, probably, by ſome of that Name.

In King Richard the IId's Time, (if you will believe the Vulgar Tradition) the Block on which John the Baptiſt was beheaded, was brought into England, and kept in this Church.

There are Two Fairs here yearly; one kept upon St. George's, the other on St. Luke's Day.

Places of Note here;

1. Charing-Manor, which did very anciently belong to the Archbiſhops of Canterbury, was held in Ancient Demeſne; and is called in Domeſday Survey, Proprium Manerium Archiepiſcopi. But about 920 Years ago, it was taken away from Archbiſhop Janibert, by King Offa; and, at the Requeſt of Archbiſhop Athelard, was reſtored again to the See by King Kenulf, A. D. 789.

Here was an Ancient Seat, or Houſe, of the Archbiſhops of Canterbury; which was much augmented, and well repaired, by that great Prelate Archbiſhop Morton.

The Ruins of which are ſtill remaining, and ſhew it to have been a large Pile of Building.

This Manor continued in the Church, till the great Exchange made by Cranmer, in the 29th Year of King Henry the VIIIth; and then the Fee-Simple of it was veſted in the Crown, ſaith Philpot. But he carries it no further, nor mentions any Grant of it ſince.

2. Petts; which is a Manor here, that had anciently Owners of that Name, in King Henry the IIId's, and King Edward the Iſt's Reign, (as Philpot ſaith, appeared from Evidences in the Hands of Sir Robert Honeywood.) But from the Publick Records it appears, That Jeffery de Newcourt, Son of Walter, paid Aid for it, at making the Black Prince Knight; and conſequently, it was then in the Poſſeſſion of that Family. Theſe were Lords of the Manor of

3. New-Court, a Place not far diſtant from hence; which they alſo paid Aid for at the ſame time.

Sometime after this, Petts and New-Court were ſold to Hatch: And from this Name, they went the ſame way to William Warham, about the End of King Henry the VIIth. And he, at the Beginning of the next Reign, ſold them to Robert At-Water; whoſe ſole Daughter and Heir (Mary,) carried them in Marriage to Robert Honeywood, Eſq; of Henwood in Poſtling; whoſe Great Grandſon, Sir Robert Honeywood, was the Poſſeſſor of them in Philpot's Time. But by Frances, a Daughter of Sir Philip Honeywood, it is now become the Eſtate of George Sayer, Eſq; late of Boucher-Hall, in Eſſex; and who now reſides here.

4. Stilley is a little Manor in Charing, which (in King Henry the IIId's Time) was in the Poſſeſſion of John de Frene. Next it went into the Propriety of the Brockhulls. But about the 12th Year of King Henry the IVth, Henry Brockhull, Second Son to Sir Thomas Brockhull, ſold this and Newland to John Darell, Eſq; Son of Sir William Darell; in which Family it continued in Philpot's Time.

5. Wickins, is another Manor in this Pariſh, which anciently was the Seat and Eſtate of the Brents. John de Brent paid Aid for it in the 20th Year of King Edward the IIId: And here another John Brent feaſted King Henry the VIIIth, as he went to the Siege of Bologn.

After ſome Deſcents in this Family, Margaret, Siſter to Thomas Brent, carried it in Marriage to John Dering, of Surrenden-Dering, Eſquire. In which Family Wickins continued in Philpot's Time.

6. Newland, is an Eminent Manor in Charing, which anciently had Owners of that Name. Sir John de Newland lived here in the Firſt Year of King Edward the Iſt's Reign; (Sealing with an Eſcallop upon a Chevron.) But this Family was extinct here by the End of King Edward the IIId's Reign; and then it gave place to Brockhull, of Calebill: In whoſe Name this Place continued till King Henry the IVth's Time; and then Henry Brockhull ſold this and Stilley above-mentioned, to John Darell, Eſq; in whoſe Family it continued in Philpot's Time.

7. Everſley, is a Place which lies partly in Charing, and partly in Stalesfield; and once was the Seat of Brian de Everſley, a Man of Note in King Henry the IIId's, and King Edward the Iſt's Reigns; and is mentioned in the Leiger-Book of Feverſham, as a Benefactor to that Abbey. After him, this Place came into the Poſſeſſion of Peyforer; and thence, by an Heir-General, it went to Thomas St. Leger, Eſq;: By whoſe Daughter, it paſſed to Henry Aucher; and continued in that Family, till Sir Anthony Aucher (in Queen Elizabeth's Time) ſold it to Michael Sondes, Eſq; and ſo by Sir George's Daughter, it went into the Rockingham Family; as Lees-Court alſo did. Which ſee.

8. Trembatch, is a Place in Charing, which once was Part of the Eſtate of Barham, a Family formerly of great Note in this County; but in the 11th Year of King Henry the IVth, was by Richard Barham, ſold to John Haut; who not long after ſent it the ſame way to Henry Malmains; by one of whoſe Daughters, (Agnes,) it went to Thomas Goldwell. In whoſe Family it continued till the 42d Year of Queen Elizabeth, and then was alienated to Robert Gaunt; whoſe Son (Thomas) gave it firſt to his Brother, George Gaunt, but in Defect of Iſſue, to Thomas Carliſle, who was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

9. Broughton is a Manor here, which once had Owners of that Name. Adam de Broughton, or Brocton, flouriſhed here in King Edward the Iſt's Reign: And in this Family it continued till the End of King Richard the IId; and then was ſold to Paunſhurſt. And in this Name it ſtay'd, till Joan Paunſhurſt deceaſing without Iſſue, it went (according to a Settlement before made by her Father, A. D. 1503,) to her Kinſman, Thomas Pain: And in this Name it ſtay'd till King Charles the Iſt's Reign; and then was ſold to Withick, whoſe Son was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

10. Acton, is a Place alſo here, which was once in the Poſſeſſion of the Ancient and Noble Family of the Beaufits, who reſided here before they went to Twidall in Gillingham. Robert Beaufits held it in King Henry the IIId's Reign: And it was his Grandſon, of the ſame Name, that planted himſelf at Twidall, about the 4th Year of King Edward the IIId. But towards the End of King Henry the VIIth, this Name went out in Daughters; One of which Marrying Robert Arnold, carried it to him; and his Son William Arnold ſold it to Sir Anthony Sondes, about the Middle of King Henry the VIIIth's Reign. His Grandſon, Sir Richard Sondes, ſold it to Hutchins; and from him it went the ſame way to Godden, the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

There is a Tradition, that the Old Palace here above-mentioned to belong to the Archbiſhop, was once King John's; and that this Pariſh was formerly a much larger Place, and had a great Reſort to it, (as lying in the uſual Road between Canterbury and London) before Rocheſter-Bridge was built; the common Road then croſſing the Medway at Aylesford.

They tell you alſo, that on the Top of the Hill near Charing, there was once a famous Croſs; which being carried to London, was ſet up there, and gave Name to the Place where it ſtood; which is to this Day called Charing-Croſs.

But

But it is more probable, that both this Place, and Charing-Croſs at London, took their Names from the Saxon Ceppe, a Courſe or Change, and the Turning or Winding of a Way: And, perhaps, hence comes our Word Chair-Woman; one hired pro hac vice: We ſay alſo, the Beer is charred, or changed from its natural and ſound State. &c.

CHARLTON, (Ceorleton) near Dover, lies at the South-Eaſt Side of Kent, by a fine Rivulet ariſing near it, about a Mile to the Northward from Dover; in the Bailiwick of Stowting, Lath of St. Auſtin, and Eaſt Diviſion of the County. Part of it is within the Liberties of the Town and Port of Dover, and Diviſion of Juſtices belonging thereunto; and the Reſt is in the Hundred of Bewsborow, and Diviſion of Juſtices in the Lath of St. Auſtin.

The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims over this Pariſh. 'Tis in the Deanery of Dover, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Church ſtands in the Hundred of Bewsborow, and is dedicated to St. Peter. A Rectory, but not now Valued in the King's Books; though Anno Domini 1578, I find by a Manuſcript, it was then Rated there at 5*l. per Annum*.

Philpot ſaith nothing about this Place; nor Lambard, Somner, nor Wever.

CHARLTON near Greenwich, (Cerlentune, and Ceorſleton in ſome old Deeds) lies at the North-Weſt Side of Kent, near the Thames, about two Miles Weſtward from Woolwich, in the Bailiwick of Sutton Bromley, Hundred of Blackheath, Lath of Sutton at Hone, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Upper One of Juſtices in that Lath. In the Deanery of Dartford, and Dioceſe of Rocheſter. The Church is dedicated to St. Luke.

A Fair annually on St. Luke's Day is kept here, uſually called Horn-Fair; and is a Time of great Diverſion for Apprentices and Servants in the City of London.

Places of Note are,

1. Charlton, which anciently belonged to William Fitz Oger, as appears by Doomſday-Book, but was afterwards given to the Monaſtry of Bermondſey near Southwark, by Robert Bloets, Biſhop of Lincoln, in the Second Year of King William the IId. And King Henry the Third, by Charter in his Fifty-Third Year, granted a Fair here for Three Days, and a Market weekly for the Benefit of the Abbey; but both are diſuſed.

I ſuppoſe on the Diſſolution it went to the Crown; for King James the Firſt granted the Manor to Sir Edward Newton, Knight and Baronet, who was Tutor to his Son Prince Henry, and built here a very fine Houſe; and impowered by Will Sir David Comingham, his Brother Mr. Newton, and Mr. Peter Newton, Cofferer to King Charles the Firſt, to Repair and Beautify the Pariſh Church, which they diſcharged ſo well, that 'tis one of the fineſt Churches in the County.

2. Kedbroke is a Place here, which formerly was a Pariſh by it ſelf; and in King Henry the VIth's Time was appropriated to the Priory of St. Mary Overey in Southwark; But the Vicarage not being endowed, it fell into Neglect and Decay; and the Inhabitants not being able to Repair the Church, and having for many Years reſorted to Charlton, it became annexed to that Church by Compoſition.

On the Suppreſſion of the Monaſtries, the Manor of Kedbroke came to the Crown from the Priory of Bermondſey: And King James the Firſt, in the beginning of his Reign, ſold it to Sir William Garaway of London, who conveyed it to his Son in Law Edward Blunt, Eſq; and he parted with it to Brian Anneſley, Eſq; by one of whoſe Daughters it went to Sir William Harvey, Created Baron of Roſſe in Ireland; as alſo a Peer of this Kingdom by the Title of Baron Harvey of Kedbroke, by King Charles the Firſt.

In the Church are Memorials of Robert, Son of John de Vere, Earl of Oxford, 1598; of George Segor, Gent, 1594; a White Marble Monument of the Counteſs of Armagh, Daughter to the Earl of Rutland, Married to Langhorn. A fair Monument for Katharine Newton, Daughter to the Lord Keeper Puckering: She Married Adam Newton, of Wales, Eſq; of which Name are ſeveral Memorials here; as alſo of the Blunts.

It is a Rectory, and Valued in the King's Books at 10*l.* 7*s.* 8*d.*

In the Textus Roffenſis, is mention made of a Chapel called Chicebroc, which I fancy was ſomewhere in this Pariſh.

GREAT-CHART, ſometimes written Cert; and by the Saxons was called Selederts Chert, lies towards the South-Eaſt Part of Kent, about Two Miles South-Weſtward from Aſhford; in the Bailiwick of Chart and Longbridge, Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in the Lath of Shipway. It was anciently an Hundred of it ſelf; but now Part is in the Hundred of Chart and Longbridge, and the reſt in that of Calehill.. 'Tis in the Deanery of Charing, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. And the Church, which ſtands in the Hundred of Chart and Longbridge, is called St. Maries; in which is, or was, a Memorial, of the Interment of John Toke of Goddington in this Pariſh, Eſq; above 190 Years ago. Here are alſo Memorials of the Interment of the Goldwells, about 250 Years ſince; one of which, viz. James Goldwell, Biſhop of Norwich, Founded the South Chapel or Chancel of this Church, and in this Place his Picture was formerly to be ſeen: As alſo of Twiſden and Sharp about 200 Years ſince. And in the Window of the North Chancel are, or were, the Pictures of 16 Men, who are reputed to be the Builders of the Church; ſome of whoſe Names Wever ſaith, were Webb, Hoſwyfe, Wred, Turlepin, Malmains, &c. The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims over Chelmanton Burgh; and that of the Dean and Chapter of that Church over the Manor of Great-Chart; being given to it by King Henry the VIIIth in his Thirty-Third Year.

Chart very anciently belonged to the Archbiſhops of Canterbury; and being by King Offa taken from Jannibert, Archbiſhop of this See, was reſtored by King Kenulphus, Anno Domini 788. And going once more from the Church, it was Anno Domini 839, by Archbiſhop Ceolnothus, bought again of one Halethe a Nobleman, and with the Conſent of King Ethelwolf given to Chriſt-Church in Canterbury: Nay, being once more alienated from the Church, and going into the Poſſeſſion of one Egelricke Bigge, he did alſo reſtore it to the ſame, Anno Domini 1044.

The Archbiſhop of Canterbury had anciently a Manſion-Houſe here.

A Fair is kept here on Lady-Day.

Near a Place in this Pariſh called Goldwell, riſes one of the Heads of the Medway.

May 1. A. D. 1580. In the Night an Earthquake was felt here, which much frighted the People, and raiſed them out of their Beds.

The Pariſh is a Rectory, in the Patronage of the Archbiſhop; and Valued in the King's Books at 25*l.* 6*s.*

Places of Note here,

1. Goldwell, is an ancient Manor and Seat in this Pariſh, and had Owners of this Name; which were eminent. Two of which were Bishops, James Goldwell, Bishop of Norwich, A. D. 1472, and principal Secretary of State to King Edward the IVth. He had a Grant to found a Chantry here, which probably he did in the South-Chancel of the Church. And Thomas Goldwell, Bishop of St. Asaph, Anno Domini 1555. And in this Family it continued till King Charles the First's Reign; and then was sold by John Goldwell to Sir William Withins; who parted with it the same way to Sir John Tufton, Ancestor to the Earls of Thanet.

2. Chelmington is another Manor in this Parish, which also had Owners of this Name; the last of which seems to have been John Chelmington, whose Effigies is, or was, among many others in Armour in the Glass Windows of the Church, and who deceased in King Henry the IVth's Time without Issue Male; and by his Daughter, (Elizabeth) this Estate went in Marriage to Roger Twisden, Esq; and in Philpot's Time was in the Possession of Sir Roger Twisden, Baronet.

3. Goddington was also an Old Seat of a Family of this Name. John de Goddington is, or was, painted in Coat-Armour, in a Window in the North Isle of the Church, looking up to a Crucifix placed above him; with Eleven other Gentlemen of Note in these Parts. He had Issue William de Goddington, who lived here in the Fourth Year of King Richard the IId. But he, about the beginning of King Henry the IVth, parted with this Estate to Richard Simon, and John Champneys; who in the Sixth Year of that King joined in a Sale to Thomas Goldwell, whose Daughter and Heir, Agnes, carried it in Marriage to Thomas Tooke of Bare, in which Family it continued in Philpot's Time. Mr. Nicholas Tooke being then Possessor, who had planted here Vineyards with very good Success, as Mr. Philpot tells us.

4. Court Wurthin, is a Place of good Account in Chart, and once likewise had Possessors of the Name of Wurthin; Henry de Wurtin being one of those Gentlemen in Arms, who are painted in the Window of the Church above-mentioned. The last of this Name here was Thomas de Wurtin, who sold this Estate to Thomas Goldwell in the Beginning of King Henry the IVth, and by whose Heir-General it went (with Goddington) to the Family of the Tookes, as above. Philpot saith, that this Name had an Addition to their Coat of Arms granted by King Henry the VIIth, in Reward of the Service of John Tooke, Esq; in an Embassy in which he was employed by that Prince; viz. in the first Quarter, Argent on a Chev'ron, between 3 Greyhounds Heads Erased Sable 3 Plates; and in Queen Elizabeth's Time they bore this only, as also Anno Domini 1690, as appears by two Manuscript Books of the Arms of the Gentlemen of Kent, now in my Possession; one Dated 1593, the other 1639.

5. Singleton, (vulgo Shingleton) is another eminent Seat in this Parish, which had also Owners of this Sirname: (Arms, 2 Chevrons between Three Martlets) And Henry de Singleton is one of those painted Kneeling in Armour in the Church-Window before-named. His Successor, John Singleton, was Justice of Peace for this County, in King Richard the IId's Time; but some time after, this Estate was sold to the Edinghams or Enghams, who handsomly enlarged and adorned the House with new Buildings, and continued here till about the beginning of King James the First; and then Sir Edward Engham sold it to Richard Brown, Esq; a Younger Brother of the Browns of Beckworth-Castle in Surrey, in whose Family it was in Philpot's Time.

Weever observes, that Four Men of the Name of Engham, here succeeded one another, and lived 329 Years: The two first 79 Years each, the third 85, and the fourth 86 Years.

5. Nin-House here was once the Residence of John at Nin, who is one of the Twelve Gentlemen painted in the Glass Window of this Church, (and said to be the Founders of it, probably good Benefactors) and whose Family enjoyed this Seat and Estate till King Henry the VIth's Time, and then it was sold to Sharp: And William Sharp of this Place died 1499, and lies Buried with his Five Wives in the Church, as an Inscription on his Tomb, mentioned by Weever, did shew; and in this Name it continued in Philpot's Time.

LITTLE-CHART, lies towards the South-East Part of Kent by the Stoure, about Four Miles South-Eastward from Leneham, in the Bailiwick of Chart and Longbridge, Hundred of Calehill, Lath of Scray, East Division of the County, and Division of Justices in the Lath of Shipway: In the Deanery of Charing, Diocese of Canterbury. The Church is called St. Maries, which was either Built, or effectually Repaired, by Stephen Norton, Esq; who is buried there. 'Tis a fair small Church, with a good Tower Steeple.

The Liberty of the Church of Canterbury claims over the Manor of Little-Chart, being given to it in the Thirty-third Year of King Henry the VIIIth.

Philpot saith, King Offa had taken it from the Priory of Christ-Church in Canterbury, to which it before belonged, and that it was restored by King Kenulf of Mercia, Anno Domini 799; and that also Anno Domini 1044, one Elleric Bigge confirmed this Donative.

Places of Note in this Parish:

There was half a Sullinge, or Plow-Land here called,

1. Pett, which in King William the First's Reign, was held by William Fitz Herminfred, of the Archbishop of Canterbury in Fee; which Manor was many Generations since given in Fee-Farm, by Grant from the Monks of Christ-Church in Canterbury, to the Brockhulls, who in the Fourth Year of King Henry the IVth, sold it, and Calehill, to John Darell, Esq; and at the Suppression, it was confirmed by King Henry the VIIIth to Sir James Darell; reserving a small Rent out of it to the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury; and in this Family it was in Philpot's Time.

2. Calehill, is an eminent Manor here which gives Name to the whole Hundred; and in King Henry the IIId's Time was in the Possession of a Family called Frene. Hugh de Frene, in the First Year of King Edward the First, had a Charter of Free-Warren for his Estate here; but about the Middle of King Edward the IIId, this Place (with Stilling in Charing) was sold to Sir Thomas Brockhull, who paid Aid for them at making the Black-Prince Knight. His Son of the same Name was Sheriff of Kent in the Seventh and Eight Years of King Richard the IId; whose Son Henry, in the Fourth Year of King Henry the IVth, sold Calehill to John Darell, Esq; of Sezay in Yorkshire, saith Philpot. But Darell, in his Manuscript of Dover-Castle, saith, their Family came out of Wiltshire in King Henry the IVth's Reign, and had first the Village of Hurst. This John Darell was Steward to Archbishop Chichley: And his Younger Brother, Sir William Darell, was Under-Treasurer of England.

And Stilley also, above-mentioned, came to this Family the same way; so that in the Third Year of King Henry the VIth, James Darell, Esq; had a Charter of Free-Warren for both Places. Next was John Darell, Esq; who was Sheriff of Kent in the Seventh Year of King Henry the VIIth; and he was Knighted by that Prince, and made Captain of the Lanciers in this Part of the County. His Son, Sir James Darell, was Knighted Knighted at Tournay, and made Governor of Guines and Hames-Caſtle near Calais, 1562; in which Family it continued in Philpot's Time with Stilley in Charing.

Many of this Family lie in the Chapel and Chancel of the Church, which is called St. Katherines; and particularly John Darell, Eſq; Second Brother of Sir Robert Darell of Cale-Hill, who Married the Lady Harfleet; he was Twenty-Six Years Gentleman-Harbinger to King James, and King Charles the Firſt; and died 1648. His Daughter Jane was Married to Richard Spicer of Devonſhire, Eſq;

In the Church is alſo a Braſs Inſcription, with two Figures of John Darell, Eſq; and his Lady, who was Seneſchal or Steward to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, 1478.

A Fair, White Marble Monument of Sir John Darell, 1509.

One Branch of this Family ſettled at Littlecot in Wiltſhire, who bear for Diſtinction a Croſs-Croſslet; as thoſe of Calehill do a Trefoil ſlipt on the Shoulder of the Lyon, which is their Coat-Armour.

There is alſo a fair Monument of Two Sir John Darells of Calehill. The former of theſe Married firſt a Dering and than a Denne. And Elizabeth, Daughter of the former Wife, was Married to the Second Sir John Darell, who was an eminent Member of Parliament in the Reigns of King Charles the IId, and King William, and Queen Mary: The Former died 1675; the Latter 1694.

The preſent Mr. Darell of Calehill ſhewed me the Pedigree of his Family, which is as finely done as any thing of that Kind I have met with.

In the Church are alſo Monuments of Two Cambdens of London, who Married into the Darell's Family.

3. Burleigh is another Manor, which lies partly in Little-Chart, and part in Charing, and which anciently had Owners of that Name. And there is a Place, as I obſerved before in Charing-Church, which is called Burleigh's-Chantry; being probably founded by them. But this Family were extinguiſhed here about the beginning of King Edward the Third; and then the St. Johns, (written in the Latin Deeds de Sancto Johanne) became Poſſeſſors of it. But before the End of this Prince's Reign they alſo were gone from hence, and made way for a Family called Dalingryg, originally of Hampſhire, and who came in here by Purchaſe. From this Name it went the ſame way to the Brockhulls of Calehill; and from thence to the Darells of that Place, in whoſe Poſſeſſion it continued in Philpot's Time.

Wever mentions a Place called Norton's Place; which was perhaps once the Seat of the Family of the Nortons; one of which is ſaid to be the Founder of the Church.

Several Urns, with Bones and Aſhes in them, were dug up in this Pariſh near the Warren-Houſe by Calehill, on the Left Hand as you go thither from Sandway, in the Road to Charing; and not far from the Place where the Poſt of Directions now ſtands; as I was informed by the ingenious Juſtinian Champneys, Eſq; of Boxley-Abbey.

The Reverend Mr. Fotherby, once Rector of this Church, gave 40*s.* per Annum to the Poor of this and of Hedcorne Pariſh; at the Diſpoſal of the Miniſter and Church-Wardens of each Pariſh. The Lands from whence it is paid lye in both Pariſhes.

CHART-SUTTON, (Chart near Sutton Valence, and Chart-Green) lies towards the Middle of Kent, about Four Miles South-Eaſtward from Maidſtone, in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Eyehorne, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Eaſt Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. In the Deanery of Sutton, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Church is dedicated to St. Michael, large, and handſome, and lately new Pewed. A Vicarage impropriate to the Church of Rocheſter, which is Patron of it; Rated in the King's Books at 8*l.* 12*s.* 8*d.* ½.

Places of Note here:

1. Norton-Place, an Ancient Manor and Seat, which had once Owners of the Name of Norton. In the South Window of the Church was formerly the Picture of Stephen Norton, with his Arms Painted on his Tabard or Surcoat; and near him in the ſame Manner, of one Chriſtmas of Eaſt-Sutton. This Norton flouriſhed in Richard the IId's Reign; and this Eſtate continued in the Family till about King James the Firſt; and then was ſold to Baker; and thence in a little time it went the ſame way to Sir Edward Hales, whoſe Grandſon Sir Edward Hales, Baronet, was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time. But, together with Sutton Valence, it was after this ſold to Drake, and is now become, by Purchaſe, the Eſtate of Sir Chriſtopher Des-bouvery.

2. The Den of Ivetigh is a Place here alſo, which formerly was poſſeſſed by a Family of the Name of Ivetigh who were here in King Henry the VIth's Reign, and probably long before. From this Name it went into that of Maſcall, a Family which formerly had an Eſtate at Berming. Hence it went by Sale to Lamb; and from that Name it paſſed the ſame way to Perry, Extracted from the Perries of Worceſterſhire: And by Elizabeth, a Daughter of that Family, Part of it went in Marriage to Mr. Thomas Petley of Vilſton; Anne and Mary, Two other Siſters being Co-heirs with her; and here the Eſtate was in Philpot's Time.

3. Almery-Green is a Place in this Pariſh, ſo called, I ſuppoſe, by Corruption from Almnery; for it was formerly given to the Almnery of the Priory of Rocheſter; and on the general Suppreſſion, to the Dean and Chapter of that Church, who have Land here at this Time.

4. Leſted is alſo an ancient Seat here not mentioned by Philpot; and which formerly belonged to the Family of Potman: And Sir Richard Potman ſold it to Simon Smith, Gent. then of Buckland; from whom, after ſeveral Deſcents, it is now come into the Poſſeſſion of the preſent Vicar of the Place, Mr. John Smith, Rector alſo of Haſtingleigh in this County.

CHARTHAM. (Certeham, Certaham, Chartam) lies towards the Eaſt Part of Kent, by the Stoure, about Two Miles and a Half South-Weſt from Canterbury; in the Eaſt Diviſion of the County. Part of it is in the Bailiwick and Lath of Scray, and Hundred of Felborow; and the Reſt in the Lath of St. Auſtin, and Bailiwick and Hundred of Bridge and Petham. 'Tis all in the Diviſion of Juſtices of the Lath of Shipway. In the Deanery of Bridge, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Church is called St. Maries, is large and handſome with a Croſs-Iſle, a good Tower, and a very fair large Chancel.

The Liberty of the Dean of Canterbury claims over the Manor of Chartham, as being given to that Church by Duke Elfred, Anno Domini 871, ſome ſay 970, confirmed afterwards by King Edward the Confeſſor, Anno Domini 1052; and on the Diſſolution of the Abbeys, again granted by King Henry the VIIIth, in the Thirty-Third Year of his Reign, to the Dean and Chapter of that Church.

A Rectory, Archbiſhop Patron; Valued in the King's Books at 4*l.* 5*s.* 10*d.*

In this Pariſh was a Manſion-Houſe belonging to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury. And here Robert Winchelſea retired, when he refuſed to aſſiſt King

King Edward the Firſt with Money; and feared his Diſpleaſure for his Practices againſt his Father King Henry the IIId.

Places of Note here:

1. Denſted is a Manor in Chartham, which in the Twentieth Year of King Edward the Third, was held by John, Son of Sir John Polre of Polre in Harbledown, as Leſſee to the Priory of Leeds; to which Convent, this Manor was given by Hamon de Crevequer, about the Forty-Seventh Year of King Henry the Third. On the general Diſſolution of the Abbeys, this was granted by King Henry the VIIIth, in his Thirty-Seventh Year, to John Tuſton, Eſq; who, about the Third Year of King Edward the Sixth, ſold it to Richard Argall, Eſq; and not long after, he parted with it the ſame way to Mr. Bartholomew Man, who about the beginning of Queen Elizabeth ſold it alſo to Sir William Lovelace; and he, about the beginning of King James the Firſt, to Sir William Cullimore; whoſe Lady ſold it again to Thomas Steed of Steed-Hill; and he to Sir Thomas Swan of Southfleet; whoſe Son William Swan, Eſq; was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

2. Howfeild is another Place here, which anciently was the Inheritance of the Fogges, a great Family hereabouts. For Sir Thomas Fogge, who lived then at Thanington or Toniford, about the End of King Edward the IIId, purchaſed this Place and Toniford, of one John de Toniford. And in this Name did Houſeild abide for many Generations, till at laſt it was ſold to the Colepepers; whence in a little while it went the ſame way to Vane; and thence in King Charles the Firſt's Reign, to Sir William Mann of Canterbury; from whoſe Deſcendants, it went by Sale to Nathaniel Denew, Eſq; the preſent Poſſeſſor.

3. Shalmsford-Bridge is an eminent Manor here, whoſe Manſion-Houſe is ſituated near the Bridge, which croſſes the Stoure. It was anciently the Seat of a Family of the Name of Shalmsford; who tarried here till about the Beginning of King Henry the VIIth; and then by Anne, a Daughter of that Name, it went to John Petit; but William Petit, a Succeſſor of his, in King James the Firſt's Reign, died, and left only Three Daughters; the Eldeſt of which carried this Manor to her Husband Michael Belke; whoſe Deſcendant Mr. —— Belke, Vicar of Wye, was the Poſſeſſor of it in Philpot's Time. Theſe came from the Belkes of Coperham' Sole in Shelvitch; a Place which had been in the Poſſeſſion of this Name above Four-Hundred Years, when Philpot wrote his Villare Cantianum.

4. Shalmsford-Street is another little Manor in Chartham; which was originally the Seat of the Bolles, who had large Poſſeſſions alſo about Chilham, and the adjacent Parts. From this Family, about the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth, it went by Sale to Cracknall; and thence, in the next Reign, the ſame way to Michel, the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

One Richard Culmer, (called in Contempt Blue-Dick) when Biſhop Laud was in the Tower, got an Order, dated February the 4th, 1642, from the Houſe of Lords, to have this Rectory conferred upon him. And by his Inſtigation, the Cathedral of Canterbury was ſtormed and pillaged, the Beautiful Windows broken, and the Sacred Monuments of the Dead abominably defaced.

Somner's Chartham-News, &c. about the Teeth and Bones dug up here, ſhall be conſidered in the Natural Hiſtory.

Milton, near Canterbury, was once a Chapel to this Church; in which was one of the ancient Seats of the Septuans. And there is a Monument of one of this Family lying in a Croſs-Legg'd Poſture, in the Chancel of this Church of Chartham.

5. There is a Seat in this Pariſh alſo called Myſtole, where Mr. Fogg now lives. This was built by one Mr. John Bungey, who hath a Monument on the Eaſt Wall of the Chancel, 1596.

There is a ſmall diſuſed Chapel on the Stoure, called Horton Parva, which is now a Barn; but the Profits are united to Chartham. See Horton Parva.

CHELSFEILD, (in the Textus Roffenſis, Cilesfeld, i. e. the Cold Field,) lies towards the Weſt End of Kent, about two Miles Southward from St. Mary Cray, in the Bailiwick of Sutton-Bromley; Hundred of Ruxley or Rokeſley; Lath of Sutton at Hone; Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Upper-one of Juſtices in that Lath. In the Deanery of Dartford, and Dioceſe of Rocheſter. The Church is called St. Maries, ſaith Kilburn; But Philpot ſaith it is dedicated to St. James. A Rectory; Valued in the King's Books at 24*l.* 14*s.* 1*d.* And by the Textus Roffenſis it appears, that Fearn Berga, (I ſuppoſe, now Farnborow,) was once a Chapel to this Place.

The Liberty of the Dutchy of Lancaſter claims over the Manors of Chelsfield and Goddington; over Wood-Lands called Charm-wood; and over the Rectory of Chelsfeild.

Chelsfeild had a Grant of a Market, obtained for it in the Eighteenth Year of King Edward the Firſt, to be held every Monday; and a Fair for three Days at St. James's Tide, which ſeems to ſhew that the Church was dedicated to that Saint.

Places of Note here:

1. The Manor of Chelsfeild. This did once belong to a Family of this Name, who obtained the Market above-mentioned. William de Chelsfeild had a Charter of Free-Warren for his Land here, and at Shorham, Nockholt, and Orpington, in the Twelfth Year of King Edward the Firſt. But from this Name, it went ſome how to Otho de Grandiſon, who (as appears by the Record,) paid Aid for it at making the Black-Prince Knight, in the Twentieth Year of King Edward the IIId. Sir Thomas de Grandiſon, his Son, ſold it to Richard Lord Poynings; and his Daughter and Heir, Eleanor, carried it in Marriage to Henry Percy, Earl of Northumberland; in which Family it continued till the Reign of King Henry the VIIth; and then went by Sale to James Walſingham, Eſq; whoſe Son Sir Edward Walſingham, in King Edward the VIth's Reign, ſold it to Giles, deſcended from the Giles of Lords in Shelvich; and from this Name, about the End of Queen Elizabeth, it went the ſame way to Captain Henry Lee of London; and by the Marriage of two of his Siſters, to Serjeant John Clerk of Huntingtonſhire; and to Mr. John Norton of London: It was in their Poſſeſſion in Philpot's Time, but Clerk had the greateſt Share of it.

2. Goddington is another Manor here, which anciently had Owners of the Name of Goddington; for Simon de Goddington paid Aid for it at making the Black-Prince Knight. From this Family it went, but I know not which way, into that of Poynings: And by the Marriage of Eleanor, above-mentioned, Daughter to Richard Lord Poynings, it went to Henry Percy, Earl of Northumberland. How long it ſtaid in this Family, or how it went from it, I know not; but about the Year 1400, it came into the Name of Haddon, a Family of good Account in this Part of Kent; and here the Poſſeſſion continued in Philpot's Time.

3. Hewatt is another ſmall Manor in Chelsfeild, which for many Deſcents was in the Family of the Petlys of Down; and at length falling to a Cadet of that Name, he ſettled himſelf at Moul- ſoe, in this Pariſh: And this Eſtate, after continuing for many Generations in that Branch of the Family of the Petleys, was ſold to Mr. Thomas Petley, of Vielſton in Shoreham; who left it to his Second Son, Mr. Ralph Petley, of Riverhead in Sevenoke; and his Heir was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

4. Northſted, is a Place and Manor here, which in the 32d Year of K. Edward the IIId, came by Purchaſe from Otho de Grandiſon, into the Poſſeſſion of Simon Francis: In which Family it ſtay'd till the Beginning of King Henry the IVth, and then became Part of the Eſtate of the Uvedals, or Udals, a Family of good Note at that Time, and long before. For Sir John de Uvedal was one of thoſe Knights, that ſerved King Edward the Iſt, at the Siege of Carlaverock in Scotland. Sir Peter de Uvedal ſat as Baron in Parliament, in the 8th and 9th Years of King Edward the IId. And Nicholas de Uvedal was Conſtable of Windſor-Caſtle, in King Edward the IIId's Reign.

But William Uvedal, in the 6th Year of King Henry the VIth, ſold this Eſtate to John Shelley, of Bexley; whoſe Deſcendant, William Shelley, about the End of King Henry the VIIIth's Reign, parted with it the ſame way to Mr. John Leonard, of Chevening; and his Great Grandſon, Henry Lord Dacres, ſold it to the Lady Wolrich; and ſhe bequeathed it at her Death to her Kinſman, Mr. ----- Skeggs, of Huntingdonſhire; who, I ſuppoſe, was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

In our Textus Roffenſis, F. 184, are theſe Words:

Arnulfus de Cilesfelda (or Chelsfield) dedit Epiſcopo Gundulfo, & Monachis Sancti Andreæ Roſe, totam medietatem totius Decimæ ſuæ de Cilesfelda; Annonam ſcilicet, & Agnos, & Porcellos, & Caſeos, & Vitulos; & Pullos ſi ibi ſint Equarum; & unum Villicanum, cum quinque Acris Terræ, pro Anima Patris ſui & Matris ſuæ, & pro ſeipſo.

Et Epiſcopus & Monachi ſuſceperunt ipſum Arnulfum, cum Uxore ſua, & Homines ſuos, quos & quot volebat in Fraternitatem, & in Societatem totius Beneficij Eccleſiæ ipſius.

Et ſuper hoc, fecerunt unum Annuale Miſſarum pro defunctis Patre & Matre.

And of ſuch Admiſſions as theſe, of Men, and their Wives, and Children, &c. into the Society or Fraternity of the Monks of the Priory of Rocheſter; there are many Inſtances recorded in this Venerable MS.

Theſe did not all Live within the College; but they were to be accounted of that Sacred Society; to have the Pannos Monachiales ſent them when they were dying; and to have the ſame Service and Prayers ſaid for the Good of their Souls, as was ſaid for the Monks themſelves.

And ſometimes, when they lived near the College, the Women in thoſe Days would wiſely give away all their Income to the Houſe; and then be content to live upon ſuch Holy Meat and Drink, as the Monks would pleaſe to ſend them. As you may perceive by this Record in the ſame Book, F. 190.

Ingelburgis, quæ fuit Uxor Herulfi Sutoris, dedit Manſam ſuam Monachis Sancti Andreæ; & illi tribuerunt ei Victum & Veſtitum, de Elemoſinis illorum, omni vitâ ſuâ; & Societatem conceſſerunt, & Servitium in Fine ſicut pro Sorore permiſſerunt facere.

And I find when the Gift was large, the Monks let their Benefactors eat and drink as well as themſelves. For there is in this Textus, F. 201, an Agreement between the Monks of Rocheſter, and the Wife of one Latimer of Frindsbury; that for a Gift She had given to the College, Promiſerunt ei Victum & Veſtitum, quam diu viveret: Victum videlicet de Celerario, quantum uni Monacho. Et preter hoc, Ferculum unum de Carne, quatuor diebus in Hebdomade. Veſtitum vero de Camerâ Honorabilem, qualem ejus Ætatem & Perſonam deceret. Uni autem ejus Servienti, & uni Pediſſequæ qui ei ſervirent, talem darent Victum, qualem cæteris Eccleſiæ ſervientibus, &c. Et quando obiret, Conventus eam ſepeliret, & Anniverſarium ejus ſingulis annis faceret.

Such Baits as theſe they had to catch all Sorts of People, and to bring continual Profit to their Convent.

And perhaps alſo they might make ſome ſuch uſe of theſe She-Members of their Society, as Lambard thinks Gundulf deſigned the Nuns of the Abbey of Malling for. See his Peramb. p. 453.

CHERITON, lies towards the South-Eaſt Part of Kent, near the Sea, about a Mile and a half to the North-Eaſtward from Hithe; in the Bailiwick of Stowting, Hundred of Folkſtone, Lath of Shipway, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath.

It is in the Deanery of Dover, and Dioceſe of Canterbury.

The Church is called St. Martin's. A Rectory; and Rated in the King's Books at 16*l.* 12*s.* 6*d. per Annum.*

Places of Note here:

1. The Manor of Cheriton was once the Inheritance of an Ancient Family, whoſe Name was Scotton. Robert Scotton, who was Sheriff of Kent in the 7th, 8th, 9th, and 10th Year of K. Edward the Iſt, lived here, and kept his Shrievalty at this Place. He was alſo Lieutenant of Dover-Caſtle, under that Prince; and held this Manor, as a whole Knight's Fee of the Lord of Folkſtone.

But about the End of King Edward the IId's Reign, ſome of this Eminent Family conveyed this Manor, or ſent it in Marriage to Valoigns. And in this Eminent Name it ſtay'd alſo but a little while: For Waretius de Valoigns leaving only Daughters, by one of them it went in Marriage to Sir Thomas Fogg, who was ſeveral times Knight of the Shire for Kent, in the Reign of King Edward the IIId, and King Richard the Second.

Sir Francis Fogg, one of this Family, lies buried in Cheriton-Church, with his Effigies croſslegg'd, as one under the Vow of the Cruſade. And in this Eminent Family this Manor continued, till about the End of Queen Elizabeth; and then George Fogge, Eſq; ſold it to Mr. Henry Brockman, Grandfather to Mr. James Brockman, the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time: And in that Family, I ſuppoſe, it ſtill continues.

2. Enbroke, is another Manor in Cheriton, which (in the 20th Year of King Henry the IIId) was in the Poſſeſſion of Peter de Alkham; and after ſome Deſcents in this Family, was bought by one Enbroke; who Settling, and Building a Manſion-Houſe here, very probably gave that Name to it, which it ſtill retains. John de Enbroke was Proprietor of it, in the 20th Year of King Edward the IIId, as appears by the Book of Aid. Michael Enbroke was a great Benefactor to the Fabrick of Cheriton-Church, in King Richard the IId's Reign: And 'tis probable, ſaith Philpot, thoſe Ancient Tombs in the Chancel, are Memorials of ſome of this Family; the laſt of which here was John Enbroke, who died here about the End of King Henry the IVth. After this, it came ſome how into the Poſſeſſion of Thorold, or Torold: For Walter Torold ſold it to Nicholas Evering, in the 17th Year of King Henry the VIth. And in this Ancient Family

Family it remained, till about the End of King James the Ist; and then was sold to Mr. John Honeywood, of Elmsted; whose Descendant, Edward Honeywood, Esq; was the Possessor in Philpot's Time.

3. There is another Manor in Cheriton also, called by this Name of Enbroke, once belonging to the See of (or rather perhaps to Christ-Church in) Canterbury; tho' Philpot saith, he can't find how it came thither. But it was assumed by Queen Elizabeth, in her First Year; and about the latter End of her Reign, granted to Sir Edwyn Sandys: Whose Son, Henry Sandys, Leased it to John Marsham, Esq;; and he transmitted that Part of his Estate which lay in Cheriton, to Colonel Richard Sandys; and that Part which lay in Waldershare, (of which he had bought the Propriety) to Sir Thomas Pettus, of Suffolk, Baronet.

N. B. This is Philpot's Account, on which I cannot much rely, tho' I have altered it a little, to make it consistent.

4. Caseborn, is also a Manor here, which is not mention'd by Philpot; and is now in the Possession of Sir William Honeywood; and hath continued in that Name for Ten Generations. It came into this Ancient Family, by William Honeywood, of Henewood, Esq; who married Katherine, the Daughter and Heir of Caseborn, of Caseborn. Here was formerly a Castle, or Castellated Mansion; the Ruins of which, and the Site, are still visible in a Place now o'regrown with Wood.

CHESILHURST, (in the Textus Roffensis, Cicelherst) lies towards the West End of Kent, about Three Miles East from Bromley; in the Bailiwick of Sutton-Bromley, Lath of Sutton at Hone, West Division of the County, and Upper one of Justices in that Lath.

A small Part of it lying towards Foot Scray, is in the Hundred of Blackheath; and the rest in that of Ruxley: In which Hundred the Church stands, and is dedicated to St. Nicholas.

'Tis in the Diocese of Rochester, and Deanery of Dartford.

A Rectory; Royal Value 16 l. 3 s. 6 d.

King Henry the Ist gave this Church to St. Andrew's in Rochester.

Here is the Burying-Place of the Family of Walsingham.

Places of Note here:

1. Scadbury, is a Place in this Parish, which formerly had Owners of this Name. But in the 20th Year of King Edward the Ist, John de Scadbury dying without Issue-Male, this Estate went to Osmund de Walsingham, descended from a Family of that Name in Norfolk, by the Marriage of Anne, his only Daughter. After this, the Walsinghams became a great Family in Kent, Six several Descents of which have been Knights.

Sir Thomas Walsingham was born in the Third Year of King Henry the Vth; and his Son, Sir James, was Sheriff of the County, in the 12th Year of King Henry the VIIth. Sir Edmund, his Son, was Lieutenant of the Tower of London 24 Years. His Grandson was Sir Thomas Walsingham, Kinsman to the Famous Sir Francis, that was Secretary to Queen Elizabeth: And his Son, Sir Thomas Walsingham, was in Possession of Scadbury in Philpot's Time.

2. Frog-Poole, is another Ancient Seat in this Parish; and which in the 38th Year of King Henry the IIId, was in the Possession of Thomas Le Barbur, who had that Year a Charter of Free-Warren for his Lands here. But about the End of King Edward the IId's Reign, it was got into the Family of Cressel; who also had a great Estate about Hartley, Faukham, and other Places in these Parts. Here it continued till King Henry the VIIIth's Time; towards the End of which, it was sold to Dynely: And Sir John Dynely, in K. Charles the Ist's Time, parted with it the same way to Mr. William Watkins; who very much improved it by Buildings, and then sold it to Philip Warwick, Esq; Clerk of the Signet to King Charles the Ist, and his Secretary at the Treaty in the Isle of Wight. In whose Possession, I suppose, it was in Philpot's Time.

This pleasant, healthful Village, is famous for the Retirement of the Great Mr. Cambden; who lived here for several Years before he died, and here compiled the greatest Part of his Annals of Queen Elizabeth.

And here it was also, that he contrived, and perfected his Gift, and Foundation of an Historical Lecture in the University of Oxford; and for the Maintenance of the Professor, he transferred over all his Right in the Manor of Bexley in Kent, (being valued at about 400 l. per Annum) to the Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars of that University.

And here he died, in November 1623, in the 73d Year of his Age: But his Body was carried to London, and buried in Westminster-Abbey.

CHETHAM, vulgò Chatham; in the Textus Roffensis, Cætham, and Ceteham, from the Saxon Cete, a Cellar, or Cabin; and is designed, no doubt, to express its low Situation.

This Place lies at the North Side of the County, by the River Medway, at the North-East Side of, and near to the City of Rochester; so as to make One continued Street with it; and together with Stroud, (which joins to Rochester on the other Side of the Bridge,) makes up what they usually call the Three Towns; and which extend near as many Miles in Length.

It is in the Bailiwick of How, Hundred of Chetham and Gillingham, Lath of Aylesford, and West Division of the County.

In the Deanery and Diocese of Rochester.

The Church is dedicated to the Virgin Mary. The Living is in the Nature of a Chapel; and held by Lease only from the Dean and Chapter of Rochester: But in the Valor Beneficiorum, 'tis Rated as a Vicarage, at 8 l. 12 s. 6 d.

The present Worthy and Painful Incumbent, hath been Minister here above 50 Years; and is now in a firm State of Health.

The Repair of the Church here, and the new Building of the Steeple, were made by the Commissioners of the Navy, in the Year 1635, saith Philpot.

The Liberty of the Bishop of Rochester claims here; and That of the City of Rochester, from the High-Street of that City, to the Hospital of St. Bartholomew; and from thence a-cross the Highway; and all along up the Fields, as far as the Farm called Horsted.

So much of it as is in the Liberty of the City of Rochester, is in the Division of the Justices of the Corporation of that City; and the rest is in the North Division of the Justices of that Lath.

A Fair is kept here on the supposed Birth-Day of the Blessed Virgin; viz. Sept. 8.

Chetham was given by Richard de Lucy to the Abbey of Feversham; which Donation was confirmed by King Henry the IId; and by King John, in the 16th Year of his Reign, saith Kilburn.

And in the Textus Roffensis, F. 211, is a Grant from William Rufus to the Church of Rochester, of that Land which did then belong ad Præposituram de Ceteham, & quam ipsi Monachi infra Hortum suum habent inclusam, &c. Et Episcopus Gundulfus, pro illâ Terrâ, debet dare de aliâ suâ Terrâ, quæ

1. Chetham-Manor, was very early the Seat of the mighty Family of the Crevequers; and, as Philpot ſaith, was the Caput Baroniæ, or the principal Manor which belonged to their Barony, before they removed to Leeds-Caſtle in this County. And they frequently were written, Domini de Chetham.

Hamon de Crevequer lived here in the Time of King William the Iſt, with whom he came over from Normandy; and is Named in the Great Survey, called Domeſday-Book. His Son, Robert Crevequer, (or as he is ſtiled in Latin, de Crepito Corde) was joined with John de Fiennes, in the Guard of Dover-Caſtle. His Grandſon, Robert Crevequer, built Leeds-Caſtle, and removed the Family from their Reſidence here. And his Son, Hamon de Crevequer, married Matilda, the Daughter and Heir of another Great Family in this County. Her Father was William Averenches. By her he had Iſſue Hamon de Crevequer; who, by his Engaging in the Cauſe of Simon de Montfort, againſt King Henry the IIId, exaſperated Prince Edward ſo far, that he order'd Henry Cobham, who was his Lieutenant of Dover-Caſtle, to go and raſe, and diſmantle the Caſtle of Leeds, and to ſeize on his Eſtate. And tho' indeed he was in ſome Meaſure pardon'd afterwards, at the Pacification of Kenelworth, yet I believe this Manor of Chetham was not reſtored to him.

For in the 10th Year of King Edward the IId, that Prince exchanged this, and other Lands in Kent, for the Manor and Advowſon of the Church of Adreſley in Shropſhire, with Bartholomew Lord Badleſmere; who ſoon after forfeited them to the Crown again himſelf, and his Life with it, by Confederating with the Earl of Lancaſter, and others, againſt his Sovereign.

In the Crown Chetham continued till the 2d Year of King Edward the IIId; and then was kindly reſtored to his Son, Bartholomew Badleſmere. But he died without any Iſſue-Male; and conſequently his Two Siſters (Margaret, firſt married to William Roſſe, and then again to Thomas Arundel; and Margery, wedded to Sir John de Tibitot) became his Heirs, and divided this Eſtate between them. By theſe Two, it deſcended partly to Thomas Lord Roſſe, who was beheaded at Newcaſtle upon Tine, in the 4th Year of King Edward the IVth, for adhering to the Lancaſter Family; and partly to John Tiptoft, (for ſo Tibitot was now come to be founded) Earl of Worceſter, and Lord Lieutenant of Ireland for King Edward the IVth; who was attainted and beheaded, A. D. 1470, at London, for his Siding with the Houſe of York: So that the Two Parts of this Manor, by contrary Intereſts, became both forfeited to the Crown; and King Edward the IVth, in his 18th Year, granted it to Roger Lord Wentworth, and Margaret his Wife, who was the Widow of the Lord Roſſe.

This Nobleman's Deſcendant, Thomas Lord Wentworth, about the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, ſold it to Barnham and Slany; who ſoon after joined in another Sale of it, to Barker; and thence it went the ſame way to Sir Robert Jackſon; and by another Alienation, from him, to Sir Oliver Boteler, the Grandfather to Sir Oliver Boteler, the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

2. Wadſlade, is an Eſtate here, which in the 11th Year of King Richard the IId, was given by that Prince to the Abbey of Canons-Langley, frequently written Childrens-Langley; but on the General Diſſolution, was (in the 35th Year of King Henry the VIIIth) granted to Sir Thomas Moyle; by whoſe Daughter and Coheir, Amy, it went in Marriage to Sir Thomas Kemp: And from him, in the 10th Year of Queen Elizabeth, it was alienated to John Mabbe; who (Ten Years after) ſold it to William Emmes; and he (in Five Years after) ſent it the ſame way to Richard Fogg, Eſq;: Where it ſtay'd not a Year, before it was ſold to Mr. Thomas Cocks. And this Gentleman (about Eleven Years after this) alienated it to Mr. Richard Lea; whoſe Son, Captain Richard Lea, of Great Delce, Eſq; ſold it to his Second Brother, Mr. Thomas Lea; who having no Iſſue, bequeathed it to his Nephew, Richard Lea, of Great Delce, aforeſaid, near Rocheſter, Eſq;: And he was in Poſſeſſion in Philpot's Time.

3. Horſted, in this Pariſh, is a Place famous for the Burial of Horſa, a Saxon, the Brother of Hengiſt; and probably it took its Name from him. He was killed by Catigern, the Britiſh Prince, in the firſt Battel of Aylesford, between the Saxons and the Britons. And 'tis ſaid, there was formerly a Stone-Monument for him, ſet up here; ſomething like that called Kitt's Cotty-Houſe, before-mentioned in Aylesford, which was erected in Memory of Catigern.

Robert de Crevequer, by a Charter without Date, (now in the Archives of the Church of Rocheſter) gave to that Church Two Acres of Land, in Southgate, in the Suburbs of Rocheſter; on Condition that the Monks ſhould pay Yearly to his Court at Chetham, Thirty Pence, in Lieu of all Services to this Court: (Which I take to be of the firſt Robert, in King William the IId's Reign.)

The Seal is appendant; being a Man riding full Speed on a Horſe, with his Sword drawn.

There is alſo another Charter of one Robert de Crevequer; as I judge, the Grandſon of the laſt mentioned, and who built Leeds-Caſtle; whereby he remits all Suit and Service to his Court at Chetham. This is alſo without Date; the Seal appendant; which is a Head, or Buſt of a Man, ſtruck thro' with a Dart; and under it a Heart.

And there are alſo ſeveral other Charters of this Family; ſome of which are ſealed with a Heart, in Alluſion to their Name; others with a Croſs-Croſlet Fitchee, &c.

As to the Famous Dock and Yard here, for the Building and Repairing of Ships, for the Service of the Royal Navy; I ſhall give a full Account of it, when I come to give you the Hiſtory of the Royal Navy.

And of St. Bartholomew's Hoſpital in this Place and that of Sir John Hawkins; as alſo, of the Famous Cheſt here, an Hoſpital for Seamen wounded in the King's Service, I ſhall ſpeak particularly, under the Title of the Religious Houſes, and Hoſpitals in Kent.

Lambard, in his Perambulation of Kent, p. 390, tells a pleaſant Story of a Romiſh Impoſture raiſed here at Chetham, and the Neighbouring Pariſh of Gillingham, to this Effect:

'The Corps of a Dead Man being by Chance 'caſt aſhore at Chetham, was by ſome Charita-'ble Perſons taken up, and buried in the Church-'yard; which our Good Lady of Chetham (to 'whom the Church was Dedicated) took ſo ill, 'that ſhe could not be quiet for it; but went 'one Night, and by making a Noiſe at the Win-'dow, waked the Pariſh-Clark, raiſed him up, 'and told him the Cauſe of her Uneaſineſs; ad-'ding withal, That the Sinner buried in her 'Churchyard, did ſo fright and diſturb her with 'his ghaſtly Grinning, that unleſs he were mo-'ved, ſhe was reſolved to decamp from thence, 'and work no more Miracles there. And there-'fore ſhe deſired him to go along with her, and 'help her to take him up, and throw him again 'into the River.

'The Clark got up, and waited on Madam 'towards the Church; but ſhe not being much 'uſed to walking, grew weary and out of 'Breath; and the Diſtance being ſomething 'conſiderable, was forced to ſit down in a Buſh 'to reſt her. Which Place, by the by, and all 'the way she went, the People were wont to 'shew to Strangers as a Green Path ever after.

'Well; the Pursy Madonna (and the Clark) 'got up again, went to the Churchyard, dug 'up the Body, and remitted it to the Water: 'So the Clark went home to Bed, and the La-'dy (as it was hoped) to her Shrine.

'After this, the Body floating towards Gilling-'ham, some of the Good People there took it up 'once again, and buried it in their Churchyard.

'But here the Rood, or Image of Christ, was 'as much offended as his Mother was before; 'and sullenly denied to work any such Miracles, 'as before he had been very famous for. Nay, 'the very Earth (in the Churchyard where 'this Carcase lay) began to sink downwards. As indeed here doth the Story. For what became either of this Grinning Stranger's Body, or the Two offended Deities Miracles or Reputation afterwards, in these Places, I know not.

Only 'tis easy to remark, as Lambard doth, That the Clark of Chatham invented this Story of the Apparition of our Lady of Chetham, to continue her Reputation there, and to thrive by the Offerings which were made at her Shrine; and at the same time to depreciate the Rood of Gillingham, and thereby bring the Trade of Offerings from thence to his own Shop at this Place.

CHEVENING. This Name I take to be a Corruption from Cheapening; there being a Place here called Chepested, from its being the Place of a Market; and the Saxon p being easily mistaken and written instead of p.

This Place lies towards the West End of Kent, about Three Miles to the North-Westward from Sevenoke; in the Bailiwick of Sutton-Bromley, Lath of Sutton at Hone, West Division of the County, and Lower one of Justices in that Lath.

Part of it is in the Hundred of Codsheath; and the rest in that of Somerden.

'Tis in the Deanery of Shoreham, and Diocese of Rochester.

The Church stands in the Hundred of Codsheath. 'Tis a Rectory; and Rated in the King's Books at 21 l. 6 s. 8 d.

The Liberty of the Archbishop of Canterbury claims here; as also doth that of the Dutchy of Lancaster at Morants-Court, (alias Madams-Court, or Scott,) in this Parish.

A Fair is kept here on Tuesday in Whitsun-Week.

Places of Note here.

1. Chevening-Manor, had once Owners of the Name of Chevening. For Adam de Chevening resided here in King John's Reign, and was one of the Grand Assize: And the Heirs of one William de Chevening paid Aid for this Place, at making the Black Prince Knight, in the 20th Year of King Edward the IIId, as for Half a Knight's Fee.

After the Chevenings, it came to be the Inheritance of the De la Poles, who were Lords of the Manor of Poole in Southfleet: For John De la Pole was in Possession of it, in the 10th Year of King Henry the VIth.

Not long after this, it went by Sale to Isley; William Isley dying possess'd of it in the 4th Year of King Edward the IVth; as appears by Rot. Esc. N. 34. But in King Edward the VIth's Reign, Henry Isley sold it to John Lennard, Esq; who lies buried in Ch. [illegible] Church. And his Great Grandson, the Lord Dacres, was the Possessor of it in Philpot's Time.

His Descendant, Thomas Lord Dacre, was created Earl of Sussex in the 26th of King Charles the IId, and died A. D. 1715, leaving only Two Daughters; Lady Barbara, who was married to Mr. Skelton, a Field-Marshal in the King of France's Army; and Lady Anne, who was first married to Richard Dacres Barret, Esq; and since to the Right Honourable the Lord Tenham. These Coheiresses joined in a Sale of this Manor to the Right Honourable Earl Stanhope, Nephew to the late Earl of Chesterfeild, and now Principal Secretary of State; and who, in Consideration of his great and faithful Services both Abroad and at Home, was by his Present Majesty King George, Enobled with the Title of Earl, A. D. 1718.

2. Chepsted; a Place so called from the Fish-Market here long since used. For formerly, such as imported Fish from the Sea-Coast of Sussex, (as from about Hastings, Rye, &c. from which latter Place, they took the Name of Ripers, or Ripiers) used to make this Place their Stage; and meeting the Ripiers here, carry it on their own Horses to London. From this Custom, this Place took the Name of Chepsted; that is, the Place of the Market, or Chepe; from the Saxon Ceapan, to Trade, Cheapen, to Buy or Sell. And hence comes Cheapside, in London; Chepenham, in Wiltshire; Chepstow, in Montgomery, &c. and our common Words, Chapman, to Chop, to Cheapen, &c.

This Manor had once Owners of this Name. John, the Son of John de Chepsted, paid Aid for it at making the Black Prince Knight. But a Daughter of this Name and Family marrying John de Bore, carried it into that Family: And by another Daughter of that Name, it went the same way to Stockett; and by one of that Name, about the latter End of King Henry the VIth's Reign, it was sold to William Isley, Esq; whose unhappy Descendant, Sir Henry Isley, being engaged in Wyat's Conspiracy, in the Beginning of Queen Mary's Reign, forfeited it to the Crown; where it remained in Philpot's Time.

But afterwards (some how) it came into the Name of Polhill; and then into that of Emmerton, who built a very Fine and Noble House here. And since it is become (by Purchase) the Estate, and Seat, of the Worthy David Polhill, Esquire.

3. Morants-Court, now corruptly called Madams Scott, (as the Hill is, which adjoins to it) was anciently the Seat of a Family of the Name of Morant. William de Morant had a Charter of Free-Warren for his Land here, in the 14th Year of King Edward the IId: And either he, or his Son, was Sheriff of Kent, in the 12th and 13th Years of King Edward the IIId. But his Granddaughter carried this Manor, and Seat, into the Family of Peckham; where it continued till King James the Ist's Reign, and then was sold to Blackwell: And thence it was alienated to Mr. Watson, of Oxfordshire, the Possessor in Philpot's Time.

CHIDINGSTONE, (in the Textus Roffensis, Cidingstune,) lies towards the South-West Part of Kent, by the River Medway, about Four Miles South-Westward from Tunbridge; in the Bailiwick of Sutton-Bromley, Lath of Sutton at Hone, West Division of the County, and Lower one of Justices in that Lath.

So much of it as is in the Burgh of Linck-Hill, is in the Hundred of Ruxley; and the rest is in that of Somerden.

The Liberty of the Dutchy of Lancaster claims in this Parish.

'Tis in the Deanery of Shoreham, and Diocese of Rochester: A Peculiar to the Archbishop of Canterbury.

The Church stands in the Hundred of Somerden: The Living a Rectory; Valued in the King's Books at 28 l. 9 s. 4 d.

Sir Robert Read, Lord Chief-Justice of the Common-Pleas, in the Reign of King Henry the VIIth, built the North Chancel in this Church, and Dedicated it to St. Katherine.

In this Church also lies interred Sir Thomas Willoughby, one of the Justices of the Common-Pleas,

DATA PATA SECUTUS

Pleas, in the Reign of King Henry the VIIIth, and Owner of the Manor of Bore-Place in this Pariſh. His Lady was a Read. Several of which Name lye buried in this Church; as Sir Robert Read above-mentioned, &c. His Son Edmund, 1501, &c.

The Church is a very fair large Structure; and the Tower of it is the Cleaneſt Piece of Work I have ſeen any where in Kent. Here are many Memorials of the Family of Streatfeild, and of Reeve, Powell, and Shafferden, who Married into that Family.

Places of Note here,

1. Chidingſtone-Cobham; for ſo this Manor was formerly called, becauſe it was the Inheritance of the Lords Cobham of Sterborow-Caſtle in Surrey. In the Ninth Year of King John, Henry de Cobham had a Charter of Free-Warren for all his Lands in Kent, of which this Manor, and Tyburſt in this Pariſh, were then reckoned as Parcel. Reginald de Cobham was ſummoned to Parliament, as Baron of Sterborow, in the Twenty-ſecond Year of King Edward the IIId, and Twelve Years after died poſſeſſed of this Eſtate. (a) But his great Grandſon, Thomas Lord Cobham, leaving only a Daughter Anne, this Manor went in Marriage to her Husband Edward Borough, Lord of Gainsborough in Lincolnſhire. This Gentleman's Grandſon, Thomas Lord Borough, in the Thirty-Eighth Year of Queen Elizabeth, ſold this Eſtate and Tyburſt to Richard Streatfield, Eſq; on whoſe Deceaſe his Two Sons, Henry and Thomas, parted his Inheritance between them; the former had Tyburſt, and Thomas had Chidingſtone Cobham: But he died without Iſſue-Male; leaving Four Daughters, viz. Frances, Married to Mr. John Shetterden; Jane, to Mr. Edward Taylour; Dorothy, to Mr. Edward Powell; and Anne, who was firſt the Wife of Mr. William Stanley, and after that of Mr. Samuel Dillingham: And theſe were all living in Philpot's Time, and in Poſſeſſion of this Eſtate amongſt them. But Three Parts of this Manor are now, by Purchaſe, come to be the Eſtate of Henry Streatfeild of Chidingſtone, Eſq; who reſides at the great High-Street-Houſe.

(a) Rot. Eſtat. N. 62. pars prima.

2. Reinſley is another Manor here, which anciently had Owners of this Name, and who in ſome old Deeds are called Reddeſley and Renneſley; but they were extinct here before the End of King Henry the VIth's Reign, and then this Eſtate came into the Poſſeſſion of the Alphews of Bore-Place. Hence, by a Daughter, it went in Marriage to Sir Robert Read above-mentioned; and by another Daughter of that Name, it paſſed the ſame way to Sir Thomas Willoughby; one of whoſe Deſcendants, Sir Percival Willoughby, in the Eighth Year of King James the Firſt, ſold this Eſtate (with that of Ewhurſt in Speldhurſt) to Mr. Nath. Studley; whoſe Son and Heir of the ſame Name, paſſed this Manor, and Ewhurſt alſo, to Mr. Chriſtopher Knight; and Philpot carries it no further: But 'tis now in the Poſſeſſion of the Right Honourable the Earl of Leiceſter.

3. Burwaſh-Court is a Manor here, now called Chidingſtone-Burgherſt, which anciently was Part of the Eſtate of the Lords Burgherſt, vulgarly called Burwaſh. Stephen de Burwaſh had a Charter of Free-Warren for all his Lands in Kent, in the Firſt Year of King Edward the IId. Robert de Burgherſt, or Burwaſh, died poſſeſſed of it in the 33d Year of King Edward the IIId; whoſe Son Bartholomew Lord Burwaſh, Ten Years after ſold this, and much more Land in Kent, to Walter de Paveley, and Matilda his Wife. From one of the Name of Paveley, it was ſold to John de Bore, Trivet and Vaude; ſome of whoſe Succeſſors conveyed Burwaſh-Court, in the Reign of King Henry the VIth, to John Alphew, of Bore-Place; one of whoſe Co-heirs carried it in Marriage to Sir Robert Head; but he left only Two Daughters, and Co-heirs. By Catherine, one of which, this Eſtate went to Sir Thomas Willoughby, ſecond Son to Sir Chriſtopher Willoughby of Eresby: Elizabeth, another Daughter, Married Sir Thomas Totiburſt; and a Third Daughter was the Wife of Thomas Wotton, Eſq; Sir Thomas Willoughby, the Son of Sir Thomas juſt now mentioned, joined in a Fine with his Two Uncles; and in King Edward the VIth's Time ſold this Eſtate to Mr. John, and Mr. Robert Seyliard of Delaware; and in this Family it continued in Philpot's Time, being in the Poſſeſſion of John Seyliard of Delaware, Eſq; But Sir Thomas Seyliard, a Deſcendant of this Family, about ſixteen Years ſince ſold it to Mr. Henry Streatfeild, whoſe Youngeſt Son Thomas Streatfeild is the preſent Poſſeſſor.

4. Bore-Place, with the Two other Manors of
5. Mill-Brook, and
6. Boreſell, were in King Henry the IIId's Time, the Inheritance of a Family of the Name of Bore; and here they tarried, till John Bore, in the Reign of K. Henry VI. ſold them to John Alphew above-mentioned; who built the Seat at Bores-Place, and was buried in the Church here in 1489. His Daughter carried it in Marriage to Sir Robert Read; and thence, by his Daughter Catherine, they went with Burwaſh-Court to Sir Thomas Willoughby; which Gentleman, as well as Sir Robert Read, did much improve and enlarge the Seat of Bore-Place. Cambden ſaith, there was one of this Family, (viz. Sir Robert Willoughby,) who ſignalized himſelf ſo in the Wars with France, in King Henry the Vth's Reign, that he was created Earl of Vendoſme there. And from theſe Willoughbies, by the Mother's Side, deſcended Peregrine Bertie, Lord Willoughby of Eresby. The great Grandſon of this Lord Thomas, viz. Percival Willoughby, ſold this Eſtate to Mr. Barnard Hide of London; whoſe Grandſon of the ſame Name was in the Poſſeſſion of Bore's-Place and Millbrooke, in Philpot's Time: But Boreſell, commonly called Bowſell, was alienated to Edmund Thomas of Whitley near Sevenoke, who was then the Poſſeſſor.

Boreſell, by Sale, went from Thomas to Waterſon; and thence to the Siſter of Edmund Waterſon, Eſq; now the Relict of ------ Bonnele, Eſq;

7. Tyburſt above-mentioned in Chidingſtone Cobham, is now an entire Manor by it ſelf, and in the Poſſeſſion of Henry Streatfeild, Eſq; the great Grandſon of Henry Streatfeild, Eſq; to whom it came by Deed, Dated 22. K. J. I.

CHILHAM; Some write this Place Julham, and mean by it, that it took its Name from Julius Cæſar; but as I don't find it called ſo in any Ancient Writer, ſo I rather think it took its Denomination from the Coldneſs of its Situation, as ſeveral Places in this County, and elſewhere have done.

It lies towards the Eaſt Part of Kent, by the River Stoure, about Three Miles Northward from Wye; in the Bailiwick and Lath of Scray, Hundred of Felborow, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in the Lath of Shipway: In the Deanery of Bridge, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; and the Church is called St. Maries. 'Tis a Vicarage; Valued in the King's Books (with the Chapel of Moldaſh annexed) at 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d. per Annum*.

The Parſonage did once belong to the Priory of Throwley, but now is impropriated in the Digges Family.

The Liberty of Wye claims over this Pariſh.

A Fair is now kept here Annually, on October the 28th; and formerly it had a Market on Tueſdays, which was granted at the Requeſt of Alexander Baliol, and his Lady Iſabella; and in the Ninth Year of King Edward the IId, confirmed again to Bartholomew Lord Badleſmere, as appears by Pat. 9. Edw. 2. N. 57.

(a) Brit. P. 196.

The Judicious and Learned Mr. Cambden (a) takes this to be the Place where Julius Cæſar, in his Second Expedition hither, encountred the Britains on a River, after he had marched Twelve Miles from his Landing Place by Night. (b) And after he had beaten them into the Woods, he ſaith, that he encamped there for Ten Days, until he had refitted his Fleet which had been much ſhattered by a Tempeſt. But in reality, the Diſtance of Chilham from the Sandowns by Deale, or from Peperneſs, (which is at leaſt Seventeen Miles,) will not allow of this; nor is there hereabouts any Remains to be ſeen of either the Britains, or the Roman Entrenchments or Camps; ſo that I chuſe rather to aſſign another Place near Harbledown, for the Britains Station; and one in Iffins, or Ivenswood, in the Pariſhes of Nakington and Thannington, for Cæſar's Camp, as you will find when I ſpeak of thoſe Places.

(b) De Bello Belg. Lib. 5.

About half a Mile to the South-Eaſtward of Chilham-Caſtle, lies a very remarkable Tumulus; it is ſituate on the hanging of a Chalky-Hill, on the other Side of the River, near the Mill. 'Tis not round as the Common-Barrows, Lowes, or Tumuli are; but oblong, in the Form of the Bank of Earth over our uſual Graves in Church-Yards. I meaſured it, and found it about Seventy Paces long, and Twenty over. The People call it Julaber's-Grave, and ſay, it was caſt up in Memory of one Julaber, who was either a Giant or a Witch, or ſome ſuch great Body. Mr. Cambden, and his laſt Editor, concur in their Opinions, that the Word Julaber corruptly expreſſes the Memory of Durus Laberius, one of Cæſar's Military Tribunes, who was killed by the Britains in the Battle above-mentioned, and was buried here; and then had this large Bank of Earth thrown over him. But as I don't remember to have met with any Inſtance of the Roman Soldiers ever making any ſuch oblong Tumuli over any of their ſlain Commanders; (their uſual Form being round) and as I don't find reaſon enough to think this was the Place where Laberius Durus was killed; it being too far from the Place which I take to have been the Stage of this Action, and quite out of the Way towards the main Camp at Deale, whither, no doubt, the Romans would have had a View of retiring, when they were puſhed by the Britains; ſo I chuſe rather to fall in with the Conjecture of a late Author, Dr. Batteley, that this large Bank was thrown up in Memory of ſome eminent Saxon, who might lie here Buried, and perhaps reſided at Chilham-Caſtle. He fancies his Name might be Cilla, (or perhaps Ceolla,) and that the Name of Julaber came from Cilla-Byrig. And this Opinion of his he was the more confirmed in, becauſe on Digging there, he could meet with no Roman Antiquities of any kind, nor indeed any Saxon Remains neither; and therefore all this Affair is juſt as much in the Dark as we found it.

(c) Antiq. Rutup. P. 74.

As to the Caſtle here, now the pleaſant Seat of Leonard Diggs, Eſq; I ſhall ſpeak particularly under the Title of Caſtles in KENT.

In the Church of Chilham is a fair Monument of Sir Anthony Palmer, Knight of the Bath; and a Pyramidal One of Black-Marble, with Four Figures round it cut in White Marble, in Memory of Sir Dudley Diggs and his Lady, and others of that Eminent Family. There are alſo Memorials of Leech, Courthope, Fogge, &c.

Places of Note here:

1. Eaſture, which anciently was the Seat of a Family of that Name; for one John de Eſture lived here in Part of the Reign of King Henry the IIId, and King Edward the Firſt. But afterwards this Eaſture came to be the Poſſeſſion of the Apuldorefeilds, of Otterpley in Challock, a younger Branch of thoſe of Bedman-Core. Of this Family was Henry de Apuldorefeild, who was Sheriff of Kent in the Fifty-firſt Year of Edward the IIId, and Proprietor of this Place. But at length by Iſabella, a Daughter of this Name, it went in Marriage to John Idelegh; who had a large Eſtate about Mepham, Chalk, and Cobham. From this Family it went by Agnes, Daughter of William Idelegh, to Chriſtopher Ellenden, who had a good Eſtate about Sea-Salter and Damianus Blean. But another Daughter of this Name, Mary, carried it in Marriage to Edward Thwaits, about the Middle of King Henry the VIIth's Reign. In this Family it ſtaid till about the End of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, and then was ſold into the Name of Morton. And in King Charles the Firſt's Time, one George Morton alienated it to John Finch, Baron of Fordwich, and then (viz. 1640,) Lord-Keeper of the Great-Seal.

2. Tongs is another Manor in Chilham, which in King Edward the IId's Time had Owners of this Name. Hence it paſſed into the Name of Beverley; a Family that had lived at Tancreys-Iſland in Fordwich from King Edward the IIId's Time, till about 100 Years ſince, and then George Beverley ſold it to George Barley; and he parted with it the ſame way to Fleet, a Family which came from Fleet in the Iſle of Thanet. And hence, in a ſhort time, it went the ſame way to Shepherd; and from one of this Name, it was purchaſed by Sir Dudley Diggs; in whoſe Deſcendants the Poſſeſſion was in Philpot's Time, and I ſuppoſe is ſtill.

3. Dane-Court is another Manor here, which perhaps took its Name from the Habitation of ſome of the Danes here; but in King Edward the Ift, and IId's Reign, it was the Eſtate of Thomas de Garwinton, of Well in Little-Bourn: His Great Grandſon, William Garwinton, (of the ſame Place,) dying without Iſſue, in the Eleventh Year of King Henry the IVth, his Couſin Joan, then Wife of Richard Haut, was found to be his Heir. But Richard, this Gentleman's Son, dying alſo without Iſſue-Male, his only Daughter Margery carried it in Marriage to William Iſaack, about the latter End of King Henry the VIIth. In this Family it continued till about the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth; and then was by Edward Iſaack ſold to Hales; from which Family it was paſſed the ſame way to Spracklin, derived from the Spracklins of St. Laurence in Thanet; and in that Family it continued in Philpot's Time.

4. Old-Wives-Leas, anciently written Old-Wood's-Leas, as being the Eſtate of a Family of the Name of Oldwood; and in this Name it tarried till King Henry the VIth's Time; and then by a Daughter of John Oldwood, it went by Marriage to Paine; in which Family it continued till King James the Firſt's Reign, and then it ended in Four Daughters; one of which Married Cob; another Philpot; a Third Petit; and the Fourth Prude. On the Partition, this Place went to Cob; and in Philpot's Time continued in that Name.

CHILLENDEN, lies towards the Eaſt Part of Kent, about Four Miles South-Weſtward from Sandwich; in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Eaſtry, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. In the Deanery of Bridge, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Church is called All-Saints. I found nothing remarkable in it; only I think the Cold and Low Situation of the Place, very well accounts for its Name of Chillen-Den. A Rectory; Valued in the King's Books at 5*l.* per Annum.

This Place gave Name to a Family of as ancient a Date as King Henry the IIId's Time; but a good while after that, it went into the Poſſeſſion of the Bakers, who were Lords of Cald- ham by Capell: And in King Henry the VIth's Reign, it went by Sale into the Name of Hunt; whence after two or three Deſcents, it was ſold to Gaſon, a Family of good Note about Ickham; after ſome time, it was ſold to Hamon; one of whoſe Deſcendants, Anthony Hamon, Eſq; was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

CHISTLET, a Pariſh ſo called in the Time of the Saxon Heptarchy, but before it was called Sturiag (c). It lies towards the North-Side of Kent, by a Branch of the River Stoure, (whence its Name Sturiag) about Five Miles North-Eaſt from Canterbury; in the Bailiwick of Bridge and Petham, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath: In the Deanery of Weſt-Bere, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Liberty of St. Auſtin claims here over the Manor and Park of Chiſtlet; becauſe 'tis in the Hundred of Blengate, which belonged to that Abbey; and alſo more largely over all the Pariſh; as alſo doth the Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury over Part of it.

(c) Somner's Canterb. in App. N. viij.

This Place was given by Ethelbert, King of Kent, to the Archbiſhoprick of Canterbury. The Grant of the Donation of which, you may ſee in Somner's Canterb. Append. N. VIII. And here the Archbiſhops of that Province had formerly a fine, and indeed magnificent Palace, which was called Ford; with a large Park, which lay partly in this Pariſh, and partly in Hothe.

The Church hath nothing in it of Antiquity, only a Braſs-Plate over Eliz. Tuad. 1521. It hath no Steeple, only a little Roof upon the Tower, like that of a Houſe; which is rightly expreſſed in Mr. Symondſon's Map of Kent; in the main a very good one, and much the beſt extant.

'Tis a Vicarage; the great Tithes impropriate to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, who preſents to the Living; and which is valued in the King's Books at 29*l.* 19*s.* 8*d.*

SAINT CLEMENTS in Sandwich, is a Vicarage in that Town, impropriate to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury; and Valued in the King's Books at 14*l. per Annum*; and in the Thirty-fifth Year of King Edward the IIId it was Valued at Eight Marks per Annum. The Church appears to be a very ancient Building; I gueſs, erected ſoon after the Normans coming hither; and it ſeems to have been either a Collegiate one, or elſe to have had ſome Fraternity peculiar to it formerly; becauſe in the Chancel there are Twenty Stalls, like thoſe at Maidſtone. In it I found Memorials of Richard Spencer, 1583; and of George Rowe, 1589.

CLIFF, near Dover, (Eaſt-Clive, St. Margarets at Cliff) lies at the Eaſt End of Kent, about Three Miles North-Eaſtward from Dover; in the Bailiwick of Stowting, Hundred of Bewsborough, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath: In the Deanery of Dover, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Church is Dedicated to St. Peter, ſaith Kilburn, P. 58. But it muſt be a Miſtake; for this muſt be the ſame Place, which at P. 182. he deſcribes under the Name of St. Margarets by Dover; and there he ſaith the Church is dedicated to her, which no doubt is the Truth; for there are not Two Places called Cliff hereabouts. St. Margarets is the uſual Name; ſo 'tis called in all the Maps, and in Biſhop Williams's Eccleſiaſtical Map of the Dioceſe of Canterbury; and there is no mention of any ſuch Place as Weſt-Cliff, but only of St. Margarets at Cliffe, in the Valor Beneficiorum, or any other Book I have ever met with.

Kilburn ſaith, the Advowſon of this Church was given to Chriſt-Church in Canterbury, by Eleanor Wife of King Edward the Firſt, and Daughter to Ferdinando the IIId, King of Spain; which Gift was confirmed by King Edward the Firſt; and afterwards the Parſonage was aſſigned to the Almnery of that Priory.

A Fair is kept here on July 19.

The Vicarage is Rated in the King's Books at 6*l.* 9*s.* 8*d.*

The Church is large, and ſtrongly built, and adorned on the Outſide with Circular Arches of Stone, which ſhew it to be very ancient. The Chancel is handſome, well Wainſcoted and Carved; which was done by the late Impropriator, Mr. Richard Crook of Bekesbourn. On ſome of the Arches in the Iſles of the Church, I found the Arms of the ancient Family of Savage.

In ſome Manuſcripts, (which I was obliged with the Sight of, out of the Library of the Family of Dering at Surenden,) I found this Place ſaid to be a Member of the Port of Dover, for Goods and Chattels, but not for Lands.

There is a large Bay of the Sea below this Place, which takes its Name from it, and is called St. Margarets-Bay.

Places of Note here:

1. This Place, (i. e.) the Manor of Cliff, was anciently the Inheritance of the Lords Cobham of Sterborow-Caſtle in Surrey, which was a younger Branch of the Cobhams of Cobham. Reginald, Second Son of John de Cobham, in the Twenty-Second Year of King Edward the IIId, was Summoned to Parliament as Baron of Sterborow, and died poſſeſſed of this Manor, and much other Land in Kent and Surrey, in the Forty-fifth Year of King Edward the IIId. But by Anne, Daughter of Thomas Lord Cobham, Great Grandſon of Reginald, this Eſtate went in Marriage to Edward Borow, Lord Gainsborow; whoſe Grandſon, in Queen Elizabeth's Reign, ſold it to Guibon; and his Grandſon, Mr. Thomas Guibon, was the Poſſeſſor of it in Philpot's Time.

2. Bere-Court is a Manor in this Pariſh, which once had Owners of the Name of Bere; one of which, William de Bere, was Bailiff of Dover in the Second Year of King Edward the Firſt: From this Name it went into that of Tooke, where it continued for many Ages; and in Philpot's Time was in the Poſſeſſion of Mr. Charles Tooke. And ſince I am informed, that John, Son of Sir John Tooke of this Place, Married a Daughter and Heir of the Family of Malmains, by whom he had Iſſue John Tooke; and he Married Jane, Daughter and Co-heir of Roger Hout. His Second Son, Walter, was Father to Ralph Tooke of Godington; who left Kent, and ſettled in Hertfordſhire; and from him, Mr. Thomas Tooke, now living in Caſtle-Yard in Holborn, is deſcended.

CLIFF at Hoo, (Cliff near Graveſend, Weſt-Clive, Cloveſhoe, Biſhop's-Clive) ſo called from the Cliff on which it ſtands; lies at the North-ſide of Kent, near the Thames, about Five Miles North-Eaſtward from Graveſend; in the Bailiwick of Hoo, Hundred of Shamell, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and North Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath: In the Deanery of Shoreham, and ſo a Peculiar to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury; but in the Dioceſe of Rocheſter, and in the Liberty of the Biſhop of that Place. The Church is dedicated to St. Hellen. A Rectory; the Archbiſhop Patron; and Valued in the King's Books at 50*l. per Annum*.

A Fair is kept here on October the 8th; which was obtained for the Town by Hugh de Mortimer, in the Forty-firſt Year of King Henry the Firſt, and who was then the Proprietor of Mortimer's in Cowling-Pariſh.

The Church is large and handſome, the Roof covered with Lead; and a very good Tower, with a Clock, and a Ring of Six Bells: Remains alſo alſo of good painted Glaſs. In the Chancel are Six Stalls, like thoſe in Collegiate Churches: And the Tradition of the Place is, that they were formerly for Five Prebendaries, and a Dean. But of this I can find no mention any where.

In the Cieling of the Chancel are the Arms of the See of Canterbury; Impaling Gules, a Lyon Rampant Or; quarter'd with Checquey, Or, and Gules.

Formerly there was an Organ in this Church, the Caſe of which is ſtill in being.

This Pariſh ought anciently to have contributed to the Repair of the Ninth Peer, or Arch, of Rocheſter-Bridge.

There is once a Year a Court Spiritual held here, for the Probate of Wills, &c.

One Mr. John Brown, of this Pariſh, gave Two Tenements here, towards Setting up a School to teach Engliſh.

Places of Note here:

1. Cliff-Manor; which, as appears by Domeſday-Book, was in King Edward the Confeſſor's, and in King William the Iſt's Reign, belonging to the Priory of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury; and was then eſteemed at Two Plow-Lands and a Half.

And here it continued till the General Suppreſſion of the Monaſteries, in King Henry the VIIIth's Time; and then was granted to George Brook, Lord Cobham; who left it to his Son, Sir William Brook, Lord Cobham: And he left it by Entail on his Second Son, George Brook; and in Defect of Iſſue-Male from his Body, to the next Heir-Male of the Name. But this Gentleman being beheaded at Wincheſter, for Engaging in that ſtrange Conſpiracy of his Brother, Henry Lord Cobham, Sir Walter Rawleigh, and others, in the Firſt Year of King James the Iſt; this Manor fell to his Son, Sir William Brook; who dying without Iſſue-Male, A. D. 1643, it went to Sir John Brook, Lord Cobham; and he was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time, if his Account be right.

2. Mallingden, is a Manor here, which was a Kind of Appendage to that of Cliff, juſt now mention'd, and with it belonged to the Priory of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury; but at the General Suppreſſion came to the Crown, and there continued till Queen Elizabeth's Reign: And then it was by her granted to William Ewens; who ſoon after ſold it to Brown. Whence it quickly after paſſed the ſame way to Sompner; who, in the latter End of King James the Iſt, ſold it to Mr. Hills; in whoſe Poſſeſſion it ſeems to have been in Philpot's Time.

3. Perry-Court, is a Manor in Cliff, which was all along Part of the Eſtate of the Great Family of Cobham; till Henry Brook, Lord Cobham, being concerned with Sir Walter Raleigh, in that unaccountable Plot againſt King James the Iſt, in the Firſt Year of his Reign, forfeited it to the Crown. But after the Death of Frances, the Widow of this Unfortunate Lord, the King granted this Manor (in Reverſion) to Robert Cecil, Earl of Salisbury, who had married Elizabeth, the Lord Brook's Siſter. And his Son, William Earl of Salisbury, Knight of the Garter, and Captain of the Band of Penſioners to that Prince, ſold it to Bernard Hide, Eſq; of London: And in the Poſſeſſion of his Grandſon (of the ſame Name) it continued in Philpot's Time.

4. Cardans is alſo a Manor in Cliff, which before the General Diſſolution of the Religious Houſes, belonged to the Charter-Houſe in London: But King Henry the VIIIth, in his 31ſt Year, granted it to Thomas Gethins. From which Family, in the Beginning of King Charles the Iſt's Reign, it was ſold to Oliver Leder; in which Name the Poſſeſſion continued in Philpot's Time.

This Place of Cliff hath generally, by almoſt all our Writers, been thought to have been that Cloveſhoe, where ſo many famous Councils were held, during the Time of the Saxon Heptarchy. And notwithſtanding what Mr. Somner, Mr. Lambard, and the Learned Editor of the Chronicon Saxonicum have ſaid, I incline ſtill to maintain that Opinion. For tho' I am willing to allow the Abingdon MS. mention'd by Somner (a), to be in the Right, that Sheoveſham might be the Ancient Name of that Town; yet I don't ſee, how from hence you can make a Natural Tranſition to Cloveſhoe. And granting that the Saxon C might be, about the Normans Time, ſoftened into Ch, or Sh; yet the Place where the Councils were held never being written Cleoveſham, but always Cloveſhoe, or Cloveſhou; it ſeems to determine it to Hou, or Hoo, the famous Hundred of How, near which this Place of Cliff is ſituated.

(a) Sax. Dict. in voce Abandune.

And as to the Conjectural Reaſons, about the Unfitneſs of the Place for holding Councils; I think they may be eaſily anſwered.

Canterbury was a very unfit and improper Place for the Seat of the Metropolitan: And yet, tho' it had been placed at London before in the Britiſh Time; and tho' Pope Gregory order'd it to be ſo now, when Auſtin the Monk was ſent hither; yet Auſtin, in Compliment to King Ethelbert, would place it at Canterbury.

And it was a Piece of State, agreeable enough to the Tempers of ſome of our firſt Archbiſhops of Canterbury, to make the reſt of the Biſhops come into Kent; in which, no doubt, the Kings of this County would gladly concur.

Archbiſhop Theodore, who ordered the Councils to be held here, all Writers agree, was a Man of a great Spirit, and did exert an Authority not uſed before; as in Dividing his Province into Sees, and Eſtabliſhing New ones; in depriving Biſhops, and putting others in their Places, &c. Inſomuch that Malmsbury ſaith of him, that He was the firſt whieh exerciſed the Authority of an Archbiſhop here. No wonder then if he, ſupported by the Regal Authority, aſſembled Councils, and appointed Synods where he pleaſed, and without much Regard to the Fitneſs of the Place.

No one doubts alſo, (except Dr. Cave, who fancies it to have been Beckenham,) that Beccancelde, (a Place in Kent, where ſome Eminent Councils were (b) held) is Bapchild, in this County, as hath been before obſerved: Nor of ſome Councils being aſſembled even at Canterbury it ſelf (c): Both which Places are much more remote, and out of the way of the other Biſhops, than our Cliff is.

(b) Spelm. Concil. Brit. T. I. p. 189, 317.

(c) Ibid. p. 126. Bede L. 2. c. 5. p. 119.

And when you add to this, that this Town was as long ago as the Conqueſt called Biſhops Clive: And that it appears by ſome Ruins of Buildings, to have been formerly a much larger Place, than it is at preſent; and that it was burnt almoſt to the Ground, by Accident, A. D. 1520; of which Loſs it never recover'd, (as Lambard tells us, Peramb. of Kent, p. 538.) methinks there ſeem Data enough, to eſtabliſh the received Opinion of Spelman, Talbot, &c. that this is the Place where the Councils were held.

In the Time of Theodorus, the Seventh Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Biſhops were aſſembled at Hertford; and there it was agreed, that a Synod, or Convocation, ſhould be held here at Gloveſhoe annually, on Auguſt 1.

And it was by Virtue of this Decree, that Archbiſhop Cuthbert ſummoned the Biſhops of his Province to meet here; as they did A. D. 742.

And

And Five Years after, another Council was held here by the ſame Archbiſhop.

A Third was held here, Anno 800, under Æthelard Archbiſhop of Canterbury. And another by him Three Years after.

A Fifth was held here by Wilfred, 822.

And a Sixth by the ſame Wilfred, 822.

And theſe are all the Councils, that I can find were held at this Place.

But on what Account they were ſummoned, and what Acts they made; I muſt leave to be conſider'd in another Place, where I ſhall ſpeak fully about theſe Matters.

COBHAM, lies towards the North Part of the County of Kent, about Three Miles and a Half South-Eaſtward from Graveſend; in the Bailiwick of Hoo, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and North Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. Part of it is in the Hundred of Shamell, and the Reſt in that of Hoo. 'Tis in the Deanery and Dioceſe of Rocheſter; and the Church is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen; Ten of the Stalls being ſtill preſerved in the Chancel. 'Tis only a Curacy, and not Valued in the King's Books.

The Liberty of the Biſhop of Rocheſter claims in the Church-Yard, and at the Stone-Houſe.

In the Fourth Year of King Edward the IIId, John Lord Cobham obtained the Grant of a Market for this Place, to be held on every Monday; and of a Fair, on St. Mary Magdalen's-Day.

As to the College founded here by John de Cobham, A. D. 1362, and the Regulations of it ſince, I ſhall give a full Account among the Religious Houſes, and Hoſpitals, &c. of this County.

Places of Note here:

1. The Manor of Cobham, and the Noble Seat upon it called Cobham-Hall, was long ago the Poſſeſſion of a mighty Family, which ſeem to have derived their Name from hence. Henry de Cobham was one of the Recognitores Magnæ Aſſiſæ in the firſt Year of King John, an Office of great Note and Truſt then. Theſe Recognitores were a kind of Judges Itinerant, who took Cogniſance of all Cauſes, Criminal as well as Civil. Reginald de Cobham, Son of John de Cobham, was Sheriff of this County, from the Beginning of the Thirty-third Year of King Henry the IIId, to the End of the Fortieth Year of that Prince; and again in the Forty-ſecond Year of this King, in which he died. Sir Henry de Cobham was in the ſame Office in Kent, the 29th, 30th, and part of the 31ſt Year of King Edward the Firſt. This Gentleman is written in the old Rolls of Arms of the Knights of Kent, (ſaith Philpot) Henry Cobham Le Uncle, becauſe he was Uncle to the Lord Cobham. He is buried in Shom-Church. This Perſon, another Sir Henry Cobham, Sir Reginald, and Sir Stephen de Cobham, were all aſſiſting to King Edward the Firſt, at the famous Siege of Carlaverock in Scotland, in the 28th Year of his Reign. Sir Henry above-mentioned was again Sheriff of Kent, in the Firſt and Ninth Years of King Edward the IId; and his Son Stephen de Cobham, held the ſame Office in the 8th, 9th, and 10th Years of King Edward the Third. Thomas de Cobham was Sheriff of this County in the Firſt Year of King Richard the IId. John de Cobham was one of the Conſervators of the Peace for Kent, in the 3d, 5th, 6th, 9th, 12th, and 18th Years of King Edward the IIId; which was an Office of great Truſt and Reputation in thoſe Times. His Son was Thomas Lord Cobham, the Father of John Lord Cobham, in whom the Male Line of this great Family determined. His Daughter and Heir (Joan) was firſt Married to John de la Pole, and next to Sir John de Old-Caſtle, by whom ſhe had only a Daughter, which died an Infant; and again to Reginald Braybrooke, who deceaſed A. D. 1433. By him alſo ſhe had an only Daughter, of her own Chriſtian Name, who was Married to Thomas Brook of the County of Somerſet, and brought a mighty Fortune to her Husband. This Gentleman's Son, Sir Edmund Brook, was ſummoned to Parliament by the Title of Baron of Cobham, in the Twenty-Third Year of King Henry the VIth: And his Deſcendant in a direct Line, was that unhappy Henry Brook, Lord Cobham, who was Lord Warden of the Cinque-Ports in the Firſt Year of King James the Firſt; and by engaging in that odd Conſpiracy of Sir Walter Raleigh and others, was Attainted of High-Treaſon; and though not executed for it, yet forfeited his Eſtate to the Crown. And that King, not long after, granted it to his Kinſman, Lodowix Stewart, Duke of Lenox; but he dying without Iſſue, it went to his Nephew, James Duke of Lenox; and his Dutcheſs, (only Daughter of George Villars Duke of Buckingham,) after her Husband's Deceaſe, was the Poſſeſſor of it in Philpot's Time.

The Houſe and Park here are very Noble.

2. Cobham-Bury, is a Place in this Pariſh, that was anciently accounted as an appendant Manor to Cobham, and had the ſame Proprietors all along; but on the Attainder of Henry Lord Cobham above-mentioned, King James granted it to Robert Earl of Salisbury; whoſe Son and Heir, William Cecil, Earl of Salisbury, in King Charles the Firſt's Time, ſold it to Zachary King, of Watford in the County of Hertford; who I ſuppoſe was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

3. Henhurſt, is a Place of Note in Cobham, which was given to the Priory of Leeds, by Robert de Crevequer, the Founder of that Cloiſter; but on the General Suppreſſion coming to the Crown, it was by King Henry the VIIIth granted to George Brook, Lord Cobham; who ſoon after ſold it to Sir George Harper; and his Son, Sir Edward Harper, in the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, paſſed it the ſame way to Mr. Thomas Wright; whoſe Son, George Wright, Eſq; dying without Iſſue, gave it to his Kinſman, Sir George Wright; whoſe Son ſold it to ----- Obert, Doctor of Phyſick.

The Tythes of this Pariſh, Philpot ſaith, he found, by the firſt Book of the Compoſitions at Rocheſter, were given to the Priory there, by one Goſcelinus, in the Year 1091. But at the Suppreſſion, they were granted by King Henry the VIIIth, to George Brook, Lord Cobham; and upon the Attainder of his unfortunate Grandſon, coming to the Crown again, they were by King Charles the Firſt granted to Stephen Alcock, Eſq; of Rocheſter.

From Weaver's Funeral Monuments, P. 327. and from what I could gather from the broken Remains of the Monuments in the Chancel of this Church, I find the following Perſons of this Ancient Family buried here.

An Inſcription in French of Joan de Cobham, 1354. Margery Cobham, 1375, Wife of Reginald, who was Lord Warden of the Ports, Knight of the Garter, and Admiral of the Sea-Coaſts, from the Thames Mouth Weſtward. He died of the Second Peſtilence, in King Edward the IIId's Reign, 1365. Margaret Cobham, Daughter of Hugh Courtney, Earl of Devonſhire, 1385. Thomas Cobham, and Maud his Wife, 1367. All theſe Inſcriptions are in French. John Lord Cobham, who built Cowling-Caſtle and the College here; the latter of which he holds in his Hand, in his Effigies here, on a Braſs Plate. Joan de Cobham, Wife of Reginald Braybrook, 1433. Her Husband lies here alſo, and was buried 1405: He died at Middleborow, in Flanders. His Lady was the Daughter of John Lord Cobham, the Founder of the College here. Two of their Children alſo lye by them. Nicholas Hawberk, another Husband of the ſaid Joan, was in her Right Lord Cobham, was alſo buried here, 1407. Ralph Cobham, Eſq; 1400. Sir Thomas Brook, Lord Cobham, 1529.

In the Middle of the Chancel is a very fair Monument in White Marble, of George Brook Lord Cobham, and his Lady. He was for ſeveral Years Governor of Calais, and Knight of the Garter. He died 1558. His Son William was the Founder of the New-College here, and Erected this Monument.

The famous Story of Sir John Old-Caſtle, who by Marrying Joan de la Pole above-mentioned, Daughter and Heir of John Lord Cobham, gained the Title of Lord Cobham, ought to have a Place here.

'This Gentleman was very Eminent for his 'Valour, as well as his Probity and Virtue: 'And one ſaith of him, that he was Regi Charus & Acceptus propter Probitatem. It redounds 'alſo to his Honour, that he was of the Opinion of Wickliff; and he ſent Perſons down 'from London, into this County and Hereford, 'to propagate that Doctrine. But doing this 'without Leave from the Ordinaries, and 'theſe Reformed Notions tending to abate the 'Power and Riches of the Popiſh Clergy; he 'neceſſarily expoſed himſelf by it to the Hatred of the Church. And therefore Archbiſhop Arundel finding the King (viz. Henry V.) 'to have a Zeal againſt the Lollards, (as thoſe 'were then called, that were for Reforming 'the Corrupt and Superſtitious Practices of the Romiſh Religion) firſt appointed Twelve Inquiſitors at Oxford, to enquire into the State of Hereſy, and to make a Collection of the Principal Opinions of the Lollards.

'And Bates, in his Hiſtory of this Gentleman's Trial, ſaith, they exhibited no leſs than 246 Articles againſt him: And then made a heavy Complaint to the King againſt Sir John, as the Arch-Heretick, and Enemy to the Church; and deſired his Leave to proceed againſt him, according to the Laws againſt Hereticks, and ſome Decrees lately made by the Clergy in Convocation.

'The Good King replied cooly to this Effect: That tho' he was deſirous to Support the Church; yet he thought the beſt way to convince the Erroneous, was by mild Perſuaſions, and good Arguments; and not by ſuch Engines, as had been often uſed to deſtroy the Truth, and ſeldom did any Service to the Church, any farther than to make Hypocrites, &c.

'And he adviſed the Archbiſhop to take this Method with Cobham: And that he would alſo talk with him himſelf. As indeed he did; telling him of the Subſtance of the Archbiſhop's Charge againſt him.

'Cobham anſwered, That he would obey him, and all his Lawful Commands: But that he owed no ſuch Thing to any Perſon upon Earth. For as for the Pope, and his Hierarchy, he knew him to be Antichriſt, by the Deſcription given of him in the Holy Scripture. And therefore, as he owed him neither Suit nor Service, ſo he would pay him none.

'This Reſolute Speech probably offended the King; who, after this, ſaid no more to him. And Cobham retired to his Caſtle of Cowling, in this County.

'The Archbiſhop improved this Diſpleaſure of the King to his Cruel Purpoſes; and got Leave to Cite and Try Cobham, according to the Canons of the Church. But his Somner did not dare deliver the Citation; ſo that he was forced to hire another to do it, and to get it fixed up on Rocheſter, and ſome other Churches Doors.

'On this, Cobham drew up a Summary of his Faith, and preſented it to the King. But the Archbiſhop had done his Buſineſs at Court, for the King would not look at it: And becauſe he would not ſwear to ſubmit himſelf in all Things to the Church, he order'd him to be arreſted in his Preſence, and ſent to the Tower.

'From this Confinement Cobham endeavour'd by all ways to be deliver'd; and, tho' he offer'd for his Purgation a Hundred Knights and Eſquires, and required the Combat, yet it availed nothing; the King was now incenſed againſt him, and order'd him a Day to appear before the Archbiſhop.

'At which time he deliver'd in a Paper, expreſſing his Opinion againſt Image-Worſhip, Praying to Saints, Pilgrimages, &c. And ſaid, That the Pope and his Prelates were Antichriſt.

'Upon this, he was condemned as an obſtinate Heretick by the Archbiſhop, excommunicated, and deliver'd over to the Secular Power, to be put to Death. But being remanded back to the Tower, he eſcaped from thence, and fled into Wales.

'The Chriſtmas after which, the King being in the midſt of his Feaſting and Jollity, on Twelfth-Night, at Eltham in this County; a ſilly Information was brought, of a Conſpiracy againſt his Life, by Sir John Old-Caſtle, and his Party; which now, forſooth, were Aſſembling in St. Giles's Fields at London, to the Number of above 20000.

'The King ſent to the Lord-Mayor of London, to ſhut up the Gates, and to ſecure the City. He did ſo; and ſent ſome Officers out, to ſearch and ſee how Things went: And they took up Seven Perſons, and ſent them to the King at Eltham.

'Theſe Seven Fellows, either thro' Fear, Foolery, or Bribery, confeſſed that they were in a Plot with Old-Caſtle, to fight againſt the King and his Lords, in St. Giles's.

'Accordingly, the King goes at Midnight (with a great Force which he had gotten together) into St. Giles's; and there finding a great Army of about 70 or 80 Men, he ſtoutly gave them Battel; and after having ſlain ſome of them, took about 60 Priſoners; the Chief of which were, an obſcure Knight, an Eſquire, a Preacher, and a Malſter.

'For in reality, theſe were only a Parcel of poor harmleſs Lollards, who were aſſembled here in the Night, to Pray, and hear the Word of God preached; that they might not be expoſed to the Perſecutions of the Popiſh Clergy. But the King dealt with them as Rebels: (Tho''tis certain Cobham was neither there, nor had formed any Deſign of being ſo): For 30 of them were hanged for Treaſon; and 7 hanged and burnt for Hereſy; and ſo that dreadful Conſpiracy was happily defeated.

'And I think, one cannot but remark from hence, how eaſily even a Man of Senſe (as King Henry the Vth certainly was) may be led into Foolery and Cruelty, when once he gives himſelf up to Bigotry.

'But that Cruel Perſecutor, the Archbiſhop, who I fear was at the Bottom of all this Sham Plot, and conſequently guilty of all thoſe poor Wretches Deaths, on the February following met with his own.

'The Hiſtorians ſay, that as he was Pronouncing the Sentence of Excommunication againſt Cobham, he was ſtruck with a ſore Throat, and a ſwell'd Tongue; which increaſed ſo upon him immediately, that he could ſcarce take down any Meat or Drink,

'and

'and conſequently, was at laſt pined and ſtarved to Death. And this was looked upon as a juſt Judgment of God upon him, for his Cruelty, and for his forbidding the Tranſlation of the Bible into Engliſh, and the Preaching of the Lollards; as he did in a Synod held at Rocheſter, chiefly againſt this Lord Cobham.

'This unhappy Gentleman, after having ſhifted about from Place to Place for Four Years, (for tho' the King ſet 100 Marks upon his Head, and offered great Privileges to any Place where he ſhould be diſcovered, yet no one would betray him; which, as Walſingham obſerves, ſhews that Lollardy was then the general Belief; yet he) was at laſt taken by the Lord Powis's Means, (tho' he made a gallant Reſiſtance) and put again in the Tower: After ſome time he was brought before the Parliament, and Examined; and the former Sentence pronounced againſt him being read, (which he did not much oppoſe, and he being Out-lawed likewiſe in the King's-Bench for Treaſon) he was condemned to be Hanged, and Burnt, which was done upon Chriſtmas-Day following in St. Giles's Fields, with the utmoſt Severity, for he was hanged only by a Chain about his Body, and Burnt Alive.

'His Daughter, the Lady Eleanor Cobham, was Married to Humphrey Plantagenet, Duke of Gloceſter; but ſhe was condemned to perpetual Baniſhment, under the Pretence of her being concerned in a Treaſonable Deſign againſt the King's Life; but as Polydore Virgil mentions nothing of this, ſo 'tis probable, her being inclined to Lollardy was her greateſt Crime.

'This Nobleman's Blood was the Firſt, I think, of that Rank, that was ever ſhed in England on the Account of Religion; but the Rancour of Popery ran then very high among the Clergy: The Prieſts, at his Execution, behaved themſelves like Furies, commanding the People not to pray for him; and telling them, that He was going to Hell, becauſe he died in obſtinate Rebellion againſt the Pope. Tantum Religio potuit ſuadere malorum.

Philpot, in his Villare Cantianum, at the Cloſe of his Account of this great Family of Cobham, and becauſe Four of this Name were concerned in it, gives a Liſt of thoſe Gentlemen of this County who attended upon King Edward the Firſt, in his victorious Expedition into Scotland, in the Twenty-Eighth Year of his Reign, which I have here annexed, that the Reader may ſee how eminent this County was then for its Valour and Bravery, that it could furniſh from it ſelf alone, near Half a Hundred Gentlemen that would accompany their Prince in ſo remote and hazardous a War; and who were all Knighted for their Services there.

COLDRED, lies towards the Eaſt End of Kent, about Four Miles and a Half Northweſtward from Dover; in the Bailiwick of Stowting, Hundred of Bewsborough, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath; in the Deanry of Sandwich, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; and the Church is called St. Pancras: It is a Vicarage; and Rated in the King's Books at 6l. 2s. 6d.

The Church is very ſmall, with nothing remarkable in it. The Steeple is quite down.

But the Healthfulneſs of the Situation of this Place deſerves our Notice: For, out of Thirty Families in this Pariſh, containing one with another about Five in a Family, as Mr. Petit the Miniſter here, told a Friend of mine, in the Year 1700: for Seven Years then laſt paſt he had not buried one Perſon in his Pariſh; and that ſeveral of the Inhabitants here have exceeded the Age of a Hundred Years.

Places of Note in Coldred.

1. The Manor of Coldred. This formerly was part of the Eſtate of the Maiſon de Dieu at Dover; and that Houſe in the Fourteenth Year of King Edward the Firſt, obtained a Charter of Free-Warren for it; and here it continued till the general Diſſolution of the Religious Houſes; and then King Henry the VIIIth granted it to Richard Monins, Eſq; Great Grand-father of Sir Edward Monins, Baronet, who was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time; and now, with the other Eſtate belonging to that Family, I ſuppoſe is become the Inheritance of the Worthy Sir Robert Furneſe, Baronet, Member of Parliament for New-Romney in this County.

2. Popſhall. This anciently belonged to the Family of the Orlanſtons of Orlanſtown. William de Orlanſton held it in K. Henry the IIId's Reign; whoſe Son of the ſame Name had a Charter of Free-Warren for it, and his Lands at Orlanſton, in the Fifty-third Year of that Prince; John de Orlanſton died poſſeſſed of it in the Forty-ſixth Year of King Edward the IIId. But his Son William Orlanſton ſold it to Richard Berham; in which Name it continued for ſeveral Deſcents; but at length it was ſold to Horne, deſcended from the Horns of Horne's-Place in Apuldre. By a Daughter and Heir of this Name, after ſome Years, it went in Marriage to John Diggs, Eſq; and from him deſcended to Sir Dudley Diggs of Chilham-Caſtle; and he alienated it to Sir William Monins, Knight and Baronet; whoſe Son, Sir Edward Monins, was the Proprietor in Philpot's Time; and ſince, I ſuppoſe, it is become as Coldred above-mentioned, the Eſtate of Sir Robert Furneſe, Baronet.

COOKSTONE, (Cuckſtan, Cuckleſtane, in the Textus Roffenſis, Cucleſtena) lies towards the North-ſide of Kent, by the River Medway, about Two Miles and a Half to the South-weſtward from Rocheſter; in the Baliwick of Hoo, Hundred of Shamell, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and North one of Juſtices in that Lath, in the Deanery and Dioceſe of Rocheſter: The Church is Dedicated to St. Michael. The Liberty of the Biſhop of Rocheſter claimeth here.

This Pariſh anciently contributed towards the Repair of the firſt Peer or Arch of Rocheſter-bridge.

'Tis a Rectory; and Valued in the King's Books at 14*l.* 15*s.* 4*d.*

This Church, with other Land, was given to the Priory of Rocheſter by King Ethelwolf, Son of King Egbert, A. D. 880. The Grant is in the Textus Roffenſis, Fol. 142. b, and Fol. 209, b. of that MS, as this Note out of Doomſday Book, Cucleſtane ſe defendebat Tempore Edwardi Regis pro 2 Solinis cum Dimidio, & nunc pro 2, & eſt appretratum x Libras.

There is a Portion of Tithes here, now belonging to the Dean and Chapter of Rocheſter, which is called Chaunters Portion.

In the Church are Memorials of the Interment of Sir John Marſham, Baronet, the Learned Author of the Chronicon Egyptiacum, 1685, and of his Lady, Daughter of William Hammond, Eſq; of St. Albans in Eaſt-Kent, and of ſeveral others of that Family; and of Anne, Wife of Sir Robert Harley, Knight of the Bath, 1602.

Places of Note here:

1. Whornes-Place is a Seat in Cuckſtone, which was firſt Built by Sir William Whorne, who was Lord Mayor of London, A. D. 1487; but in the next Generation, it went by Purchaſe into the Poſſeſſion of the Vanes, but ſtaid not long here neither, before it was ſold to Barnewell; and he, about the beginning of Queen Elizabeth, parted with it the ſame way to Nicholas Lewſon, Eſq; of Staffordſhire; whoſe Great Grandſon, Sir Richard Lewſon, alienated it to John Marſham, Eſq; extracted from the Marſhams of Norfolk; he was afterwards made a Baronet; and was deſervedly famous both at Home and Abroad, for his great Learning, and laborious Writings; and from him this Eſtate is now deſcended to his moſt Worthy Grandſon, Sir Robert Marſham, Baronet, of the Moat near Maidſtone, late Member of Parliament that Town, and one of the Secret Committee, appointed by this preſent Parliament, for the Management of the Tryals of the Impeached Lords, but now Created a Baron by the Title of Lord Romney.

2. Wickham, is a Manor which lies partly in this, and partly in the Pariſh of Stroud, which is alſo Part of the Eſtate of the Right Honourable the Lord Romney.

COSMUSBLEANE, lies on the North Side of Kent, about three Miles Northward from Canterbury, in the Bailiwick of Bridge and Pethum, Hundred of Whit-Staple, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath.

It is in the Deanery and Dioceſe of Canterbury; and the Church, which is now ſmall and mean, and without any Steeple, is Dedicated to St. Coſmus and Damianus; which Church was about 600 Years ago, appropriated to the Hoſpital of St. Thomas the Martyr, of Eaſt-Bridge in Canterbury. And in the Year 1375, a Vicarage was Founded and Endowed here by Simon Sudbury, Archbiſhop of Canterbury. See the Foundation Charter, in Somner's Canterb. Append. N°. xviii.

In the Year 1189, King Richard the Firſt granted the Wood of Blean to Chriſt's Church in Canterbury: And in the Year 1270, the Nuns of St. Sepulchres, in that City, had a Grant of 90 Acres of it, and is that which is now called Minchen-Wood; and the like Quantity was granted to the Priory of St. Gregories in Canterbury, and to the Hoſpital of Herbaldown; the laſt whereof is in that Part of it which is called Shoorth.

Places of Note here, are,

1. Blean-Manor: which was given to Eaſt-bridge Hoſpital by the Lord Thomas Roos de Hamlack, in the Thirty-third Year of King Edward the IIId. He lived probably at Chilham-Caſtle; and his Mother was Daughter of Bartholomew Lord Badleſmere, and Widow of William de Roos of Hamlack; which William was alſo a Benefactor to the ſaid Hoſpital; and as ſuch, hath his Effigies been ſet up in the Glaſs Window of the Chapter-Houſe in Canterbury Cathedral. Thomas de Roos Died, Anno 1399.

2. Wellcourt, which anciently belonged to the Family of the Atleezes. Sir Richard Atleeze died poſſeſſed of it in the Year 1394; but leaving no Iſſue, it fell to his Brother Marcellus Atleeze, who left only Two Daughters; Lucy, firſt Married to John Norton, and after to William Langley of Knolton in Kent; by both whom ſhe had Iſſue; and Cicely, who Married Mr. Valentine Barret of Perry-Court in Kent. But Norton and Langley, as Heirs to the Eldeſt Daughter, ſhared the Poſſeſſion of Wellcourt, till the Eleventh Year of King Henry the VIIIth; and then Thomas, Son of John Langley, parted with his Right in it, to his Kinſman Sir John Norton; and he in the Third Year of King Edward the VIth ſold it to Thomas Green; whoſe Succeſſors, George and Thomas Green, in the Seventh Year of King James the Firſt, joined in a Sale of it to John Beſt, the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

3. Lambert-Lands, is a Manor which lieth partly in this Pariſh, and partly in Hernehill; and which till the general Suppreſſion of the Abbies, did belong to that of Feverſham; but K. Henry, in his Thirty-ſixth Year, granted it for Life to Thomas Arden; but he being barbarouſly Murthered by his Wife, and her Accomplices, in King Edward the VIth's Time, (ſee Feverſham) and dying without Iſſue, it returned to the Crown, and was by that Prince granted to Sir Henry Criſpe of Quekes, in the Iſle of Thanet. But in K. James the Firſt's Time, it was ſold to Sir John Wild of Canterbury; and not long after to one Mr. Hewett a Miniſter, in whom, or in his Heirs the Poſſeſſion was in Philpot's Time.

3. Hoad-Court is a Place which is, and for a good while hath been, part of the Eſtate of Eaſtbridge Hoſpital in Canterbury, holding of the Maſter thereof; of which Place, ſee the Account of the Religious Houſes and Hoſpitals. But at the general Suppreſſion it was granted for Three Lives to Sir John Boiſe, who had been Steward to Five Archbiſhops of Canterbury, and Judge of the Chancery at Dover, and under Three

Lord

Lord Wardens: He was alſo Recorder of Canterbury, and the Founder of Jeſus-College, in the Suburbs of Canterbury, near the North-Gate, which he furniſhed with Six Brothers, and Four Siſters, and a Warden, which were all very well provided for.

He died without Iſſue, leaving this Eſtate to his Nephew, Mr. Thomas Bois, and in this Family it continued in Philpot's Time.

There is a ſmall Brook in this Pariſh, in a Valley, between the Church and Hothe, or Hoad Court, above-mentioned, which in the Foundation Charter of the Vicarage here, is called Viſchmannysbourne, i. e. Fiſher-Man's-Bourn, or Brook.

This is expreſſed in the new Two Sheet Map of Kent, and runs into the Sea to the Right of Sea-Salter.

The Vicarage is valued at 9 l. in the King's Books.

COWDEN, lies at the South Weſt Corner of Kent, by one of the Branches of the Medway, in the Textus Roſenſis called Cudena, adjoining to Surrey and Suſſex, about Seven Miles and an Half South-Weſtward from Tunbridge, in the Lath of Sutton at Hone, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Lower one of Juſtices in that Lath; part of it is in the Hundred of Somerden, and part in that of Weſtram and Edenbridge, and both are in the Bailiwick of Sutton Bromley: But there is a ſmall Quantity of Land, and Two Houſes, which are in the Hundred of Axtane, and the Bailiwick of Sutton-Dartford.

'Tis in the Dioceſe of Rocheſter, and Deanery of Malling: The Church is in the Hundred of Somerden, and is Dedicated to St. Mary-Magdalen; on which Saint's Day, being July 22. there is a Fair at this Place: The Church is but Small, and Mean, and hath nothing remarkable about it, but a handſome Spire.

Places of Note here:

1. Manor of Cowden. Before the Suppreſſion of the Abbeys, Cowden belonged to the College of Lingfeild, in Surrey; but was at the Suppreſſion by King Henry the VIIIth, granted to Henry Earl of Arundel; who ſold it to Wickenden, and his Grandſon left it between Two Sons; one of which ſold his Moiety to Aſhdown, but the other remained in the Name of Wickenden in Philpot's Time.

2. The Moat is an Ancient Seat in Cowden, which once belonged to the Family of Coſin, and which continued here for many Deſcents: But in the Thirty Second of King Henry the VIth, William Coſin alienated it to William Hextale, William and Nicholas Gainsford: In the Fifth of King Edward the IVth, Hextale Sold his Intereſt to William Gainsford; and his Deſcendant, Nicholas Gainsford, was Juſtice of the Peace for Kent and Suſſex, in King Henry the VIIth's Reign; and in this Family the Eſtate continued in Philpot's Time.

3. Wayſtrode is a ſmall Manor here, but yet did once belong to a Family of this Name; but about the beginning of King Henry the VIth, it was Sold thence to May; and after that, in the ſame Reign, it went by Sale from May to Still, in which Name it continued in Philpot's Time.

4. Cowden Leighton, is an Ancient Manor in this Pariſh, which had formerly the ſame Owners with the Manors of Chidingſtone Cobham: and Three Parts of it are the ſame way with that, come now into the Poſſeſſion of Henry Streatfield, Eſq; of Chidingſtone; which ſee. The Fourth Part is ſtill in the Heirs of Jane, one of the Four Daughters, who married Mr. Edward Taylor.

The Pariſh is a Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 9 l. 19 s. 4 d.

COWLING, Cowlings, lies at the North Side of Kent near the Thames, about Four Miles and an half Northwards from Rocheſter, in the Baliwick of Hoo, Hundred of Shamel, Lath of Ailsford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and North one of the Juſtices of that Lath.

'Tis in the Deanery and Dioceſe of Rocheſter: The Church is Dedicated to St. James, and was given to the Church of Rocheſter, A. D. 960, by Ediva, or Edgiva, Daughter and Heir of Earl Sigiline, Lord of Cowling.

The Pariſh is a Rectory, and Valued at 14 l. in the King's Books.

The Chancel is handſome; in it are the Royal Arms, and thoſe of Brook Lord Cobham.

Memorials of Goodyere, Thurſton, and Lupo.

For the Caſtles here, ſee the Chapter of Caſtles.

The Liberty of the Biſhop of Rocheſter claims here.

Places of Note here.

1. Cowling Manor. The Lords Cobham of Cobham, were the Ancient Lords of this Place; but at length Joan, Daughter to John Lord Cobham, carried away this Eſtate. Firſt, to John de la Pole; and after his Death, to her Second Husband, Sir John Old-Caſtle, who, notwithſtanding his great Merit and Services in the Wars, was accuſed of Lollardiſm, and moſt barbarouſly uſed by his Perſecutors, and at laſt Hanged, and Burnt in the Firſt of King Henry the Vth. After this, ſhe Married a Third Husband; which was Reginald Braybrook; and poſſeſſed him of this Eſtate. It appears alſo by a Monument in Cobham Church, that this Joan had a Fourth Husband, one Nicholas Hawberk, who came in before Braybrook, and died 1407. But by him ſhe had only one Daughter, Joan, who by marrying Thomas Brooke, of Somerſetſhire, Eſq; carried it into that Family: From whence deſcended William Lord Brooke, who was Lord Warden of the Five Ports in Queen Elizabeth's Reign: He gave this Manor to his Second Son, George Brooke, who was Beheaded at Winchеſter, for being concern'd with his Brother Henry, Lord Cobham, and others, in that dark Deſign of Sir Walter Rawleigh; on which, this Eſtate was forfeited to the Crown; but was reſtored to his Son, Sir William Brooke, by King James I. and deſcended to his Son, Sir John Brooke, who was created Lord Brooke by King Charles the Iſt. at Oxford: By a Daughter of the Brooke Family, it went to Sir Thomas Whitmore, who Sold it to Frederick Herne, Eſq; the preſent Poſſeſſor.

2. Mortimers is a Manor in this Pariſh, which once belonged to a Family of that Name. Hugh de Mortimer, held it in the Forty Firſt of King Henry the IIId. and obtained the Grant of the Fair for Cliff at Hoo. John Mortimer was alſo Poſſeſſor of it in the Eleventh of King Edward the IIId. and was to find a Hobeler, or Light Horſe-Man, for the Security of the Coaſt about Hoo and Genlade.

From this Name it went by Sale to Inglefeild, of Berkſhire; and ſtaid in that Family till King Henry the VIIth, but about the End of his Reign, it was Sold to John Sidley, Eſq; Auditor to the King, and from him it went, the ſame way, to the Polhills, Anceſtor to George Polhill, Eſq; eldeſt Son to Sir Thomas Polhill, who was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

CRAYFORD, Craford, Creccanford, lies at the North Side of the County, towards the Thames, by the River Cray, about a Mile and an Half Weſtward from Dartford; in the Baliwick of Sutton Dartford, Hundred of Little and Leſnes, Lath of Sutton at Hone, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Upper Diviſion of Juſtices in the Lath. 'Tis a Peculiar of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, in the Dioceſe of Rocheſter, and Deanery of Shorcham.

'Tis now a very neat Church, with a fine Altar-Place, given by Sir Cloudeſly Shovel; and there is preſerved in the Window of the North Iſle, a good Piece of Painting in Glaſs, of Abraham's offering up Iſaac; being the Gift of one Goldſmith, whoſe Arms are there.

Kilburne ſaith there were (but I could not ſee them, ſo I ſuppoſe they are deſtroy'd) in this Church, Monuments of the Interment of Appleton, now above Two Hundred and Fifty Years ſince, of Woodford, above Two Hundred and Ten, and of the Two Elhams, above Two Hundred and Twenty Years ago.

There is now a fair White Marble Monument of William Draper, Eſq; of this Place.

This Place is famous for a great Battle fought here, between Hengiſt the Saxon, (after his Brother Horſa was killed, near Ailsford) and Vortimer, the Britiſh King; where the Britains loſt Four of their Chief Commanders, and were ſo Routed, that they fled to London, and abandoned Kent to the Saxons entirely: And after this, never attempted any Thing againſt Hengiſt any more, but left him, from this Time, in quiet Poſſeſſion of his Kentiſh Kingdom. But of this more in another Place.

In the open Heath near this Town, as alſo in the incloſed Fields about it, are divers Artificial Caves, or Holes in the Earth, whereof ſome, as Lambard ſaith, were Ten, Fifteen, or Twenty Fathoms deep; the Paſſage being narrow at the Top, but wide and large at the Bottom, with ſeveral Rooms or Partitions in ſome of them, and all ſtrongly Vaulted and ſupported by Pillars of Chalk. 'Tis probable, that many of them are only Chalk Pits; but perhaps ſome might be dug by the Saxons, after the manner of their Anceſtors, (a) and uſed as Receptacles for their Goods, and as Places of Retreat and Security for their Wives and Children, both in Times of Civil Diſſentions, and Foreign Invaſions. There have been great Numbers of them hereabouts, and near Dartford, and in the Heath, Woods, and Encloſures adjacent, in the Pariſhes alſo of Dartford, Willmington, Boxley, and North-Cray; and into one of theſe, Lambard ſaith, a Noble Perſon, purſuing a Hawk once, fell, not without eminent Danger of his Life, the Pit being above Twelve Fathom deep.

On the Cray, a fine ſmall River, on which this Place ſtands, formerly was a Mill for making of Plates for Armour.

Places of Note here are:

1. Howbery, or Oldberry, which, as appears by old Court-Rolls, and Evidences, was in King Henry the IIId's Time, the Eſtate of the great Family of the Northwoods; where it continued till King Richard the IId. and then it was Sold to Abermill, and from thence before the End of King Henry the IVth. it went to Nicholas Carew, of Surrey, and John Cornwallis, of London; who, by joint Conſent, in the Fifth of King Henry the Vth, conveyed it to Richard Brian: And he, in the Firſt Year of the next King's Reign, paſſed it away to Roger Apylton, one of the Auditors of King Henry the VIth, and of his Father before him. His Wife was Agnes, the Widow of Thomas Covely, or Cowley; and the Reverſion went in Fee to her Son, Thomas Covely; whoſe Grandſon, John Cowley, in the Twenty Second of King Henry the VIIIth, Sold it to John Judde; whoſe Son Henry, about the beginning of Queen Elizabeth, alienated it to Sir Richard Fane: From whence it went into the Family of the Drapers: And Creſwell Draper, Eſq; Sold it to Sir Cloudeſly Shovel, that late Gallant Sea-Commander.

2. Newbery; which was Anciently in the Family of St. John; for Edward St. John flouriſhed here, in the Reign of King Edward the Iſt, and IId; but he dying without Iſſue, his Siſter and Heir, Iſabel, was married to Henry de Burgherſt, who, in the Right of his Wife, was in Poſſeſſion of it at his Death, in the Twenty Third of King Edward the IIId. as appears by Rot. Eſc. N. 94. P. 2. After this, in Proceſs of Time, it came into the Family of the Poynings: And Thomas Poynings, about the Beginning of King Henry the VIth, carried it to John Kingſtone, Eſq; where it ſtaid till the Reign of King Henry the VIIIth: And then it came into the Poſſeſſion of Sir Thomas Liſley.

3. Marſhals-Court, one of the Family of Liſley, about the beginning of Queen Elizabeth, conveyed Newbery to Apilton, of Marſhals-Court, in this Pariſh; who gave both this, and Marſhals-Court, in Dover, with his Daughter Frances, who Married Mr. Francis Goldſmith; and he Sold Newberry to Mr. Draper; and Creſwell Draper, Eſq; Sold it to Sir Cloudeſly Shovel, whoſe Relict, the Lady Shovell, is now the Poſſeſſor of it, as well as of Newbery, above-named; but Marſhals-Court was Sold to Pix; and from thence to Mrs. Touſe, of London, who ſettled it in Marriage on her Daughter, with Colonel Hobbes, of Kingſton upon Thames; from whence it was Sold to Sir Robert Marſham, and he Sold it to Sir Cloudeſly Shovel, and thence it went with the other Eſtate here, to his Widow, the preſent Lady Shovell, of May-Place, in this Pariſh.

4. Ellam; once gave Name to an Ancient Family, who had a Seat here: whoſe Arms, were Argent, a Sword in Bend dexter Sable. Henry Ellam died 1471. and was Buried in Crayford Church: John Ellam deceaſed 1481, and was buried there alſo; but both their Monuments were deſtroyed by a Fire which happened in the Church. In 16. King Henry VII. John Ellam Sold this Eſtate to Henry Harman, Clerk of the Crown: In whoſe Family it continued till the latter End of King James Iſt's Reign; and then it was Sold, with Mayſtreet, (which the ſaid Mr. Harman bought of Cowley, and Bulbeck, of Bulbeckſtreet, in this Pariſh) to Draper, whence it went to Sir Cloudeſly Shovel, as Hawbrey, Newberry, and Marſhals-Court did.

William, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, in the Twentieth of King Richard the IId. obtained the Grant of a Market to this Place on Tueſday, and a Fair on the Day before the Nativity of the Bleſſed Virgin, and Four Days after, viz. on September 8.

The Whiting-Grounds, and Iron-Mill here, for ſlitting and flatting Iron to make Hoops, &c. belong to the Lady Shovel.

Somner, and Burton, and Biſhop Stillingfleet, make this Place the Noviomagus, or Noviodunum of the Itinerary; vid. Burton, p. 176, to which both the Diſtance agrees well: And Mr. Somner alſo hath obſerved from Cluverius, that Magus ſignifies a Ford, or River; and therefore Noviomagus may be the New-Town on the Ford or River, Vid. Cluver. Geogr. Antiq. L. 1. p. 64, 67. Camden, and Talbot, will have the Noviomagus to be about Croyden in Surrey, becauſe

Ptolemy

Ptolemy places his Neomagus amongſt the Regni, which is too general a Word to determine any Thing; for Camden ſaith, the Belgæ are the Inland, the Regni the Maritime People of England; and then the Regni may be the People of Kent, or Suſſex, or any Place on the Sea-Coaſt. But, beſides that the Copies of Ptolemy are often faulty, I can ſcarce think that the Roman Way would run ſo far out of the direct Road, as to go to Woodcote, or Croyden, in Surrey, when there doth not ſeem to be any occaſion for it at all: And to put the Matter paſt Doubt, the Roman Way is ſtill plainly viſible on Black-Heath, and Bexley Heath; which runs to Crayford; as I ſhew more at large in that Chapter of Roman-Ways.

The Land here in the Marſhes, is as Fertile as that about Eriff, is much of the ſame Nature, and for the ſame Reaſons.

The Lady Shovel, Relict of that Brave, Skilful, and Faithful Admiral, Sir Cloudeſly Shovel, hath a good Houſe here, called May-Place.

CRANBROOKE lies towards the South-Side of Kent, about Three Miles South-Eaſtward from Goudherſt, in the Bailiwick of the Seven Hundreds, Lath of Scray, Weſt-Diviſion of the County, and Lower one of Juſtices in that Lath: A ſmall Part of it is in North-Borough, of the Hundred of Great Barnfield; another little Part is in the Borough of Thornden, and in the Hundred of Barckley, and all the reſt of it is in the Hundred of Cranbrooke: 'Tis alſo in the Deanery of Charing and Dioceſe of Canterbury: The Church ſtands in the Hundred of Cranbrooke, and is dedicated to St. Dunſtan. 'Tis a Vicarage and rated in the King's Books at 19 l. 19 s. 0 d. as I find it in Biſhop Williams's Map of the Dioceſe of Canterbury; but in the Valor Beneficiorum, A. D. 1695, 'tis ſaid to be valued at 12 l. 10 s. 0 d.

The Parſonage was anciently appropriated to the Archbiſhops of Canterbury; but Archbiſhop Cranmer granted it to the King by a Deed enrolled in the Office of Augmentation in the 32d Year of that Prince: And the Year following the King granted it to the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury.

The Liberty of that Church claims all over the Town, and the Denn of Cranbrooke, as Parcel of the Manor of Godmerſham; except the George-Inn, and its Appurtenances, which is out of that Liberty, and held of the King by Knights-Service. The Liberty of the Archbiſhop claims over the Manor of Siſing-Hurſt; and the Liberty of Wye claims over the Borough of Frechiſley, otherwiſe called Abbots Franchiſe; and this Borough hath a Court-Leet by it ſelf; the Borſholder of it is choſen there, and the Inhabitants owe no Service to the Court-Leets holden for the Hundred: Only at this Court a Conſtable may be choſen out of the Borough for the Hundred.

A Market is here kept every Saturday, by Grant from King Edward the Iſt in his 18th Year: And that the greateſt in theſe Parts; and it hath Two Annual Fairs: viz. May 19. and Sept. 1.

The Church here is a very large and handſome Fabrick; and 'tis lately beautified within-ſide. A new Altar-Piece, and good Wainſcot in the Chancel, and the Floor paved with Black and White Marble. At the Eaſt-End of the Chancel, a very noble Window of old painted Glaſs.

In the Church are Memorials of the Family of the Bakers of Siſingburſt, viz. Of the Firſt Sir John Baker and his Lady, of whom is a fair Monument in white Marble, and of the Eminent Family of Roberts of Glaſſenbury. In the South-Iſle of the Chancel is a Monument of William Roke-burſt alias Roberts of Goudherſt, the firſt Anceſtor of the Roberts of Glaſſenbury in this Pariſh: He was originally a Gentleman of Scotland, and came hither in the 3d Year of King Henry the Iſt. as ſome ſay; others, in the Reign of King William the Iſt.

Formerly a little Part of this Town only was paved; and the reſt, eſpecially in Winter, then uſed to be very foul and dirty; and the Way was worn deep, and become very inconvenient for Paſſage, eſpecially on Market-Days: But in the Year 1654, the reſt was begun to be paved and raiſed; and in Three Years after it was finiſhed from the Market-Croſs to a little below the Turning from the Town towards Wiſley: And this Paving of the Town, no doubt, much contributed to the Healthfulneſs of it, as well as to its Profit and Advantage with reſpect to Trade, &c. And yet it was very eminent for that before: For Mr. Derham (a) hath obſerved from Mr. Grant, and Mr. King, that at this Place, from the Year 1560 to 1649, the Proportion of Marriages to Births was as 1 to 3, 9. And that of Births to Burials as 1, 6, to 1; which ſhews it then to have been as healthful a Place as any one in England.

This was one of the firſt Places where the Manufacture of Clothing, or Cloth-Making was profeſſed and practiſed in England. It was ſet up here in the Reign of King Edward the IIId, who by Immunities and Rewards in his Tenth Year brought the Flemmings over hither to teach the Engliſh the Art of making Woollen Cloth. And for this Cranbrooke hath been a great while famous, eſpecially for ſtrong durable Broad Cloths of very good Mixtures and Colours.

Places of Note here:

1. Siſingherſt, anciently written Saxenherſt: For John de Saxenherſt was taxed for his Lands here at Cranbrooke, in the 20th Year of King Henry the IIId, towards the Marriage of that Prince's Siſter; as appears by Teſta de Nevil, in the Exchequer, a Book which Regiſters all the Lands ſo taxed. And Philpot judges rightly that Saxenherſt there was this Place. And here were alſo then two other ſmall Manors, viz.

2. Copten, and 3. Stone, which had always the ſame Owners with Siſingherſt.

By a Female Heir of the Name of Saxenherſt theſe Three Manors went into the Family of Berham. Richard de Berham was Sheriff of Kent in the 43d Year of Edward the IIId. and is written of this Place: And his Father Henry de Berham paid Aid for them at making the Black Prince Knight: And in this Name they continued till towards the End of King Henry the VIIth's Reign, and then Copton and Stone, with Part of Siſingherſt were ſold to Mr. Tho. Baker, Father to Sir John Baker, who was Attorney-General, and Privy-Counſellor to Queen Mary; and alſo Chancellor of the Exchequer and Under Treaſurer: He purchaſed the reſt of the Manor of Siſingherſt, and built that Magnificent Houſe in the Park, which is ſtill remaining.

There was an ancient Chapel here which was founded by John de Saxenherſt; but rebuilt by another Sir John Baker, a Deſcendant of the Former: It was conſecrated by John Bancroft, Biſhop of Oxon, 1637, and dedicated to St. John the Evangeliſt. This latter Sir John Baker, who was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time, died without Iſſue Male, but left a Widow who married Sir Philip Howard; and Four Daughters, who married Bajon, Kirby, Dowell, and Spenſer, amongſt which Families this Eſtate became divided.

4. Glaſſenbury, or Glaſtenbury, is a famous Seat in this Pariſh, ſtanding within a Park, and moated round; and hath for many Generations been the Capital Manſion of the Ancient Family of the the Rokeburſts or Roberts above-mentioned: And it came into this Family in King Henry the IVth's Reign, by the Marriage of Stephen Rokeburſt, alias Roberts of Curteſden, in old Records, ſaith Philpot, written Rokeburſt-Den, in Goudherſt, with Joan ſole Heir of William Tilley of Glaſſenbury; and the Tilleys had reſided here as long before as the Reign of King Edward the Iſt. They had before this Marriage of Roberts a Houſe ſeated on a Hill; but 1473 Walter Roberts, Eſq; pulled that down, and built another in the Valley within the Moat, which is now the Seat of Sir Thomas Roberts, Bar. This Walter Roberts built alſo the Eaſt Window in the North Chancel of the Church. It appears alſo by the Monument above-mentioned of William Rokeherſt alias Roberts, that this Family had continued at Goudherſt before their coming hither 274 Years; the Place of their Seat there was at Winchet Hill; which it ſeems, was after called Curteſden, and Ladieſden-Rokeherſt.

5. Courſehorne is a Place here which for above 300 Years was the Inheritance of the Family of Henley: One of whom was Sir Walter Henley, Serjeant at Law in King Henry the VIIIth's Reign. But he died without Iſſue-Male, and left Three Daughters; who married into Three Eminent Families: Elizabeth to Waller of Gromesbridge. Hellen was firſt the Wife of Thomas Colepeper of Bedgebury, then of Sir George Somerſet, and laſtly of Thomas Vane, Eſq; of Burſton. The third Siſter Anne married Richard Covert, of Slaugham in Suſſex, Eſq;. But Courſehorne however was not parted among them, but went to his Bother Thomas Henley, Eſq; whoſe Deſcendant Sir Thomas Henley, was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time, and reſided here.

6. Hartridge, is a Place here which anciently had Owners of that Name; of whom one was Thomas Hartridge, a Man of ſuch Eminence, as that he was one of the Conſervators of the Peace for this County in the 34th Year of King Edward the IIId, when there were but Eight only for the whole Shire. After this Family it went to the Wilfords; who were deſcended from the Wilfords of Wilford in Devonſhire. But in King James the Iſt's Reign it went by Sale to Tindall, whoſe Deſcendant, in Philpot's Time, had the Poſſeſſion, and lived at Sutton-Valence.

7. Bettenham, was alſo formerly the Seat of a Family of this Surname. But one of this Name leaving here only Three Daughters Co-heirs, who married into the Families of More, Dering, and Fiſher, this Place became the Inheritance of More: And one of that Name ſold it to Roe; whoſe Deſcendant was the famous Sir Thomas Roe, Chancellor of the Garter, Privy Councellor to King Charles the Iſt, and ſeveral Years Ambaſſador in Turkey, India, Sweden, and Germany; but a Deſcendant of his ſold it to Manſfeld, in whoſe Poſſeſſion it was in Philpot's Time.

8. Blechingherſt; this was an ancient Seat belonging to the Sharpeighs of Sharpeigh, a Family of great Antiquity in theſe Parts; for Robert de Sharpeigh flouriſhed here in the beginning of King Edward the Iſt, and in this Name it continued a great while. Robert Sharpeigh of Cranebrook was in Commiſſion of the Peace about the end of King Henry the VIIth's Reign; and it was not alienated from this Family till about the beginning of King Charles the Iſt, and then it was purchaſed by Martin; and from him went the ſame way to Waller, who, I ſuppoſe, enjoyed it in Philpot's Time.

9. Buckburſt; a Place that in the 17th Year of King Edward the IIId, was in the Poſſeſſion of Richard de Hadloe; and Philpot thinks it gave Name to the Family of Buckburſt: But in King Henry the VIIth's Time it was got ſome how into the Poſſeſſion of the Drayners, and here it continued till the beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, and then was ſold to Alexander Cachman; in whoſe Family the Poſſeſſion remained in Philpot's Time.

10. Holden, 11. Haweridge, are two Places in Cranbrook, which for ſome Hundreds of Years have and do ſtill belong to a Family of the Name of the former, and are now in the Poſſeſſion of —— Holden, Eſq; one of his Majeſty's Juſtices of Peace for this County.

12. Milkhouſe is a noted Place here, ſo denominated from a Seat called Milkhouſe; where was formerly a Chapel founded and endowed by John Lawleſs, about the latter end of King Henry the VIIth's Reign; but on the general Diſſolution of all the Religious Houſes, King Henry the VIIIth granted the Lands belonging to it to Sir John Baker of Siſinghurſt above mentioned; and among his other Eſtates it continued and deſcended.

FOOTS-CRAY, (Votes-Cray,) Lies towards the Weſt ſide of Kent by the River Cray, about Three Miles South Weſtward from Dartford, in the Bailiwick of Sutton-Dartford, Hundred of Raxley, Lath of Sutton-at-Hone, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Upper One of Juſtices in that Lath; in the Deanery of Dartford, and Dioceſe of Rocheſter; and the Church is called All-Saints. A Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 8 l. 3 s. 4 d.

In the North Chancel Wall is an Antique Monument of a Man in Armour, and his Wife, but who they are I know not. There is a fair Communion-Table and Altar-Piece; and in the Church a Stone Font which ſeems pretty Ancient.

The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims here.

(a) Philpot ſaith this Place took its Name of Votes-Cray, from one Vote who was the Owner of it in the Conqueror's Time. Afterwards it came into the Poſſeſſion of the Rokeſleys; and Gregory de Rokeſley died ſeized of it in the 29th Year of King Edward the IIId, whoſe Son Roger, by a Fine levied about 4 Years after, ſold it to John Abell, Margery his Wife, and Walter his Son; which Son Walter ſent it the ſame way to Sir Simon de Vaughan; and this Gentleman paid Aid for it in the 20th Year of King Edward the IIId. (a) Manor of Footſ-Cray.

After this, ſome how, this Manor came into the Poſſeſſion of the Warners, probably by the Marriage of a Daughter of the Name of Vaughan, becauſe there were formerly in the Church Windows ſome Empalements of Arms expreſſing ſuch an Alliance: Certain it is, John Warner, who was Sheriff of Kent in the 20th Year of King Henry the VIth, was Owner of this Eſtate. But by the Marriage of two Heireſſes of this Name of Warner, their Husbands Herne and Denham divided the Eſtate between them; and this part of it fell to the ſhare of Herne, whoſe Deſcendant Chriſtopher Herne, Eſq; in the 21ſt Year of King Henry the VIIIth, ſold it to William Walſingham, Eſq; and he left it to his Son and Heir Sir Francis Walſingham, who was Principal Secretary of State to Queen Elizabeth. This Eminent Gentleman, about the middle of her Reign, ſold it to Mr. John Gellibrand, whoſe Deſcendant of the ſame Name was in Poſſeſſion of it in Philpot's Time.

St. MARY CRAY, lies towards the Weſt ſide of Kent by the River Cray, about 5 Miles South Eaſt from Bromley, in the Bailiwick of Sutton Dartford, Hundred of Ruxley, Lath of Sutton-at-Hone, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Upper one of Juſtices in that Lath: 'Tis in the Dioceſe of Rocheſter and Deanery of Dartford: And the Church is Dedicated to St. Mary; whence its Name.

In

In it are Memorials of Elizabeth, Wife of George, Brother to the Lord Cobham; who was before married to John, Father of Sir Percival Hart, 1510. of Richard and John Manning, of King, Avery, and Crewes.

The Two Side Chancels belong to Burton Hodgel.

A Market is kept here every Wedneſday: and a Fair on Candlemas-day.

The Liberty of the Dutchy of Lancaſter claims here.

Philpot ſaith this Place is only a Chapel of Eaſe to Orpington.

Before the Conqueſt St. Mary Cray was held by one Elfgat of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury; and in King William the Iſt's Time, it was poſſeſs'd by Hugh Nephew of Herbert Biſhop of Bayon, and eſteemed as a whole Knights Fee.

In King Henry the IIId's Time, John de Maries, deſcended from Thomas de Maries, who accompanied King Richard the Iſt into the Holy Land, and was with him at the Siege of Acon, had two Eminent Manors in this Pariſh, viz.

1. Ackmere, and 2. Sentling: But about King Edward the Iſt's Time, theſe were got into the Poſſeſſion of George de Rokeſly, Grandſon to John de Rokeſly, who was alſo at Acon with King Richard the Iſt: And he obtained the Grant for a Market on Wedneſday; an Annual Fair for Three Days at the Aſſumption of the Bleſſed Virgin: But his Son dying without Iſſue Male in the 17th Year of King Edward the IId; Agnes, one of his Daughters, carried it to her Husband Thomas de Poynings, together with Rokeſly, and much more Land hereabouts. And here it ſtaid till the latter end of King Edward the IIId, and then it went to Belknap (Sir Robert) but he being Attainted and Baniſhed into Ireland in the 10th Year of King Richard the IId, this Eſtate was forfeited to the Crown.

I have now by me a very fair Grant, with the Great Seal Appendant of King Richard the IId, whereby he gives to one John de Scarle, his Clerk, a Rent of 20 Marks per Ann. due from the Prior of Rocheſter to Sir Robert Belknap, which was forfeited at this time, and is dated the 12th Year of that King; but the King made him pay down 200 Marks for it; or rather, I believe, forced the Money from him, and then gave him this to ſtop his Mouth.

But Nine Years afterwards they were reſtored again to Hamon Belknap, Lord of Oſton, in Warwickſhire, by that Prince. And his Grandſon, Sir Henry Belknap, leaving only Daughters; Anne, one of them, carried this Eſtate to her Husband Sir Robert Wotton; in whoſe Family theſe two Manors continued; till Thomas Lord Wotton ſettled them in Marriage on his Eldeſt Daughter with Henry Lord Stanhope, Son to the Earl of Cheſterfield.

The Manor of Ackmere, when in the Poſſeſſion of Maries, was held in Caſtle-guard of Dover Caſtle, ſaith Philpot, p. 311. (under Sittingbourn.)

Here was a Market; but all the Market-Houſe but the Chimney, having been blown down in the great Storm, it hath ſince been diſuſed.

Either this, or Paul's Crey, is called Rodulf's Crey, in the Textus Roffenſis, f. 221. but I can't diſtinguiſh which of them it is, but North-Cray and Foots-Cray, are diſtinctly named.

NORTH-CRAY, lies towards the Weſt ſide of Kent, by the River Cray, about Two Miles and a half from Dartford to the South-Weſt; in the Bailiwick of Sutton-Dartford, Hundred of Ruxley, Lath of Sutton-at-Hone, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Upper One of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis alſo in the Deanery of Dartford, and Dioceſe of Rocheſter. And the Church is Dedicated to St. James. A Rectory, and rated in the King's Books at 7*l.* 13*s.* 2*d.*

Robert Poynings, Carver and Sword-Bearer to Jack Cade, and after he was pardoned for being in that Rebellion, raiſed a new one in this Place, in the 42d Year of King Henry the VIth.

1. North-Crey Manor, and that of 2. Rokeſley, were very early the Inheritance of the Rokeſleys, from whom doubtleſs the whole Hundred took its Name; tho' now written Ruxley.

A Deſcendant of this Family, Gregory de Rokeſley, was Lord Mayor of London, An. 1275, and was beſides Keeper of the King's Exchange in London, and Eſſay-Maſter General of the King's Mints. His Son, Sir Richard de Rokeſley, was Seneſchal of Poictou, and Governor of Montreul in Picardy, about the End of King Edward the Iſt. But he left only Two Daughters, the Elder of which, Agnes, married Sir Thomas de Poynings, Father of Richard Lord Poynings, and carried Rokeſly into that Family. But North-Cray ſtaid longer in the former one; for Roger de Rokeſly paid Aid for it at making the Black Prince Knight; and he dying without Iſſue, it went alſo into the Family of the Poynings; for Richard Lord Poynings died ſeized of both thoſe Manors, in the 13th Year of King Richard the IId. His only Daughter Eleanor, married Henry Piercy Earl of Northumberland, where it ſtaid a good while; but in the 29th Year of King Henry the VIIIth, Henry, one of his Succeſſors in the Earldom and Eſtate, bequeathed both theſe Manors of Rokeſly and North-Cray to the Crown; whence a Grant of them was given to Cromwell Earl of Eſſex, and by his Forfeiture coming to the Crown again, they were afterwards granted by that King to Sir Roger Cholmley, one of the Judges, and he not long after ſold them to Sir Martin Bowes, Mayor of London, whoſe Son William left only Two Daughters; Elizabeth, the Elder of which, marrying William Buggin, Eſq; carried both theſe Eſtates into that Family; and Mr. William Buggin his Son dying without Iſſue, it went to his Brother John, who ſold it to Thomas d'Aeth, Eſq; of Knowlton, Grandſon to Mr. Tho. d'Aeth of Charles Place, in Dertford; which ſee.

3. Jackets Court, is a Place in this Pariſh that once was the Seat of a Family of that Name: The Arms of whom, Philpot ſaith, he hath ſeen in an Old Roll. From the Jackets it went by Sale to the Switzers; a Name of great Antiquity in theſe Parts, tho' not eſteemed in the Rank of Gentlemen, one of whom, in Queen Elizabeth's Time, ſold it to Edmund Cook, Eſq; whoſe Son, Mr. Lambard Cook, conveyed it the ſame way to Alderman Leman; and he to Whiffin, by whoſe Daughter and Heir it came to be the Inheritance of Mr. Thomas Bales, Barriſter at Law.

But 'tis now in the Poſſeſſion of Sir Comport Fitch, Bart. of Mount Maſcalls in this Pariſh.

Rokeſly, and North-Cray, were formerly Two diſtinct Pariſhes, 'till Cardinal Poole, at his Viſitation of Kent, An. 1557, united them together: And ſo Rokeſly Church, fell into diſuſe and decay, and hath been a good while down.

PAUL's-CRAY, Paulin's-Cray; lies towards the Weſt-end of Kent, by the River Cray, about Four Miles South-Weſt from Dartford, in the Bailiwick of Sutton-Dartford, Hundred of Ruxley, Lath of Sutton-at-Hone, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Upper One of Juſtices in that Lath.

'Tis in the Deanery of Dartford, and Dioceſe of Rocheſter; and the Church is Dedicated to St. Paulinus, whence the Name of Paul's-Cray. A Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 12*l.* 13*s.* 2*d.*

In the Church are Memorials of John Ferreby, now Ferby, 1400.

The Liberty of the Dutchy of Lancaſter claims over the Manor of Paul's-Cray. Which Place of

1. Paul's Crey, Philpot ſaith, gave Name to Sir Simon de Crey, who was Lord Warden of the Cinque-Ports, in the 3d and 4th Years of King Edward the Iſt. and was Knighted for his attending that Prince into Scotland: After this it came ſome how into the Name of Champneys; for Hugh de Champneys paid Aid for it in the 20th Year of Edward the IIId. From this Family it went into that of Scroope; for Thomas Scroope died poſſeſs'd of it in the 15th Year of Edward the IVth: Next the Talbots had this Manor; but by a Daughter it went from them to Danby in King Henry the VIIIth's Reign, where it ſtaid a good while; but about the End of Queen Elizabeth's Reign it was ſold to Mr. James Smith; who dying without Iſſue-Male, it went by Mary his only Daughter to Mr. Edward Waller of Beaconsfield, who was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time: A Deſcendant of her ſold it to James Narborow, Eſq; the unfortunate Brother of Sir John Narborow of Knowlton in this County; who ſettled it on the Daughters of his Brother-in-Law Thomas Death, of Knowlton, Eſq;.

2. Kitchin Grove, is a ſmall Manor here which anciently and long was the Eſtate of the Ferbeys; but at laſt it was ſold to Haron, and thence paſſed the ſame way to the Walſinghams of Scadbury, Anceſtors of Sir Thomas Walſingham, who was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

3. Paul's Crey-Hill, which tho' now only a Farm-Houſe, was formerly the ancient Seat of the Ferbeys above-mentioned.

4. Hockenden, and 5. Walkelins, are two Places here, which for above 200 Years were the Eſtate of the Ferbeys; but in the 16th Year of Edward the IIId they were in the Poſſeſſion of John Dynely, who had leave to build a Bridge here over the River, and leading to his Lands.

Here is a Mill with Three Water-Wheels on the Cray; two of which ſerve for dreſſing of Leather in Oil, and the other grinds Corn.

St. CROSS in Canterbury, is a Church ſtanding partly within the City, and partly without. Of which ſee an Account under Weſtgate.

CRUNDALE lies towards the Eaſt Part of Kent, about 2 Miles to the North-Eaſt from Wye, in the Bailiwick of Chart and Longbridge; Hundred of Wye, Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in the Lath of Shipway: In the Deanery of Bridge, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; the Church is called St. Mary's.

'Tis a Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 11 l. 10 s. 0 d. In the Patronage of Sir Robert Filmer, Bar. The Liberties of St. Auſtin and Wye both claim here.

Moſt of the Monumental Inſcriptions in the Church are loſt, except on a Stone over one John Spratt, B. L. L. formerly Rector of this Pariſh; he died 1466. leaving to each married Perſon in the Pariſh, or to ſuch as had been ſo, 40 Pence; and to each ſingle Perſon 12 d. as the Learned Mr. Richard Forſter, the preſent Rector, informs me; to whom the Reader is obliged for the farther Account of this and of many other Places in this County.

This Pariſh is ſmall, and therefore eſcaped being made a Vicarage in the Times of Popery by the Rapacious Monks; as moſt of the great Ones round about it were; as my Friend lately mention'd judiciouſly obſerves: But however they made it pay an Annual Penſion of 25 s. to the Priory of Leeds: Which was no doubt a Compoſition made with that Religious Houſe to exempt the Church from being appropriated to it; as it really had been by Will; and Rowland de Valoigns, then Patron of it, by an Inſtrument addreſſed to Richard Archbiſhop of Canterbury, who was Becket's immediate Succeſſor, and died A. D. 1184 (a). But this Gift paſſing without the Conſent of, was conteſted by the Rector of the Church of Crundale: And in Archbiſhop Hubert's Time the Penſion above-mentioned was ſettled, to compoſe the Difference. In Proceſs of Time the Rectors of Crundale now and then refuſed Payment of this Penſion; but were forced to it; ſometimes by the Popes and ſometimes by the Archbiſhops Determination. And thus it held till the Diſſolution of the ſaid Priory of Leeds, and then King Henry the VIIIth ſettled it on the Cathedral Church of Rocheſter, to which it is now annually paid. This Rectory was alſo charged with a Portion of Tithes to the College of Wye.

(a) This appears by an old Ledger Book, formerly belonging to Leed's Priory, now in Mr. Forſter's Hands, and communicated to him by Sir Robert Filmer.

Fox in his Martyrol. Vol. 3. cap. 2. relates, that one Nightingale, Rector here in Queen Mary's Reign, rejoicing to his People at the Return of Popery, and ſaying withal, that Cardinal Pool had made him as clean from Sin, as he was when he was born, dropt immediately down dead in the Pulpit, as he was ſpeaking thoſe ſilly and prophane Words. And he ſaith this was teſtified to be true by Mr. Auſtin of Chartham, and many others Perſons then preſent. I enquired of the preſent Rector about this Story, who acquaints me that Nightingale was Rector at the Time mentioned; and that this Story ſtands received for a Truth by common Tradition.

Places of Note in Crundale:

1. Hadloe-Place and Crundale are two ſmall Manors, the former of which was the Seat of the Ancient Family of the Hadloes: And for this Manor and Crundale, Jelinde Hadloe had a Charter of the Free Warren in the 1ſt Year of Edward IIId, and his Father died poſſeſs'd of it in the 11th Year of King Edward the Iſt. Nicholas, Son of Edmund de Hadloe, was the laſt Male of this Family here: His Daughter Amabilia was married to Honewood of Honewood in Poſtling; but both Crundale and Hadloe were before ſold to Warretius de Valoigns; by whoſe Daughter and Coheir they went to Thomas de Aldon: and after ſeveral Deſcents in that Name by a Daughter, it went in Marriage to Heron of Lincolnſhire. He ſold it to Kempe, where it ſtaid not very long; for by Mary, one of the Daughters of Sir Thomas Kempe, it went to Sir Dudley Diggs; who in King James the Iſt's Reign ſold both Crundale and Hadloe to Mr. Jeremy Gay of the City of London; and he parted with them the ſame way to Mr. John Whitfield of Canterbury, Gent. and they are now in the Poſſeſſion of his ſecond Son Mr. Robert Whitfield of Chartham.

2. Tremworth is another Eminent Seat and Manor in this Pariſh, lying on the South-ſide of the Stour. Anciently it was written Dremweed, and ſometimes Dromwerd; and it had formerly a Church or Chapel belonging to it, the Chancel Walls of which I ſaw ſtill ſtanding. And ſo Eminent was this Place of Tremworth, that in old Deeds, it and Crundale are ſaid to be one and the ſame Ville; and the Church is called the Church of Dremweed; by which I take to have been meant the preſent Pariſh Church of Crundale.

Tremworth was one of the ancient Seats of the Family of the Valoigns. Allan de Valoigns reſided here, as well as at Repton in Aſhford, and is frequently written Allan Valoigns de Tremworth. He was Sheriff of Kent from the 31ſt to the 35th Years of King Henry the 2d. From him Deſcended Warretius de Valoigns, who in the 14th Year of King Edward the IIId. had a Charter of Free-Warren for his Lands here, at Hougham and and ſeveral other Places in Kent. But by his Daughter this Eſtate went to Thomas de Aldon, and thence to Heron, as Hadloe juſt above-mentioned did: And ſo likewiſe to Kempe, in the Reign of King Henry the VIIIth.

But Sir Thomas Kempe dying without Iſſue-Male, left this Eſtate to his Brother, Mr. Reginald Kempe; by one of whoſe Daughters (Amy) it went in Marriage to Laurence Tuke, Eſq; of Eſſex; whoſe Daughter Dorothy by her, was the Mother of Sir Robert Filmer, of Eaſt Sutton, Bar. the preſent Poſſeſſor. So that Philpot makes a great Miſtake here; as indeed he doth in many other Places.

This old Houſe hath been moated round, tho' now only the Habitation of a Farmer; but the Arms of Kempe are ſtill remaining in the Glaſs Windows of the Parlour and Kitchin; and in the Wainſcot and Timber-work.

3. Wincombe, is likewiſe an Ancient Seat here; and which ever ſince the Reign of King Edward the IId hath been in the Poſſeſſion of the Carters, a Family of good Note hereabouts. They are mentioned in the Liſt of the Kentiſh Gentlemen, returned upon a Survey taken in King Henry the VIth's Reign; and from theſe is deſcended Mr. George Carter, the preſent Poſſeſſor.

I find by the Tower Records, that in the 23d Year of King Henry the VIth, the Advowſon of the Church of Crundale, and the Manors of Tremworth and Fannes, did then belong to the Maſter and Chaplains of Maidſtone-College: But how they came thither I don't know.

The Pariſh Church of Crundale ſtands on the Ridge of a Hill, which is over-topt by two others Eaſt and Weſt: And parts two narrow Valleys, which yet unite into one about half a Mile from the Church.

About this Church-Yard ſtand ſome old large Trees, the Remainder of a greater Number, which were given by Deed (March 4. 1583) by Sir Thomas Kempe of Ollantigh in the Pariſh of Wye, who was Lord of the Manor, and Patron of the Church, to the Pariſh of Crundale, as a Succour and Defence to the Church: Though it happened otherwiſe; for one of theſe Trees in the great Storm of Nov. 1703. was blown down, and in its Fall much damaged the Roof of the Church. This was a Beech Tree. And this is very remarkable in it, that when it was ſawn aſunder, it appeared by three diſtinct and ſeparate Sets of Circles of Sap, to have been compoſed of three different Stems, all grown together, and encompaſſed round with one common Bark.

Another adjoining Beech blown down at the ſame time, brought up with its Roots the Skeleton of a Man; ſome of the Fibres being matted about his Head, ſome growing through his Ribs, and others claſping his Thigh and Leg Bones. The Learned and Ingenious Mr. Forſter, Rector of the Place, from whom I had this Account, (as well as a great many other Curious and Uſeful Obſervations on many Places in Kent; and who hath been a very great Encourager of this Work); this worthy Gentleman, I ſay, conjectures that either his Church-yard did formerly extend further, than it doth at preſent, for this Body lay Eaſt and Weſt; or elſe that ſome Felo de ſe, or Perſon excommunicated, was here buried without the Church-yard. The Ground here being a Chalk, was the Occaſion of this Skeleton's being preſerved ſo long entire. What follows I give you nearly in the Words of Mr. Forſter above-mentioned.

The Hill Weſt from Crundale Church being of the ſame natur'd Soil, hath preſerved the larger Bones of many Bodies, in all Probability, for a great Number of Ages: There being a Britiſh, or rather Roman or Saxon Sepulture (determine it who can) on Tremworth Down, againſt the Place where the Road comes out of Warren-wood: Where the Bodies are all buried with their Feet Weſtward. The firſt Diſcovery hereof was made in the Year 1703. by a Perſon walking down the Hill, in the Waggon-way; which becauſe of its Deſcent, is by uſual Deteration worn hollow: There he accidentally eſpied a Skull in the Side-Bank; which Bank being opened, ſhewed a Human Skeleton buried at its full Length, and an Urn of a lead-colour'd Earth, and of the Form of Number 1. which indeed, as Dr. Plott obſerves, Nat. Hiſt. Oxford. p. 326. is of a Figure ſo plainly Roman, that it needs no other Proof who were its Makers. This happened in my Abſence from Home; but being informed of it at my Return, and the Urn being given me, I afterwads took a careful View of the Place; and obſerved a little Skull in the ſame Bank; and there alſo I found the Skeleton of a Child, and a ſmall Urn (Numb. 2.) of reddiſh Earth. The Report of this Diſcovery brought the Right Honourable Colonel Heneage Finch (now Earl of Winchelſea) whoſe inquiſitive Genius inclines him to a curious Search after Antiquities, and of which he hath a nice Reliſh, and is an excellent Judge) to come and examine this Place more narrowly; which was done the ſame Year; and in digging we found two Bodies of Perſons full grown, and another of a Child, lying ſide by ſide, without any Urns with them. But in tumbling the Earth we pick'd up the Fragments of a wide Earthen Pan, flat and ſhallow, (perhaps a Libatory Veſſel to hold either the Blood or ſome other Parts of the ancient Sacrifices at Funerals) which being joined together, are repreſented by the Figure of the Veſſel, Numb. 3. In the Evening we opened another Grave, but had not light to go to the bottom; out of which I took the Urn or Bottle (call it which you pleaſe) figured N. 4. and lying by the Side of a full grown Skeleton. The Matter of it was fine red Earth. And this laſt October, 1713. his Lordſhip made another Attempt; and we were ſo ſucceſsful as to meet with a Grave, after much digging, whoſe Side-Walls and Ends were of firm cloſe Chalk in its natural Situation: This had Three Urns in it; two of which ſtood on the Right Side of the Body, one by the Skull, and the other by the Shoulder; ſee Numb. 5, and 6. Theſe ſtood not perpendicular, but with their Orifices dipping a little towards the Eaſt: Which Poſition Mr. Moreton in his Hiſtory of Northamptonſhire, P. 530, obſerves ſome other ancient Urns to have had. Tho' 'tis poſſible the Ancients might have no Regard to the Quarters of the Heavens, but meerly to the Situation of the Earth, by laying the Feet of the Body downwards, with the Declivity of the Hill, as theſe were; and the Urns leaning towards the Head. The third Urn (Numb. 7.) was placed by the Left Knee. The Dimenſions of theſe Three were as follows:

Numb. 4. was 5. 1 Inches high, the Diameter of the Orifice within 1. 1 Inch, and of the Foot without one Inch only.

The Veſſel N. 6. was 3. 4 Inches high, the Diameter of the Top from out to out 3. 25 Inches, and that of the Bottom 2. 25.

Numb. 7. was in Height 4 Inches, the Diameter of the Top from out to out 3. 5, the Bottom 1. 9.

I did not measure the other Three Urns before I parted with them; but since I find that Numb. 1. was about 4 Inches ¼ high. Numb. 2. the least of all, 3. 1 Line: And Numb. 4. about 6 Inches high. They are all now in the Custody of the Earl of Winchelsea above-mentioned.

What these Earthen Furniture was intended for, I will not pretend to determine. Dr. Plott Oxfordsh. p. 328. takes the Urns to be the design'd Receptacles of the Ashes of the Defunct; at least in some Part, as much as could be sav'd in the Vas Ustrinum; for they were not so curious, as some have imagined, to scrape together all the Bones and Ashes of the Corps; as may easily, saith he, be collected from the Smallness of all Urns, but such as are perhaps Family ones.

Whatever those Urns were which Dr. Plott saw, these were never intended for any Part of the Ashes of the Dead; the Bodies found here never having been burnt. For the Skeletons appeared at their full Length, the Skull with the Bones of the Arms and Legs lying in their natural Situation. The Roman Custom of Burning the Bodies of the Dead, and collecting the calcined Bones, Ashes, &c. and depositing them in Urns, after they had been washed in Wine, as Virgil describes it, was, we know, at last disused, as it was not the Primary and Original Rite. Vid. Plin. Lib. 7. C. 54. Salmuth. in Pancirollum, Tit. 62.

Postquam collapsi cineres & flamma quievit
Reliquias Vino, & bibulam lavêre flavillam
Ossaq; lecta Cado texit Corinæus Aheno.
Æn. VI. v. 226.

But however they might retain some of the old appendant Ceremonies, and introduce new ones; as some Families kept to the old Custom of Inhumation, and never burned the Bodies at all. Vid. Plin. loc. citat.

Therefore if our Earthen Vasa will not be allowed to be Lachrimatories, Repositories of Tears, as a ceremonious Representation of the perpetual Sorrow wherewith the surviving Relations or Friends were affected; we must either apply them to the Aromatick Liquors, which were sometimes deposited in Sepulchres, (Vid. Plott, Oxford. p. 329.) or to the Aquæ Lustratæ Arferiæ, perfumed Waters; Phariiq; Liquores Arsuram lavere comin.—Statius; the χθονία λυτρα; or the ὕδωρ ὃπ τοῖς νεκροῖς περιῤῥαινόμενον, the Water wherewith the Dead were sprinkled by way of Expiation; which he mentions from Joh. Baptistæ Casalius de Urbe & Ritibus Romanorum: And from Meursius de Funere. Which Ceremony was observed sometimes by the Romans, for the Benefit of the Living Attendants: Who with the help of a Sprig of Olive, were sprinkled with pure Water, to cleanse them from the Defilement they might have contracted in that Triste Ministerium, in that doleful Office: As we learn from Virgil.

Idem ter Socios purâ circumtulit undâ
Spargens Rore levi, & ramo felicis Olivæ
Lustravitque viros. —— —— —— ——
Æn. VI. v. 230.

Or perhaps we may suppose this Earthen Furniture to have been used for Oil, Wine, Milk, Blood, or Frankincense; all which the same Poet informs us were employed at Funerals; and particularly in that of Polidorus.

Inferimus tepido spumantia Cymbia Lacte
Sanguinis & sacri Pateras Animamque sepulchro
Condimus, & magnâ supremum voce ciemus.
Æn. III. v. 66.

And of Anchises he thus speaks,

Hic duo ritè mero libans Carchesia Bacchо
Fundit humi duo lacte novo, duo Sanguine sacro, &c.
Æn. V. v. 77.

Where also he speaks of some Pocula levia, used on the same Occasion.

Thus also at the Funeral of Misenus, Virgil mentions,

Thurea dona, Dapes, fuso Crateres Olivo.
Æn. VI. v. 225.

For the Figure of the Carchesia, we are referred to the Top of the Mast of a Ship, but I am not Seaman enough to form a Notion of it from thence. Cymbia one would take to be Boat-fashion from the Name. Our Vessels might serve perhaps for these or such like Uses, tho' their Figure be not the same; at least they might supply the Place of Virgil's Crater, or his Pocula levia, and our shallow Pan, of his Patera, at the Inferiæ, the common Sepulchral Rites of the Romans.

If there were at first any Covers to these Urns, they were of such Matter as by Length of time is consumed: Nor was there any Thing found in them, but a little crumbled chalky Earth, which most probably fell into them by our digging. So that whatever Liquor or thicker Matter, they might at first be charged with, it was in time all wasted away.

The same Incident befel an Urn, that was vastly larger than any of ours, which was taken up about 20 Years ago, before I came to Crundale, by one of my Parishioners, who is yet alive, and from whom I have had the Account of it. He found it as he was digging for Sand on the Range of the Hill, Eastward from Crundale, and in the Parish of Godmersham. This was so large, that it might well have passed for one of the Family Urns, and such as Mr. Morton describes, P. 529. of his Hist. Northamptonsh. from Meric. Casaubon's Notes on Antoninus; being big enough, as I am informed, to hold half a Bushel. But there was neither Ashes nor Bones in it, nor any thing else but a shallow Earthen Pan, resembling that in Fig. 3. with another little Pot or Urn standing in the midst of it, of fine Red Earth, and having some Letters upon it: It gave when struck or rung, a clear shrill Sound, and was in Form something like that in Numb. 5. It was covered with a broad flat Stone, and fenced round with a Wall of Flint to defend it from external Injuries. All these Vessels were brought Home to the House of the Father of him that found them; but were so little valued, as to be neglected, broken, or lost.

If the Patera was designed for and charged with Meat, and the other Vessel with Drink, (for I am apt to think there was a gross Conceit among the Heathen of feeding the Soul, which they fancied hovered for a while about the Body) what the Soul did not devour, the Dampness of the Earth, and the Teeth of Time had consumed.

This Hill being of a sandy Soil, was not so proper perhaps as Chalk, to preserve the Bones, if any Bodies were there buried; for I have never heard of any that were dug up there, tho' a great deal of Earth hath been removed, and much Sand carried away from thence, for the Use of the Neighbourhood.

I forgot to tell you before, that the Earth near the Bodies we found, was stained with blueish Spots of Mold; which perhaps was occasioned by the Corruption of the Entrails, and Flesh of those Bodies.

COWDHAM, Cudham, Coldham, in Domeſda, Caudham; lies near the Weſt End of Kent, about 5 Miles and a half North-Weſt from Sevenoke in the Bailiwick of Sutton Bromley, Hundred of Ruxley, Lath of Sutton-at-Hone, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Upper One of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Dioceſe of Rocheſter, and Deanery of Dartford. The Church Dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul; and in it are, or were, Memorials of the Interment of Walleys above 200 Years ago. A Vicarage; Royal value 13 l. 2 s. 6 d.

Places of Note here:

1. Manor of Cowdham: This Place in the 20th Year of King William the Iſt, was part of the Eſtate of Gilbert de Magninot, and was one of thoſe Knights Fees which were aſſigned him, to be Aſſiſtant to John de Fiennes, in the Defence of Dover Caſtle. And about the beginning of King Stephen, by a Daughter of this Family, it went to William de Say; whoſe Son is in the Head of that Liſt of Kentiſh Gentlemen that accompanied King Richard the Iſt at the Siege of Acon in Paleſtine; Geofrey de Say was one of the Recognitores Magnæ Aſſiſæ in King John's Time: And another Jeffery de Say, was with King Edward the Iſt at the Siege of Carlaverock in Scotland, and was Knighted there; and he and his Succeſſors had the Title of Barons, and held Coudham, Birling, and other Places per Baroniam. Another Jeffery de Say had View of Frank Pledge here in the 8th Year of King Edward the IIId, and accompanied him in his Wars in France: But his Grandſon of the ſame Name left only Two Daughters; Joan, one of which, was married to Sir William Fiennes; whoſe ſecond Son James was ſummoned to Parliament, as Baron Say and Seale, in the 25th Year of King Edward the IIId. And his Eldeſt Son Richard, married Joan, Sole Heir of Thomas Dacres, eldeſt Son of Thomas Lord Dacres of Horſmonſeaux in Suſſex; and was himſelf created Baron Dacres, in the 7th Year of King Henry the VIth. And after this it deſcended regularly to Gregory Fiennes, Lord Dacres, who died without Iſſue in the 36th Year of Queen Elizabeth. And Sampſon Leonard, Eſq; marrying his Siſter and Heir, (Margaret) became Proprietor of this Eſtate, and a much greater hereabouts: His Son Henry Leonard was created Baron Dacres in King James the Iſt's Reign; in whoſe Family this Manor continued in Philpot's Time, being then in the Poſſeſſion of Francis Leonard, Lord Dacres; but his Deſcendant Thomas Lord Dacres, Earl of Suſſex, ſold it lately to Mr. Thomas Streatfield of Sevenoke.

2. Apulderfeild, now corruptly called Apurfeild: was anciently the Poſſeſſion of a large Family in this County of that Name: Henry de Apulderfeild, who, as appears by the Charter of Romney Marſh, was one of the Juſtices of all the Marſhes of Romney and Oxney, as far as Suſſex, p. 38. got a Fair and Market for his Manor here in the 38th Year of King Henry the IIId. But from this Name it went to John de Inſula, who had a Charter of Free-Warren granted him for this Manor in the 11th Year of King Edward the IId, which was renewed in the 38th Year of King Edward the IIId, to Stephen de Aſhway, the next Proprietor of this Place; and in whoſe Family it continued for many Generations, but at length was ſold to Deny; and from thence, went the ſame way to Fiennes: And by Margaret Fiennes, who was Siſter to George Lord Dacres, and married to Sampſon Leonard, this Manor came into the Poſſeſſion of his Great Grandſon Francis Leonard, Lord Dacres, in Philpot's Time; but by Sale from the Lord Suſſex above-mentioned, 'tis now come to be the Poſſeſſion of Thomas Know.

3. The Hamlet of Bettred, is a Place here which anciently belonged to Richard de Cherſholt; but he dying without Iſſue Male, his Daughter and Heir carried it to her Husband William Manning, Son of Stephen de Manning; who deſcended from Simon de Manning, in Richard the Iſt's Reign, who died in the 17th Year of King Edward the IIId, and from him Mr. Samuel Manning of London, and Mr. Edward Manning of Kevington, were deſcended; and one or both of theſe were Owners of this Eſtate in Philpot's Time.

DARENT, often called North-Darent, and ſometimes Darwent, Dairent, Dorquent, vulgò Darne, lies on the North ſide of the County, by the River Darent, about Two Miles and a half South-Eaſtward from Dartford; in the Bailiwick of Sutton-Dartford, Hundred of Axtone, Lath of Sutton-at-Hone, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Upper One of Juſtices in that Lath. The Liberty of the Biſhop of Richeſter claims here. 'Tis in the Dioceſe of Rocheſter, but in the Deanery of Shoreham, and ſo a Peculiar of the Archbiſhop's. A Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 9 l. 18 s. 10 d. The Church is Dedicated to St. Margaret, which is ſmall, but neat, with an handſome Communion-Table and Rails, the Gift of Mr. Davenport of Green-ſtreet, 1680. There is an ancient Stone Font with Gothick Images round it.

In King William the Iſt's Time, as appears by Domeſday Book, Darent belonged to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury; but A. D. 1196, it was given in exchange with Gilbert Glanvile Biſhop of Rocheſter, for the Manor of Lambeth in Surrey; and this Exchange was afterwards confirmed both by King Richard the Iſt and King John.

The Manor of Darent, or at leaſt ſome Lands belonging to it, were firſt given by one Birtrick and Elfswiva his Wife, to the Church of Rocheſter: However, afterwards, they came into the Poſſeſſion of the Archbiſhop. For theſe are the Words of the Will in Saxon, which you will find at length under Mepham. And þæt land æt Sepentan byrhþapa hiſ dæg and aftep hiſ dæg into Sct Andpee. That is, The Land at Darent I give to Byrwhara for his Life, and after that to the Church of St. Andrew's in Rocheſter. This Birtrick lived at Mepham in Kent, about 700 Years ago.

One Geofrey of Hadenham in Bucks, gave alſo ſome Lands here to Rocheſter Church.

St. Margaret's Hills, is a Place near Darent, which is now united to, and made one Pariſh with it; tho' formerly it was a diſtinct Vicarage by it ſelf, as it is now a diſtinct Manor, and holds of that of Darent. The Church here, (whoſe Steeple is ſtill ſtanding,) going to decay, and the People leaving it, Cardinal Poole, A. D. 1557, united it to Darent. 'Tis called the Chapel of Helles in the Textus Roffenſis, and in other old Manuſcripts and Charters; which Name it took from an Eminent Family of the Name of Helles, who had a great Eſtate here, and about Aſh near Sandwich. John de Helles had a Charter of Free-Warren for his Lands at Dartford, and for his Manor of Helles in the 17th Year of King Edward the Iſt. And from this Gentleman, ſaith Philpot, deſcended Sir Edmund Helles; who about the beginning of King Edward the VIth, ſold this Manor to Lane; and his Son Henry Lane leaving only a Daughter, Martha; ſhe carried this Eſtate in Marriage to Edward Rolt, whoſe Grandſon Mr. Thomas Rolt was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

Somewhere about Darent it was, that Vortimer, Son of Vortiger the Britain, encountred the Saxons, and killed great numbers of them.

In the Textus Roffenſis mention is made of a Pariſh called South Darent.

In a Manuſcript belonging to the Church of Rocheſter, called Cuſtumale Roffenſe, and written or collected chiefly by John de Weſterham, a Monk, and afterwards Prior of the Convent of St. Andrews, and at laſt Biſhop of Rocheſter, about the Year 1320. there are a great many Particulars recorded concerning this Manor of Darent, and the Lands there belonging to the Priory of Rocheſter, which are worth the peruſal of all curious Enquirers into our ancient Tenures, Services, Rents and Villenage. Some of which I ſhall here take notice of.

This Place was then governed by a Præpoſitus, (which I take here to be the Reeve or Officer appointed by the Lord of the Manor) a Bedell, and 10 Jurats. Theſe Jurats (I ſuppoſe) were Men ſworn to be aſſiſting to the Præpoſitus in the due Execution of his Office; as the Jurats in the Cinque Ports are to their Mayors.

There were then ſome Foreigners ſettled at Darent, called in this Manuſcript Waldenſes; who had a waſte piece of Land allowed them; and for which they paid a Rent of 4 s. per Ann. and they had beſides a Jugum or half a Plow Land, for which was paid 3 s. 4 d. per Ann. de Gablo. They paid alſo Quarterly 5 s. and 3 d. a Fine; & pro operibus autumpnalibus, Two Shillings and Eight Pence Half-peny. But on what account theſe Strangers came hither, or whether they ſet up any Manufacture here, or what were the Numbers of them, I do not find.

There is often mention made of Gablum and Gable, in the Account of the Rents of this Eſtate, and elſewhere in this Book; and it appears that Gablum was a Rent which then was conſtantly paid in Money; whereas the Firmæ, tho' now indeed in King Edward the IIId's Days they began to be compounded for in Money, yet were anciently, before King Henry the IId's Reign, all paid in Corn, Victuals, &c. But that Prince, when he was preparing to go beyond Sea, and wanted ready Money to ſubſiſt his Troops, &c. and his Subjects complaining of the long Journeys they were forced to take with their Teams, Horſes, &c. when they carried Victuals to divers parts of the Realm; he ordered the Sheriffs of the Counties to take a reaſonable Sum of Money inſtead of the old Feormes, and to pay it into his Exchequer at the Scale or Beam; but to pay 6 d. over and above every pound weight of Silver, to make amends for the waſte that he thought would be made by the rubbing and wearing of the Money. (a) Gavelande, I take here to be Land that was to pay ſuch an old Rent in Money; not but that I know Gable in the general ſignifies any Rent, Tribute, or Service, after what manner ſoever to be paid: And that where Mail and that were joined together, the latter ſignified a Rent in Service, as the former did either in Money, Corn, or Cattle, i. e. either White or Black Mail, of which more fully hereafter, when I come to ſpeak about Gavelkind.

(a) Gervus Tilburienſis.

There was a Bedell appointed to look after this Eſtate, who was alſo the Hayward, or to take care of the Fences and Hedges. For this Service, and alſo for his being their Looker, as we now call them in Kent; (i. e.) to take care of their Sheep and other Stock on their Land; he had for his Allowance Five Acres of Land, the running of Eighteen Sheep, and Two Animulia, i. e. I ſuppoſe Cows: And againſt Chriſtmas he was to have an old Yew, Crona, and a Lamb; one Fleece of Wool, and one Virgata Hordei, (I know not how much that was certainly; for it can't well be the common Virgata Terræ, that ſeems too much in Proportion to the reſt) and his Horſe alſo was to go in his Lord's Paſture. He paid for his Land a Rent of 20 Pence per Annum, and was moveable at the Lord's Pleaſure. The Monks had here one Plow-land and a half in their Demeſne, and the Tenants 12 and a half.

As to the Words and Terms uſed in theſe old Cuſtumals, Leiger-Books, Deeds, Charters, the Textus Roffenſis, &c. you will find them more fully explained in the Gloſſary annexed to the End of this Book, as far as they relate to the Subject of this Hiſtory.

I have now before me Archbiſhop Hubert's Inſtrument for the Change of this Manor of Darent for that of Lambeth, as 'tis there written: 'Tis a very fair one, with the Seal to it: And in it is expreſſed, that the Change was made by the Conſent of the King (Richard the Iſt.) and his Council of Peers, as well as of Gilbert then Biſhop of Rocheſter. With the Manor of Lambeth the Archbiſhop had alſo the Church, cum omnibus Libertatibus & liberis Conſuetudinibus tam in eodem Manerio quam in Suwerck (now Southwark) & in dimidiâ Soca de London. But a Mill which the Church of Rocheſter then had in Southwark over-againſt the Tower of London is excepted out of the Change. I obſerve alſo in this Deed there is mention made of the Prior of Lameth, who, I ſuppoſe, preſided over the Brethren or Prebendaries at the Collegiate Church there, which Camden mentions to have been begun by Archbiſhop Baldwin, as 'tis certain he did begin to build one there after the Pope forced him to leave off at Hackington by Canterbury: And probably this Exchange was begun in Baldwin's Time, but not finiſhed till Hubert's; for beſides this Deed of his above-mentioned, we have in our Church at Rocheſter a very fair Inſtrument for this Purpoſe ſigned by Hubert and Gilbert, both with the Seals appendant and entire.

Some of the Cuſtomary Services in Darent.

Quælibet Carruca de Villâ debet arrare unam Acram in hieme, in Pane & Cerviſiæ Domini & tribus Ferculis. In quadrigeſimâ quælibet Carruca arrabit unam Acram in Pane & Cerviſiæ & duobus Ferculis.

Item in Quadrigeſimâ quælibet Carruca arrabit unam Acram & habebit quinque Panes & decem Allecia.

Homines de Villâ debent fulcare de Bedmed 9 Acras & qui habet Carrum vel Caretam portabit unum benus ad Fenile Domini. Et habebit Carrus duos Panes cum Companagio; & Careta unum Panem cum Companagio. Remanens fœnum portabit Dominus cum Carris ſuis.

After this in the Cuſtumale is a very particular Account of the Cuſtoms, Rents, and Services due from each particular Parcel of Land in Darent belonging to Rocheſter Church, which I omit, having by this general Account, ſhewed you what Kind of Services were due from the Tenants of thoſe Days to their Lords.

I find by an ancient dateleſs Charter, to which Henry de Cobeham is a Witneſs, that there was once a Place here called Graves, as there was another in St. Margaret Helles of the ſame Name, which was exchanged for this: And I have met with with the ſame word uſed for ſome other Places of a low ſituation in this part of Kent, which makes me ſuſpect that Mr. Lambard's Derivation of the Name of Graves-End, is rather Ingenious than Juſt, of which more when I come thither.

DARTFORD, written alſo Darentford, Tarentford, and Dorquentford, i. e. in Britiſh, the Ford of Clear Water; lies at the North ſide of the County near the Thames, and by the Rivers Darent and Cray; about Six Miles Weſtward from Graveſend, in the Bailiwick of Sutton Dartford, Hundred of Dartford and Wilmington, Lath of Sutton-at-Hone, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Upper One of Juſtices in that Lath. The Pariſh is in the Dioceſe of Rocheſter, and the Deanery of Dartford; and the Church is Dedicated to the Holy Trinity. 'Tis a Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 18*l.* 11*s.* 2*d.*

Kilburn ſaith, the Appropriation was made about 450 Years ago; but I believe not ſo early, ſince no mention is made of it in the Cuſtumale Roffenſe; which was written about the Year 1320, and yet I have ſeen a Deed dated at Halling, 1253, in which Laurence Biſhop of Rocheſter Leaſes the ſmall Tithes of Dartford for Three Years to the Convent of St. Andrew's, at the Rent of Thirty Eight Marks per Annum, and they to ſupply the Cure: And out of the firſt half Years Payment, Ten Marks was to be ſtopt for an Annual Penſion of that value, due from the Biſhop to the Convent, on account of the ſaid Church of Dartford.

There are Two Church-yards here; one about the Church, and the other on the Top of the Hill towards Rocheſter; and in the latter you may ſee over the Top of the Tower of the Church.

In it are Memorials of the Interment of Hornley and Burlton above 200 Years ſince, Hornley 1477, Burlton 1496, Richard Martin 1407, Alice Apulton 1404, William Rothele 1464, Mr. William d'Aeth, Great Grandfather to the preſent Thomas d'Aeth, Eſq; of Knowlton in this County, 1590. In the Chancel is a fair Monument of Sir Edward Spillman, the Inſcription in Dutch. This Gentleman was the Relation of Sir John Spillman, who in King Charles the Iſt's Reign ſet up, on this River, the firſt Paper Mill that ever was built in England: That Prince granted him a Patent, and a Salary of 200*l. per Ann.* for his Encouragement; and there is excellent white Paper made on this River now. He is ſaid to have brought over with him alſo in his Portmanteau two Lime Trees, perhaps the firſt that ever were planted in England, which he ſet here; and they thrived and grew extraordinarily.

The firſt Slitting-Mill alſo, or one deſigned to cut Bars of Iron into ſmall long ſquare Pieces or Rods, in order to their being drawn out into Wire, was ſet up on the River by one Godfrey Box of Liege, A. D. 1590, as Spillman's firſt Paper Mill above-mentioned was erected but a little before. See Stow's Annals, p. 1040.

March 20, 1690. Sir Edward Villars was created Baron of Hoo, and Viſcount Villers of Dartford.

Places of Note here:

(1.) Before the Erection of the Nunnery, of which you have an account in the Chapter about the Religious Houſes and Hoſpitals in Kent; the Manor of Dartford belonged to the Crown; tho' it had been not long before the Eſtate of the Earl of St. Paul, as perhaps given by the Conqueror to his Family. But he being a Norman, King Henry the IIId took it from him by way of Repriſal, and gave it to William Earl of Albemarle to be holden of him and his Heirs, as I find by Mr. Madox's Hiſtory of the Exchequer, p. 207.

And Philpot ſaith, here was a Family of the Name of Tingewick, who had it alſo in Leaſe, perhaps after the Albemarle Family; for when King Edward the IIId (a) granted the Royalties of the Manor of Dartford to Edmund of Woodſtock Earl of Kent, who paid a Rent of 30*l. per Ann.* for it; 'tis mentioned in the Patent, that he ſhould hold them in as full and ample a manner, as Tingewike formerly had done: This Prince, A. D. 1355. erected it into a Nunnery. But at the General Suppreſſion in King Henry the VIIIth's Reign, it became a Palace Royal again, and continued ſo till King James the Iſt's Time: For Hollingſhead ſaith, King Henry the VIIIth had a very commodious Palace here: But King James exchanged it with Robert Earl of Salisbury, who ſold it to Sir Edward Darcy; and his Grandſon Edward Darcy, Eſq; deſcended from the Noble Family of the Darcy's in Yorkſhire, was the Poſſeſſor of it in Fee-ſimple in Philpot's Time.

2. The Manor of Temple alſo, in this Pariſh which firſt belonged to the Knights Templers, and after their Deſtruction in the 17th Year of King Edward the IId, became part of the Revenue of the Knights Hoſpitallers of St. John in Jeruſalem (for the Abolition of the Order of Knights Templers did not make any Cure of Superſtition, but only diverted Mankind from one Species of Folly to another) was, at the general Suppreſſion of the Monaſteries and Religious Houſes, become the Eſtate of the Crown; and ſtaid there till King James the Iſt exchanged it alſo, as well as the Manor of Dartford, with Robert Earl of Salisbury, who ſold it to Edward Darcy, Eſq; and his Grandſon Sir Edward Darcy, Knight, did in Philpot's Time, alienate it to his Brother in Law Mr. William Gouge.

3. The Manor of Charles: This was anciently in an Eminent Family of this Name, from which it derived its Appellation. Edward Charles was Admiral and Captain-General of the Navy from the Thames Mouth Northward in King Edward the Iſt's Reign, as appears by the Patents of that Prince in the Tower Records, An. 34. But about the beginning of King Richard the IId, this Manor came into the Poſſeſſion of Nich. de Brember; who being in the 10th Year of that Prince executed for Treaſon, the Crown granted this Eſtate to Adam Bamme, Lord Mayor of London; in whoſe Family it continued ſome Ages, but at laſt it was ſold to Mr. d'Aeth; in which Family it continued, till Thomas, Grandfather of that worthy Gentleman the preſent Thomas d'Aeth of Knowlton, Eſq; during the Civil Wars, ſold it to Mrs. Took; by a Daughter of which Name it went into that of Zernatts, and thence again by another Daughter in Marriage to Mr. Edwards of London; who, as I am informed, is the preſent Poſſeſſor.

4. Horſemans-Place, is an Eſtate of good Account in Dartford; for in the 16th Year of King Edward the IId, it was in the Poſſeſſion of Tho. de Luda; between whom and Tho. de Sandwich, then Abbot of Leſnes, there was a Diſpute, and at laſt a Compoſition about the Paſſage of a Current of a Water, as appears by ſome of our old Books. But before the End of King Edward the IIId's Reign, this Family was extinct here: And then it came into the Poſſeſſion of John Horſeman; who, ſaith Philpot, probably built the new Houſe here, and new named the Place. About the beginning of King Henry the VIth, his Deſcendant, Thomas Horſeman, dying without Iſſue, left it to his Widow Margaret, who re-married one Shadderlow; but probably had no Children by him; for at her Deceaſe, ſhe, in the 19th Year of King Henry the VIth, bequeathed Horſemans-Place to her Kinſman Mr. Tho. Brown, whoſe only Daughter and Heir carried carried it in Marriage to Mr. Robert Blague, one of the Barons of the Exchequer: and his Son by her, Barnaby Blague, ſold it in the 33d Year of King Henry the VIIIth to Mr. John Bere, or rather Byer, as by the Inſcription on the Hoſpital appears, who much improved and adorned the Houſe in the 38th Year of that King. His only Daughter and Heir, Anne, was Married to Mr. Chriſtopher Twiſleton, deſcended from Twiſleton Caſtle in the County of Lancaſter: And his Deſcendant, Sir John Twiſleton, Knight and Baronet, was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

As to the Hoſpital here bearing the Name of this Family, you will find an account of it in its proper place.

5. Stanpit: Here was once a Church or Chantry founded by Thomas de Dertford, for one Prieſt to pray for the Soul of the Founder; it was Dedicated to the Bleſſed Virgin. And there were ſome Light Lands, as they uſed to be called formerly, which were given by one John de Groveberſt, to maintain Lights in the Pariſh Church.

6. The Brent, or Dartfort Brent, is a Plain lying on the Eaſt ſide of this Town in the Road to Rocheſter; and thro' it runs a Part of the old Roman Watlingſtreet-way, very plain to be ſeen; the common Way leaves it and runs to the left; but the Roman Way goes ſtraight in among the Encloſures towards Cobham; of which you will find a full Account in the Chapter of Roman Ways. This Brent hath been alſo famous for the Encampment of the Army of Richard Plantaganet Duke of York, A. D. 1452, againſt King Henry the VIth, who lay at Blackheath: But the Duke, tho' much inferior to the King in the Number and Goodneſs of his Troops, not only ordered his Affairs ſo wiſely and artfully, as to avoid a Battel that might have been fatal to him; but he alſo obtained a Parley of the King, ſubmitted and ſwore Allegiance to him; and tho' Arreſted and Accuſed of Treaſon by the Duke of Somerſet, got clear of all, and was ſet at Liberty; and afterwards in the Battel of St. Albans, killed the Duke of Somerſet and took the King Priſoner.

7. Dartford Heath, is a Place lying about Weſt South Weſt of the Town, where are a great many deep Pits (mentioned by Lambard, p. 445.) and by Sir Robert Atkins in his Hiſtory of Glouceſterſhire, p. 230. who ſaith, that about 20 Years ſince, ſuch were diſcovered in the Pariſh of Aſton-Cold in that County; which were very large and deep, and had Tunnels to them to admit entrance, or to let in Light occaſionally from above. There are others of this kind mentioned alſo by Cambden, at Tylbury and at Cleowen-wood in Eſſex, by Mr. Childrey and other Authors.

Theſe lye ſo near to one another, that ſometimes you may find two or three within a ſmall diſtance of each other; and here are perhaps 40 within the compaſs of a Mile, in this Heath and in the adjacent Woods; and more ſuch there are alſo in the Pariſhes of Willmington, Bexley, and North-Crey: Some of them run down as far as, and into the Chalk, and others reach no farther than the Sand: Many of theſe have been ſtopped up of late Years, to prevent Men or Cattle from falling into them. Very different Gueſſes have been made about their Uſe and Original Deſign, which I ſhall not ſtay here to mention, having ſaid ſomething of that kind in another Place: But to me the moſt likely Opinion about them is, that they were dug for hiding Places for the Goods, Wives, and Children of the Inhabitants in time of any Foreign Invaſion; and moſt probably in the Time of the Danes, who frequently over-ran and pillaged this Track of Land.

Mr. Johnſon in his Iter in Agrum Cantianum, A. D. 1629, Planturum Inveſtigationis ergo ſuſceptum, mentions a Place near Dartford, called Chalk Dale; which was only the Remains of an old Chalk Pit; but then grown over with Graſs, and ſtored with a great variety of fine and rare Plants.

Dartford hath a Market on Saturdays, which is very eminent for Corn: and a Fair yearly on July 22.

The Town is finely watered by two or three very good Springs, and the River goes out by a uſeful Creek into the Thames.

A. D. 1330. King Edward the IIId. held a Famous Tournament in the Town at his Return from France. And An. 1335. the Archbiſhop of Colen was ſent hither by Frederick the Emperor, to demand Iſabella the King's Siſter in Marriage: And this Kind of Proxy-Marriage (uſual enough among Princes) was ſolemnized in this Town; ſo that one would think, here was at that Time ſome Palace of the King, or a Place at leaſt fit to entertain ſo large a Company.

In the Fifth Parliament of King Richard the IId, amongſt other hard Taxes, a Poll was granted of 4 d. per Head of all Perſons, of, or above 14 Years of Age. The Collection of this Tax, which did mightily exaſperate the People in it ſelf, was alſo managed by very indiſcreet and rude Officers, who collected the Money from the People with great Rigor and Severity: And one of them going into the Houſe of John Tyler, who dwelt at Dartford, demanded a Groat for the Poll of a young Girl that was in the Houſe: The Mother alledging ſhe was under Age, the Fellow offered to convince her to the contrary in a very rude and unſeemly Manner: Of which complaining to her Husband, he was ſo exaſperated that he beat out the Officer's Brains; and after that, raiſed the Common People up in Arms, who got together in great Numbers, chuſing Tyler for their Captain; and giving him the Name of Jack Straw, as Lambard ſaith. After he was ſettled in his Command, he engaged his Followers by Oath; "To be true to "King Richard, and the Intereſt of the Com-"mons of England: That they ſhould never re-"ceive a John, meaning John Duke of Lanca-"ſter, for their King: They ſhould perſuade "all they could to join in their Cauſe; And "that they would never yield to pay any Tax, "but a Fifteenth.

Being thus united, they rendevouzed firſt at Maidſtone, and from thence marched towards London, plundring all they could meet with as they went along. On Blackheath they muſtred and were above 60, ſome ſay, 100 Thouſand ſtrong.

The King hearing of this formidable Inſurrection ſent to them to know what was the Cauſe of their Aſſembling thus together in Arms.

Their Anſwer was, "That they wanted to "ſpeak with Him, and deſired him to come to "them.

On this it was debated in Council, Whether the King ſhould go to them or not: Some thought that the beſt Way to appeaſe them: But Simon Sudbury, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Chancellor, and Sir Robert Hales, the Treaſurer, were utterly againſt it; as not judging the King's Perſon ſafe among ſuch a Rabble. This Advice was followed, and the Rebels Petition rejected. On which they, having heard who were the Authors of it, vowed that they would cut off their Heads. The King believing this Denial would provoke them, went down by Water as far as Redriff to talk with them. They ſeemed pleaſed with his Preſence, and petition'd him to come on Shore among them: But this being denied, created a yet greater Diſtruſt in them them againſt the Miniſters and Perſons about the King.

Wherefore as ſoon as ever he had left them, they marched for London; and on June 2. entred Southwark, where they plundered the rich Houſe-keepers, and letting out the Priſoners from the King's-Bench and Marſhalſea, liſted them into their Company.

In the mean Time, the Lord-Mayor and Chief Men of the City ſtood firm to the King, ſhutting up the Gates againſt them. But the Commonalty taking their Part, and the Rebels threatning to burn all the Borough, if they had not free Acceſs into the City; they were forced to open the Gates, and let them in. And in they marched, Robbing, Spoiling, and Pillaging every Body juſt as they pleaſed: And all theſe Lawleſs and Extravagant Actions they juſtified, by pretending to do them for the common Good; and deſtroying ſuch as they called Enemies to the Publick. Accordingly they burnt the Archbiſhop's Palace at Lambeth, and the Duke of Lancaſter's Houſe in the Savoy, with all their Rich Goods and Furniture; and when one of their Company attempted to Reſcue a Piece of Plate from the Flames, and had put it into his Boſom, they threw him into the Fire and burnt him alive. They ſet St. John's Hoſpital in Smithfield on Fire, and the Manor of Highbury belonging to it. All Profeſſors of the Law that they could catch, they put to Death; and deſtroyed all the Rolls and Records that they could find in the Temple, and other Inns of Court. The King and his Guards were ſo terrified, that they permitted one of the Rebels Three Bodies to come into the Tower; where finding the Archbiſhop, the Chancellor, and Sir Robert Hayles the Treaſurer, they took them out and beheaded them upon Tower-Hill. In the City they were very ſevere to the Flemmings, and other Foreigners, purſuing them into the Sanctuaries, and putting many of them to Death. Their way of knowing whether they were Foreigners or not, was to make them ſay Bread and Cheeſe; which if they could not pronounce as the Engliſh do, they certainly were beheaded. In the City alſo they opened all the Common Jails, and let the Priſoners eſcape, or join with them. The King and Council, after much Deliberation, reſolved to publiſh a general Pardon for all paſt Offences, and Charters of Freedom to confirm their Liberties for the Future. And this had a very good Effect; for the Heat of their Rage and Fury being abated, the greateſt Part accepted of it, begging Pardon, and going to their Homes. But Tyler and his Kentiſh Men, being about 20000, would not be ſo ſatisfied, but went on Plundering and Murdering as before. The King offered him yet greater Propoſals; but they were ſtill rejected.

The King then with many of the Nobility, the Mayor, and Aldermen of London, his Guards, &c. went into Smithfield, where Tyler's Head-Quarters were; and ſent Sir John Newton to him, to deſire a Parley. Who when he endeavoured to haſten Tyler, that the King might not ſtay for him, was anſwered, That he would go at his own Time: And accordingly the Pageant marched on ſo ſlowly, that Sir John was ſent again to quicken him; which ſo enraged the Rebel, that he drew his Dagger to kill him, being angry alſo at the Knight, becauſe he did not diſmount, but preſumed to talk to him on Horſeback. The poor King was frighted, and ordered Newton to deliver up his Dagger to Tyler, and to ſubmit.

When the King and he came to talk, he behaved himſelf inſolently to his Majeſty, and made ſtrange and unreaſonable Demands: "As "that all the ancient Laws ſhould be aboliſhed, "That the Sword, which was carried before the "King, ſhould be delivered to him". And more ſuch like ſilly and inſolent Stuff. At which Sir William Wallworth, the Mayor of London, and John Philpot an Alderman, were ſo enraged, that they deſired of the King that they might have leave to ſeize and arreſt him; which the King diſtruſtfully and unwillingly at laſt conſented to. Then Wallworth coming up to Tyler, who was playing with his Dagger, and had meddled with the Bridle of the King's Horſe, ſtruck the Villain on the Head with his Dagger, and ſtunn'd him a little; ſo that Philpot ſeconding the Blow with his Sword, they knocked him off his Horſe, and killed him immediately. The Rabble ſeeing their Leader dead, made a ſhew of revenging his Death upon his Murderers, as their Language was; and bent their Bows at the King and his Retinue. But that young Prince, tho' then not above 15 Years of Age, rode bravely up to them, and ſaid, What, will you kill your King? Be not troubled for the Loſs of your Leader: I will be your Captain, and grant you what you deſire. Theſe Words appeaſed them ſo, that they marched with the King at the Head of them, into St. George's Fields, not doubting but that they ſhould obtain all their Deſire. In the mean Time Wallworth poſted into the City, and brought back with him a 1000 Citizens well armed, who waited to aſſiſt the King under the Command of Sir Robert Knowles, our Famous Kentiſh Hero, who contributed much to the building of the preſent Bridge at Rocheſter. On the Advance of theſe armed Troops, the Rebels were ſo diſpirited, that they threw down their Arms, begg'd the King's Pardon, and got away as faſt as they could. The King was very merciful after this, and executed only the Heads and Ring-Leaders of this Rebellion: And ſo, in ſome Time, all Things were quiet again.

Of Deale-Caſtle. See more in the Chapters of Caſtles.

There are, as it were, two Towns in Deal, the Upper and more Ancient, which lies about a Mile from the Sea, and in which the Church above-mentioned ſtands: And the Lower or Larger, which lies on the Edge of the Sea, and is of late Years much enlarged; and hath a new Church erected in it, chiefly at the Publick Charge by Act of Parliament. But the late moſt Learned Archbiſhop of Canterbury gave a 100 l. towards it; and ſeveral private Gentlemen did alſo contribute towards it. The adjacent Harbour of the Downs, and the Reſort of the Navy Officers, Merchants, and Sailors, hither, make this Town a Place of great Reſort; and it hath quite eclipſed Sandwich, which formerly was a Place of great Note and Commerce.

DENTON near Eleham, lies towards the South-Eaſt Part of Kent, about two Miles and half North-Eaſtward from Eleham in the County of Kinghamford, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. Part of it is in the Bailiwick of Eaſtry, and the reſt in that of Bridge and Petham. 'Tis in the Deanery of Eleham, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; and the Church is Dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen, and ſtands in the Bailiwick of Eaſtry.

'Tis a Rectory, valued in the King's Books at 5 l. 19 s. 4 d. per Ann.

The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims here.

Places of Note here:

1. The Manor of Denton, with that of, 2. Tupton, as 'tis uſually called by Contraction; tho' rightly Tupington, appendant to it, were anciently both belonging to the Family of Yerd or Erde, as appears by many dateleſs Deeds and Evidences, long before King Edward the IIId. But then it is certain, that John de Yerd paid Aid for them at making the Black Prince Knight, and held them by Caſtle Service of Dover-Caſtle: And in the 5th Year of Henry the Vth, Robert Erde was ſeized of the Manor of Denton: His Deſcendant, John Yerd, was Sheriff of Kent, in the 19th Year of King Henry the VIth, whoſe Son of the ſame Name ſold Tapton to John Fogge, Eſq; and he in the 14th Year of King Edward the IVth, parted with it (by Fine) to Richard Haut; by whoſe Daughter Margery it went to Mr. William Iſaack, where it ſtaid till about the End of Queen Elizabeth, and then was alienated to Bois.

But Denton continued in the Family, till John Yerd dying without Iſſue, it went to Langley of Knowlton, who had married into the Family.

From the Name of Langley, in King Henry the VIIIth's Reign, it deſcended, the very ſame way, to Peyton; and Sir Robert Peyton ſold it to Bois; who now had both theſe Manors; but he ſoon ſold Tapton to Verner, and he parted with it to Merſh; who was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

And Denton he ſold to Rogers, who parted with it the ſame way to Swan; and Swan to Sir Arthur Percival of Dover; who conveyed it by Sale alſo to Phineas Andrews of Hartfordſhire, Eſq; in whom it remained in Philpot's Time.

3. Wigmere is another Manor here, which ſeems once to have had Owners of this Name; there being mention made of ſeveral of the Name de Wigmere, in old Deeds relating to Eaſt Kent: But for many Ages it certainly was in the Poſſeſſion of the Family of Brent: But in the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, Thomas Brent dying without Iſſue Male, by a Daughter Margaret, it went to John Dering of Surrenden Dering, Eſq; and continued in that Family in Philpot's Time.

4. Madekin, is a Place which lies partly in Denton, and partly in Barham; and once was the Inheritance of a Family of that Sirname, as appears by ancient Evidences; which Philpot ſaw in the Hands of Mr. Oxenden. But about the Beginning of King Henry the VIth, it went from this Name by Sale to Sednor; and continued in that Family a good while; but then was ſold to Brook; and after three Deſcents in that Name, went the ſame way to Brooker: And by Elizabeth, a Daughter of that Family, it paſſed to Sir Henry Oxenden, Eſq; whoſe Grandſon Henry Oxenden, Eſq; was in Poſſeſſion of it in Philpot's Time.

DENTON near Graveſend, Denitonia, and in the Text. Roffenſis, Denituna; lies at the North ſide of Kent, near the Thames, about Two Miles Eaſtward from Graveſend, in the Bailiwick of Hoo, Hundred of Shamell, Lath of Ailesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and North one of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery and Dioceſe of Rocheſter, and the Church was called St. Maries, which is now down; and there is but one Houſe, as I am informed, in the Pariſh.

The Liberty of the Biſhop of Rocheſter claims here: For Denton was given to that Church about 750 Years ago, by one Britrick and Elfswitha. (See the Will in Mepham.) But after this it was taken away by Odo Earl of Kent; and reſtored again by King Henry the Iſt. On the General Diſſolution, King Henry the VIIIth gave Denton to the Dean and Chapter of Rocheſter.

In Britrick's Will it is ſaid to be Two Plow Lands, but in Domeſday it ſtands thus.

Denituna ſe defendebat T. E. R. pro uno Solino & nunc pro Dimidio; & eſt appretiatum 6 Libros & 10 Solidos.

This Pariſh ought anciently to have contributed to the Repair of the 9th Arch of Rocheſter Bridge.

In the Cuſtumale Roffenſe, f. 14. is the following Account of the Convents Eſtate at Denton, and of the Ancient Services and Cuſtoms belonging to the Manor.

DEPTFORD, or Deptford Strand, formerly called Weſt Greenwich, ſeems to take its Name from the deep Channel of the River Ravenſbourn, which here runs into the Thames; for 'tis often written Diepford, or Deepford. It lies at the North Weſt Side of Kent, near Surrey, about Four Miles to the South Eaſtward from London: A Part of it is in Surrey; but much the greater in Kent; and that lies in the Bailiwick of Sutton Bromley, Hundred of Blackheath, Lath of Sutton-at-Hone, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and upper Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery of Dartford, and Dioceſe of Rocheſter: The Church ſtands in Kent, and is dedicated to St. Nicholas: A Vicarage; rated in the King's Books at 18 l. 11 s. 2 d. In it there is or was a Memorial of the Interment of one Wever, who is ſaid to have been Mayor of the Staple of Calais. And Wever in his Funeral Monuments gives us a Bull of Pope Martin the Vth to theſe Merchants of the Staple, under this Man's Mayoralty; and in which is mention made alſo of a Conſtable of the Staple; that they might have a Portable Altar, which they might uſe either at Calais, or any Port beyond the Seas, as well as any where in England; and have it officiated by their own or any other ſufficient Prieſts. And in another Bull he grants them Leave to chuſe their own Confeſſor: But appoints him a particular Form to give them Abſolution in, in theſe Words:

Abſolvo te ab omnibus Pœnis Purgatorij quæ tibi in Purgatorio debentur propter Culpas & offenſas quas contra Deum commiſiſti: Et te reſtituo illi innocentiæ in quâ eras quo tempore baptizatus fuiſti in Nomine Patris, &c.

No doubt theſe Privileges coſt our Merchants a good Sum; but they were then a rich Society; and as the Money went out of the common Stock, it was eaſier to any particular Man than the Trouble of Repentance.

As to theſe Merchants of the Staple, Wever gives the following Account.

Staple ſignifies the particular Town, Port, or City, where the Merchants of England, by common Order or Commandment, did carry their Wools, Woolfels, Cloaths, Lead, Tin, or ſuch like Commodities of our Land, to make Market of them by Wholeſale. And this may be derived either from the Saxon Staple, which ſignifies ſomething ſteady to fix or ſtay any Thing upon: Or from the French Eſtape; which is a Publick Warehouſe for Merchants Goods. Whereever the Staple was kept, the Merchants were uſually ſtiled, Mercatores Stapulæ Villa Caliſiæ. But our Kings from the beginning of Edward the IIId, to the 5th of Edward the VIth, uſually appointed ſuch Places for the Staple, as by the Council were thought proper, and frequently moved it from Place to Place.

The Officers of the Staple were theſe: Mayors, Conſtables, Manipernors, Collectors, Packers, Porters, Winders, Workers, &c. The Fees of the Mayors and Conſtables levied out of 4 d per Sack of Wool coming to every Staple, were as follows: The Mayor of the Staple of Weſtminſter had a 100 l. per Ann. and each Conſtable 10 Marks: The Mayor of the Staple of York, Kingſton upon Hull, Norwich, and Winchſter, had each 20 Pounds, and their Conſtables every one 5 l. per Ann. The Mayors of Newcaſtle upon Tine, Chicheſter, and of Exeter, 10 l. per Ann. and each Conſtable 5 Marks. See the Statute of 27. E. 3. and by the Statute of 10. H. 6. the Mayors and Conſtables were impowered to record Recognizances of Debt taken before them.

One Mr. Ady, probably the firſt that had the Title and Office of Maſter Builder here in the King's Yard, left a Piece of Land, called the Gravel-Pits, by his Will, to the Poor of the Pariſh, which now is very much improved. He died in the Year 1606, and is buried in the Church-yard.

There is a new Church lately erected here, the Inſide of which is not quite finiſhed.

This Place was of no great Note till King Henry the VIIIth erected a Storehouſe here, and incorporated certain Officers by the Name of the Maſter and Wardens of the Holy Trinity; and theſe, Lambard ſaith, were to take care of the Building, Keeping, and Conducting of the Navy Royal. Their Hall or Houſe, Philpot ſaith, was adjoining to the Church: And that the Treaſurer of the Navy had alſo in his Time a convenient Houſe for his Reſidence at the Dock. But of this Eminent Royal Dock and Yard for the Building of Ships for His Majeſty's Navy, I ſhall give a full Account in another Place.

The Eaſt-India Company were good Benefactors to the Church of Deptford, in contributing to the Building of the North-Iſle of it: And the Chancel was enlarged, ſaith Philpot, with beautiful Additions, partly at the Coſt of Sir Will. Ruſſel. Knight and Baronet, then Treaſurer of the Navy, and the Care of Dr. Valentine Vicar.

Deptford, on the Conqueſt of England by King William Iſt. fell to the Share of Giſlebert de Magminot an Eminent Norman, whoſe Grandſon Walkelin de Magminot, being Lord-Warden of the Ports, held out Dover-Caſtle againſt King Stephen: But Lambard ſaith, he delivered it up at laſt; which is not unlikely, for he fled into Normandy; and there died without Iſſue-Male: But his only Daughter, (ſome ſay Siſter) marrying into the Family of Say, the Seat or Caſtle of the Magminots here took the Name of Says-Court; which it ſtill retains, having been of late Years in the Family of Evelyn, and was the Seat of that Learned and Worthy Gentleman John Evelyn, Eſq; Fellow of the Royal Society, and the judicious Author of many uſeful Books.

The firſt Giſlebert de Magminot was one of the Eight Barons who were joined to John de Fiennes in the Government and Guard of Dover-Caſtle, then eſteemed as a Place of the greateſt Truſt and Importance. And to ſhew you how nobly King William the Iſt rewarded his Friends who accompanied him in his Expedition hither take this Account from Philpot of the Knights Fees, which were held of this Barony or Honour of Deptford, the Poſſeſſion of Giſlebert de Magminot.

In Kent 15. viz. Pevington 2 Knights Fees: Eaſtwell 1. Davington 2. Cuckſton 1. Walderſhare 3. Whitfield 1. Coudham 2. Bradingburſt 1. Thornham, Kerſeney, and Bingbury 3. Beſides four or five in other Counties.

William Duke of Suffolk held the Manor of Weſt Greenwich or Deptford Strond, and one Meſſuage here, in the 29th Year of Henry the VIth.

Hacham lying upon the Confines of Kent and Surrey, by Kent Fields or Kent Lands, Philpot ſaith, was formerly eſteemed to be all of it in Kent; and very probably, as I have obſerved at the beginning of this Hiſtory, the County of Kent did formerly extend much farther than it doth now. It was in King Henry the IId's Reign the Seat of one Hacham; and in the 43d Year of King Edward the IIId, the Manor of Hacham (or Hatcheſham) with many Pieces of Land in Surrey holding of that Manor, was granted to the Priory of Dertford; and at the general Suppreſſion of the Monaſteries in King Henry the VIIIth's Reign, came to the Crown. Mr. Echard in his Engliſh Hiſtory, p. 387. ſaith, King Edward the IIId founded a Nunnery here, but he miſtakes it for Dertford.

Some Writers ſay Wat. Tyler the famous Rebel in King Richard the IId's Time, was a Taylor in this Place; but he is generally fixed at Dartford, as hath been above ſaid.

Anciently there was (ſaith Lambard) a fair Wooden Bridge here over the River Ravensbourn; the Repair of which belonged to the Hundred of Blackheath only, and not to the Men of the Villæ of Eltham, Modingham, and Woolwich; as appears by the Tower Records. Rot. Eſc. 20. Ed. 3. N. 66. Whether the preſent handſome Stone Bridge was firſt built then, I don't find; but the Bridge was rebuilt at the only Charge of King Charles the Iſt, in the Fourth Year of his Reign, as Philpot ſaith, appeared by an Inſcription. And this ſeems to intimate there was a Stone-Bridge before: unleſs it may mean, that a new Bridge of Stone was then built in the Room of the old Wooden one.

I find by the Textus Roffenſis, F. 221. that there was anciently in Kent a Pariſh called, DERWOLDSTREOP, which is named in the Liſt of the Pariſhes, within the Dioceſe of Rocheſter, and ſeems to have been ſomewhere in the Hundred of Hoo, but where I cannot find.

DETLING lies towards the Middle of Kent, about two Miles and a half North Eaſtward from Maidſtone, in the Bailiwick of Eyhorne, Hundred of Maidſtone, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Eaſt one of Juſtices in that Lath; in the Deanery of Sutton, and Dioceſe of Canterbury: And the Church is dedicated to St. Martin, which is a kind of Chapell, not valued in the King's Books. And in a Manuſcript written in the Year 1578, I find it ſaid that the Church of Detling was annexed to Maidſtone. 'Tis in the Patronage of the Archbiſhop. The Church is ſmall but neat, and in it there are Remains of good painted Glaſs: In the upper End of the South Iſle was a Stone over Elizabeth, Wife of John Godfrey, Jurat of Lydde 1589, ſhe was a Pix. In the Church is the Buſt of a Man, on a Piece of a Grave Stone, which appears to be ancient: And they tell you 'tis in Memory of Sir John Detling.

The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims here, this Place anciently belonging to that See: But being torn from it by the Power of Odo Earl of Kent, it was reſtored again to it by the famous Trial at Pinenden or Pickenden Heath; of which ſee an Account in Maidſtone.

This Place, ſaith Philpot, gave Name to a Knightly Family, famous for Fortitude and Chivalry, in Token whereof a maſſy Lance all wreathed about with thin Iron Plate is ſtill to be ſeen in the Church: But this was gone when I was there, and I could hear of no ſuch Thing. And in this Name of Detling did this Place continue till the beginning of King Henry the IVth, and then by a Daughter of John Detling, in ſome old Deeds written Brampton alias Detling, it went in Marriage to Thomas Town of Throwley: He left only Three Daughters, one of which Eleanor, by marrying Richard Lewknor carried this Eſtate into that Family: But hence it ſoon went by Sale to Richard Lord Woodville, of the Moat in Maidſtone (now the Seat of the Right Honourable the Lord Romney) he was created Earl Rivers, and was made Lord Treaſurer and Conſtable of England, by his Son-in-Law King Edward the IVth A. D. 1466. But his Grandſon Anthony, Earl Rivers, being attainted under the Uſurper King Richard the IIId, it went to the Crown; and afterwards by King Edward the Vth was granted to Sir Robert Brakenbury, Lieutenant of the Tower of London. And on his Attainder after the Battel of Boſworth Field, in the firſt Year of King Henry VIIth coming again to the Crown, it was by that Prince granted to Richard Lewknor; whoſe Defendant gave it in Marriage with a Daughter to Hicks: And he leaving only two Daughters, one of which married Vincent, the other Martin, this Eſtate became divided into two Manors: One of which is called,

Weſtcourt, and went to Vincent: And the other, named

Eaſtcourt, became the Poſſeſſion of Martin: And this, about the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth was ſold to Web, whence it went the ſame Way to Smith, and he ſold it to Sir Edward Henden, Baron of the Exchequer; who bequeathed it to his Nephew Sir John Henden, whoſe Eldeſt Son Edward Henden, Eſq; was the Poſſeſſor of it in Philpot's Time. But Weſtcourt was by Vincent alienated to Mr. Morton of White-horſe in Croyden, and in his Family the Poſſeſſion continued when Philpot publiſhed his Villare Cantianum.

DEVINGTON, Davington, vulgò Daunton; lies at the North ſide of Kent, towards the Iſle of Shepey, about a Mile Weſtward from Feverſham, in the Bailiwick and Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Upper One of Juſtices in that Lath. The Liberty of St. Auſtin claims over it, becauſe it is in the Hundred of Feverſham, which belonged to that Abbey. But that of the Church of Canterbury claims over the Manor of Copton. 'Tis in the Deanery of Oſpringe, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; and the Church was dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen; 'tis a very ſmall one; in it are the Memorials of Laſhford, Edwards, and Bode. 'Tis a Chapel only, and ſo not rated in the King's Books.

This Place anciently belonged to the Nunnery here (an Account of which ſee in its proper Place). On the Suppreſſion, King Henry the VIIIth, in his 38th Year, granted it to Sir Thomas Cheyney; whoſe Son, Henry Lord Cheney, in the 8th Year of Queen Elizabeth, ſold it to Jo. Bradborn, whoſe Son, in the 10th Year of Queen Elizabeth, ſent it the ſame way to Aubry Giles; and his Son Francis ſold it to Mr. John Edwards, by whoſe only Daughter, Anne, it went in Marriage to Mr. John Boade of Eſſex, whoſe Deſcendant of the ſame Name was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

Devington-Court, or Little Davington, is a Place lying not far from the ſite of the Nunnery; and was once part of the Eſtate of the Earls of Athol, and Lords of Chilham: One of theſe Gentlemen built the Seat here; as appeared by their Arms in the Stonework of the great Hall, before it was taken down by Mr. Tho. Mills. After many Deſcents in this Family, David de Strabolgie, Earl of Athol, in the 49th Year of King Edward the IIId, leaving only Two Daughters; by one of them, Philippa, this Eſtate went in Marriage to John Halham: And his Grandſon, Sir Hugh Halham, about the beginning of King Henry the VIth, left an only Daughter Joan, who married John Lewknor, Eſq; of Suſſex, and thereby carried this Eſtate into that Name; but he ſoon ſold it to James Drylond, Eſq; by whoſe Daughter Conſtance it went in Marriage to Sir Tho. Walſingham of Scadbury; his great Grandſon ſold it to Simons, and he to Copinger; from him it went the ſame way to Mr. Tho. Mills of Norton; by his Sole Daughter Anne it went in Marriage to Sir John Mills of Southampton; and he in King Charles the Iſt's Reign alienated it to Tho. Twiſden, Eſq; of Broabourn in Eaſt-Maling, Serjeant at Law, in whoſe Poſſeſſion it remained in Philpot's Time.

I ſaw here the Powder-Mills belonging to Mr. Gruebarr of Oſpringe; they are very well ſituated, and have great Conveniences attending them: And I was informed that they can and have made 800 Barrels of Gun-powder per Week:

DIMCHURCH, Demechurch, or Dam-Church: From either its dim or obſcure Situation; or rather from its being placed near the Dam or Wall to keep out the Sea from the Marſh.

It lies at the South-Eaſt Side of Kent, in Romney Marſh, adjoining to the Sea, about Three Miles and a Half towards the North-Eaſt from New Romney, in the Bailiwick and Lath of Shipway, Hundred of Worth, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices of the Corporation of Romney Marſh, the Liberty of which claims over it: But the Liberty of St. Auſtin's claims here alſo. It is in the Deanery of Limpne, and Dioceſe of Canterbury, and the Church is dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul. A Rectory and valued in the King's Books at 7 l. 2 s. 10 d.

At a Place called New Hall in this Pariſh, and which was built about 150 Years ſince, are held the Courts for the Corporation of Romney Marſh; and alſo the Court called Dimchurch Lath. But of the State of the Marſh, its Laws, Cuſtoms, &c. I ſhall give a full Account in its proper Place.

Dimchurch was anciently the Inheritance of the Family of the Twithams: for Bertram de Twitham held Lands here at his Death, which was in the third Year of King Edward the IIId, as appears by Rot. Eſch. N. 115. in the Tower Records: From him it deſcended to Theobald Twitham; whoſe Daughter and Heir Maud carried it in Marriage to Simon Septvans: And by another Daughter and Heir of John Septvans his Deſcendant, it went the ſame Way into the Family of Fogge.

Some how or other alſo the Family of Poynings came to have ſome Intereſt in this Eſtate; or at leaſt had Lands in this Pariſh: For Michael Poynings was ſeized of Lands here in the 43d Year of King Edward IIId, as appears by Rot. Eſch. N. 14. p. 2. And it continued in this Name till the beginning of King Henry the VIth's Reign, and then it was alienated to Fogge.

DITTON, Dictone, Dictum, in the Textus Roffenſis, Dictuna.

Lies towards the Middle of Kent, about two Miles and a half North Eaſtward from Weſt Malling, in the Bailiwick of Hoo, Hundred of Larkfield, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and South one of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery of Malling, and Dioceſe of Rocheſter: And the Church is dedicated to St. Peter. A Rectory; and valued in the King's Books at 11 l 15 s. 0 d. The Church is ſmall but neat; and in it are Memorials of the Interment of Rowland Shakerly in the Year 1516. Richard Legate in 1481. and of ſeveral of the Name of Brewer. This Pariſh ought anciently to have contributed to the Repair of the Fifth Peer or Arch of Rocheſter Bridge.

Places of Note here:

1. Ditton, with its two Appendages, 2. Bramp ton, and 3. Sifleſton, were very anciently the Eſtate of a Family of the Name of Brampton: But in King Edward the Iſt's Reign, the Aldons were the Proprietors of Brampton and Sifleſton, as appears by the Pipe Rolls: In the third Year of King Edward the IId. Stephen de Burghurſt or Burwaſh died poſſeſt of them, Rot. Eſc. N. 4. But his Grandſon Bartholomew Lord Burwaſh in the 43d Year of King Edward the IIId, ſold them to Sir Walter de Pavely, Knight of the Garter: And he in the Firſt Year of King Richard the IId, parted with them the ſame Way to Windleſor, or Windſor; but in this Name they continued but a little while, for in the Fifteenth Year of King Richard the IId, they were alienated to Lewis Clifford; and hence about the middle of King Henry the VIth, they were ſold to Colepeper; here they continued till the End of King Henry the VIIth's Reign, and then they went by Sale to Leigh: And one Thomas Leigh, Eſq; exchanged then with King Henry VIIIth. That Prince in his 37th Year granted them to Sir Thomas Wriotheſley: Who, not long after, ſold them to Sir Robert Southwell: And he in the Second Year of Queen Mary parted with them the ſame Way to Sir Thomas Pope; in which Name they ſtaid till about the End of Queen Elizabeth; and then were alienated to Wiſeman; whence they paſſed again by Sale to Sir Oliver Boteler of Teſton, and his Grandſon of the ſame Name was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

The Ropers alſo held ſome Eſtate here at Ditton by Purchaſe from Clifford in the Reign of King Henry the VIth, as appears by Rot. Eſc. N. 33. But one of his Deſcendents not long after alienated it to Colepeper.

DODECIRCE, or Dodeskirk, is a Pariſh mentioned in the Textus Roffenſis, and ſaid to be within the Dioceſe of Rocheſter, but whereabouts it lay I can't find.

DODDINGTON lies towards the Middle of the North Side of Kent, about Four Miles North Eaſtward of Lenham, in the Bailiwick and Lath of Scray, Hundred of Tenham, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and upper one of Juſtices in that Lath. It is alſo in the Deanery of Oſpringe, and Dioceſe of Canterbury: And the Church is called St. John Baptiſt. A Vicarage; valued in the King's Books at 6 l. 13. 4 d. The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims here; and he is Patron of the Living. Formerly it was a Chapel of Eaſe to Lenham: 'Tis now a very handſome Church. In the South Chancel was this old Inſcription:

Hic jacet Ricardus de Saherſtada.

Who no doubt was one of the Anceſtors of Robert de Sharſted.

Places of Note here:

1. Sharſted, or Sharſted Court, once the Eſtate of a Family of this Name: For it appears by Rot. Eſc. N. 61. that Robert de Sharſted died poſſeſt of it in the VIIIth Year of King Edward the IIId, his only Daughter married John de Bourne, Son of John de Bourne, who was Sheriff of Kent in the 22d, 23d, and 24th Years of King Edward the Iſt. This Family had been of good Note before in this Pariſh (a); and had other Lands here which were purchaſed of John de Doddington; as appears by a Fine levied in the 47th Year of King Henry the IIId. John de Bourn obtained a Charter of Free-warren for his Lands here, (as alſo for thoſe at Bourn and Boxley) in the 18th Year of King Edward the Iſt. In this Ancient Name of Bourn did this Eſtate continue till Mr. James Bourn in King Charles the Iſt's Time, alienated Sharſted-Court to Mr. de Lawne of London; in whoſe Son William's Poſſeſſion it was in Philpot's Time, and is in that Name ſtill. That William married a Daughter of Thomas Hayward of Grange in Gillingham, who lies buried here: And this finely ſituated Place is now the Seat of Colonel William de Laune, one of the Knights of the Shire for this County in the firſt Parliament of our moſt Gracious King George.

2. Ringleſtone is a Place of Note here, which by Tradition takes it Name from a Ring and a Stone, which the Tenants of this Manor (they ſay) ought to hold in their Hands, in token of Homage: If there were any ſuch Tradition, it gives a better Account of the Name, than that which Philpot advances, with his uſual Pomp, in the Room of it; and which he founds on a Miſtake; the word Ring in the Saxon Language never ſignifying a Village, that I can find.

The moſt early Proprietors of this Place appear to have been the Chalfhunts. And Henry de Chalfhunt died poſſeſt of it in the 45th Year of King Edward the IIId, as appears by Rot. Eſc. N. 14. From this Family it went to that of Hadde, ſometimes written Haddu, and le Hadde; where it continued till Queen Elizabeth's Reign, and then was ſold to Buck; and not long after, Ringleſtone went the ſame way to Archer; and at length was ſold to Thatcher, who parted with it the ſame Way to Mr. Chriſtopher Allen of Borden, and he gave it in Marriage with his Daughter to Giles: In whoſe Poſſeſſion it was in Philpot's Time.

3. Down-Court, is an Ancient Manor in Doddington, which was once in the Poſſeſſion of Simon de Doddington; who flouriſhed here in the Time of King John and King Henry the IIId; and had the Patronage or Advowſon of the Church. But his only Daughter Matilda, as appears by the Fine, parted with this Eſtate to John de Bourn, in the 41ſt Year of King Henry the IIId; in which Name it continued till the Time of King Henry the VIth; towards the End of whoſe Reign, it was ſold to Dungate of Dungate-ſtreet in King's-Down. By a ſole Daughter of Andrew Dungate, this Manor paſſed by Marriage to Killigrew; which Name alſo, about the beginning of King Henry the VIIIth, ended in Two Female Heirs; one of which married Roydon, the other Cowland. The Manor Houſe was by Roydon ſold to Adye; and in a Succeſſor of that Family, Mr. John Adye, Down-Court, continued in Philpot's Time. On the North Wall of the Church is a Monument of John Adye, Eſq; 1612. But the reſt of the Manor, which was Cowland's Part, was by his Will, A. D. 1540. ordered to be ſold for Payment of Debts and Legacies: The Purchaſer was Mr. Allen, in one of whoſe Family the Poſſeſſion was in Philpot's Time.

In the Church are Memorials of the De Laune's, of the Swallmans, 1658, of the Nicholſons of Homeſtall, and of the Nortons.

About 70 Years ago the Frame of the Bells was fired by Lightning, and the Steeple much damaged.

In the Church-yard are Three Yew Trees; out of the Body of one of which grow a Dozen, or more, of the large Arms of a Poplar Tree; whoſe ſpreading Branches compoſe almoſt all the lower part of this odly double Tree; the Yew appearing above in the upper part of it; ſo that it hath a Body and Top of Yew; but moſt of the lower and middle Branches are of the White Poplar; it ſeems to have come into this State from ſome accidental conveyance of the Poplar Seeds into its hollow Body (perhaps by the Means of the Birds dropping them there) where meeting with ſome old rotten Sullage or Earth, they took Root and grew.

DOVOR, in Latin, Dubris; and ſometimes Doris, Doveria and Durus; in Saxon, Doppa: The Learned (a) Dr. Gale thinks to have been ſo called from the Britiſh Word Dwy, which ſignifies two; and Bre or Bryn, (hence our Brink) a Hill; and this is deſigned to expreſs its Situation: For as Cæſar ſaith of it, Lib. 4. Montibus anguſtis hic mare contineter (b). Lambard thinks its Name may rather be derived from the Dyfr or Dyr, Britiſh, Dufir, Water; or Dufirha, High or Steep. Somner hints, that it may take its Name from Dyffrin in the ſame Language, ſignifying a Valley. One, ſaith Lambard, calls it Dorobrina, as if he would diſtinguiſh it from Canterbury, Dorobornia; by making Dorobrina expreſs its ſituation on the Bryne or Salt Water; as Canterbury is on a Bourn or Freſh River. And this Name hath bred ſome confuſion in Hiſtory; for Speed, Holingſhead, and Milton, miſtaking Dorobornia for Dorobrina, have placed the Tumult and Riot made here by Earl Euſtace his Men, (of which more by and by) at Canterbury.

(a) Anton. Iter. p. 81. (b) Theſe Cliffs Cicero in Ep. 6. Lib. 1. ad Atticum, calls Moles mirificæ, and in ſeveral of the Roman Coins, Britain is repreſented as ſitting on a Rock in the Sea, in the Habit of a Woman.

Dover lies at the Eaſt part of Kent, adjoining to the Sea; about Five Miles North-Eaſtward from Folkſtone, in the Bailiwick of Stouting, Lath of St. Auſtin, and Eaſt Diviſion of the County. It was incorporated by the Name of the Mayor, Jurats, and Commonalty of the Town and Port of Dover, (and before that by the Name of the Barons of the Town and Port of Dover) in the Reign of King Edward the IIId. Their Common Seal hath on one ſide a Ship, and on the other a Man, who perhaps is St. Martin, riding out of a Port, with another following him on Foot.

The Place is in the Diviſion of the Juſtices of the Town and Port; and the Liberties of the Corporation, and of the Cinque Ports, claim over it. 'Tis in the Deanery of Dover, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. A Market is kept here every Wedneſday and Saturday, and a Fair of Nine Days, which begins annually on Novemb. 11. being St. Martin's Day.

Dover was ſo Eminent in King Edward the Confeſſor's Time, that, as appears by Domes-day Book, it was then of Ability to Arm yearly 20 Veſſels, and to maintain them at Sea for Fifteen Days together in the King's Service; each Ship carrying Twenty one able Men. And for this Service the King not only granted to the Inhabitants to be free from Toll, and many other Privileges; but alſo pardoned them all manner of Suit and Service to any Courts whatſoever.

Twine commits a great miſtake in making Dover to be the Portus Ritupenſis, which certainly was Sandwich; and tho' the whole Sea Coaſt between Dover and Sandwich might perhaps have been by ſome Latin Writers, leſs accurately acquainted with our Coaſts, called Litora Ritupina; yet Dubris and Rutupiæ, are every where plainly diſtinguiſhed in the Itinerary of Antoninus, and in all other Writers.

There have been formerly, ſaith Kilburn, Seven Churches in the Town; but Five of them, viz. St. John's, St. Nicholas's, St. Peter's, St. Martin's Le Grand, and St. Martin's the Leſs are Demoliſhed. And at preſent there are but Two Pariſhes and Churches here; St. Mary's, not valued in the King's Books; and St. James's, a Rectory, and valued there at 4 l. 17 s. 6 d.

St. Mary's Church was built by the Prior and Convent of St. Martin here (an Account of which ſee in its proper place) and by them was given to the Town: But the Advowſon thereof was given to Hubert de Burgh, the Founder of the Maiſon Dieu here; and he afterwards gave it to that Hoſpital.

The Church of St. James's did anciently belong to the Caſtle of Dover; and in it, to this Day, the Courts of Chancery and Admiralty, for all the Five Ports, the Two Ancient Towns, and their Members, are uſually holden.

'Tis uſually ſaid, that Lucius, the firſt Chriſtian King of the Britains, built a Church within the Caſtle here, and endowed it with the Cuſtoms of the Port: And that Eadbald, Son of Ethelbert, firſt King of Kent, built alſo a College here, which King Wightred afterwards removed down into the Town, ſtoring it with Twenty Two Canons, and dedicating it to St. Martin.

And tho' the Story of King Lucius hath by ſome been thought a Legend (of which more hereafter) yet Leland ſaith he had ſeen the Annals of Dover, which had the appearance of very good Antiquity, wherein, this Chapel was ſaid to be built by him in Dover-Caſtle, and dedicated to our Saviour; which is ſomething alſo confirm-confirmed by another Treatiſe concerning the Original of Dover-Caſtle, mentioned by Battely in his Canterb. Part 2. p. 3. There 'tis ſaid to have been built, A. D. 161. This Chapel is now indeed almoſt demoliſhed; but the Steeple, or rather Tower, is ſtill remaining, in which are ſome Roman Bricks. And at the Weſt End is another very ancient Tower, which is built within ſide with Rows of Roman Bricks regularly placed; and where-ever ſuch are found, they are Demonſtrations of the great Antiquity of the Building. Perhaps the preſent, are the Ruins of ſome Church built on the Foundation of a former much more ancient, and really erected in the Times of the Romans.

After King Wighred had brought the Twenty Two Canons above mentioned down from the Caſtle, and had founded St. Martin's Church in the Town, which was Dedicated to the Bleſſed Virgin, and to that Saint, the Three Churches of St. John, St. Nicholas, and St. Martin the Leſs, were erected and made ſubordinate to St. Martins. And it was this Monaſtery that firſt promoted the Towns being incorporated.

The preſent Market-place was the Church-yard of St. Martin's Church: This was reckoned the Mother Church, was called St. Martin's Le Grand, and by King Henry the Iſt was given to the Church of Canterbury.

St. Martin's had ſuch a Superiority over the other Churches and Chapels in Dover, that no one of them might ſing Maſs, till St. Martin's Prieſts had begun; and all annual Penſions were paid, and all Offerings almoſt made at this Famous Church.

Dover was, without doubt, a Port in the Time of the Romans, as appears by the Itinerary of Antonine, and hath continued ſo thro' the Saxon, Daniſh, and Norman Ages unto this preſent.

But, as after the Roman Times Buloign decayed, and grew out of uſe on the French Coaſt, ſo Sandwich, the Old Ritupium, did on ours; Witſand ſucceeding that, as Dover did Sandwich. Tho' Witſand is not mentioned as a Port, till about 500 or 600 Years ſince; and perhaps, as the preſent Biſhop of Lincoln obſerves, it is firſt named as ſuch in the Saxon Chronicle of 1057, when Will. Rufus took Shipping there for England. Nor did Witſand hold it very long neither, notwithſtanding the Prayer of Lewis the French King; who in the Year 1180, coming on a Pilgrimage to the Tomb of that Rebel Thomas Becket, wiſely beſought the Saint, that no one, for the future, might ever be caſt away at Sea in his paſſage between Witſand and Dover: For Calais ſucceeded it, and ſtill continues the uſual and moſt frequented Port.

By what Jul. Cæſar ſaith (in his Com. Lib. 4.) who no doubt deſigned to have landed here, but that he found the Place improper, the Cliffs well manned to withſtand him, the Sea, 'tis probable, came formerly much farther into the Land than it doth now; and perhaps flowed up as far as the Town now extends; which is confirmed by the Anchors and Planks of Ships, which, as Cambden tells us, have been dug up there.

Kilburn ſaith, that before King Arviragus ſtopped up the Haven, the Town ſtretched it ſelf more to the Eaſtward under the Caſtle, than it doth now: But after that, it was much built on the South-Weſt ſide.

The Town was once well Walled from the Place called Mansfield Corner to Peer-Gate, from thence to Upwall, and thence to Cow-Gate; from thence to Biggin-Gate, and from thence along by St. Mary's Church-yard to the River. And in ſome Old Manuſcripts I ſaw at Sandwich, it is ſaid to have been done by the Emperor Severus. The Names of the Gates, which were Ten or Eleven, were theſe.

1. Eaſtbrook-Gate, which ſtood near Mansfields Corner under the East-Cliff.

2. St. Helen's-Gate, next to the former, towards the South-Weſt, and near Copthall, otherwiſe Morehall, and St. Helens Croſs.

3. The Poſtern, otherwiſe call'd Fiſher's-Gate, next to the laſt, and near a Bridge made by Mr. Garret when he was Mayor.

4. The Butchery Gate; this opened towards the South, and by it anciently was the Filth of the Town carried out into the Sea.

5. Snar-Gate, which opened towards the South Weſt, here formerly was and is ſtill a Place called Pennileſs Bench, but 'tis now made like a Platform, and paved with Stone; and here Men of Buſineſs, (Merchants, &c.) uſed to reſort, as to a kind of leſſer Exchange, between Eleven and One of the Clock; and over the Entry into it is the Cuſtom-Houſe built.

6. Severus-Gate, built, ſaith Kilburn, by one Severus a Roman (I ſuppoſe he means the Emperor of that Name) about 1500 Years ſince. This looks South Weſtward towards the Peer.

7. Adrians-Gate, (afterwards called Upwall) was at the Hanger of the Hill, on the Weſt part above the other Gate.

8. Common-Gate, which was a large one, and then opened into the Common; and becauſe it was the uſual Place of driving Cows out of the Town into the Common, it came in proceſs of Time to be called the Cow-Gate.

9. St. Martin's-Gate, otherwiſe called Monk's-Gate, and ſometimes the Poſtern-Gate; this opened towards the Hill.

10. Biggin-Gate, which took its Name from the Street adjoining to it; but anciently it was called North-Gate.

11. Croſs-Gate, is another Gate mentioned by Lambard; but perhaps was the ſame with St. Helen's-Gate above-named; and might be ſo called from St. Helen's-Croſs, which ſeems to have ſtood near it. He ſaith alſo, that this Gate, Cow-Gate, and the Butchery Gate, had all Towers built upon them.

In the Hands of the Learned Will. Clavell, Eſq; of the Inner Temple, is a Manuſcript Leiger Book of the Hoſpital of St. Bartholomew in Dover, which I think is a Houſe omitted by all our Writers; but I ſhall give an Account of it in its proper Place. This Manuſcript mentions the Names of ſeveral Wards then in this Town, and in which, part of the Eſtate of this Hoſpital lay, viz. Bickenward, St. Mary's-Ward, Ore's Ward, Ball's-Ward, Wolve's-Ward, Horſepool-Ward, and Seagate-Ward.

By the Tower Records; Dorſ. pro An. 17. E. 2. p. 1. M. 16. I find there were then 21 Wards in Dover, each of which was to find a Ship for Forty Days, at their own Charge, for the King's uſe; in Conſideration of which, each Ward had thence a Licenſed Packet-Boat, which was called a Paſſenger, to carry or fetch Perſons over to or from France; and from Whitſand to Dover the Price for a ſingle Perſon was 6 d. in Summer, and 12 d. in Winter; and for carrying a Horſe 18 d. in Summer, and 2 s. in Winter.

In this Town the Lord-Warden of the Cinque Ports keeps a Court of Lode-manage; and to it there is a Clerk and a Serjeant belonging. The Deſign of it is for chuſing and appropriating skilful and ſufficient Pilots, to guide Ships into the Port: 'Tis ſometimes called the Trinity Houſe.

This Word Lode-manage may either be, as Minſhew and others ſay, derived from the Belgick Loot, i. e. Lead; and ſo a Pilot may be called a Loot's-man, or Lead-man, from his often uſing the Lead in ſounding the Depth of Places; or, as I much rather think, from the Saxon Leoðe; becauſe ſuch an one is a guider or director of the People on Board; and hence we uſe Loadſtar and Loadſtone Loadſtone in the ſame Senſe, as guiders and directers of Seamen in the Courſes which they ſteer.

In the Notitia of the Weſtern Empire it is ſaid, That at this Place was Quartered the Præpoſitus Militum Tungricanorum, ſub diſpoſitione viri Spectabilis Comitis Litoris Saxonici per Britanniam.

On the other ſide of the Town, on the Hill over-againſt the Caſtle, was built a Tower for a Light-Houſe to direct Veſſels into the Harbour. This was afterwards called Bredenſtone; and by the Vulgar, the Devil's Drop of Mortar.

On a ſmall piece of the Chalky Cliff of Dover, was a little old Chapel (ſaith the Dering Manuſcript) then inhabited by a Poor Seaman; and called the Chapel of our Lady of Arcliffe; over the Stairs was carved a large Roſe and Crown in Stone, with this Date, M.D.XXX; over the Door were the Arms of England impaling France. This Place Sir Edward Dering thinks, and no doubt he is right in it, to have been that which formerly was called the Chapel of our Lady of Pity, and which was built by a Northern Nobleman, who was in great danger of being loſt by a Shipwreck here.

In King Henry the VIIIth's Time the Veſtments and Utenſils of this poor Place were valued at 200 Marks; ſome being of Cloath of Gold, and others richly Embroidered, &c. So very profuſe was the Superſtition of thoſe Days; and ſo extravagant the Pride of the Prieſts; who by theſe Rich Garments thought to raiſe themſelves an Eſteem among the Vulgar.

The ſame Manuſcript acquaints us alſo, that there were many great and long Quarrels between the Priory of St. Martins, and the Maiſon Dieu here; but at laſt they were compoſed by Stephen Langton, Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

St. Martin's Church was taken down in the 38th Year of King Henry the VIIIth, by Mr. Buffkin and Mr. Netherſole, Mr. Wingfield being then Mayor of Dover; and the Bells were given to the Chamber of Dover, as I find by a Manuſcript in the Library at Canterbury; as alſo, that St. John's Church here was once Leaded, and there were ſome Lands with Two Tenements belonging to it: But as that Paper informs me, Mr. Netherſole got the Lead of the Church, and one Mr. Plane of London, the Poſſeſſion of the Land and Tenements.

This Town hath, like others, met with many ill Accidents. A. D. 1051, Euſtace Earl of Boloigne (and Father to Godfrey) having been to make a Viſit to Edward the Confeſſor, whoſe Siſter he had married, and returning this way home, had here one of his Harbingers killed by a Townſman, whom he would have forced to afford him Lodgings: This enraging the Earl, he entred the Houſe with his Retinue, ſlew the Hoſt and Eighteen more. Which provoked the Town ſo far, that they got all up in Arms, and attacked the Earl and his Servants, killed Twenty one of them, wounded moſt of the reſt, the Earl himſelf hardly eſcaping. Of this the Earl complained to the King, and he ordered Godwine, then Earl of Kent, to enter the County in a Hoſtile manner, and puniſh the Doverians with Military Execution: But Godwine, who had no great Inclination to Foreigners, excuſed himſelf to the King for going about ſo ungrateful a Work; and deſired him to content himſelf with puniſhing the Aggreſſors: But the King growing more reſolved, and Godwine leſs willing to execute his Commands, it had like to have ended in a long Civil War, as it did actually occaſion ſome diſturbances of that kind.

A. D. 1191. Here was Longchamp the inſolent Biſhop of Ely in King Richard the Iſt's Reign, forced to hide himſelf with his Brother-in-Law Clere, then Sheriff of Kent and Conſtable of Dover-Caſtle. The Caſe was this: The Whim of Sanctering to Jeruſalem; or the Deſign of Recovering the Holy Land, having got into the Head of our King Richard the Iſt, he attempted it in Perſon, and left this Longchamp, Biſhop of Ely, as it were the Guardian of the Kingdom in his Abſence; who being alſo the Pope's Legate, oppreſſed both Clergy and Laity in ſo barbarous a Manner, that he got himſelf to be mortally hated by both. His State was ſo great, that his Retinue was uſually 1000 or 1500 Perſons; in order to ſupport which, among other Acts of Oppreſſion, he ſeized upon the Revenues of the Archbiſhop of York, in the Abſence of Godfrey, who was then at Rome about his Conſecration: And becauſe he feared that he would not bear this at his Return, he plotted with Clere, to ſeize Godfrey at his Landing: Which accordingly was done, and the poor Archbiſhop clapt up a cloſe Priſoner in the Caſtle, together with his Chaplains attending; after being firſt decently ſtript of ſuch Ornaments and Cloaths, as now in that dark Place they knew would be uſeleſs to them. And thus this pious Prelate thought himſelf ſecure. But Earl John (afterwards King) joining with other Biſhops and Barons, whom Ely had ill uſed, ſo ſtraitned him, and diſtreſſed him, that in a full Aſſembly at St. Paul's Church in London, he was diſplaced from his Office, ſtript of all his great Places and Caſtles; and forced to run away and hide himſelf with his Brother Clere at Dover; and attempting to eſcape from thence in Women's Cloaths to France, he was ſeized and expoſed, and committed a Priſoner to that very Place where he had ſo injuriouſly confined Godfrey before.

A. D. 1213. In the Houſe of the Knights Templers here (ſaith Stow) was concluded that infamous Agreement between King John and Pandulfus the Pope's Legate, whereby that unhappy Prince was in ſome Meaſure forced to ſurrender his Crown to the Pope.

Here alſo, A. D. 1216. was King John himſelf; when Lewis the Dauphin landed at Stonar by Sandwich: But his Army, being moſt of them Foreigners, would not oppoſe Lewis: So the King was forced to retire; and Lewis marched to Canterbury: And after that, had all the Caſtles and ſtrong Places in Kent delivered up to him, except Dover-Caſtle, which in July following he beſieged, but in vain, not being able to take it.

In King Edward the Iſt's Reign, while the two Cardinals were here treating between England and France, the French Landed and burnt a good Part of the Town, with ſome of the Religious Houſes. But the Inhabitants getting out into the Countrey got a Poſſe, and returning again, beat the French back to their Ships with great Courage and Bravery; killing about 800 of them, Hollingſh. Vol. II. p. 295. And ſo conſiderable was the Invaſion, that King Edward the Iſt, in his 23d Year mentions it, in the Summons directed to Robert, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, to ſend proper Proctors to Parliament for the Clergy of his Province.

After the Battel of Haſtings, many of the Engliſh fled to Dover-Caſtle, as a Place then thought impregnable: But the Conqueror marched along the Coaſt from Romney hither; and at his Approach they all fled or yielded. King William ſtaid here about Eight Days, fortifying the Caſtle, and leaving his ſick and wounded Men here to recover, and then marched directly for London: The City of Canterbury ſent Deputies to him to offer their Submiſſion; and all the Kentiſh Men came in to him voluntarily, and acknowledged him for their King. And Pictavienſis, an Eye-Witneſs, who relates this, ſaith nothing at all of the Tranſaction of the moving Wood; or of the Kentiſh Men's obtaining any ſpecial or extraordinary Privileges. And when

I come

I come to Swans-Combe, I ſhall further refute that popular Error.

King William the Iſt placed a Norman Gariſon in Dover-Caſtle; but when he was gone into Normandy himſelf, the Kentiſh Men being uneaſy under the Government of Odo and Fitz Osborn, whom William had left Guardians of the Kingdom, ſent to Euſtachius or Euſtace Earl of Bullen, to come over to deliver them, and to join with them in ſurprizing the Caſtle of this Town; he agreed to the Enterprize, but by the Vigilance of the Gariſon it was defeated.

A. D. 1382. Anne, Siſter to Winceſlaus then Emperor, and Daughter to the Emperor Charles the IVth, arrived here, and was received with mighty Pomp, and was afterwards married to King Richard the IId, by William Courtney, Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

A. D. 1416. and in the Fourth Year of King Henry the Vth, the Emperor Sigiſmund Couſin-German to the King, landed here, with a Deſign to make Peace between him and the French King: But before he landed, the Duke of Glouceſter, and other great Lords went into the Sea with their Swords drawn, and declared, That if he came hither as Emperor, or to claim any Authority here, or any otherwiſe than as the King's Friend and Relation, he ſhould not be permitted to Land. And this was done to aſſert the King's Prerogative. Hollingſh. Vol. II. p. 556.

A. D. 1471. The Baſtard Faulconbridge landed here from France with 300 Men, and marched to London with 2000 Men.

A. D. 1514. King Henry the VIIIth accompanied his beautiful Siſter Mary to this Place, where ſhe took ſhipping to go to France to marry King Lewis.

A. D. 1520. The Emperor Charles the Vth landed here, and was met at this Place by King Henry the VIIIth; after which they rode to Canterbury, and there kept their Whitſuntide together.

A large Account of the Caſtle you will find in the proper Place.

As to the Famous Pere of Dover, I find by the Dering Manuſcripts, that King Henry the VIIIth laid out here above 80,000 l. in that Work: making a Bulwark, which from Arcliff ran far out into the Sea to the Eaſtward: And hereby was gained much firm Ground: In this he made Moats and Bulwarks; and appointed Officers and Soldiers to keep Guard here. Theſe had alſo the Care of the Black Bulwark; and had the Profit of a Crane, which then ſtood near it, for the Shipping and Unſhipping of Goods.

And it appears by the Charter of King James Iſt, that great Care was taken, and a vaſt Expence employed, to make this Harbour good, and to keep it in Repair, in the Reigns of King Henry the VIIth, King Henry the VIIIth, and King Edward the VIth.

Dover Peer was finiſhed in 1585, by Queen Elizabeth's Care; who alſo laid out a great deal on the Repair of the Caſtle; and more than any other Prince but King Edward the IVth, who expended 10,000 l. in Fortifying and Repairing it. From Hollingſ. Vol. II. p. 1491.

In her Time a ſtrong Mount on the North Side was caſt up near the Camber at Rye, once an excellent Road for Ships; and whither they repaired when they could not lie at Dover.

A. D. 1500. A Round Tower was built at the South Weſt Side of Dover Harbour, by one John Clerk, Maſter of the Maiſon Dieu; to defend the Ships from the Violence of the South Weſt Winds: And they rode cloſe to it by Rings faſten'd to the Tower on Purpoſe: And this made that Part of the Bay ſo pleaſant, that it was call'd little Paradiſe, and is to this Day.

Sir John Thompſon, Clerk, Parſon of St. James's in Dover, drew a Draught, and made a Propoſition to the King to repair the Harbour: The King encouraged it; made Thompſon Maſter of the Maiſon de Dieu; and delivered the Undertakers 500 l. to begin the Work: The King made him alſo chief Surveyor, in Conjunction with Edward May, Robert Juſtice, Richard Cowchie, and John Steward, Mariners of good Experience. He firſt built a mighty Wall, which he called the Peer, from Arcliff Chapel, being the South-Weſt Part of the Bay, directly Eaſtwards into the main Sea, and of 131 Rods in Length, leaving the Entrance only at Eaſt South Eaſt.

The Peer was not finiſhed by 350 Foot, ſo far as its Foundation went; which he called the Mole Head, and was made of Rocks brought from a Place near at Hand, called Hakcliff, or the Caſtle Key, and Folkſtone.

The Peer was began 1533, and was compiled of two Rows of main Poſts, and great Piles of 25 or 26 Feet in Length, which were let into Holes hewn in the Rocks below; and ſome of them were ſhod with Iron, and driven down into the chalky Ground. The Poſts and Piles were faſtned together with Iron Bands and Bolts, &c. and then all were fill'd up with great Chalk Stones, Beach, &c. But the Bottom was all great Rocks of Stone of 20 Tuns a-piece, which were brought from Folkſtone thither, on Frames of Timber, ſupported by empty Casks, &c. on the Water, at a ſmall Expence; and by the Contrivance of one John Young, to whom the King gave a Yearly Stipend for his Device.

The Chalk Stones, &c. to fill up the Peer were brought from the North Eaſt Side, in a great Boat called Gaboth, which had Nine Keels.

The King mightily encouraged this Work, and gave towards it above 50,000 l. and was ſeveral Times in Perſon to view it.

But afterward, his Abſence at the Siege of Bullen, his Sickneſs at his Return, his Dying, and his Son's Nonage, put a Stop to, and at laſt expoſed to Decay and Ruin this Noble Work.

Queen Mary indeed attempted to carry it on again; but neither the Officers nor the Workmen being well paid, it came to nothing.

And in Proceſs of Time, the Sea brought ſuch Quantities of Beach again upon it, eſpecially about a Fort on it, called the Black Bulwork, that it drove quite through the Piles, and choaked up the Harbour, making a Shelf of Beach from thence Eaſterly to the Bottom of the Cliff call'd Caſtle Ray; and this Ruin of the Peer continually increas'd; both by the Neglect of Repairing it, and alſo by the poor People's ſtealing the Wood and Iron, &c. from it, almoſt every Night.

The Shelf alſo grew worſe and worſe every Day, and there was no getting over it, but in that Place where the River coming down from the Town forced a Paſſage into the Sea; or till they had dug a Chanel through it.

This and the Loſs of Calais about the ſame Time, ſoon brought Dover into Decay.

At length this Shelf became of it ſelf a kind of Defence againſt the Sea: And if Ships could have got ſafe within it, they might have rode there as ſafely.

In order to effect which, ſeveral Projects were form'd: And Queen Elizabeth gave to the Town the Free Tranſportation of 30,000 Quarters of Wheat, 10,000 Quarters of Barley and Malt, and 4000 Tun of Beer.

An Act paſſed in the 23d Year of Queen Elizabeth, that every Veſſel paſſing by there, ſhould pay 3 d. per Tun, towards the Repair of the Harbour.

And She appointed a Commiſſion to Cobham, Lord Warden, Sir Thomas Scot, Sir James Hales, Tho. Wootton, Edward. Boys, Eſqs; Mr. Mayor of Dover, Richard Barry, Lieutenant of the Caſtle, Henry

Henry Palmer; Thomas Diggs, Thomas Wilford, and William Partridge, Eſqs; all Gentlemen of Kent, to take Care of this Matter.

Theſe Commiſſioners made one John True, Surveyor; and he undertook to build a Wall of Stone (to be brought from Folkſtone) from Folkſtone, from the Water-gate, where the River runs into the Sea, to the Black Bulwark, in Length 200 Rods: On this he beſtowed about 1300 l. in hewing Stone, &c. and if the Wall had been finiſhed it would have coſt 100,000 Pound. But he having 10 s. per Day allow'd him, protracted the Time all he could, and at length was diſcover'd and diſmiſs'd.

After this, one Ferdinando Poins, who underſtood the Works in the Low Countries, and who had been much employed in ſtopping up the Breaches about Woolwich and Earith, was employ'd in this Affair.

He undertook to make certain Knocks or Groins, which ſhould make ſuch a Depth of Water, as that the Harbour ſhould be quite dry at Low Water, that ſo a Wall might be built of 120 Rods in Length, from above the Water-Gate to near the Caſtle-Ray, running within the Shelf of the Breach directly towards the End of the Peer, where the Black Bulwark was plac'd: And at the End of this long Wall, another of about 40 Rods long was to be placed a-croſs it, reaching to the Shoar, at the Northern Cliff. In order to begin this Work, which ſeem'd very difficult, Poins had 1000 l. ordered him by the Commiſſioners, and after that he had 200 l. more. He made two Groins, and got a good Depth of Water at the Harbour's Mouth: But it was thought he charged as much again, as he need have done for the Work.

However, it was concluded nothing could be effectually done to ſecure the Harbour, without ſuch kind of Walls as he propoſed. The only Quere was, How and with what they ſhould be made?

Poins ſaid they might be made well enough of Ouze and Beach: Pet and Baker, two skilful Shipwrights, propoſed a Wooden Wall, and gave in a Model of ſuch a Building: But this was judged both Inſufficient and too Chargeable; and had not been tried any where.

Sir Thomas Scot propoſed doing it as the Wall againſt the Sea is done in Romney Marſh: And after a great deal of Enquiry and long Conſideration, the Romney Marſh-Men did undertake the Work: So that James Hales was made Treaſurer, John Smith Expenditor, and —— Diggs, Eſq; Surveyor; and all under the Direction of Sir Thomas Scot.

The Work was begun in May 1583; the Walls were made of Earth, Chalk in the Middle, and Sleech on the Outſides, and lin'd with Faggots.

Henry Gilford, Eſq; Captain of Arcliff Caſtle was very induſtrious in promoting this Work: Sir Thomas Scot undertook the Long Wall; Richard Bury, Eſq; Lieutenant of Dover-Caſtle, the Croſs Wall.

The Croſs Wall was made 90 Foot broad in the Bottom, and 50 at the Top, and 40 Rods long.

The long Wall 70 at the Bottom, and near 40 at Top, in Length 120 Rods. Wonderful Application and Dexterity was uſed in the Work: So that in leſs than Three Months the whole Perimeter, as they called it, or Incluſion of the Harbour was finiſhed: And was ſo tight that it had no Leaks at all; and continued ſo for Three Years: And then at quarter Flood, a Ship of 50 Tun might come in; and at full Seas one above 300 Tun. And there were then finiſhing two Jutty Heads, which would perfect the Mouth of the Haven, ſo that any Ship whatſoever might come in.

The Charge of the two Walls, with the Appurtenances, amounted but to 2700 l.

This Pent of Water was ſo great, that though on the breaking of one of the Gates of the Sluices, the Beach and Sand came in and ſwarved it up ſo in Four Days, that no Boat could come in or go out; yet on its being repair'd again, a Veſſel of 300 Tun was able to paſs in and out at it.

The ſmall Sluice at firſt laid in the Croſs Wall, was taken up; and one of Sixteen Foot broad, and Eighty Foot long, and Thirteen Deep laid in its Room; which had Two Gates: And as it was a whole Month in laying, ſo the good Lord Cobham ſtaid there all the time; and kept a Table to encourage the Workmen.

So univerſal a Diligence and Publick Spiritedneſs, did appear in every one concern'd in this mighty and moſt uſeful Work.

I have by me the Original Orders of a Committee appointed by the Authority of King James the Iſt, in the 4th Year of his Reign; wherein ſeveral things were appointed to be done to this Peer, and a Receiver, Paymaſter, Surveyor, Purveyor, and Clerk, choſen accordingly.

They order the Maſter-Maſon, William Taylor, to go over to Fluſhing, or parts adjacent, to provide a Carpenter for finiſhing the Timber-work about the new Sluice. They appointed alſo the uttermoſt Dam of the new Sluice to be taken away, in order to come at and clear the Foundation.

And that the Inner or hinder part of the Northhead ſhould be built up anſwerable to the fore Part, to keep the Beach out of the Haven in that Place; which in a Raging Sea uſed to be caſt over the Tops of thoſe ſmall Piles which were placed there by Strickles.

Theſe Commiſſioners were, Sir Fr. Fane, Knt. Sir George Fane, Knt. Sir Thomas Fane, Knt, Sir Thomas Waller, Knt. Sir Thomas Harfleet, Knt. Sir George Perkyns, Knt. William Monyns, Eſq; Henry Finch, Eſq; George Byng, Mayor of Dover, Aaron Windebank, Gent, and Edward Kemp of Dover, Jurat.

In King James the Iſt's Charter of 1606 abovementioned, the Back of the Peer, or Harbour-Ground, was granted by the King to the Warden and Aſſiſtants of Dover Harbour, as it lies without South-gate, or Snar-gate, extending North-Eaſt to a Tenement or Meſſuage (then Mr. Mitchel's) near the Peer, and South-Weſt to Archcliff Bulwark; and its Bridge from the Rocks and Cliffs there, unto the outermoſt ſhore of the great ſtanding Water there, called the Great Pent, or the Pent-Wall, and unto the Port it ſelf called the Harbour of Dover; and unto the inwardmoſt Bound of the Sea there called the Low Water Mark.

There is mentioned alſo an Old Chapel, which ſeems to have been ſtanding near Archcliff, or Arcliff.

DOWNE, ſo called from its Situation on the Downs or Hills; lies at the Weſt End of Kent towards Surrey, about Four Miles North-Eaſtward from Weſtram, in the Bailiwick of Sutton-Bromley, Hundred of Ruxley, Lath of Sutton-at-Hone, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Upper One of Juſtices in that Lath.

'Tis in the Dioceſe of Rocheſter, but I don't find it rated in the King's Books at all; and therefore perhaps was formerly a Chapel to ſome other Place.

In the Church are Memorials of the Interment of Down of Bederenden above 250 Years ago; and of Philpot and of ſeveral of the Petley's; the Arms of whom were in the South Window.

Downe-Court and Manor; This Place in King Edward the Iſt and Second's Time, was the Reſidence of Richard de Downe, who lies buried in the Chancel of the Church, but with no Date on his Tomb, ſaith Philpot. From the Downs this Place went into the Poſſeſſion of the Petleys, and Stephen Petley paid Aid for it at making the Black Prince Knight: And in this Family did this Eſtate continue till about the End of King Henry the VIIIth; and then John Petley left Four Daughters. The Eldeſt of which, Agnes, carried Downe along with her to Mr. John Manning her Husband; in whoſe Name it ſtaid a good while, but at laſt was ſold to Sir Nich. Carew of Beddington in Surrey; whoſe Son, Sir Francis, conveyed it to Collonel Richard Sandys, third Son of Sir Edward Sandys of Northbourn.

But Down-Court was before ſeparated from the Manor of Down, and ſold to Palmer by it ſelf.

The Three other Daughters of Mr. John Petley above-mentioned, were Married into the Name of Bird, Caſinghurſt of Valons, and into that of Childrens.

St. DUNSTAN's, lies towards the North-Eaſt ſide of Kent, by the River Stoure; about a Mile Weſtward from Canterbury; in the Bailiwick of Bridge and Petham, Hundred of Weſtgate, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath; in the Deanery and Dioceſe of Canterbury; and the Church is dedicated to St. Dunſtan; a Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 5 l. per Ann. Archbiſhop Reynolds, A. D. 1322, Erected and Endowed the Vicarage; which about 20 Years after was augmented by Archbiſhop Stratford. And in this Church there was alſo formerly an Endowment given by the Roper's Family of 8 l. per Ann. each for two Prieſts, who were to ſay Maſs at the Altar of St. Nicholas here for the Benefit of the Souls of that Family; and accordingly they were called Roper's Chantry Prieſts; and in a Side Chapel or Chancel of this Church belonging to that Family, and founded by John Roper, Eſq; are ſeveral of this Eminent Family Enterr'd.

At the North ſide of the Church is a ſmall Chapel founded by one Mr. Henry of Canterbury, A. D. 1330, and dedicated to the Holy Trinity; together with a perpetual Chantry, under the Care, and for the Benefit of the Hoſpital of Poor Prieſts in Canterbury. The Church was appropriated to the Prior and Convent of St. Gregory in that City.

In this Pariſh was the ancient Seat of the Family of Roper, or Roſper, de Rubra Spathâ, as Philpot ſaith it is written in Old Deeds. William Roſper, and Elnith his Wife, Daughter of Edward de Apuldre, flouriſhed here in the Reign of King Henry the IIId, and were great Benefactors to the Priory of St. Martins in Dover. John Roper did great Service in Scotland in the Reign of King Edward the IIId, and was accordingly rewarded by his Sovereign (together with Will. Clifford) with a third part of the Forfeitures due from the Jews in London, who were fined under great Penalties for ſome Irregularities committed by them about that time. Edmund, Son of Ralph Roper, was alſo very Eminent under King Henry the IVth, and King Henry the Vth; and was made Juſtice of the Peace in this County, and lies buried in this Church, A. D. 1433. John Roper, his Son, was one of the Surveyors of the Cuſtoms of the Cinque Ports, in the 19th Year of King Henry the VIIth; and John Roper, his Grandſon was Attorney-General to King Henry the VIIIth, and Prothonotary of the King's Bench, and was buried here 1524. Will. Roper was Sheriff of Kent in the 1ſt and 2d Year of Queen Mary, married the Learned Margaret, Daughter of Sir Tho. More, Lord Chancellor of England; and ſucceeded his Father in his Office of Prothonotary; and dying 1557, left it to his Son Thomas Roper, Eſq; whoſe Deſcendant Edward Roper, Eſq; was the Poſſeſſor of this Manor in Philpot's Time.

EADELINESBREGE is a Pariſh which is mentioned in the Textus Roffenſis, F. 221. b. and ſaid to be in the Dioceſe of Rocheſter. Which I fancy to be the ſame with that now called Eden, or Eatonbridge. Which ſee below.

EARITH, Erith, alias Leſnes, Eard, Earhede, or Earhethe. Lambard gueſſes it took its Name from the Saxon ſ҃ppe and ƀy̋ðe; that is, the old Harbour. But perhaps 'tis rather from Ꜥaꝛȝ or Ꜥaꝛƀ, i. e. Slow or Sluggiſh: And ſo Earith will be the ſtill Harbour; becauſe the River bending here, doth not move ſo ſwift, as it doth before and after it comes to this Place.

It lies at the North Side of Kent adjoining to the River Thames, about two Miles North Weſtward from Dartford, in the Bailiwick of Sutton-Dartford, Hundred of Little and Leſnes, Lath of Sutton-at-Hone, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and upper one of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery of Dartford, and Dioceſe of Rocheſter, and the Church is dedicated to St. John the Baptiſt: 'Tis a Rectory; and valued in the King's Books at 9 l. 12 s. 6 d. per Ann. Earith was given to the Church of Rocheſter by one Ælphegus; and the Gift was confirmed by Archbiſhop Dunſtan: Though the Manor anciently belonged to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury. In the Church is a fair and noble Monument of Elizabeth Counteſs of Shrewsbury, and Daughter and Heir of Sir Richard Walden, Kt. Lord of this Town, ſaith Kilburn: And Memorials of ſeveral of the Name of Walden; as Sir Richard, 1536. Richard Walden, Eſq; 1496. As alſo of ſeveral others of good Note; as Ralph Criel, Eſq; 1447. Roger St. Clere 1425; John Aylmer, 1435, &c.

Lambard ſaith this Town of Earith was anciently a Corporation: And Bartholemew, Lord Badleſmere got a Grant of a Market on Thurſdays for this Place; and a Fair (for Three Days) to be held at the Feaſt of St. Jude.

On the South Side of the Church (which is neat and in good Repair) are the Ruins of an old Stone Building, which ſeems to have been a Chapel.

At this Place of Earith there was a very famous Trial which is mentioned by the Learned Dr. Hicks, in his Diſſertat. Epiſtolaris, p. 59; and copied from our Textus Roffenſis, Fol. 149. to this Purpoſe. A certain Perſon having no Iſſue, deviſes a third Part of his Land in Earith, Cray, Eynsford, and Waldham, to a Kinſwoman, and the Remainder to the Churches of Canterbury and Rocheſter, by equal Portions.

After his Deceaſe his Kinſwoman marries one Leofsune; and they agree together to vacate the Will; which was ſolemnly made before Archbiſhop Dunſtan and others, and to enter on the whole Eſtate; without the Council and Judgment of the ▽ıƀena, or Wiſe Men. As ſoon as the Archbiſhop underſtood this, he appointed a Day to try and determine this Matter of Earith; by the Teſtimony of Elfſtane, Biſhop of London; of Elfſtane, Biſhop of Rocheſter; of the Convents of London and Canterbury; and of all Eaſt and Weſt Kent; and of Wulfſi a Presbyter, then Shireman or Judge of the County of Kent; and of one Brithwald of Mereworth, a Man (I ſuppoſe) of great Judgment and Knowledge: And Notice was given to the adjoining Counties, that Archbiſhop Dunſtan, by his ſingle Oath, taken on the Croſs which he held in his Hand, had determined the Right of the two Churches of Canterbury and Rocheſter to theſe Lands, which Leofsune would have uſurped. Wulfſi the Shireman, took the Archbiſhop's Oath as Judge of the Province on the King's Account, becauſe Leofsune refuſed to take it. And to give the yet greater Confirmation to the Thing, a Thouſand Men out of the neighbouring Counties took their Oaths on the Croſs alſo, that they believed what the Archbiſhop had ſworn, was true. 'Tis ſaid alſo, that Dunſtan had then with him the Libri Eccleſiaſtici Juris; which ſhews that there were then, thus early, ſome Kind of Eccleſiaſtical Laws, Canons, or Rules, which were digeſted into a Code or Book: And 'tis very likely (as Dr. Hicks obſerves) that the Dom-Book or Collection of Civil and Secular Laws and Statutes, was in the Cuſtody of the Shireman, or Judex Comitatus, and produced on theſe and ſuch like Occaſions. And the Doctor ſaith, that among the Manuſcripts of the Hattons, a Collection in the Bodley, there is a noble old Book of Canons, on the back of which is written in an old Hand, Codex S. Dunſtani, which 'tis probable might be that very Book, which the Archbiſhop now now had in his Hand. Many other excellent Remarks doth that laborious Antiquary make on this Trial, and on ſeveral other Things of this Nature, which the curious Reader will find in his Diſſertatio Epiſtolaris, at the End of his Learned Theſaurus Linguarum Veterum Septentrion.

Places of Note here:

1. The Manor of Earith was anciently the Eſtate of the Family of Badleſmere. Gunceline de Badleſmere, who was Juſtice of Cheſter, and who lies buried at Badleſmere and had a Fair Portraicture on his Tomb, cut out in Wood (ſaith Philpot) died poſſeſs'd of it in the 29th Year of King Edward IIId (Vid. Rot. Eſc. N. 50.): This Gunceline was Son to Giles de Badleſmere, who was kill'd in a Battel in Wales, A.D. 1258. Bartholomew, Lord Badleſmere had a Charter of Freewarren for his Manor here, in the 9th Year of King Edward the IId. But on his loſing his Life for eſpouſing the Cauſe of Thomas Earl of Lancaſter againſt that Prince, his Eſtate was forfeited to the Crown. And King Edward the IId in his 15th Year, granted it for Life to David de Strabolgie, Earl of Athol: After his Death it returned to the Crown; and then King Edward the IIId reſtored it to Bartholomew Lord Badleſmere, Son to the former: And he died poſſeſs'd of it in the Twelfth Year of King Edward the IIId. He left only Four Siſters Co Heirs: And this Part of his Eſtate fell to Elizabeth, who was firſt married to William Bohun, Earl of Northampton; and afterwards to Roger Mortimer, Earl of March, in which Family it continued for ſeveral Deſcents; till at length by the Marriage of Anne, one of his Grand-Daughters, to Richard Plantagenet, Earl of Cambridge, and by the Death of her Brother Roger Mortimer without Iſſue, this Eſtate went into that Family; and by Edward the IVth's Acceſſion to the Crown, became a Part of the Royal Revenue: And continued in the Crown till King Henry the VIIIth, in his 36th Year paſſed it away to Elizabeth Counteſs Dowager of Shrewsbury. Her Daughter Anne married Peter Compton, Eſq; by whom ſhe had Sir Henry Compton, who became her Heir to this Eſtate at Earith: His Son William was created Earl of Northampton in the 16th Year of King James the Iſt. But his other Son Thomas had this Manor, who married Mary, Counteſs of Buckingham: But dying without Iſſue, this Eſtate went to his Nephew, Sir William Compton, a Younger Son of Spencer Earl of Northampton; and was by him ſold to Mr. Lodowick of London, in whoſe Poſſeſſion it was in Philpot's Time. But I hear 'tis now the Eſtate of Sir William Hedges.

2. Bedenwell was a Manor here which formerly was in the Poſſeſſion of a Family, called Boreford or Burford. Roſe de Burford died poſſeſs'd of it in the IIId Year of King Edward the IIId. And James de Burford obtained a Charter of Freewarren for his Lands here, in the 35th Year of the ſame Reign. When this Family went out here, which was before the End of King Richard the IId's Reign, it went into that of Draper: But this terminated in a Female Heir, that married William Killim; but on Condition that he ſhould change his Name to Draper, which he did. But after this, Bedenwell was in ſeveral Parcels ſold to Turner, and Gainsford of Surrey, (the latter of which alienated his Portion to Cholmley) and to ſeveral other Perſons: So that being thus broken into Fragments, it loſt its Reputation of a Manor.

3. Hering-hill, is a Place in Earith, which anciently was the Reſidence of a Family of the Name of Abell. Sir John Abell attendeded King Edward the Firſt, in his famous Siege of Carlaverock in Scotland; one John Abell, his Succeſſor here, was a Judge in the Eighth Year of Edward the IId. In Henry the IVth's Reign it was in the Poſſeſſion of one Edward Abell, who lies buried in this Church: And thus it deſcended to John Abell, who A. D. 1611, in Conjunction with his Father Samuel Abell, alienated this Eſtate to Mr. —— Draper of Oxfordſhire, who was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

As to the Abbey of Leſnes or Weſtwood in this Pariſh, you will find an Account of it in its proper Place.

The very firſt Commiſſions for Sewers that ever were granted, I think, were to drain and ſecure the Marſhes here, and at Greenwich, Woolwich, Plumbſtede, &c. on the South Bank of the River Thames: And theſe were iſſued out in the Eighth Year of King Edward the IId. But after this, there were ſeveral others in this and the following Reigns: And they were all ordered to proceed according to the Method and Cuſtoms of Romney Marſh. See Dugdale's Hiſt. of Inbanking, p. 59.

I was informed here that the Marſh-Land is ſo rich that it will bear Wheat 8 or 10 Years ſucceſſively, without any other Manuring, but plowing it twice: And that ſome of it hath been ſo very rich and ſtrong as not to need a Summer's Fallow in Forty Years: Though they ſay the State of it begins now to abate, and its former Fertility to decline. The ſame kind of rich Land is alſo at Crayford, and other adjacent Places in theſe Marſhes. But the Upland in this Pariſh is but poor. There is a great deal of Fruit Ground here. Two Fairs are yearly kept in this Pariſh; one on Holy Thurſday, and the other on Michaelmas-Day.

In Doomſday is this Note.

In the Textus Roffenſis f. 198. is a Grant to Rocheſter Church from one Henry de Port, dated 1108. of a Rent of 20 s. per Ann. out of his Land in Earith; and of all his Tithes of Halegale: And at f. 185. 'tis ſaid he became a Monk there; and that his Eſtate at Earith was a Manor. He made this Gift with his Wife's and his Son's Conſent, and confirmed it by laying his Sword upon the Altar.

EASTBRIDGE, Eſtbrigge, and Eſtbrugg, lies at the South Eaſt Part of the County of Kent in Romney Marſh, about Four Miles Northward from New Romney, in the Bailiwick and Lath of Shipway, Hundred of Worth, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices of the Corporation of Romney Marſh, whoſe Liberty claims over it. It is in the Deanery of Limpne, and Dioceſe of Canterbury: 'Tis a Rectory, valued in the King's Books at 5 l. 6 s. 8 d. But the Church is demoliſhed, and hath been ſo ever ſince 1530.

Philpot ſaith nothing of this Place.

But it appears from T. B's ancient Tenures, p. 12. that Hubert de Burgh, Earl of Kent, had a Grant in Fee from King Henry the IIId, of the Manor of Eaſtbridge in Kent to be held by the Service of a Sore Sparrow-Hawk at Lammas annually: Which Manor, 'tis likely, he ſettled on the Maiſon Dieu in Dover when he founded that Hoſpital: Becauſe it appears that the Maſter of that Houſe was in Poſſeſſion of it, in the 21ſt Year of Edward the Iſt. Placit. Coron. &c. Coram J. de Berwyck, &c.

EASTCHURCH, in the Iſland of Shepey, lies at the North Side of Kent, about Four Miles Eaſtward from Queenborough, in the Bailiwick of Milton, Hundred of the Iſle of Shepey, Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and upper one of Juſtices in that Lath. In the Deanery of Sittingburn, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Church is dedicated to All Saints: A Vicarage endowed with all Tithes, but not valued at all in the King's Books. The Church is a regular Building, with a Flat Roof leaded: The Inſide of the Roof wainſcoted; and 'tis very well pewed with Eaſt-Countrey Oak: 'Tis large, of three Iſles, ſupported by two Rows of Pillars. This Church was once appropriated to the Abbot and Convent of Dunis in Flanders, and confirmed to them by Pope Celeſtine, A. D. 1196. But at a general Congregation of the Monks of the Ciſtertian Order, the Abbot of Claravull conſidering the great Expence that the Abbot of Boxley was at in entertaining the Brethren of their Order, as they went to and returned from their general Congregation beyond Sea; and alſo that the Convent of Dunis, by reaſon of their great Diſtance from Eaſtchurch, made little or no Profit of it; they agreed, with the Conſent of the ſaid Convent of Dunis, to transfer, as far as in them lay, Eaſtchurch to the Abbey of Boxley: And this was confirmed by Walter Reynolds, then Archbiſhop of Canterbury, in the Year 1314; with the Confirmation alſo of Henry de Eaſtry, then Prior of Chriſt-Church: And a Licenſe of Mortmain, granted in the VIIth Year of Edward the IId, to the Abbey of Boxley, to appropriate the Church to take the Advowſon of it. And now was a perpetual Vicar endowed; and by Archbiſhop Peckham's Regiſter it appears, that the Abbey of Dunis had preſented a Clerk to the Vicarage: But in the next Century Pope Sixtus Quartus at the Petition of the Abbey of Boxley appropriated alſo this Vicarage to that Houſe; giving it leave to ſerve the Cure by one of their own Monks amoveable at Pleaſure, A. D. 1472. This Account is from Archbiſhop Warham's Regiſter, where the Inſtruments may be ſeen at large. And thus it continued till the general Diſſolution of the Religious Houſes, and then both Rectory and Vicarage were granted by King Henry the VIIIth, in his 38th Year, to Sir Thomas Cheyney, Knight, of Shurland in this Pariſh. His Son Henry Lord Cheney, in the 21ſt Year of Queen Elizabeth, alienated to Robert Liveſay, Eſq; the Site or Seat of the Parſonage, with all Houſes and Buildings thereon ſtanding, and one Field of Paſture adjoining thereunto and making with it together 18 Acres; with ſeveral other Fields round about there named: And by another Indenture he ſells the Tithes of this Pariſh, excepting ſome that did ariſe from ſome particular Lands to the ſame Purchaſer. From him it went to his Son Sir Miles Liveſay, who made the Parſonage-Houſe his Seat, and dwelt in it, till by his Attainder it eſcheated to the Crown. Whereupon King Charles IId, in his 13th Year, recited in his Letters-Patents, that this Rectory and Vicarage did once belong to the Abbey of Boxley; and coming to the Crown, was granted to Cheyney, and by him ſold to Liveſay; and coming to the Crown again as above, &c. He gives the Right of Preſentation to this Church to 12 Gentlemen of the County of Kent; viz. Sir Thomas Peyton, of Knowlton, Bar. Sir Edward Hales, of Tonſtale, Bar. Sir Henry Palmer, of Wingham, Bar. Sir John Tufton, of the Moat by Maidſtone; Sir Richard Hardreſs, of Hardreſs Court; Sir Anthony Auchor, of Biſhopsborn, Baronets. Sir William Mann of Canterbury; and Sir Francis Clerk, of Rocheſter, Knights. John Bois of Fredvile, George Newman of Rocheſter, Thomas Peke of Helles-Court near Sandwich, William Rook of Monkton, Eſquires. And to the Heirs and Aſſigns of the longeſt Liver of them, in Truſt, that they permit the Vicar to enjoy all Manner of Tithes and Profits, ariſing out of the ſaid Pariſh of Eaſtchurch. Of theſe Twelve Gentlemen, Sir Henry Palmer was the Survivor; who preſented the Reverend Mr. Richard Forſter, the preſent Vicar, from whom I had this Account. And the Advowſon and the Right of Preſentation is, upon Sir Henry's Death, deſcended to his Nephew and Heir the Worthy Sir Thomas Palmer of Wingham, Bar. Member of Parliament for the City of Rocheſter, my very good Friend, and a Kind Encourager of this Work.

In the Church is a fair Monument of Galfrid Liveſay, Eſq; and his Wife, A. D. 1622.

As to King's-Ferry, and other Things relating to the Iſland in General, ſee in S. under Shepey.

Places of Note in Eaſtchurch.

1. Shurland, or Shirlonde, was once the Seat of an Eminent Family of this Name, and formerly was a very large Houſe, built in the Form of a Quadrangle or Square, but now 'tis almoſt down: The Situation is fine and dry, and a good Proſpect to the Southward, over all the main Land. The laſt of the Name of Shurland that reſided here was Sir Robert de Shurland; who was made Knight Banneret by King Edward the Iſt, in his 28th Year, at the famous Siege of Carlaverock in Scotland; and the Year after he had a Charter of Freewarren granted him for his Manor here: He lies buried in Minſter Church in this Iſland, under an Arch in the South Wall, where his Effigies is alſo placed in Marble. Of this Sir Robert Shurland the People tell you very ſtrange Stories, and will take it amiſs if you don't believe them: As that, riding by the Church one Day, he ſaw a poor Man going to be buried, but the Prieſt refuſed to ſay the Office over him, becauſe they were not able to pay him his Fees; this enraged Shurland ſo, that he killed the covetous Prieſt; or as ſome ſay, threw him into the Grave, and ſo the People buried him Alive with the Man. But afterwards he feared the Conſequence of this raſh Act; and hearing the King was near the Iſland on Shipboard, he ſwam his Horſe into the Sea two Miles, to get his Pardon of the King; which having obtained, he ſwam back again as he went. When he came a-ſhore he met with an old Woman, (a Witch no doubt) who told him, That his Horſe which had now ſaved his Life, ſhould one time or other be his Death; on which the mad Knight killed his Horſe, and cut off his Head with his Sword. But they ſay, That as he was riding a hunting this Way, a Year after, he ſtumbled on the Skull of his former Horſe, and got a Fall off his preſent one, which ſo bruiſed him that he never recovered it, but died in a ſhort Time. This is a good round Story, and looks very much like an Invention of the Prieſts: But however 'tis certain there was the Figure of a Horſe's Head lying by his Effigies, on his Monument in Minſter Church: Which I believe the People have removed to that of Sir Thomas Cheyney, the Father of Henry Lord Cheyney: And ſome tell this Story of that Lord.

Philpot thinks the ground of this Fable was this; Sir Robert Shurland had a Grant from King Edward the Iſt, of Wreck of the Sea (a) on his Lands adjoining to the Water; the Extent of which Royalty is always eſteemed to be as far as a Man can reach into the Sea, and touch any Thing with the Point of his Lance.

This great Man left only one Daughter and Heir, who married Sir William de Cheyney of Patricksbourn in this County, Son and Heir to Sir Alex-

Alexander Cheyney, who was Knighted with Sir Robert Shurland, at Carlaverock above-mentioned. Sir William Cheyney's great Grandſon Sir John Cheyney, was Knight of the Garter; and ſeveral Times Knight of the Shire for Kent in King Henry the VIth's Time: And in the firſt Year of that King was ſent Ambaſſador Abroad to ſeveral Princes; he was alſo Speaker of the Houſe of Commons in the 2d Year of King Henry the IVth. Sir William Cheyney was a Judge, and afterward Lord Chief Juſtice of the King's-Bench, in the next Reign: And Sir Thomas Cheyney was Knight of the Garter, Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, Conſtable of Queenborough-Caſtle, and Privy-Counſellor to King Henry the VIIIth; his Son Sir Henry, was created Lord Cheyney of Tuddington; and exchanged this Manor of Shurland with Queen Elizabeth, by which Means it came to the Crown; and there it ſtaid till the ſecond Year of King James the Iſt, and then was granted to Philip Earl of Montgomery, and after Earl of Pembroke; and in Philpot's Time was the Eſtate of his ſecond Son Mr. James Herbet, in whoſe Family it ſtill continues; being now in the Poſſeſſion of James Herbert, Eſq; Knight of the Shire for Oxfordſhire.

Sir Thomas Cheyney rebuilt the Seat here, and brought moſt of the Materials to do it withal from Chilham-Caſtle.

2. Kingsborough is another Manor here, whoſe Name implies it to have formerly belonged to the Crown: And indeed it was the Place where the People went, not only to hold Courts for the Choice of Conſtables for the Iſland, but likewiſe to nominate and appoint Bailiffs or Wardens to take Cognizance or Charge of the Paſſage called King's-Ferry; which divides the Iſle of Shepey from the main Land of Kent. How long this Manor was in the Crown I don't find; but Queen Elizabeth granted it to Mr. Henry Cary; and he about the beginning of the next Reign, ſold it to Swaleman; and his Deſcendant was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

An Account of King's-Ferry you will find under Shepey Iſle.

EASTLING, Eaſeling, Eſtling, lies towards the Middle of Kent, about Four Miles and a half North Eaſtward from Lenham, in the Bailiwick and Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and upper one of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery of Oſpringe, and Dioceſe of Canterbury: And the Church is called St. Mary's; and is a very handſome one. A Rectory, valued at 16 l. 0 s. 0 d. in the King's Books.

The Liberty of St. Auſtin's claims here, becauſe 'tis in the Hundred of Feverſham, which belonged to that Abbey.

Places of Note here:

1. Northcourt was very anciently here the Seat of a Family of the Name of Eſtling: The laſt of which at this Place was Ralph de Eſtling, whoſe Daughter and Heir Alice de Eſtling marry'd Fulk de Peyferer, Cuſtos of the Fleet and Weſtminſter in London, in the Beginning of King Edward the Iſt. And he got a Charter of Freewarren for his Land here that came by his Wife, in the 32d Year of that Prince. But in King Edward the IId's Time, this Manor of Northcourt, with ſeveral others, as Denton and Plumford, was ſold to Roger, Lord Leybourn; whoſe Widow held them at her Death in the Firſt Year of King Edward the IIId. By her Daughter Juliana de Leybourn, this Place went ſucceſſively to her Two Huſbands, Haſtings Earl of Pembroke, and Clinton Earl of Huntington. But ſhe out-lived them both, and had no Children by either: And having no Heirs, her Eſtate eſcheated to the Crown. Where this Place ſtaid till King Richard the IId's Time, and then was granted to Sir Simon de Burleigh: And afterwards on his Attainder, the ſame Prince gave it to the Dean and Canons of St. Stephen in Weſtminſter. But I ſuppoſe on the Diſſolution, it went, with the other Manors of Denton and Plumford, firſt by Grant to Sir Thomas Cheyney, and afterwards by the Lord Cheyney's Sale of them, to Martin James, Eſq;, and in that Family they remained in Philpot's Time. This James was buried here in the Year 1592; and was a Prothonotary in Chancery.

2. Huntingfield is a Manor in this Pariſh, which had once Owners of that Surname, whoſe Principal Seat was at Weſt-Wickham, on the Borders of Surrey: But at length this great Family, who had Eſtates in Northfleet, Mepham, Luddeſdown, and Cobham, and many other Places in this County, went out in Two Daughters, who married Coupledick and Norwich. Walter de Huntingfield paid Aid for this Manor at the Marriage of Iſabella, Siſter to King Henry the IIId, as appears by the Book called Teſta de Nevil. Peter de Huntingfield and Juliana his Wife claimed Liberty of Freewarren for their Land here, in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt. Tower Records.

The laſt of this Name here was Sir John Huntingfield, who was ſummon'd to Parliament as a Baron in the 36th Year of King Edward the IIId. He ſold this Eſtate to Sir Simon de Burleigh; which, being with Northcourt alſo in this Pariſh, forfeited to the Crown by his Attainder, King Richard the IId gave them to the Dean and Canons of St. Stephen's, Weſtminſter. And after the general Diſſolution in King Henry the VIIIth's Time it was by that Prince granted to Alured Randolph and John Guldford, Eſqs; who not long after joined in a Sale to Sir Thomas Moile; and he in King Edward the VIth's Reign parted with it the ſame Way to John Wild, Eſq; and he to Martin James, Eſq; Prothonotary in Chancery, whoſe Grandſon Mr. Walter James was Poſſeſſor of it in Philpot's Time, as well as of Northcourt above-mentioned.

3. Diven Arnold is a Place here which of old was the Inheritance of a Family called Dive; and had the Addition of Arnold from one Arnoldus de Dive, an Owner of it. In this Family of Dive did it continue till the beginning of King Richard the IId, and then was ſold to Sharp of Nin-Place in Great Chart: And here it ſtaid for divers Deſcents; but about the End of King Henry the VIIth it went by Sale to Thurſtan of Challock; and not many Years after to John Wild, Eſq; who in the beginning of Queen Elizabeth ſold it to Gates; and he to Croyden: And thence it went in King James the Iſt's Reign to Bunce, which Family had the Poſſeſſion in Philpot's Time.

Eaſtling had the Grant of a Market Weekly, and a Fair to be held for two Days at St. Croſs-Tide; obtained by Fulk Peyforer in the 32d Year of King Edward the Iſt.

The Reverend Mr. Wickins, the preſent Incumbent, hath here a very fine and noble Plantation of Ever-Greens, which are cut into great Varieties of Figures and Forms; with very curious Walks and Grotto's; which are all the Reſult of his own Induſtry and Care.

EASTRY, Eſtrey; from Eaſter-ea; that is, the Eaſt-Water or River; to diſtinguiſh it from Weſter-ea, Weſt-Rye, or Rye in Suſſex, which lies on the Weſt-water at the other End of this County. This Place lies at the Eaſt part of Kent, about Two Miles South-Weſtward from Sandwich, in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Eaſtry, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath; in the Deanery of Sandwich, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; the Church is called St. Mary's; which about 530 Years ago was appropriated to the Almnery of the the Priory of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury, by Richard Archbiſhop of that Place; but was taken away again by his Succeſſor Baldwin; and afterwards, A. D. 1365, reſtored again by Archbiſhop Iſlip. It is a Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 17 l. 11 s. 9 d.

The Liberty of the Dean of Canterbury claims over the Manor of Eaſtry; which was given to that Church by King Etheldred, or as ſome write him, Egelred, Father to Edmond Ironſide, in the Year 979. And this was done, (according to the way of Commutation then in Faſhion, and which was a very profitable one to the Church) to make a farther Atonement for the Murder of Ethelbert and Etheldred, Brethren, or as ſome ſay, Kinſmen of Egbert King of Kent. This Prince, the Son of Ercombert, had then his Palace in this Place, A. D. 654; and theſe Two young Noblemen, as Matt. Weſtminſter and Malmsbury tell the Story, were Educated with him; and were ſo eminent for Virtue, Courteſy, and Feats of Arms, that they contracted the Envy and Hatred of many Perſons about the King, whoſe Characters were very different from theirs; among theſe there was one Thunnor, who accuſed them to the King of many Crimes, and of even Deſigns againſt his Perſon; and at laſt, tho' with ſome difficulty, prevailed upon Egbert to connive at his making them away, which he did privately, and buried their Bodies in the King's Hall, under the Cloth of State. But they tell you, that ſoon after there appeared in the Houſe a Pillar of ſhining Light; which frighted the Servants ſo, that they waked the King to ſee it. As ſoon as he did ſo, being ſtruck in Conſcience for what he had given Thunnor leave to do, he ſends for him immediately, and asked him what was become of the young Princes; and on Thunnor's telling him the Truth, he ſent for Deodatus, then Archbiſhop of Canterbury; and deſired his Direction how he might beſt expiate the Guilt of ſuch a Crime. The good Archbiſhop, underſtanding well the Superſtitious Inclination of the People of that Age, and hoping to bring a Benefit to his Church by the Worſhip of their Bodies, perſuades Egbert to bury them honourably in Canterbury Church: But they tell us, that when the King had agreed to this, and the Herſe was got ready to carry them to Canterbury, they could not by any means make the refractory Engine ſtir one Step towards the Priory of Chriſt-Church: Then they tried to drive the Herſe towards the Abbey of St. Auſtins, but it would not move that way neither: Being thus at a ſtand, they thought at laſt of driving it to the Monaſtry of Watrine; and that happened to hit right, for away it went thither as eaſily as could be deſired; and there the King performed their Obſequies with great Solemnity and Devotion. He gave the Place where this Light appeared to his Siſter Ermenburga; who not long before had forſook her Husband's Bed, to turn Nun; and ſhe Erected a Monaſtery to the Name and Honour of theſe two Brethren, where ſhe veiled her ſelf and Seventeen other Women. Malmesbury ſaith alſo, that King Egbert gave all the Iſland of Thanet to his Mother to appeaſe her, for the Murder of theſe her Two Sons. This is a good round Relation; but however, they carry it a little further; for it is an ancient Tradition, that the Altar-Tomb which was placed at the Eaſt End of a little Chapel belonging to Eaſtry-Court; was the Sepulchre where the Relicks of theſe Noblemen were depoſited; and that there was conſtantly a Light hovering over it, like that in the Hall above-mentioned. But how they got theſe Relicks from the Monaſtery of Watrine; where they were ſo miraculouſly buried; and indeed, where that Religious Houſe of Watrine it ſelf was, I cannot find.

In the Saxon Catalogue of the Saints buried in England (ſee Dr. Hicks Diſſert. Epiſtolaris, p. 116.) it is ſaid, that King Egbert frighted, as above, with the Appearance of this Light, ſent to Erminburga, otherwiſe called Domneva, his Siſter, and married to Merwald Son of King Penda, to come into Kent, and to receive the Weregild for the Murder of her Brethren; which here is ſaid to be Eighty Carucats of Land; but Cupgrave ſaith 'twas Forty, and the Monaſticon Forty Eight Plow-Lands. This Land was appointed in the Iſle of Thanet; and there Domneva founded a Monaſtery, where Prayers ſhould be ſaid for the Souls of her Brethren; and to this Houſe King Egbert was yet a further Benefactor.

And this ſeems a better Account of the Erection of this Houſe, than that whimſical one of the Courſe of her Tame Deers compaſſing in ſo much Land (which however you will find in the Chapter of Religious Houſes.) And 'tis probable that the Weregild was a fix'd and determinate Price even then, as it appears afterwards to have been by the Text. Roff. f. 93, 94. See alſo the Laws of King Ethelſtune and King Edmund, in Wheelock's Edit. p. 55. And Somner's Gloſſary.

This Manor of Eaſtry, in Edward the Confeſſor's Time, and in King William the Iſt, was held by the Monks of Chriſt-Church as Seven Plow-Lands; and 'tis rated in Domeſday at 38 l. 10 s. 3 d.

The Church here is a large and fair Building; and the Foundation ſeems very Ancient; and by that, and by the Deſcent down into it, I judge it might have been erected before the Time of the Normans.

In the Chancel are 18 Seats or Stalls, which ſhews that here was once ſome College or Fraternity, the Memory of which is now loſt: And the like I have met with in many Churches in this County. So that the Number of Religious Societies, Chantries, &c. muſt have been far greater than any of our Printed Accounts make them to be.

In this Church are Memorials of the Neviſons, one of which, who was buried 1590, was Provoſt-Maſter and Scout-Marſhal of Eaſt Kent, and Captain of the Light Horſe of the Lath of St. Auſtin's; as alſo of the Paramours and Fletchers.

Places of Note here:

1. Strickling; which is a Manor that always had the ſame Owners with Knowlton.

Thomas Perot held it in the 4th Year of King Edward the IIId, as appears by Rot. Eſc. N. 31, by whoſe Daughter and Heir it went to Langley, and thence by another Heir-general to Peyton. But in the Time of King Henry the VIIIth, Philpot ſaith he found that this Manor was in the Poſſeſſion of Sir Edward Ringley, Knt. Marſhal of Calais, and Bailiff of Sandwich both by Land and Water, and that he lived here; he enjoyed it in Right of his Wife, whoſe Name was Elizabeth, Widow of Edward Langley, Eſq;

2. Heronden; This was anciently the Seat of a Family of this Name, one of which was buried in the Chancel, and his Monument preſerved in Glover's Time. In King Richard the IId's Reign this Family went out in a Female Heir, who carried this Manor in Marriage to Boteler of Boteler's Fleet in Aſh, and in that Name it continued in Philpot's Time: So that we have an account of but two Families that ever were Owners of Heronden.

3. Lyden in the Hundred of Cornilo, was anciently a part of Eaſtry: And in the way from Sandwich to Dover-Caſtle along the Coaſt, is a ſmall Stone Building called Lyd-Court; which A. D. 1630, was in the Poſſeſſion of the Lord Strangford.

The

The Marſhes hereabouts lying in Eaſtry, Word, &c. are alſo called Lyden Marſhes, or Lyden Valley.

The Ancient Water called Geſtling, and mentioned in many of our Kentiſh Writers, ſeems to have been ſomewhere near Eaſtrey, and probably is that which about Seventy Years ago was called South-ſtream; as I find by the Dering Manuſcript.

It appears from the Donations to the Church of Canterbury, mentioned by Somner in his Append. N. xxxvi. That A. D. 811. Wilfred, Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury, made an Exchange with the Priory of Chriſt-Church, of the Town of Eaſtry, for Burne, or Bourne.

EASTWELL lies towards the middle of Kent, towards the South-Eaſt part of it, by a little Brook which runs into the greater Stoure, about Two Miles to the South-Weſtward from Wye; in the Bailiwick of Chart and Longbridge, Hundred of Wye, Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in the Lath of Shipway. 'Tis in the Deanery of Charing, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; and the Church is dedicated to the Bleſſed Virgin; it is ſmall, but hath a good old Tower. In the South Chancel is a Noble Monument of the Finches Family, with Two Figures lying in White Marble: The Dome of this Monument is ſupported by Eight Pillars of black Marble, and round the Tomb are the Names of Twelve of this Noble Family buried here, Eight Men, and Four Women. There is alſo another Tomb of an Earl of Winchelſey, and on it I ſaw the Arms of Kemp and Moyle. Another of Sir Henry Finch Recorder of London, and one of his Lady, whoſe Name was Bell. The Pariſh is a Vicarage, and rated in the King's Books at 9*l.* 16*s.* 8*d.* The Liberty of Wye claims here.

The Manor of Eaſtwell: This Place in the 52d Year of King Henry the IIId, was in the Poſſeſſion of a Family which took its Name from hence; for then Matilda de Eaſtwell held it at her Deceaſe, as appears by Rot. Eſc. N. 32. But in the 7th Year of King Edward the Iſt, the Abbot of St. Albans claim'd all manner of Liberties and Free-Warren within this Manor, as due to that Houſe time out of mind; and if ſo, then Matilda de Eaſtwell might be but a Tenant. Likewiſe in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, a Quo Warranto was brought againſt the Maſter of the Knights Templers, to ſhew what Right he had to claim any Liberties within this Manor, and the Jury gave it againſt him, as appears by the Tower Records. So that perhaps the Claim of the Abbot of St. Albans, was as groundleſs as his; for Philpot ſaith, that Bertram de Criol (perhaps it was Nicholas, and then written Criel) held it in Poſſeſſion but Two Years after this, viz. in the 23d Year of Edward the 3d. But his Son John Criel dying without Iſſue, by the Marriage of his Siſter in the beginning of King Edward the IIId, it was become the Eſtate of Richard de Rokeſley, Seneſchal and Governor of Ponthieu and Monſtruel: This Gentleman alſo left only Two Daughters, by one of which, Agnes, this Eſtate went in Marriage to Thomas de Poynings, whoſe Deſcendant, Richard Lord Poynings, dying in the 11th Year of King Richard the IId, left an only Daughter, Eleanor, who carried it in Marriage to Henry Percy Earl of Northumberland, and he, in her Right, became Lord Poynings; and in this Family it continued till the 23d Year of King Henry the VIIIth; and then Henry Percy, Earl of Northumberland, ſold it to Sir Tho. Cheyney, Will. Walſingham, and Will. Fitz Williams; who joined in a Sale of it to Sir Chriſtopher Hales, Attorney-General to that King; who dying in the 33d Year of King Henry the VIIIth, left it to his Son Sir James Hales; and he not long after ſold it to Sir Tho. Moyle, Chancellor of the Court of Augmentations; and he it was that built the fine Houſe upon it: By his Daughter and Co-heir (Katherine) it went in Marriage to Sir Thomas Finch; who after many brave Actions performed at New Haven in France, was Shipwracked and loſt as he was returning Home to England.

His Son, Sir Moyle Finch, was his Heir, who very much enlarged and beautified Eaſtwell Houſe; and left it in Dower to his Widow Eliz. Finch, Daughter and Heir to Sir Thomas Heneage: This Lady was firſt created Viſcounteſs of Maidſtone by King James the Iſt; and after that, Counteſs of Winchelſey by King Charles the Iſt; and from her both thoſe Honours, and the Eſtate and Seat at Eaſtwell, deſcended to her Son Thomas Earl of Winchelſey; and his Son Heneage Finch, Earl of Winchelſey, and Viſcount Maidſtone, was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

This Family of Finch, ſaith Philpot, were deſcended from Henry Fitz Herbert, who was Chamberlain to King Henry the Iſt. But the alteration of the Name from Herbert to Finch, he ſaith was about the 10th Year of King Edward the Iſt, at which time Herbert Fitz Herbert purchaſing the Manor of Finches in Lydd in this County, and being entire Lord of it, as he was not at Netherfield in Suſſex, he took his Sirname from thence.

The Seat of this Family, in this Pariſh of Eaſtwell, (tho' the Building be not extraordinary) hath one of the fineſt Situations I ever ſaw; being placed in a very Noble Park, whoſe Soil is clean and good, and the Ground firm and hard all over it; ſome part of it is ſtill finely wooded. The Star Walks which proceed Eight ſeveral ways from a large Octagon placed in the middle of them, are all planted with fine Tall Trees, which make a very magnificent and beautiful Appearance. This Park ſtands ſo high, that it muſt needs be a very healthful, as it is a very pleaſant Situation; and the Proſpect from it is ſo very extraordinary, that I know nothing which excels it; for within the Compaſs of the Park you may ſee one way down the River Medway to Sheerneſs, and the Buoy of the Nore, towards the German Ocean; and the other way, over Romney Marſh, into the Britiſh Channel towards France; beſides a very beautiful and extenſive Land-Proſpect almoſt every way.

EATON-BRIDGE, ſo Kilburn writes it; but it ſhould certainly be Edenbridge, and perhaps is the place called Eadintuna, in the Liſt of the Pariſhes within the Dioceſe of Rocheſter, and extant in the Textus Roffenſis: Tho' there is another Pariſh there mentioned, which bids fair to be this Place, viz. Eadelinesbregge, and I think was its ancient Name, as appears by the Tower Records. The River it ſtands upon, the good old Map of Kent calls the Eden, which joins the Mdeway about Chidingſtone; and ſeems to be ſo named, from running thro' the watry Vale, Ea-den.

It lies at the South-Weſt ſide of Kent, on the River Eden, (which Kilburn here calls the Medway) adjoining to Surrey, about Four Miles Southward from Weſtram, in the Balliwick of Sutton-Bromley, Lath of Sutton-at-Hone, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and lower one of Juſtices in that Lath. Part of it is in the Hundred of Weſtram and Edenbridge, and the reſt in the Hundred of Somerden. 'Tis in the Deanery of Malling, and Dioceſe of Rocheſter; and the Church which ſtands in the Hundred of Weſtram and Edenbridge, is dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul. 'Tis a large handſome Building, with a Spire Steeple; in it are Remains of a Rood-Loft, (i. e) a Gallery, where ſtood the Image of Chriſt upon the Croſs, and to which the Prieſts had Stairs to go up on the back Part of it; as alſo of good Painted Glaſs; Glaſs; and Memorials of the Interment of Thomas Martyn, Eſq; 1458. A fair Monument of Will. Selyard, of Pawlins in Braſted, 1585, and of ſeveral others of that Name. 'Tis a Chapel to Weſtram, and ſo not rated in the King's Books.

Mr. Robert Holmden of this Pariſh, Gent. gave 3 l. per Ann. to the uſe of the Poor.

A Fair is here kept annually on April 25, being St. Mark's Day.

Places of Note here:

1. The Manor of Edenbridge; 2. and another now and formerly called Standgrave; which latter gave Name to an ancient Family of the Name of Stangrave. John de Stangrave, ſaith Philpot, had a Charter of Free-Warren for this Manor, in the 26th Year of King Edward the Iſt; his Son and Heir, Sir Robert de Stangrave, was with that King at the Siege of Carlaverock in Scotland, and was then Knighted in the Field; and he died ſeized of this Eſtate in the 12th Year of King Edward the IIId. After this Family was extinct, which ſeems to have gone out in this laſt named Gentleman, John de Dynely was got into Poſſeſſion of this Place, and had a Confirmation of the Charter of Free-Warren, in the 14th Year of King Edward the IIId; and ſoon after ſold his Intereſt here to Hugh de Audley, Earl of Glouceſter, Lord of the Caſtle and Manor of Tunbridge; and his only Daughter and Heir, the Lady Margaret Audley, carried both Stangrave and Edenbridge to her Husband Ralph Stafford, Earl of Stafford, who died poſſeſſed of them in the 46th Year of King Edward the IIId; and in this Family they ſtaid till the 12th Year of King Henry the VIIIth; but then Edward Stafford, Duke of Buckingham, being attainted and beheaded for High-Treaſon, they eſcheated to the Crown; and then that Prince granted theſe two Manors, with Weſtram alſo, to Sir John Greſham, Knight, and from him they deſcended to Sir Marmaduke Greſham, the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time. But Stangrave is at preſent in the Poſſeſſion of one Mr. Richard Still.

In the 7th Year of King Edward the Iſt, Robert de Camville had ſome Eſtate here, as appears by the Tower-Records.

3. Sharnden is a Manor here, which was once part of the Eſtate of the Lords Cobham of Sterburgh Caſtle in Surrey, and ſo continued till King Henry the IVth's Reign; and then Thomas Lord Cobham dying without Iſſue-Male, by the Marriage of Anne, his Daughter, it went to Edward Lord Borough of Gainsborough; and here it ſtaid till the Reign of King Charles the Iſt, and then the Three Daughters of Thomas Lord Borough, who married Brook, Knevet, and Drury, to pay Debts, and to anſwer other Uſes, all joined in a Sale of it to Sir Tho. Richardſon, Lord Chief Juſtice of the King's Bench; and his Grandſon, Thomas Lord Richardſon, Baron of Cromarty, was the Poſſeſſor of it in Philpot's Time.

4. Marſh-Green, is a ſmall Manor here, which hath had the ſame Owners with the Manor of Cowdham in the Pariſh of that Name; and is uſually called the Manor of Marſh-Green, within the Manor of Cowdham.

5. Browns is a ſmall Manor here omitted by Philpot; and the Houſe is indeed long ſince demoliſhed; but the Moat round it, and the Site, is ſtill viſible. Formerly it was the Seat of a Family of the Name of Brown; for Hamon de Brown died poſſeſſed of it in the IVth Year of King Edward the IIId; but he having no Iſſue, bequeathed it, and much other Land hereabouts, to his Kinſman Thomas Brown; but he alſo, about the End of that King's Reign, died Childleſs, and ſo left it to his Siſter Agnes, then Wife of Laurence de Bedenſtede: This Gentleman ſoon after ſold it to his Wives Kinſman Henry at Browns; in whoſe Family it continued till towards the End of King Henry the VIIIth; and then Urſula, Daughter and Heir of Hamon Brown, carried it in Marriage to Mr. John-At-Lee of Effingham, and in that Name it continued till about the middle of King Charles the IId's Time; and then John Lee ſold it to Mr. James Beecher, whoſe Son of the ſame Name is the preſent Poſſeſſor.

6. Delaware is a Seat and Manor of great Antiquity, tho' wrongly placed by Philpot in this Pariſh, being really in that of Braſted: But the Knowledge of that not coming to my Hands till after the Account of Braſted was Printed off, I think it better to mention it here, than to omit it quite. Some of the Name of Delaware were in Poſſeſſion of this Place in King Henry the IId's Reign. Of this Family here, the laſt was Robert Delaware, who dying without Male-Iſſue about the End of King Edward the IIId, Dionyſia Delaware, his Daughter, Siſter, &c. carried this Manor in Marriage to William Paulin; in whoſe Family it continued till King Henry the VIth's Reign; and then by a Daughter of another William Paulin, it went in Marriage to John Selyard of Selyard in Hever; and in Philpot's Time it continued in the Poſſeſſion of Mr. Selyard of Gabriels in this Pariſh; and who, he ſaith, are deſcended from Ralph de Selyard, in King Stephen's Reign. Sir Tho. Selyard, Bart. a Deſcendant of this Family, about Sixteen Years ago Sold it to Henry Streatfield of Chiddingſtone, Eſq; and his worthy Son of the ſame Name is the preſent Poſſeſſor.

EBENET, Ebbeney, Ebbene, lies at the South Part of Kent by the River Rother, about Three Miles South Eaſtward from Tenderden: Part of it is in the Bailiwick and Lath of Shipway, Iſland and Hundred of Oxney, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath: In this Part ſtands the Church, which is called St. Mary's; and the Liberty of the Dean of Canterbury claims over it: But the remaining Part is in the Borough of Reading, Bailiwick of the Seven Hundreds, Hundred of Tenterden, Lath of Scray, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices of the Corporation of Tenterden, and within the Liberties thereof, and of the Cinque Ports.

The Pariſh is in the Dioceſe of Canterbury, and Deanery of Limpne.

Ebeney was given to Chriſt-Church in Canterbury, A. D. 832. by King Ethelwolf, at the Inſtance of Ceolnoth Archbiſhop of Canterbury. Kilburn ſaith here was anciently a Priory; and that the Church was formerly much larger than it is now: But that about 150 Years ſince, the old Church was burnt by Lightning, and this little one built out of its Ruins, and upon Part of its Foundation. Now 'tis in the Nature of a Chapel, and not rated in the King's Books.

Places of Note here:

1. Ebeney Manor, after the Suppreſſion, was granted to Sir Walter Henly, Serjeant at Law, who dying without Male-Iſſue, his Three Daughters divided his Eſtate among them: Elizabeth the Eldeſt, married William Waller, Eſq; the Second, Hellen, had three Husbands, firſt Thomas Colepeper of Bedgbury, Eſq; then Sir George Somerſet, and then Thomas Vane, Eſq; of Burſton; Anne, the third Daughter, married Richard Covert of Slangham; and carried Ebeney to him; in whoſe Family and Name it continued in Philpot's Time.

2. Woodrove is a Place here which anciently had Owners of the Name of Mocking; who had likewiſe a good Eſtate in Milton, Stockbury, Hartlip, and Shepey: And by Records it appears that this Family continued here from King Edward the the Iſt's Time to King Henry the IVth's; and then it was ſold to the Guldefords; where it ſtaid till Joan Daughter of Sir Edward Guldeford, carried it to John Dudley, Duke of Northumberland; who gave this Manor, with other Lands at Halden, in Dower with his Daughter Mary, who was married to Sir Henry Sydney, Lord Deputy of Ireland, and Knight of the Garter, a Perſon very eminent for his Services in that Kingdom; and from him it came down to his Grandſon, Robert Earl of Leiceſter, who ſold it to Sir Edward Henden, one of the Barons of Exchequer: And he at his Deceaſe left it to his Nephew Sir John Henden of Biddenden; who conveyed it by Sale to Mr. John Auſtin of Tenterden; and on his Death it went to Mr. Robert Auſtin of Halls-Place in Bexley, who was in Poſſeſſion in Philpot's Time.

3. Brockot is another Manor in Ebeney, which anciently had Owners of that Name: But as long ago as King Henry the IVth, and till the 30th Year of King Henry the VIIIth, it was the Inheritance of the Eminent Family of the Guldfords; but was then alienated by John Guldford, Eſq; to Sir John Hales Baron of the Exchequer; and from him deſcended to Sir Edward Hales of Tunſtall, Baronet; in whoſe Poſſeſſion it was in Philpot's Time.

EGERTON lies about the middle of Kent by the River Stoure, about three Miles South Eaſtward from Lenebam, in the Bailiwick of Chart and Longbridge, Hundred of Calehill, Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in the Lath of Shipway: In the Deanery of Charing, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Church is called St. Mary's. 'Tis a Chapel annexed to Charing, and ſo rated with that in the King's Books. The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims here.

The Church is of Two Iſles, and fair, and of very good Stone; a fair Tower Steeple, which may be ſeen afar off.

Places of Note here:

1. Barmeling in this Pariſh was anciently the Seat of a Family of that Name, Robert de Barmeling (in ſome old Deeds without Date called Sir Robert) dying poſſeſs'd of it in the 53d Year of King Henry the IIId, as did another of that Name in the 31ſt Year of King Edward the IIId. And in this Family hath it continued till Philpot's Time, by an uninterrupted Succeſſion; which can be ſaid of but few other Places.

2. Bruſcombe is another Place in Egerton, which formerly was Part of the Eſtate of the Chitcrofts; a Name of great Antiquity both here and at Lamberhurſt in this County. Agnes Wife of Richard Chitcroft died poſſeſs'd of this Place in the 18th Year of King Edward the IId, as appears by Rot. Eſc. N. 198. After this Family was extinct it came into that of Bellemont or Beaumont; and after that, it went into the Poſſeſſion of the Barons; and about the End of King Henry the VIth it went into the Propriety of the Wottons of Boughton Malherbe; in which Family, and in the Deſcendants of Thomas Lord Wotton of Marley, it continued in Philpot's Time.

There is a petrifying Spring here, or rather a Well, in a Field below Mr. Huſſey's Houſe in the Way to Bocton Malherbe.

The Church of St. Paul in London, which is Patron, gave an Augmentation to the Living of Egerton of Ten Pounds per Ann. and the Pariſh bought alſo a Piece of Land in Stalesfield, and applied it to the ſame Uſe; and the Berlings gave a Houſe worth about 3 l. per Ann. All which together amount to about 18 l. per Ann. as the Curate himſelf informed me. Some Remains of good painted Glaſs in the Church Windows.

The Situation of this Pariſh is all on Stoney Ground, with Aſcents and Deſcents, and the Ways Bad.

EIGHTHAM. See IGHTHAM.

ELEHAM, Elham, Ælham, and anciently Hellham, from its Situation among the Hills, lies towards the South Eaſt Part of the County, by the leſſer River Stoure, about Five Miles and a half Northward from Hythe, in the Bailiwick of Stouting, Hundred of Loningborough, Lath of Shipway, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath: In the Deanery of Eleham, and Dioceſe of Canterbury: The Church is dedicated to the Bleſſed Virgin; which is a fair large Building of three Iſles; and the Steeple is covered with Lead: But there are no Monuments or Memorials in it, except a Stone over John, Son of the famous Mr. William Somner; and another over one Captain Symons. 'Tis a Vicarage; and valued in the King's Books at 20 l. 0 s. 0 d. per Ann. The Liberty of Eleham claims here. It hath a Market on Mondays, and Four Annual Fairs, viz. On the Monday before Eaſter, on Eaſter-Monday, on Whitſun-Monday, and on October the 9th, St. Dionyſius's Day.

Places of Note here:

1. The Manor of Eleham was anciently of great Eminence, and had the Title of an Honour; and Philpot ſpeaks of magnificent Structures, which were here formerly, but are now demoliſhed, but the Ruins of which were remaining: And he ſaith, that it appears by Domeſday, that the Earl of Ewe a Norman, and nearly related to King William the Iſt, was then the Poſſeſſor of it; and left the Title of an Honour to it, as appears by the Book of Aid at making the Black Prince Knight: Where the Manor of Mount, adjacent to Eleham, is ſaid to be held of the Honour of Earl Ewe by Knights Service. Gilbert Earl of Ewe paid Aid for this Manor or Honour, in the 20th Year of King Henry the IIId, at the Marriage of the King's Siſter. From this Gilbert Earl of Ewe, it went ſome how into the Poſſeſſion of Prince Edward, Eldeſt Son to King Henry the IIId, who obtained the Market for it above-mentioned, and one of the Fairs by Charter, in the 35th Year of King Henry the IIId. But about Six Years after he ſold it to Boniface of Savoy, Archbiſhop of Canterbury; and he parted with it the ſame Way to Roger de Leybourn, a great Friend and Aſſociate of Simon de Montfort, in his Quarrel againſt King Henry the IIId, for his retaining ſo many Strangers about him. After the Battel of Eveſham, where Simon, Earl of Leiceſter's Forces were routed, and himſelf ſlain; Roger was pardoned by the Pacification of Kenelworth, in the 50th Year of Henry the IIId; but died not long after, leaving this Manor with much other Lands to his Son Henry de Leybourn, who died ſeized of it in the 28th Year of King Edward the Iſt. This is Philpot's Account, but it appears by the Records, that one William de Leybourn was poſſeſs'd of it in the 7th Year of King Edward the Iſt. From him it deſcended to his Son Sir Roger Leybourn; who left no Iſſue-Male; but his famous Daughter Juliana de Leybourn was his Heir: She was twice married, firſt to John de Haſtings, a Kinſman of, but not Son to Lawrence de Haſtings, Earl of Pembroke; and after to William de Clinton, Earl of Huntington, but had Iſſue by neither; and when ſhe died had no Relations that could claim her Eſtate as Heirs at Law; and therefore it eſcheated to the Crown in the 43d Year of King Edward the IIId. And was by that great Prince granted to Sir Simon de Burley, Knight of the Garter, and Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports; but he being executed for Treaſon, in the 10th Year of King Richard the IId, this Eſtate came to the Crown again; and was by that King, in the 12th Year of his Reign, ſettled upon the Church of St. Stephen's in Weſtminſter; in the Poſſeſſion of the Canons of which it continued till the general Suppreſſion of the Monaſteries, and then coming to the Crown again, it ſtaid there all King Henry the VIIIth's Reign; but King Edward the VIth granted it in Leaſe for 80 Years to Sir Edward Wotton, one of his Privy Council; and his Son Thomas Wotton, Eſq; ſold it to Alexander Hamon, Eſq; who left only Two Daughters; the Eldeſt of which, Mary, was married to Sir Edward Bois of Fredvile; and the other, Katherine, to whoſe Share this Manor fell, to Sir Robert Lewknor. But the Reverſion in Fee was in the beginning of King Charles the Iſt's Reign, purchaſed of the Crown by Sir Charles Herbert, Maſter of the Revels; and he not long after ſold all his Property in this Eſtate, to one Mr. Alſt a Dutch Merchant in London.

2. The whole Tithes of the Villa de Eleham in omnibus rebus ſcilicet de Bleio de Paſnagio & de molendinis, & de pecudibus de Lanâ & de Caſeis, (theſe are the Words of the Grant) were given to the Church of Rocheſter by William de Albinneio Butler to King William the IId. together with one Plowland in Ach-ſtede, and a Wood called Ac-holt, or Oakenwood, both lying in Eleham; and half the Tithes of Biſewitune of all Kinds. See Text. Roffenſis f. 188. And this Grant was confirmed afterward by another from King Henry the Iſt, in which all the Particulars are mentioned. And afterwards in the ſame Manuſcript 'tis ſaid, that Roger de Eleham became a Monk in Rocheſter Priory, and gave to the Church the half of all his Tithes in this Pariſh. And it appears by the Cuſtumale Roffenſe, f. 43. that the Priory of Rocheſter was in Poſſeſſion of Land here in King Edward the IIId's Reign; becauſe there is an Account given of the Cuſtomary Services and Rents due from their Tenants; and it ſaith, that the Monks had here in Demeſne one Plow-Land; and their Tenants, for ſo I render the word Ruſtici, two and one half.

3. Shottlefield is a Place in Eleham, which in the Reign of King Edward the IId, was in the Poſſeſſion of a Family of the Name of le Grubbe, who had alſo an Eſtate at Yalding and at Nonnington in the County. For in the 3d Year of Edward the IId. Henry Peres, in another old Deed ſtiled Pers, or de Petris, conveys Land here to Thomas le Grubbe de Shottlefield: But John Grubbe, this Man's Deſcendant, in the 2d Year of King Richard the IIId, ſold it to Thomas Brockman of Liming; whoſe Grandſon, Henry Brockman, in the 1ſt Year of Queen Mary alienated it to George Fogg of Brabourn, Eſq; and he, about the beginning of Queen Elizabeth ſold it to Bing: And he in King James the Iſt's Time, to Mr. John Maſters of Sandwich: From whom it went to Sir Edward Maſters of Canterbury; and thence by his Will to Dr. Maſters, his ſecond Son, LL.D. The Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

4. Mount, 5. South Blabden, 6. Jaques Court, are Three Manors, which in the 20th Year of King William the Iſt, as appears by Domeſ-day, were held by Ankettellus de Poſſe; from which Name they went by Sale, together with Acriſe, to Coſington: And in the 7th Year of King Edward the IIId, Stephen de Coſington or Coſenton had a Charter of Freewarren for theſe Manors. His Father William de Coſenton was Sheriff of Kent in the 35th Year of King Edward the Iſt. In this Ancient Family this Eſtate continued till about the End of King Henry the VIIIth; and then Sir John Coſenton left only Three Daughters, who married Duke, Wood, and Hamon. South Blabden and Jaques Court went on the Diviſion to Wood, and Mount to Hamon.

Wood's Heir alienated the two firſt to Sir John Wilde of Canterbury, in whoſe Son Colonel Dudley Wilde's Widow's Poſſeſſion they were in Philpot's Time. Hamon's Heir left only Two Daughters; one of which (Katherine) carried Mount to Sir Robert Lewknor: And his Son, Mr. Hamon Lewknor's Widow, Daughter to Dr. Henry Kingſley, Archdeacon of Canterbury, was in Poſſeſſion of it in Philpot's Time.

7. Canterwood is another Manor here, which as Philpot found by an old Manuſcript, did once belong to Thomas de Garwinton of Welle in Littlebourn, in the Reigns of King Edward the IId and IIId, whoſe Great Grandſon, William Garwinton, dying without Iſſue, Joan his Kinſwoman was his Heir, and married Richard Haut, Eſq; in the 9th Year of King Henry the IVth's Reign, whoſe Son Richard leaving only a Daughter (Margery) ſhe carried the Eſtate to her Husband William Iſaack: From thence it ſeems to have been ſold to Hales, who held it till about the End of Queen Elizabeth, and then it went to Manwood; who in a few Years ſent it the ſame way to Lewknor (Sir Robert): And thence it went with Mount above-mentioned, to his Son, Mr. Hamon Lewknor, whoſe Widow had it in Poſſeſſion.

8. Bowick is a Place in this Pariſh which anciently belonged to a Family called Lad; who wrote themſelves de Lad (in Chart by Sutton) where an old Farm is ſtill called Lads. About the beginning of King Henry the VIIth's Reign it came by Sale into the Poſſeſſion of the Netherſolls; but ſtaid there but a few Years before it was alienated to Aucher; and thence about the End of King Henry the VIIIth, it went the ſame Way to Wroth: And in King Charles the Iſt's Reign it was ſold thence to Elgar: In which Name it continued in Philpot's Time.

9. Oxroad is another Manor in this Pariſh, which once had Owners of that Name: But in King Henry the IVth's Reign it was in the Poſſeſſion of the Hinckleys: And by Iſabel, a Daughter of Thomas Hinckley, about the beginning of King Henry the VIIIth, it went in Marriage to John Bene; in whoſe Family it continued till about the End of King Charles the Iſt: And then it was ſold to Mr. Daniel Shetterden of Eltham; deſcended from the Shetterdens of Shetterden in great Chart, in whoſe Poſſeſſion it was in Philpot's Time.

10. Ladwood, in old Deeds written Ladswood (and probably did once belong to the Lads of Bowick above mentioned) is a Place in Eleham, which in King Henry the IIId's Reign belonged to a Family of the Name of Ralph or Rolfe, who built a Seat here; and it did continue in this Name down to Philpot's Time; who conjectures that this Family might be derived from that Rolph the Saxon, who added much to the Buildings of Rocheſter Caſtle, as Lambard ſaith: And Mr. Thinne judges this Name of Rolfe to come from Rodolphus.

11. Claverty is a Place here, which once belonged to the Knights Hoſpitallers; being a Commandery or Preceptory to the Seminary of the Order planted at Ewell. On the Diſſolution of which Order, it came to the Crown in King Henry the VIIIth's Reign; and was by King Edward the VIth granted to Peter Hayman, Eſq; one of the Gentlemen of his Bedchamber, and Great Grandfather to Sir Henry Hayman, Bar. who was the Proprietor in Philpot's Time; and from him it went by Sale to the Family of Honywood; and is now in the Poſſeſſion of Sir William Honywood, Bar.

ELMSTED, Ealmſtede, lies towards the South Eaſt Part of Kent, about Three Miles South Weſtward from Eleham, in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Stouting, Lath of Shipway, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that

Lath: 'Tis in the Deanery of Eleham, and Dioceſe of Canterbury: And the Church is dedicated to St. James; on which Saints Day there is an Annual Fair kept here. The Church is large, of Three Iſles, in which is a Monument of William Son of Sir Thomas Howard; and Memorials of ſeveral Men of that Family.

John Taylor, 1642.

An old Inſcription on a Pillar in the South Chancel of one Day, who lies buried near that Place, under an Altar-Tomb.

'Tis a Vicarage; and valued in the King's Books at 5 l. 13 s. 4 d.

The Liberties of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and of St. Auſtin claim here: And that of the Dutchy of Lancaſter over ſo much of the Pariſh as is in the Manor of Haſtingligh.

A. D. 811. Wulfred, Archbiſhop of Canterbury bought this Place of King Kenulph, and ſettled it on his Church.

Places of Note here:

1. Elmſted was once Part of the Eſtate of the Ancient Family of Heringod; for Stephen de Heringod paid Aid for it in the 20th Year of King Henry the IIId. By Grace, this Man's great Grand-Daughter, it went in Marriage to Philip de Hardreſs; in which Name it continued till King James the Iſt's Reign, and then Dane-Court one Part of this Manor was ſold to Cloak; and Elmſted to Marſh; and from thence it went the ſame Way in King Charles the Iſt's Reign to Luſhington: In which Name it was in Philpot's Time.

2. Evington-Court is an Ancient Seat here which formerly had Poſſeſſors of that Name: They lived here in the Reigns of King Henry the IIId, and King Edward the Iſt. Next to this Name it came to be the Inheritance of the Gays, ſometimes written Le-Gay; who if they did not build, yet much enlarged and beautified the Houſe, as Philpot thinks from the Noſe-Gays which are carved in many Places of the Houſe, and which he ſuppoſes allude to the Name of Gay. In this Family it continued till about the beginning of King Henry the VIIth, and then was by Chriſtopher Gay ſold to John Honeywood, Eſq; in which Name it ſtill continues; being now the Poſſeſſion of Sir William Honeywood, Bar. whoſe Father, Sir Edward, was created ſuch by King Charles the IId. Ann. 1660. in Conſideration of his Loyalty, and for a Loan of 3000 l. lent to him in the Time of his Exile, but never paid. I have taken Notice in Poſtling, that this Family took their Name from Honywood, anciently Henewood, their Seat there.

About the Reign of King Edward the IVth it was divided into two Branches; and Thomas Honeywood the Eldeſt Son reſided here at Evington, and ſerved as Member of Parliament for the Port of Hithe.

Robert, the Youngeſt Son reſided at Pett in Charing; and from his Son's Marriage with Mary Atwater, Daughter and Heir of Robert Atwater of Lenham, came thoſe numerous Children, Grand-Children, and Great Grand-Children; all which ſhe lived to ſee; and which I ſhall give you an Account of in Lenham. And from this Family of the Honeywoods at Pett, is that at Market-hall in Eſſex derived. But that Family of this Name at Hamſted in Middleſex is deſcended from the Honywoods of Evington in this Pariſh.

3. Bottſham is a Manor here in Elmſtede not mentioned by Philpot; which was ſold by Chriſtopher Gay to Edward Honywood, Eſq; abovementioned: And I ſuppoſe is ſtill in that Family. And ſo is,

4. Weltham, alias Temple Weltham; which went by Sale from Manwaring Hammond to Sir Robert Stapleton; and from him to William Honywood, Eſq; who bequeathed it by Will to his Nephew, the preſent Sir William Honeywood, Bar.

If you ride from Elmſtede to Brabourn-Down, and thence along its Edge to Wye-Downs, and ſo to Crundale, you have a very fine Proſpect of the Country below, and alſo of the Sea: And you ſee many little Valleys which run in among the high and ſteep Hills, and afford a very pleaſing and Romantick View.

ELMSTONE, Ealmſtune, Elmerſtone, lies towards the Eaſt Side of Kent, by the River Stour, about Four Miles North Weſtward from Sandwich, in the Bailiwick of Bridge and Petham, Hundred of Preſton, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath: 'Tis in the Dioceſe of Canterbury, and Deanery of Bridge. A Rectory; and valued in the King's Books at 6 l. 7 s. 7 d. The Church is very ſmall; and hath only one Monument in it againſt the South Side of the Chancel, of Alderman Jacques of London.

The Liberty of St. Auſtin claims over the Manor of Elmſtone.

This Manor was once Part of the Eſtate of the Lords Leybourn, who claimed Freewarren and other Privileges here in King Edward the Iſt's Reign. But on the Death of Juliana de Leybourn, Daughter of Roger de Leybourn, without Iſſue or Heirs, it Eſcheated to the Crown, and was by King Richard the IId, about his 14th Year ſettled on the Abbey of Childrens Langley. It had before by that Prince been granted to Simon Burleigh, but returned to the Crown again on his Attainder. On the Diſſolution of the Abbeys, it was in 35th Year of King Henry the VIIIth, granted to Sir Walter Henly, Serjeant at Law; who about the beginning of King Edward the VIth, ſold it to Linch; from which Name about the beginning of Queen Elizabeth it went by Sale to Gibbs; in which Family it continued till the latter End of King Charles the Iſt's Reign, and then was ſold to Mr Jaques of London; whoſe Monument is in the Chancel of this Church.

ELTHAM lies towards the North Weſt Side of Kent, about two Miles and a half Southward from Woolwich, in the Bailiwick of Sutton-Bromley, Hundred of Blackheath, Lath of Sutton-at Hone, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and upper one of Juſtices in that Lath; in the Deanery of Dartford, and Dioceſe of Rocheſter; and the Church is dedicated to St. John the Baptiſt: A Vicarage; and valued in the King's Books at 3 l. 2 s. 6 d. In the Church are Memorials of the Interment of Thomas Pierle, in the Year 1369. in French. Of John Puſhley, Porter to King Henry the VIIIth in the Year 1509; Of Margery, Wife of John Roper, Eſq;, and Daughter of John Tutterſall, in the Year 1518. Lady of the Bed-Chamber to Queen Katherine.

In this Pariſh are Five Almſhouſes of the Gift and Foundation of Thomas Philpot, Eſq;. The Endowment about 30 l. per Ann.

Places of Note here.

1. The King's Houſe; which anciently was the Seat of many of our Kings, and deſervedly famous on many Accounts, as you will find enumerated below. Kilburn ſaith, this Palace was built by Anthony Beck, Biſhop of Durham, and Patriarch of Jeruſalem; and by him given to Queen Eleanor, Wife of King Edward the Iſt; though long before that, it had been the Inheritance of the Veſceys. But, as Philpot ſaith, that Eltham did of old belong to the King in Part before this; ſo Matthew Paris tells us, that A. D. 1270. King Henry the IIId kept a mighty Chriſtmas here, according to the Cuſtom of thoſe Times, being accompanied by the Queen and all the Nobility. 'Tis probable the King had a Palace here long before Beck's Time; and that he only rebuilt or repaired and beautified it when it came into his Hands: And the Stone-Work over the outward Gate looks of that Age. It was certainly once a very fine Houſe, and is agreeably ſituated; it was deeply moated round: The Hall is ſtill ſtanding, which is large and magnificent, and hath a very fine Roof, though now uſed only as a Barn. The fair Front over the Moat was built by King Henry the VIIth. But after his Reign, this Palace, by the Riſe of that at Greenwich, began to fall into Neglect, and conſequently Decay, by Degrees: For though King Henry VIII. kept a moſt ſplendid Feaſt here, with Balls, &c. at Chriſtmas, A. D. 1515, and 1527. yet he began to build at Greenwich with Bricks made in this Place; and in a few Years it was deſerted by the Royal Family, and is now inhabited only by a Tenant of Sir John Shaw, the Proprietor.

Here King Edward the IId kept his Reſidence; and his Queen, A. D. 1315. was here brought to Bed of a Son, which was called John of Eltham. This young Prince was created Earl of Cornwall, and was the laſt King's Son in England that died with no higher Title than that of an Earl.

A. D. 1363. John King of France, who had been with his Son Philip taken Priſoner at the famous Battel of Poictiers, in the Year 1356, and was releaſed in the Year 1360, on his Parole of Honour, came now to tranſact the Remains of the Bargain for his Ranſom, and was ſumptuouſly Entertained by King Edward the IIId at this Palace. King John's Place of Reſidence was at the Savoy; he fell ſick and died in England the next Year, and his Funeral was honourably ſolemnized by King Edward at his own Expence, and his Body ſent over into France. This King made all his Tenants at Eltham Toll-free by Grant in the 21ſt Year of his Reign.

In the Reign of Richard the IId, the Court being at this Place at Chriſtmas, Leo, King of Armenia waited on that Prince, and was entertained here. And here alſo King Richard was waſting his Time in Pleaſure when the Parliament ſent him that bold Meſſage, That if a Prince would not govern by Law, but abandon himſelf to his own Arbitrary Will, it was Part of the Ancient Conſtitution, that they might depoſe him, and ſet up another of the Royal Family in his Room.

A. D. 1412. King Henry the IVth kept his Chriſtmas here.

A. D. 1414. King Henry the Vth lay here and feaſted at Chriſtmas; but left it abruptly, on the fooliſh Account of a Plot, and a Deſign to aſſaſſinate him, formed by Sir John Oldcaſtle Lord Cobham: Of which I have given you an Account under Cobham.

A. D. 1475. King Edward the IVth laid out a large Sum of Money in repairing and beautifying this Palace: And then, as Lambard thinks, encloſed Home Park, one of the Three, which formerly belonged to this Place.

A. D. 1480. the Lady Bridget, Daughter to that King, was born here; ſhe was afterwards veiled a Nun in the Nunnery at Dartford.

A. D. 1482. King Edward the IVth kept a mighty Chriſtmas here; and 'tis ſaid that 2000 poor People had Dole here every Day.

And before this, the like ſplendid Entertainment, and at the ſame Feſtival, was held here alſo by King Henry the VIth, A. D. 1429.

Places of Note here:

1. The Manor of Eltham; this, as Philpot ſaith, did partly belong to the Crown, and partly to the Mandevilles from whom it came to be called Eltham-Mandeville. And it appears by the Placita de Libertat. in Com. Kent. coram Juſtic. Itinerant. in 7 K. E. 1. that Walter de Mandeville did then claim all Privileges belonging to this Manor, as of an Honour; the Words are Manerium eſt de Honore Glouceſt. & quod Tenentes non ſunt geldabiles. And theſe Privileges he claims from a Poſſeſſion of Time out of Mind. King Edward the Iſt in his 9th Year granted that Moiety which belonged to himſelf to John de Veſcy, a potent Baron in the North: And in his 12th Year he confirms it to him, with Licenſe for a Weekly Market, and one Fair annually. Two Years after this, this Gentleman John de Veſcy purchaſed, by Exchange for a Sixth Part of the Manor of Luton in Bedfordſhire, Walter de Mandeville's Intereſt in this Place: And this was done with the Leave of the Crown. But he died in the 18th Year of King Edward the Iſt. and his Widow Iſabella was in Poſſeſſion of it Three Years after, as appears by the Tower Records; holding it in Capite of the King, in the 21ſt of Edward the Iſt. but her Husband having no Iſſue, his Brother William became his Heir after her Death, and was made Lord Veſcy. He married Iſabella the Daughter of Robert Perington, and Widow of Sir Robert de Wells: by her he had a Son William, who died without Iſſue in his Father's Life-time, at Conway, and was buried at Malton. After this, William de Veſcy made a Feoffment of all his Lands in England, to Anthony Beck, Biſhop of Durham, for the Uſe of William Veſcy de Kildare, a Baſtard-Son; tho' I ſuppoſe not till after his Lady's Deceaſe: For I find ſhe out-liv'd him, and married the Earl of Glouceſter, who in her Right had this Manor during her Life. This Baſe Son being killed in the Wars in Scotland, this Manor went to the Biſhop of Durham, with all the other Eſtate. The Biſhop conſidering that this Manor came at firſt from the Crown, reſerved only to himſelf an Allowance out of it for his Life, conveyed Eltham back again to the Crown; and died in the Palace here A. D. 1311. after having, as is ſaid above, laid out great Sums upon repairing and beautifying of this Seat. But Mr. Camden reflects a little upon him for defrauding the illegitimate Heir above-mentioned. And the ſame Charge Lambard brings alſo againſt him.

2. Henleys: This was an Ancient Manor here; and in King Edward the IIId's Reign belonged to John de Henley; his Houſe was Moated all round, and Situated by the Conduit-Head, a little below it. But he dying without Iſſue, it came by his Deviſe to King Edward the IIId, and was annexed to the preceeding Manor of Eltham.

3. Eaſthorn and Wellhall; theſe were as early as A. D. 1100, in the Poſſeſſion of Jordan de Briſet or Brinſet; who was the firſt Eſtabliſher of the Order of Knights Hoſpitallers here in England. In King Edward the IIId's Reign it was held by John de Poultney; and from that Family it went in King Richard the IId's Time, by Sale, to Chicheley: By Agnes, a Daughter of John, Son of Will. Chicheley, Alderman of London, they went in Marriage to John Tatterſhall, who by her had Two Daughters; Anne, who was Married to Sir Ralph Haſtings; and Margery, the Wife of John Roper, Eſq; which latter carried theſe Places to her Husband; and in that Name and Family they have ever ſince remained.

To this Manor the Chancel of St. Michael, in the South-ſide of Eltham Church belongs, and which uſed to be called Tatterſhall's Chancel: In the Windows the Arms of the Families above-mentioned were to be ſeen in the Glaſs.

In the Hall of this Houſe, now belonging to —— Roper, Eſq; is a very noble piece of Painting, by the famous Hans Holbin, of Sir Thomas More,

More, Lord Chancellor, (whoſe Lady was a Roper) and his Family; there are about 12 Figures, which are all drawn with great Strength and Beauty; and it is much the fineſt Family-Piece I ever ſaw: 'Tis placed over the Table, and takes up almoſt all one End of the Hall.

4. Shooters-Hill is a place in Eltham, famous formerly for the frequent Robberies committed here, inſomuch that Philpot thinks it took its Name from thence; and ſuppoſes that the Thieves lay lurking in the Woods to ſhoot Paſſengers, and then rifle them. In the 6th Year of King Richard the IId, an Order was made for enlarging the High Road here, according to the Statute of King Edward the Iſt; and King Henry the IVth granted leave to Thomas Chapman, to cut down and ſell the Wood here, that it might not be a Harbour for Thieves; and to lay out the Money raiſed thereby, for the Improvement of the High-ways.

To this Place of Shooters-Hill, King Henry the VIIIth and his Queen Katherine went in very great Splendor from Greenwich on May-Day; and here they were receiv'd by 200 Archers clad all in Green, with one perſonating Robin Hood as their Captain: He firſt ſhewed the King the Skill of his Archers in their exquiſite Shooting; and then leading the Ladies into the Wood, they gave them a fine Entertainment of Veniſon and Wine, in Green Arbors, and Booths adorned with fine Pageants, and all the Efforts of Romantick Gallantry; which were then uſually practiſed in that Luxurious Court.

From this Hill is a moſt noble and extenſive Proſpect; not only into almoſt all Places of this County, but into Suſſex, Surrey, and Eſſex; to the mighty Cities of London and Weſtminſter; and both up and down the Rich River Thames, where the continual Paſſage of numerous Ships, Veſſels, and Boats of all ſorts, yields a moſt delightful and entertaining appearance.

As to the famous Medicinal Waters here, I ſhall ſpeak of them in their proper Place.

5. Modingham, as it was anciently written, tho' now pronounced Mottingham. This is a Hamlet belonging to Eltham, and enjoying like Privileges with it, the Land being held in Ancient Demeſne. It went from the Crown to John de Veſcy, with Eltham, and returned again with it afterwards. But in King Edward the IIId's Reign it was got into the Poſſeſſion of the Bankwells; and after this, in King Henry the VIth's Reign, into that of the Cheſmans; a Female Heir of which, named (Alice) carried it to Mr. Robert Stodder; and his Deſcendant Will. Stodder, Eſq; was the Proprietor in Philpot's Time, and lately deceas'd when he publiſhed his Villare.

On Aug. 4. early in the Morning, and A. D. 1585, the Ground in a Field of Sir Percival Hart's, belonging to this Hamlet, began to ſink down; and ſo ſuddenly, that Three great Elms tumbled down into the hollow with their Tops downward, and by Ten of the Clock they were quite buried, and the Chaſm filled up with Water. The compaſs of the Hole was about Eighty Yards, and about Fifty Fathom deep. And about Ten Yards diſtance there was another piece of Ground ſunk in like manner, near the Highway; and ſo near to a dwelling Houſe, that it put the Inhabitants of it into a dreadful Conſternation.

The Tithes of Mottingham belong to the Church of Rocheſter, being anciently given to it by one Anſgotus of Chyſelhurſt; and tho' claimed by the Rector of Eltham, A. D. 1176; and by the Vicar afterwards in 1234; yet by the Judgment of Richard Archbiſhop of Canterbury, as well as of Richard Bp. of Rocheſter, (both which Determinations are remaining among the Archives of the Church of Rocheſter) it was determined to belong to that Cathedral.

6. Corbies Caſtle was once a Seat here (tho' now grown obſcure) belonging to a Family of the Name of Corbie; who as long ago as the Reign of King Henry the IIId, had an Eſtate alſo at Whitherſt in Marden in this County; which by Marriage of a Daughter of this Name, went into the Family of Wotton, and thence, the like way, into that of Stanhope.

EMLEY, Elmley, is an Iſland lying towards the North ſide of Kent, adjoining to (and may be accounted as) part of the Iſle of Sheppey. 'Tis about Two Miles North-Eaſt from Milton, and is in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Milton, Lath of Scray; Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Upper One of Juſtices in the Lath.

'Tis in the Deanery of Sittingbourn, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; a Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 5 l. per Ann.

The Church is now almoſt down, and but Two Houſes in the Pariſh: So that the Patrons, All-Souls College in Oxon, make it a kind of Sinecure.

Emley, in Ancient Time, was part of the Eſtate of the Peyforers: Fulk de Peyforer held it at its Death, in the 5th Year of King Edward the Iſt; but before the End of King Edward the IIId, this Eſtate went by Julian, a Daughter of that Family, to Thomas St. Leger; whoſe Daughter Joan alſo carried it in Marriage to Aucher (Henry); but before the End of King Henry the Vth, it was ſold to one Cromer of London, who had likewiſe ſome other Lands in this Iſland, which the Haſtings had got by Marriage from the Maneys; for Sir Walter de Maney, Knight of the Garter, dying in the 49th Year of King Edward the IIId, left only a Daughter Anne, who married John Haſtings Earl of Pembroke; and ſhe alſo carried to her ſaid Husband, Tonſtall; and much other Land hereabouts. In this Family of Cromer it continued a great while, till Sir James Cromer died without Iſſue-Male, but left Three Daughters to divide this Affair. Frances Married Sir Matt. Carew; Elizabeth Married Sir John Steed; and Chriſtian Eſpouſed Sir John Hales; but the Deſcendants, which claimed from Carew and Steed, ſold their Shares to the Hales; and ſo the entire Intereſt came into the Poſſeſſion of Sir Edward Hales of Tunſtall.

Philpot ſaith alſo, that in the 7th Year of King Henry the IVth's Reign, Sir Robert Knolles, Feoffee in Truſt for Greg and Talbot, paſſed away 1000 Acres of Land in Emley, to Sir William Cromer.

EWELL, Ea-Well, the Well-Spring, lies towards the South-Eaſt part of Kent, by a ſmall Rivulet which riſes near it, and runs into the Sea at Dover; and which, as Hollingſhead ſaith, who was of this County, is called the Dure: This is the Britiſh Name for a River or Brook; and perhaps Dover or Douer might be denominated from hence, as Canterbury was called Dorovernum for the ſame Reaſon. Ewell is about Two Miles and a half North-Weſtward from Dover, in the Bailiwick of Stouting, Hundred of Bewsborough, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis a Vicarage valued in the King's Books at 6*l.* 13 s. 4 d. in the Deanery of Dover, and Dioceſe of Canterbury, and the Church is Dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul. The Liberty of St. Auſtin claims over it.

Places of Note here:

1. Temple Ewell: This Place was a Principal Manſion of the Knights Templers, and had much Land belonging to it in theſe Parts and in Romney Marſh; and it appears by the Tower-Records, that they claimed the uſual Privileges of a Manor nor for this Place, in the 21ſt Year of Edward the Iſt.

Theſe Knights Templers were founded on this Occaſion. Hugh de Payens, Godfrey de St. Omer, with ſeveral other Men of Courage in the Year 1118, offered their Service to Baldwin then King of Jeruſalem, to defend the Pilgrims, travelling to the Holy Land, from Robberies; into a Vow of this kind they entred before the Patriarch of Jeruſalem; and ſo became a ſort of Lay Regular Canons: They vowed alſo to defend the Temple and the Sepulchre of Chriſt, from the Inſults of the Infidels: From whence, or becauſe they had Lodgings aſſigned them by Baldwin near the Temple of Jeruſalem, they came to be called Knights Templers: Their Habit at firſt was all White, but afterwards they added a Red Croſs. They began at firſt low, and with a great ſhew of Humility; their Seal being Two Men upon one Horſe: But their Numbers vaſtly increaſing, and their Revenues proportionably; their Wealth corrupted their Morals, and they came to be univerſally hated and maligned: So that in the Reign of our King Edward the IId, their Order was totally ſuppreſſed throughout all Chriſtendom. One would think, they muſt have been guilty of ſome very great Crimes, to occaſion ſuch an univerſal Hatred: Some tell you, that in A. D. 1247, when Conrade the Emperor of Germany, and Lewis King of France laid Siege to Damaſcus, and had brought the City nearly to Surrender, theſe Templers placing themſelves under the Walls, on a pretence to diſtribute equally the Spoils of the City amongſt the Soldiers, were corrupted and bribed with Gold by the Beſieged to take part with them, and to raiſe the Siege, which they did: And this Act of Treachery, which indeed was a very vile one, is judged to have begun their approaching Fate. Other Authors charge them alſo with aſſiſting the Emperor when he was contending with the Pope about his Temporal Power and Juriſdiction in Italy and in other Places, againſt the Incroachments made upon him by that Uſurper at Rome. And if this were their only fault, I could eaſily forgive them for it; tho' perhaps in its Conſequences, it was a more dangerous and deſtructive Crime to them, than any of the Immoralities and perſonal Vices they were afterwards charged with by the Pope. But I doubt there was ſomething worſe than this juſtly laid to their charge, becauſe all the Chriſtian Princes agreed to the Order of Pope John the 22d for their Extinction, which was made A. D. 1307, at the Inſtigation of the King of France, and with the ready Concurrence of our King Edward the IId; ſo that their Eſtates were all ſeized at once as it were, and themſelves caſt into Priſon. Two Years after this, a Commiſſion was ſent into England to Robert Winchelſey, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, to examine into the Crimes of theſe Military Canons; and they were found, no doubt, Guilty of many groſs and enormous ones; for taking away their Eſtates muſt be juſtifyed; and conſequently, A. D. 1312, the whole Order was here (as well as Abroad) extirpated; after it had continued about 200 Years.

But this was an Age of the World in which ſome Religious Folly or other muſt be predominant; and accordingly, our good King gave moſt of the Lands belonging to the Templers, and among the reſt, the Eſtate here at Ewell to the Knights Hoſpitallers of St. John of Jeruſalem, who were an Order of Men not much unlike the former; but of much longer ſtanding, being inſtituted A. D. 612. after the Turks had got Poſſeſſion of the Holy Land, and on this Occaſion.

Some Merchants of Malfi in Italy, had got leave of the Caliph of Ægypt to build an Hoſpital at Jeruſalem, to relieve ſuch ſick and diſtreſſed Pilgrims as ſhould travel thither. This Hoſpital was dedicated to St. John Baptiſt; and one Gerard, who was there when Godfrey of Boloign took Jeruſalem, and who aſſiſted the Beſiegers with Bread, &c. was, after the Surrender of the City, made Maſter of this Order, under the Title of Knights Hoſpitallers, &c. and conſequently, here was their firſt and chief Reſidence. But after the Turks retook Jeruſalem, he removed to Agrim; and then, when the Chriſtians were forced to quit Paleſtine, they ſettled at Rhodes; and from thence being expelled alſo by the Turks, 1523, they removed to, and are ſtill fix'd at Malta. But there was an Eminent Houſe of this Order founded in England, in St. John's Cloſe, near St. John's Street, in London, and now called St. Jones, by one Jordan Baſſet, about the Year 1110. And this was the Head of many others of the ſame Order, in ſeveral Places in this Kingdom; and they were in ſuch Eſteem here, that their Principal Prior of St. John's in London, had Precedence of all Lay Barons, if I am rightly informed.

In the Poſſeſſion of this Order did Temple Ewell lye, till the great Diſſolution of all the Religious Houſes in King Henry the VIIIth's Time; and then coming to the Crown, it ſtaid there till King Edward the VIth, in his laſt Year, granted it to William Cavendiſh, Eſq; who within a Twelvemonth after ſold it to Chriſtopher Sackvile, and Winefride his Wife; who, about the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth, alienated it to John Daniell; and he dying without Iſſue-Male, in the End of the Queen's Reign, divided his Eſtate here between his Two Daughters, who being married, one into the Name of Mabb, and the other into that of Wiſeman, both concurred in a Sale of the Premiſſes to Mr. Robert Bromley; and he ſent it the ſame way to Mr. —— Angell of London; whoſe Son, Mr. —— Angell, of Crowherſt in Surrey, was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

2. Boreſtall-Banks, is a Place in Ewell, which, as nigh as any Evidences can diſcover, was part of the Eſtate of the Family of Diggs of Digg's-Court in Berham. John Diggs of this Family was Alderman of Canterbury in the Year 1258, and was a great Benefactor to the Franciſcan Friers, then newly ſeated in that City; purchaſing for their Support an Iſland there called Binewithe: From him deſcended Roger Digge, who paid Aid for his Lands at Barham and elſewhere in Kent, in the 20th Year of King Edward the IIId, and died ſeized of this Manor in the 3d Year of King Richard the IId. John Digge, his Deſcendant, was Sheriff of this County in the 2d Year of King Henry the IVth. And another John Diggs had the ſame Office in the 4th Year of King Edward the IVth; whoſe Son of the ſame Name was alſo Sheriff of Kent in the 11th Year of King Henry the VIIth. But after having thus for many Deſcents ſtaid in this Family, it was in the 10th Year of Queen Elizabeth ſold to Stokes, in which Name it remained till King Charles the Iſt's Reign, and then it was conveyed the ſame way to Captain Temple of Dover, who was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

EYNSFORD, Einsford, Eansford, and ſometimes Aynsford, lies towards the middle of the Weſt part of Kent, by the River Darent, about Four Miles Eaſtward from St. Mary's-Cray, in the Bailiwick of Sutton-Dartford, Hundred of Axtone, Lath of Sutton-at-Hone, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Upper One of Juſtices in the Lath.

The Liberty of the Dean of Canterbury claims over the Manor of Eynsford.

The Pariſh is in the Deanery of Shoreham, a Peculiar of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, but in the Dioceſe of Rocheſter.

The Rectory is valued in the King's Books at 12*l.* 16*s.* 8*d.* the Vicarage at 12*l.*

The Church, about 536 Years ago, was appropriated to Chriſt-Church in Canterbury, and to the uſe of the Almnery there, by Richard Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

In it there are, or were, Memorials of the Interment of Donat, A. D. 1455, and Eckſford long ſince; for the Memorial is in French, Icy gis —— La Famme de la Robery de Eckſford; the Character very Antick. It was in the North Chancel.

Places of Note here,

1. Eynsford gave Seat and Name to a Family which continued here till the Time of King Edward the IId, as Philpot ſaith, but I believe he is miſtaken, becauſe I find by the Tower Records, that John de Cryel, and Ralph de Sandwich claimed the Privileges of a Manor here, in the 21ſt Year of Edward the Iſt, and there mention is made of the Caſtle being ſtanding. For it hath the Ruins of an Old Caſtle, of which they and the Arſicks were the Owners ſucceſſively. And many Eſtates hereabouts were held in Knights-Service of the Honour of Arſick.

2. Arkeſden, is another Seat in this Pariſh of very great Antiquity; whoſe Owners of that Name, were of the Number of the Recognitores Magnæ Aſſiſæ, in King John's Reign. After them it came into the Family of Cobham; for Reginald de Cobham, in the 14th Year of King Edward the IIId, had Licenſe to build and Embattel at this Place; and he paid Aid for it at making the Black Prince Knight. From the Cobhams of Sterborough it went by a Daughter to the Lord Burgh or Borow; who ſold it to Sir Samuel Leonard, Father of Sir Stephen Leonard, in whoſe Poſſeſſion it was in Philpot's Time.

3, 4. South-Cote and Mayfield, are Two Manors here which anciently belonged to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury; but by Exchange of other Lands, they went into the Poſſeſſion of Dunham, and from thence to the Wiats; in whoſe Family they continued, till Sir Tho. Wiat's Attainder in Queen Mary's Reign: After their coming to the Crown, they were granted to John Leonard of Chevening; and in Philpot's Time were in the Poſſeſſion Sir Stephen Leonard of West-Wickam.

5. Mapleſcombe (a) is an Ancient Seat, tho' gone to Ruin, lying partly in this, and partly in Kings-Down Pariſh; which in the 20th Year of King Henry the IIId, (as appears by Teſta de Nevill) was in the Poſſeſſion of Will. de Cheſterfield, who, as Philpot thinks, lies buried in Halſted Church. About the End of King Edward the IId, it was ſold hence to Rokeſley of Rokeſley in North-Cray. In time, ſome part of this Eſtate came into the Poſſeſſion of Roger de Mereworth, who obtained a Charter of Free-Warren for his Land here, in the 40th Year of King Edward the IIId: His Grandſon, John de Mereworth, got by Purchaſe Poſſeſſion of the whole, and made John de Malmains his Heir; who ſold it to Nich. de Brember; who being Attainted in the 10th Year of King Richard the IId. that Prince, in his 13th Year, granted it to John de Hermenſthorpe; and he not long after paſſed it away to Richard Fitz Allen, Earl of Arundell; whoſe Son Thomas Earl of Arundell dying without Iſſue-Male, A. D. 1416; Joan, one of his Siſters, carried it to her Husband Will. Beauchamp, Baron of Abergaveny; and his Son dying alſo without Iſſue-Male, in the 9th Year of King Henry the Vth, Elizabeth, his only Daughter, brought it to the Patrimony of Edward Nevile; and here it tarried a good while, but at length was ſold to Lovelace; by whoſe Daughter Margaret it went to —— Cook of Lanham in Suffolk; where it remained in Philpot's Time.

6. Eaſthall in this Pariſh, was once part of the Eſtate of the Rokeſleys, but by a Daughter of Sir Richard Rokeſley it went by Marriage to Sir Thomas Poynings; in which Family it continued till the 14th Year of King Henry the VIIIth; when Sir Edward Poynings having no Heir, it Eſcheated to the Crown, and was by that King granted to Sir Roger Cholmley; who ſoon ſold it to Sir Martin Bowes: and he, in the 1ſt Year of King Edward the VIth, paſſed it the ſame way to Percival Hart of Lullington, Eſq; in whoſe Family it was in Philpot's Time.

7, 8. Littlemote and Petham, now called Petham-Court, are Two Manors in this Pariſh, which formerly belonged to the Family of Sybell; who were for many Hundred Years in poſſeſſion of both theſe Manors. And a good part of this Eſtate came to this Name by an Heireſs of the Name of Cowdale, whoſe Arms were a Chevron Gules between Three Bulls Heads Sable: And both theſe and the Sybells Arms were in the Glaſs in many Places of the Houſe of Littlemote, in Philpot's Time. At laſt Elizabeth, an only Daughter of John Sibell, Eſq; married Mr. Robert Boſvile, the Anceſtor of Thomas Boſvile, Eſq; and his Son Married Elizabeth, Daughter to Sir Frances Wiat, and Grandmother to Sir Robert Marſham, Bart. now Lord Romney, who is the preſent Poſſeſſor of Petham-Court, and other Lands here; which deſcended to him by the Right of his Mother Margaret, only Daughter and Heir of the ſaid Thomas Boſvile; but Littlemote went to Sir Henry Boſvile, who dying without Iſſue, left it to Robert Boſvile of Staffordſhire, Eſq; the preſent Poſſeſſor.

One part of the Chancel of Eynsford Church is called Arſicks Chancel; and divers Lands hereabout were held of the Honour of Arſick by Knights-Service. And Robert de Arſick, who came in with King William the Iſt, was one of the Aſſiſtants of John de Fiennes, in the Guard of Dover Caſtle: And Hubert de Burgo, who was Earl of Kent, Married a Daughter and Heir of this great Family of Arſick.

In Domeſday Book Einesford is called Manerium Archiepiſcopi; and 'tis ſaid that in the Time of Edward the Confeſſor, it defended it ſelf for Six Plow-Lands and now for the ſame; that it was appretiated at 20*l.* and Richard of Stoneybridge hath as much as is valued at 3*l.*

EYTHORN, Eyelthorne, Aythorne, and Egbethorne, lies towards the Eaſt ſide of Kent, about Five Miles Southward from Sandwich, in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Eaſtrey, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. In the Deanery of Sandwich, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; and the Church is Dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul. 'Tis a Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 15*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.* There is nothing of any kind remarkable in the Church. The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and that of St. Auſtin claims here; as doth alſo that of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury over the upper part of the Pariſh.

A. D. 824, Wulfred, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, gave Eythorn to Canterbury Church, in exchange for Berham.

Places of Note here:

1. The Eminent Family of Badeleſmere had once an Eſtate here; but on the Attainder of Bartholomew Lord Badeleſmere, in King Edward the IId's Reign, it was forfeited to the Crown; and in the next Reign it was granted to Sir John de Bondon; who in the 18th Year of King Edward the IIId, ſold it to John de Gildesburgh; from this Name it went the ſame way into that of Holben: and Tho. Holben, in the 12th Year of

King

King Richard the IId, ſold it to Robert Dane. After this it came ſome how into the Poſſeſſion of Robert Webbe; who in the 4th Year of King Henry the VIth, paſſed it by Sale to John St. Clere; and he not long after parted with it the ſame way to Sir Walter Hungerford; who likewiſe about the End of this Reign, ſold it to Sir Thomas Brown of Bechworth-Caſtle in Surrey, Comptroller of the Houſhold to that Prince. This Gentleman, in the 26th Year of King Henry the VIth, obtained a Fair to be kept here annually on St. Peter's-Day. And in this Family it ſtaid till the 16th Year of Queen Elizabeth; and then Thomas Brown, Eſq; ſold it to Mr. Francis Santon; whoſe Son, Twelve Years afterwards ſent it the ſame way to Sir Will. Rither of London: But he dying without Iſſue-Male, this Eſtate was the Part of Suſan, one of his Co-heirs; who firſt carried it in Marriage to Sir Thomas Cæſar; and then to a Second Husband Mr. Tho. Philipot, ſecond Son of Sir John Philipot of Compton Waſcelin in Hantſhire: but out-living him alſo, at her Deceaſe ſhe gave it to her Son by him, Mr Villiers Philipot; and he ſold it to Mr. John Brett of London; who appears to have been the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

2. Elmington, is a Manor in Eythorn, which Philpot hath erroneouſly placed in Nonnington; formerly it was the Eſtate of the Condies of Condies Hill in Whitſtaple; who by Purchaſe from the Colkins, had alſo ſome part of Fredvile: By a Daughter of this Name it went in Marriage to Robert Grubbe; and by one of his Two Daughters it paſſed the ſame way to Iſaac, whoſe Deſcendant James Iſaac, about the End of King Henry the VIIth, ſold it to George Guildford, Eſq; and he to Betenham; from whence it paſſed the ſame way to Sir Chriſtopher Hales; and his Son, Sir James, ſold it to William Bois; whoſe Deſcendant, John Bois of Fredville, Eſq; parted with it the ſame way to Will. Turner, Eſq; of Canterbury.

FAIREFEILD, lies at the South ſide of Kent, about Four Miles and a half Weſtward from New Romney, in the Bailiwick and Lath of Shipway, Hundred of Aloesbridge, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery of Limpne, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Church, which is only a Chapel, and ſo not valued in the King's Books, is Dedicated to St. Thomas the Martyr; and was given by Edmund of Abingdon, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, to Chriſt-Church Priory, A. D. 1238. The Liberty of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury claims over the Manor of Fairfeild, as being given to that Church by King Henry the VIIIth, in the 33d Year of his Reign.

FANT, is a Pariſh which lies partly in Kent, and partly in Suſſex; the ſmall Portion of it which is in this County, is ſeated towards the South part of it, about Six Miles Southward from Tunbridge Town; in the Bailiwick and Lowy of Tunbridge, Hundred of Wachelingſtone, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and South Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. But the Church ſtandeth in Suſſex.

The famous Waters called Tunbridge-Wells, are very near this Place; of which I ſhall give a full and particular Account in the Natural Hiſtory-Part of this Book. But the Wells themſelves are in the Pariſh of Speldherſt in Kent.

FARLEY-EAST, Fernleigh, Fearn-lega, lies towards the Middle of Kent, by the River Medway, about two Miles South Weſtward from Maidſtone, in the Bailiwick of Eyeborne, Hundred of Maidſtone, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Eaſt one of Juſtices in that Lath; in the Deanery of Shoreham, and Dioceſe of Rocheſter. The Liberty of Maidſtone claims here, but that of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury over the Manor of East Farley. A Vicarage; and valued in the King's Books at 6 l. 8 s. 8 d. In the Church is a Monument of the Family of Colepeper, and another of Nicholas Amherſt, who married an Evering.

A. D. 961. This Place was given to the Convent of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury, by Edgiva or as 'tis alſo written Ediva, Mother of the Two Kings Eadred and Edmund: And Lambard ſaith, that in the Time of King Edward the Confeſſor, this Place and Weſt-Farleigh together paid to the Monks 1200 Eels annually in lieu of Rent: And p. 599. of his Perambulation, he ſhews from a Record, that in the firſt Year of King Edward the IIId, Lands were valued here in Eaſt-Farley at 6 d. per Acre: The Price of a Hen at that Time Three-Half-pence: Some Land was then eſtimated at but one Penny per Acre: And the beſt Meadow Ground at 10 Pence an Acre.

Archbiſhop Reynolds appropriated this Church to the Hoſpital at Maidſtone.

Places of Note here:

1. The Manor of Eaſt-Farley, when the Survey of Domes-Day was made, belonged to Chriſt-Church in Canterbury, and was valued at 6 Plow-Lands; and it continued in that Convent till the general Diſſolution; and then King Henry the VIIIth in his 34th Year granted it to Sir Thomas Wyat, then one of his Privy Council: But on his Attainder and Execution in the 2d Year of Queen Mary it reverted to the Crown; and that Princeſs gave it to her Attorney General, Sir John Baker. This Gentleman had Iſſue, Sir Richard Baker, who about the End of that Queen's Reign, ſold East-Farley to Sir —— Vane of Burſton in Hunton Pariſh, in whoſe Family it continued in Philpot's Time, and I ſuppoſe doth ſtill.

2. Smiths-Hill is a Seat here, which ever ſince the Reign of King Henry the VIth, hath been, ſaith Philpot, the Reſidence of the Family of Brewer, who came hither from Brewers in Merewith; a Place which had long before been their Manſion-Houſe: One William de Brewer of this Place was Lieutenant of Dover-Caſtle in King John's Reign.

In this Pariſh is a fair Stone Bridge over the River Medway. It appears by the Textus Roffenſis, that there was once a Chapel belonging to this Place called Livituna, f. 222.

FARLEY-WEST lies towards the Middle of Kent, by the River Medway, about three Miles South Weſtward from Maidſtone, in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Twiford, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and South Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath In the Deanery of Malling, and Dioceſe of Rocheſter. And the Church is dedicated to All Saints. In it are Memorials of Auſtin Skinner, Eſq; of Totteſham-Hall, of Laurence, Reeve, and Brewer; in the South Wall an old Tomb without any Inſcription. 'Tis a Vicarage; valued in the King's Books at 6 l. 11 s. 4 d. The worthy Incumbent Mr. North hath made the Houſe very handſome, and finely planted the Gardens and Orchards with beautiful Greens and good Fruit.

The Borſholder of the Burgh of Weſt-Farly is choſen at a Court-Leet holden for the Manor, and doth not owe Service to the Court-Leet holden for the Hundred: Nor do the Inhabitants of that Borough owe any Service to that Court: But at that Court may a Conſtable of the ſaid Hundred be choſen, out of this Borough.

1. Weſt-Farley Manor was given to the Priory of Chriſt-Church by Queen Eleanor, in Exchange for the Port of Sandwich: And this Donation was confirmed by King Edward the Iſt. On the general Diſſolution of the Abbeys, it came with Eaſt-Farley to the Crown, was granted with it to Sir Thomas Wyat, and returned thither again on his Attainder: And then likewiſe was given by Queen Mary to Sir John Baker: And this Manor deſcended to his Eldeſt Son and Heir, Sir Richard Baker, and continued in that Name till his great Grandſon, Sir John Baker, ſold it to Mr. Robert Newton of London, Grocer. After which it came ſome how into the Name of Floyd or Flood: And now is in the Poſſeſſion of Richard Sheldon, Eſq; of Aldington Septvans in this County.

2. Toteſham-Hall, or Tutſham, as 'tis uſually called, is a Seat here which once had Owners of the Name of Toteſham. John de Toteſham was one of the Recognitores Magnæ Aſſiſæ in the Reign of King John. Another John de Toteſham (as appears by the Tower Records) held four Librates of Land here of the King in Capite, in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt; and perhaps it was his Son who died poſſeſſed of this Eſtate in the 5th Year of King Edward the IIId, as appears by Rot. Eſc. N. 17. The laſt of this Name here was Anthony Toteſham, Eſq; who about the End of King Henry the VIIIth's Reign, ſold this Manor, and Henburſt in Yalding, to Chapman; in which Name it ſtaid till the latter End of Queen Elizabeth, and then it went the ſame Way to Laurence: And from one of that Name it was purchaſed by Auſtin Skinner, Eſq; deſcended from the Skinners in Lincolnſhire; in whoſe Poſſeſſion it ſeems to have been in Philpot's Time; but is now the Seat of Mr. Gulſton.

In this Pariſh riſes a ſwift ſhallow Brook, called the Ewell, which runs into the Medway: And is ſo fine a Stream, that though it run but a little Way, did formerly drive Four Mills within half a Mile of its Riſe.

Lambard fancies Farley to have taken its Name from ƿapp, a Boar; but it is more rational to deduce it from ƿaƿe, a Journey or Paſſage, becauſe perhaps here was the Place of ſome eminent Paſſage over the Medway.

FARNBOROUGH, (the Burgh of Paſſage) lies towards the Weſt Side of Kent, about two Miles and a half South Weſtward from St. Mary's-Cray, in the Bailiwick of Sutton Bromley, Hundred of Ruxley, Lath of Sutton-at-Hone, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and upper one of Juſtices in the Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery of Dartford, and Dioceſe of Rocheſter; and the Church is called St. Giles's.

The Liberty of the Dutchy of Lancaſter claims over the Rectory of Farnborough.

A Fair is kept here annually on September 1. being St. Giles's Day.

Tubbenden is an old Seat which is partly in this and partly in Orpington Pariſh. See an Account of it there.

Philpot ſaith Farnborough is only a Chapel of Eaſe to Chelsfield: Which is confirmed by the Textus Roffenſis; and by its not being rated in the King's Books.

This Place was once a principal Seat of the Lord Grandiſon, and was by them made the Head of their Barony. The Lord Otho de Grandiſon got to this Place a Grant of a Market, and a Fair on St. Giles's Day, and for Eight Days more at Farnborough, in the 19th Year of King Edward the Iſt: And another of the ſame Name got a Charter of Freewarren for his Land here, in the 18th Year of King Edward the IIId. But in King Richard the IId's Reign it was gone out of this Family into the Name of Fleming; who ſold it to Petley; and thence it went ſpeedily, and the ſame Way, to Peche of Lullingſton; And Sir John Peche dying Childleſs in King Henry the VIIth's Time, this Eſtate, and a good deal more, went by his Siſter Elizabeth to John Hart, Eſq; in whoſe Family it remained in Philpot's Time, and I ſuppoſe doth ſtill.

FARNINGHAM, Fermingham, Fremingham, perhaps from ƿpemunƺ, Advantage or Conſummation, the Place of Concluſion, lies towards the Weſt Side of Kent, by the River Darent, about four Miles Eaſtward from St. Mary's-Cray, in the Bailiwick of Sutton Dartford, Hundred of Axtone, Lath of Sutton-at-Hone, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and upper one of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery of Shoreham, and Dioceſe of Rocheſter. A Vicarage; and valued in the King's Books at 9 l. 5 s. 8 d. A ſmall Church without any Steeple: In it is a handſome Stone Font, with Figures round it, which ſeem ancient. In it is a Monument of Anthony Roper, Eſq; and his Lady, and Memorials of Emmerton, Gilborne, in the Year 1400. and of Thomas Sybell, in the Year 1519. By St. Katherine's Picture, which yet remains in the Glaſs Windows, one would think the Church was dedicated to that Saint.

The Liberties of the Dutchy of Lancaſter, and of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury claim here.

A. D. 1010. this Church was given to the Priory of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury, by Archbiſhop Elphege, who, two Years after, was murder'd by the Danes at Greenwich. And afterwards A. D. 1225. there was a new Donation of it by Stephen Archbiſhop of the ſame Province.

Kilburn ſaith, that Robert Poynings, who had been Sword-bearer and Carver to Jack Kade in his Rebellion, and was pardoned for it, began a new Inſurrection in this Place, in the 23d Year of King Henry the VIth.

Places of Note here:

1. The Manor of Farningham, in Domeſday-Book, was accounted but at one Plow-Land; and this with one half of the Manor of Chartons was in King William the Iſt's Reign held of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, by Anſgode de Roſſe, or Rubitonienſis. But this Name of Roſſe was extinct here about the End of King Henry the IIId's Reign. After this it belonged to a Family of its own Name: For Ralph de Fremingham obtained a Charter of Freewarren for this Manor, in the 55th Year of Henry the IIId. and the Grant alſo of a Tueſday's Market, and an Annual Fair for four Days, beginning on the Vigil of St. Peter and Paul: Which was renewed and confirmed afterwards to John de Fremingham, in the 8th Year of King Richard the IId. Another of this Name had been Sheriff of Kent in the 12, 18, 19th Years of King Edward the IId, and died poſſeſs'd of this Place in the 38th Year of King Edward the IIId. His Son and Heir above-mentioned was one of the Conſervators of the Peace for this County in the firſt Year of King Richard the IId, and was Sheriff of it the next Year; and alſo in the 12th Year of King Henry the IVth. But he dying without Iſſue, Anne his Siſter and Heir carried this Eſtate to her Huſband Roger Iſley of Sundrich; from him it went to John Iſley, and to his Son Thomas Iſley, who died poſſeſs'd of it in the 8th Year of King Henry the VIIIth; and it was found at her Deceaſe to be holden by Knights Service of Dover-Caſtle, as a whole Knights Fee, and paid a Rent of 21 Shillings per Ann. Next ſucceeded his Son Sir Henry Iſley, who being unhappily engaged in Wiat's Rebellion in the 2d Year of Queen

Mary, this Eſtate became forfeited to the Crown; but the Queen granted it back again to his Son William Iſley, Eſq; who about two Years after ſold it to William Roper, Eſq; Grandfather to Sir Anthony Roper; who by Will bequeathed it to Sir John Cotton of Lanwade in Cambridgeſhire, Bar. the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

2. Chartons, the other Moiety of this Place, gave Name to a Family which were Poſſeſſors of it in the 20th Year of King Henry the IIId, as appears by Teſta de Nevil. But afterwards it got into the Name of Groveburſt; for William de Groveburſt paid Aid for it in the 20th Year of King Edward the IIId. And his Deſcendant Richard Groveburſt died in King Henry the IVth's Reign, and left only Three Daughters, who were married to Trockhill, Hextall, and Petit. Theſe about the beginning of King Henry the VIth, ſold it to John Martin; and his Deſcendant Edward Martin paſſed it the ſame Way (with Franks in Horton Kirby,) to Mr. Alderman Bathurſt, in the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign: Hence it deſcended to Sir Edward Bathurſt, the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time; and I ſuppoſe continues in this Name ſtill.

3. Chimbham is another Manor here which once had Owners of that Name; viz. in the Reign of King Henry the IIId. But about King Edward the IIId's Time it came into the Poſſeſſion of the Fremingham's above-mentioned, and went with the Manor of Farningham to the Iſleys of Sandwich. But in King Henry the VIIth's Reign, it was ſold off to Sybell of Little Moat in Eynsford; and by a Daughter of Edward Sybell's it paſſed in Marriage to Hyde, and thence was ſold to Alderman Bunce of London, the Proprietor in Philpot's Time.

The great Houſe here where Mr. Thomas Polhill lives, who now is and hath been for ſeveral Years Under-Sheriff of Kent, belongs to Sir George Hanger; and came to him by Marriage of a Beale, one of Sir John Beale's Daughters. Sir John lies buried in this Church.

FAWKHAM, Falkenham, Falcheham, Falcham, Fealcnaham, (the Place of Hoſtility or Slaughter) from Falæcan, lies towards the North-Weſt Part of Kent, about four Miles Southward from Graveſend, in the Bailiwick of Sutton Dartford, Hundred of Axſtone, Lath of Sutton-at-Hone, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and upper one of Juſtices in that Lath. In the Deanery and Dioceſe of Rocheſter: 'Tis a Rectory; valued in the King's Books at 6 l. 9. s. 4 d. The Church is dedicated to St Mary.

This Pariſh ought anciently to have contributed towards the Repair of the third Arch or Peer of Rocheſter-Bridge.

This Place was given to the Convent of St. Andrew's in Rocheſter, above Seven Hundred Years ago (a), by one Birbtric and his Wife; (ſee the Will at large under Meapham,) and being taken away from it by Odo Biſhop of Bayeux, and Earl of Kent, was recovered again unto the Convent by the Care of Lanfranc Archbiſhop of Canterbury, who ſent his Chaplain Ralph over to the King, then in Normandy, about it; and promiſed to pay him 60 Pounds for his Favour in the Recovery of this Manor. The King took only 30 l. and forgave him t' e other half; and ſent his Royal Letters back by Ralph, to the Earl of Kent to reſtore it. It was then accounted as two Sullings or Plowlands: And ſerved for a Firm to ſubſiſt the College for 15 Days in Proviſions.

Fawkham was alſo anciently famous for giving Name to a very great and eminent Family, who I ſuppoſe reſided here. In our Textus Roffenſis, f. 217. is a Title De numero Militum hujus Epiſcopatûs, ſc. Roffenſis: And here Godefridus de Falchham is rated at 2 Milites; which was more than any one in the Dioceſe was to find: No one elſe being charged with above one, and moſt with but part of one. Walleranus de Fawkeham flouriſhed here in King Henry the IId's Reign; as appears by the Records in the Exchequer. After this it became the Eſtate of the Lord Grandiſon, who held it, as I ſuppoſe the Fawkehams did, of the Biſhop of Rocheſter, and as one Knight's Fee. Otho de Grandiſon died poſſeſſed of it in the 33d Year of King Edward the IIId; but his Son Thomas dying without Iſſue 16 Years after, by Agnes his Siſter it went in Marriage to Sir John Northwood: His Son Sir Roger Northwood left only a Daughter Albina, who carried this Eſtate in Marriage to John Diggs of Diggs-Court in Berham; who was Sheriff of Kent in the 2d Year of King Henry the IVth. And here it ſtaid till about the End of King Henry the VIIIth, and then was ſold to Barham of Barham-Court in Teſton: And by Anne, Daughter of Thomas Barham, Eſq; it paſſed in Marriage to Sir Oliver Boteler; and in Philpot's Time was in the Poſſeſſion of Sir Oliver Boteler, Son to that Sir William Boteler, who was killed in our late Civil Wars, at the Engagement of Cropready Bridge, in the King's Cauſe.

FEVERSHAM, Fevreſham, Faverеſham, Faureſham, in the Saxon Chronicles, Faresfeld; lies at the North ſide of Kent, towards the Sea, on a Creek which runs out into it, about Six Miles South-Eaſtward from Milton, in the Bailiwick and Lath of Scray, and Eaſt Diviſion of the County. Part of the Pariſh is in the Upper Diviſion of Juſtices, in the Lath of Scray, and the Liberty of St. Auſtin claims over it, becauſe it is in the Hundred of Feverſham, which belonged to that Abbey: And all the Pariſh is in the Deanery of Oſpringe, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. But the Town of Feverſham is a Member of the Town and Port of Dover, and was incorporated by the Name of the Mayor and Commonalty of the Town of Feverſham, in King Edward the IIId's Reign, and before that by the Name of Barons of the Town of Feverſham. The Liberties of the Corporation, and of the Cinque Ports, claim over it; and it is in the Diviſion of Juſtices of that Corporation. But the Liberty of St. Auſtin's claims over the Rectory. The Church ſtands in the Town, and is called St. Mary's of Charity. 'Tis a Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 26 l. 17 s. 4 d. The preſent Church is very large, and handſomely adorned, and there is an Organ in it. On the North ſide of the Chancel is an old fair Monument and Tomb raiſed, but there is no Inſcription about it, only ſome Coats of Arms. There are Two Monuments of the Family of Caſlock.

In the Body of the Church is a Braſs Plate on a flat Tomb-ſtone of Henry Hatche, Merchant Adventurer, who died 1533. He gave an Eſtate of 180 l. per Ann. lying in Ickleſham, near Haſtings in Suſſex, to this Town, for the Repair of the Church and Chancel, and for the mending of the High-ways.

A Monument of Thomas Manſfield, who gave Six Alms-houſes for as many poor Widows, at 4 l. per Ann. a-piece. Here are alſo Memorials of John Haywood, once Mayor of this Town, who gave Four large Silver Flaggons for the Service of the Holy Communion; he died 1628: Of John Harriſon, 1498: Of Will. Upton, 1423: Of Dionyſia Holme, 1497: Of Mr. Henry Page, 1434; under whoſe Conduct the Navy of the Ports took 120 Sail of French Ships laden with Salt, Iron, &c. Of Alice, the Wife of Will. Malbains, 1433: Of Will. Ledes, 1419: Of John Pay, the ſame Year. A fair Monument of John Fagg, Eſq; 1598; he Married a Finch. Memorials alſo of Will. Thornbury, 1402; and of —— Faicham, 1427: Of Thorn and Tong about 300 Years ago: Of Feverſham, 280: And of Ruſt, Norton, Wigmore, Read, Colwell, Finch, &c. and a Monument for Southhouſe, who wrote the Treatiſe about Feverſham-Abbey.

The Advowſon of this Place was given to the Abbey of St. Auſtin by King William the Iſt; and the Church was appropriated to that Abbey by Pope Alexander, about the Year 1168. The Manor that King gave to one of his Normans. In King John's Time there was a great and long Diſpute between the Crown and the Abbot of St. Auſtin, about the Right of Patronage to this Church: For tho' King William had given it to that Abbey, as was juſt now ſaid, yet Hubert Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and ſome others, perſwaded the King that the Advowſon was devolved to him; and accordingly he preſented to it, and ſent his Clerk down to be admitted: This the Abbey withſtood, and ſent ſome of their Monks thither to keep Poſſeſſion of the Church: On which the King ſent a Precept to the Sheriff to raiſe the Poſſe Comitatûs, and to reſtore his Preſentee: The Attempt of which the Monks ſo violently oppoſed, that Blows were forced to be uſed; and the Monks were pulled out of the Church by the Head and Shoulders, ſeveral of them being beaten and wounded in the Fray. During this Buſtle, John, Cardinal of St. Stephens, the Pope's Legate for Scotland, happened to paſs thro' Canterbury; to whom the Monks immediately ran with dreadful Complaints againſt the King. The Cardinal adviſed them to the uſual Refuge; which was, to ſend ſome of their Body to Rome, and to make their Complaint to the Pope. They did ſo, and took the Legate's Recommendatory Letter along with them. On this the Pope appoints a Commiſſion to examine into the Matter; but the Monks, in the mean time, making the King a Preſent of 200 Marks, with a fine Palfrey, or Horſe for his own Saddle, the King not only receded from his Claim, but took them into his Protection, and they had his Friendſhip and Patronage for the future; and ſo this Quarrel ended.

A. D. 903. A Parliament (or general Moot or Council) was called and held in this Town by King Athelſtane, where ſeveral Laws were Enacted. And then probably, as Lambard obſerves, here was ſome Manor Houſe belonging to the King.

A Market is here kept on Wedneſdays and Saturdays: And Two Annual Fairs of Ten Days each, viz. on February the 14th, and on Auguſt the 1ſt, the latter of which was granted by King Henry the IId.

The Town is large and fair, with one very long and large Street; the Market-Houſe is a good one; the Place is well Peopled, and in a Flouriſhing State; being in the Neighbourhood of one of the beſt Parts of Kent, and having a very commodious Creek to bring in or carry out their Goods and Commodities; and here they have a Place to build ſuch ſmall Hoys and Veſſels as their Trade requires.

The Fiſhery of Milton was by King John granted to the Abbey here; and after the Diſſolution, the Fiſhing Grounds here were granted to Sir George Sondes: Theſe are accounted the beſt in England for Oyſters; which the Dutch uſually buy with ready Money, and have laid out this way hereabouts 2 or 3000 l. per Ann. as I have been informed: And by ſome Papers of Mr. Filmer Southouſe's, which I have had the Favour to ſee, I find that above Seventy Families, in the Town of Feverſham, have been maintained annually by theſe Fiſhing Grounds; and this helped to furniſh the Crown with Seamen on occaſion.

The Fiſhermen here have one very good Cuſtom; they will admit no one to take out his Freedom, unleſs he be a Married Man.

Feverſham gives Name to the whole Hundred here, which is a pretty large one.

A. D. 812. in a Charter of Kenulf King of Mercia, this Place is called the King's Little Town.

The Extent of the Abbot of Feverſham's Juriſdiction over the Fiſhing-grounds above-mentioned, was from Colemanſole unto the Snowtwears, thence to Ride; and all Wrecks, Flottſons, Jettſons, Lagons, &c. here found, belonged to him.

A. D. 1550, one Thomas Ardenne, ſome time Mayor of this Town, was moſt barbarouſly murdered here by the Procurement of his Wife and her Accomplices, in the great Houſe Eaſt of the Abbey Gate. See the Story at large in Hollingſhead's Hiſtory, Vol. 2. p. 1062.

A. D. 1346, in the 20th Year of King Edward the IIId, when that brave Prince went over to the Siege of Calais, this Town ſent in that Expedition Two Ships and Fifty Three Mariners.

In the 31ſt, 37th, and 38th of that King, the Violence of the Winds and Tides did very great Damage in the Places hereabouts, as at Tenham, Lodenham, Stone, and Ore, as well as here at Feverſham. And therefore there were then ſeveral Commiſſions of Sewers granted to Tho. de Lodelow, Will. de Halden, and others, to enquire into the preſent State of, and to ſecure the Lands for the future.

The Pits here mentioned by Childrey in Britan. Bacon. p. 67. which are called the Hagdale Pit, near the Town; the great Chalk Pit by the Highway between this Town and Boctton, another near Copton Farm houſe, and another between the Churches of Davington and Stone, are not like thoſe I took notice of near Dartford; nor is it probable they were either deſigned for, or put to the ſame uſe: For indeed, as Cambden obſerves, they ſeem to be only common Chalk Pits; and the Matter that was dug out from them, I believe was chiefly employed in the manuring of their Ground: Which is a Practice that Pliny took notice of to be uſed by the Britains, as long ſince as his Time.

As to the Abbey of Feverſham, you will find an Account of it in the Chapter of Religious Houſes.

'Tis probable, that tho' this Place might receive its principal Advantage from the Abbey; yet it was conſiderable before that Time; which the Advantage of its Situation ſo near the Sea, and on a Navigable Creek, could not but render it. And there ſeems once, and long before that, to have been ſome Manor Houſe, &c. belonging to the King here: For King William the Iſt did not only give the Advowſon of the Church to the Abbey of St. Auſtin's, but the Manor it ſelf alſo to one of his Normans who had ſerved him faithfully.

A. D. 1430. A Battel was fought between John Upton of this Place, Notary, the Appellant; and John Down, Gent. Defendant, on a Charge of High-Treaſon brought againſt the latter, by the ſaid Upton. It was in the Liſts in Smithfield, King Henry the VIth being preſent; and after they had fought a good while, the King took up the Matter and pardoned both.

Places of Note here:

1. Feverſham Manor; upon the Diſſolution of the Monaſteries in King Henry the VIIIth's Time, this came to and ſtaid in the Crown till King Charles the Iſt's Reign; and then was granted to Sir Dudley Diggs of Chilham-Caſtle; who not long after ſettled it on his ſecond Son Mr. John Diggs. This Gentleman ſold it to Sir George Sondes of Lees Court, who was Knight of the Bath; and afterwards by King Charles the IId was created Earl of Feverſham; having been ſome time before made Baron of Throwley, and Viſcount Sondes of Lees

Court: But the Earldom was only for his Life, and the Remainder to Lewes Lord Duras, and Marquis of Blanque-Fort in France, and Baron of Holdenby in England. He Marrying the Lady Mary, eldeſt Daughter of the ſaid George Earl of Feverſham (who died 1677,) and being naturalized by Act of Parliament, ſucceeded his Father-in-Law in all his Titles; and died himſelf a few Years ſince. The youngeſt Daughter of this George Sondes, Earl of Feverſham, was Married to the preſent Earl of Rockingham; and his moſt worthy Son and Heir, Edward Lord Sondes, of Lees Court in Shelvich Pariſh, is the preſent Poſſeſſor in this Manor.

2. Fiſhbourn, is an ancient Manor here, which formerly had Owners of that Name: But in King Edward the IIId's Reign it was come into the Poſſeſſion of the Drylonds; and here the Property continued till the beginning of King Henry the VIIIth's Reign, and then it was alienated to Simons; in which Name it continued in Philpot's Time.

3. Cokeſditch in this Pariſh, was the Seat of the Ancient and Eminent Family of the Drylonds; and by the Marriage of Catherine, Sole Heir of Sir Richard Drylond, it went to Richard Norton of Milton, Eſq; and he bequeathed it by Will to his ſecond Son Will. Norton; in whoſe Family it continued till King James the Iſt's Reign, and then was ſold to Parſons; from whence it paſſed the ſame way to Aſhton; and by his Daughter and Heir it went into the Poſſeſſion of Buck.

The Arms of the Town of Feverſham, are a Ship with Mariners on Board, and a Trumpeter ſounding. Thoſe of the Mayor are the Virgin with Chriſt in her Arms; at her Feet, on an Eſcotcheon, Three Lyons paſſant Guardant.

It appears by the Tower Records, that in the 7th Year of King Henry the IVth, there was a Grant to the Mayor of Feverſham, to have a Mace born before him with the Arms of the Cinque Ports fixed on the Top of it: And in the 25th Year of King Henry the VIth, another Grant, that the Inhabitants of Feverſham ſhall Anſwer no where but in the Court of Shipway, not before the Admiral of England; and that they ſhall be exonerated from all Rent to the Conſtable of Dover-Caſtle, Cart. 25 H. 6. N. 39.

FOLKSTONE, Folcheſtone, Lapis Populi; lies at the South-Eaſt ſide of Kent adjoining to the Sea, about Five Miles Southward from Dover, in the Bailiwick of Stowting, Lath of Shipway, and Eaſt Diviſion of the County; in the Deanery of Dover, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. There were anciently Five Churches in this Town, in one of which, Kilburn ſaith, was buried John Lord Fines; but it was his Son James: who was, as his Father had been before him, Lord-Warden of the Five Ports, and Conſtable of Dover-Caſtle in the Reign of King William the Iſt. But in which of theſe Churches the Remains of that Great Man lay, doth not appear.

Three of the Names of them are preſerved, viz. St. Mary's, St. Peter's, and St. Paul's: And that which is now ſtanding, is Dedicated to St. Mary and St. Eanſwithe, and was Founded by one Nigellus de Muneville, then Lord of Folkeſtone, in the Year 1095. This Church the late Biſhop of Chicheſter, Dr. Williams, in his Map of the Dioceſe of Canterbury, marks as a Chapel; but in the Valor. Beneficior. 'tis called a Vicarage, and rated there at 10*l.* 2*d. per Ann.* In it is a Monument of the Herdſons; and Memorials of Philpot, Read, Kennet, &c.

'Tis very probable, by this Number of Churches, and by other Circumſtances, that Folkſtone hath formerly been a Place of conſiderable Note. A. D. 927, it was given to the Priory of Canterbury by King Ethelſtane; and being afterwards, ſome how or other, torn from it, was reſtored again to it by King Knute, A. D. 1038, and then it was ſo ſettled, that the Archbiſhop could not alienate it without the conſent of the King and the Monks.

In the Time of King William the Iſt, William de Albrancis, one of the Eight Lieutenants of Dover-Caſtle appointed by the Conqueror, was Lord of this Place.

The Place hath been ſubject to ſeveral Misfortunes; and was in particular almoſt deſtroyed by Earl Goodwin, when he and his Sons were baniſhed the Realm; and then Four of its Five Churches were Demoliſhed: And it was after this burnt by the French in the Reign of King Edward the IIId.

King Eadbald, the Son of the firſt Ethelbert, and Father to St. Eanſwith, to whom the preſent Church is Dedicated, built here a Caſtle on the South part of the Town; but this falling to decay, Will. de Albrancis above-named, A. D. 1068. built a new Fort on its Ruins.

Tho' by the Roman Bricks and Coins which have been found here, 'tis certain this Place was of Note in the Time of the Romans; yet it doth not appear that they had any Settlement or Eminent Gariſon here: But 'tis likely it was one of thoſe Places where, in the Time of the younger Theodoſius, Watch-Towers were built to diſcover and to keep off the Saxon Pirates. And 'tis almoſt certain, that what is now called Caſtle-Hill here, was the Place where that Watch-Tower ſtood; for there the Ruins of old Walls, and ſome large Roman Bricks have been found.

Biſhop Stillingfleet in his Orig. Britan. and Somner in his R. Ports and Forts, thinks, and I believe very truly, that Folkſtone was the Lapis Tituli of Nennius; and the Place where Vortimer had his laſt Battel with the Saxons; and where he ordered his Monument to be placed after his Death. Tho' many other Authors have ſuppoſed it to be Stonar in the Iſle of Thanet; becauſe of the alluſion of the Name Stonar to Lapis Tituli. But indeed Nennius doth not lay the Scene of Vortimer's laſt Battle with the Saxons in Thanet; but ſaith it was in Campo juxta Lapidem Tituli qui eſt ſuper Ripam Gallici maris; which agrees very well with the Situation of this Place; and he had before given an Account, that Vortimer had beaten the Saxons in Three Battels before this in the Iſle of Thanet; and therefore if this Action had been there too, he would have ſo expreſſed it. And if Vortimer, by ordering his Monument to be erected in the Place of this Battel, deſigned by it, like Scipio Africanus, to deter the Enemy from future Inſults; Folkſtone was a much more proper Place for it than Stonar, which lies low and flat, and is ſubject to Inundations of the Sea; whereas here the Situation is lofty, on riſing Hills over-looking the Sea: Add to this that Somner ſhews, the Name of Stonar probably, is not derived from Lapis, but is only a Contraction from Eſtonore; as I ſhall explain to you more fully when I come to ſpeak of Stonar: And then it will be no unnatural Suppoſition, that by Lapis Tituli, ſhould be read Lapis Populi; and that Folkſtone is the Place where that Eminent Battel was fought. And now we are in at Gueſſing-work, what if we ſhould imagine the Bones in the Charnel-Houſe at Hythe, to have been picked up from the Hills, covered with dead Bodies, after this famous Battel; and to have been piled up there in Memory of ſo ſignal a Victory: For the Saxons were beat back to their Ships with a great Slaughter; ſo that they came not hither again to invade the Kingdom in Five Years after.

The Town of Folkſtone is a Member of the Town and Port of Dover; and was incorporated in the Time of King Edward the IIId, by the Name of the Mayor, Jurats, and Commonalty of the Town of Folkſtone; and before that by the the Name of Barons of the Town of Folkſtone. The Day of Election for Mayor is September 8. Their Common Seal hath on one Side a Ship, and on the other a King in his Robes, and Crowned.

From an ancient Manuſcript called the Cuſtumal of Folkſtone, which was generouſly communicated to me by Sir Baſil Dixwell of Brome, Bar. Lieutenant of Dover-Caſtle, and a very great Encourager of this Work; I took the following Account of the Laws and Cuſtoms of this Place. By ancient Uſage therefore, or by Charter, they have theſe Privileges.

1. To chuſe a Mayor annually on the Nativity of our Bleſſed Lady, the Horn ſhall be blown for the common Aſſembly, in the Church-yard of our Lady: And then the common Box, with the common Seal in it, ſhall be brought: And the late Mayor ſhall give the new one his Charge and his Oath; which Oath alſo all the Twelve Jurats ſhall take: Viz. "To be true and faithful "to the King, his Heirs, and Succeſſors; law- "fully to maintain the Franchiſes of the Town; "and Rich and Poor in one Right: So God "him help, and his Saints". Kiſſing the Book.

2. The Jurats have nothing to do in the Election of the Mayor, the ſole Right being in the Commonalty; but in Caſe the Commons chuſe one not fitting for the Office, the Jurats may make them go to a new Election.

3. If the Perſon they chuſe, and the Jurats approve, refuſe to ſerve the Office, the Commons may pull down his Chief Houſe.

4. If a Jurat choſen by the Mayor refuſe to act, he ſhall ſuffer the ſame Puniſhment.

5. They claim to have a Bailiff by Commiſſion from the Lord of the Fee, which Commiſſion muſt be read in Court, and then the Mayor is to give him his Charge, after which he may chuſe ſuch a Serjeant as he will be anſwerable for.

6. If a Man be found dead within the Franchiſe, the Mayor as Coroner ſhall have the Sight of the Body, and the Bailiff ſummons in an Inqueſt. If any one be indicted for the Murder, the Mayor ſhall charge the Bailiff to attach him; and if he can find no Pledges, he ſhall be the Bailiff's Priſoner in the Ward within the Franchiſes; if he find Security, he ſhall only be bound to appear at the next Hundred Court; where on Proof, he may be convicted; but if no one appear againſt him, he ſhall be diſcharged, after Proclamation made in that and the two next Hundreds.

7. They claim to determine all Pleas of the Crown, of Life, and Member, before the ſaid Mayor, Bailiff, and Jurats, except ſuch as belong to the Court of Shipway.

8. If a Man be appealed of Plea of Life and Member, the Bailiff ſhall take ſufficient Pledge of the Appellant to proſecute: And if it be for Life and Death, the Bailiff ſhall attach the Body of the Criminal; and alſo ſequeſter his Goods and Moveables, by the Sight of the Mayor, or any Jurat; but he muſt not alien them; for if he be convicted, the Goods are forfeited: And his Tenement after a Year and a Day ſhall go to the next Heir; or if there be none, to the Lord of the Fee.

9. When the Appellant and Appellee come before the Mayor, Bailiff, and Jurats, the Serjeant ſhall lead him in bound; but when he gives his Anſwer, be unbound: If the Appellee plead not guilty, he muſt bring 36 Men of good Fame againſt the next Day aſſigned, who ſhall ſwear that he is not guilty: And when theſe 36 are called over in Court, and if any one be abſent, the Priſoner ſhall be adjudged to Death; that is, He ſhall fall in the Valley of Stoodway. If they all Anſwer, the Mayor and Bailiff ſhall chuſe 12 out of them, and if theſe 12 (and the Appellee himſelf) will all ſwear that he is not guilty, he ſhall be acquitted: And the Appellant ſhall be attached, and all his Goods at the King's Will.

But if any one of the 12 above-mentioned, withdraw from the Book when he ſhould be charged, the Priſoner ſhall be adjudged to Death, as above, (i. e. thrown down into the Valley.)

10. No Hundred ſhall be held between the Day of the Nativity of our Lady, and St. Andrew: And never leſs than 15 Days between one Hundred and another.

There is a Market here every Thurſday.

Sandgate-Caſtle, a Fort here by the Sea Side, was built by King Henry the VIIIth, as a Defence againſt French or other Invaſions.

The preſent Miniſter, Mr. Sacket, acquainted me with an odd Cuſtom uſed by the Fiſhermen of Folkſtone to this Day. They chuſe Eight of the largeſt and beſt Whitings out of every Boat, when they come Home from that Fiſhery; and ſell them a-part from the reſt: And out of this ſeparate Money, is a Feaſt made every Chriſtmas Eve; which they call Rumball: The Maſter of each Boat provides this Feaſt for his own Company; ſo that there are as many different Entertainments as there are Boats. Theſe Whitings they call alſo Rumbal Whitings: He conjectures probably enough, that the Word is a Corruption from Rumwold; and that they were anciently deſigned as an Offering to St. Rumwold: To whom a Chapel, he ſaith, was once dedicated, and which ſtood between Folkſtone and Hythe, but is long ſince demoliſhed: And that probably there might alſo once be an Altar to that Saint, in Folkſtone Church; there being convenient Places for ſetting ſuch a Thing up, at the Eaſt End of both the ſide Iſles of the Chancel.

As to the Religious Houſes here, you will find an Account of them in their proper Place.

Places of Note here,

1. Folkſtone Manor; (in Domeſday Book this Place is written Fulcheſtan,) and that of Walton; and are ſaid then to belong to Odo Earl of Kent, afterwards they came into the Poſſeſſion of Nigellus de Muneville, and next into that of William de Albrancis; but all theſe either did or ſhould have held it from the Nunnery or Monaſtery to which it was firſt given, together with the Manor of Walton, by Eadbald King of Kent; and after the former of theſe was deſtroyed by the Danes, and that a new Priory had been erected on the Ruins of the old Nunnery, the Manors were again confirmed to that Houſe; and here they continued till the great Diſſolution in King Henry the VIIIth's Reign: But then they were granted from the Crown to Edward Lord Clinton, who that very Year (viz. in the 30th Year of Henry the VIIIth) ſold them to Thomas Lord Cromwell, Earl of Eſſex; but he being attainted two Years after this, and executed, they returned to the Crown; and by Queen Mary in her 2d Year were regranted to Edward Lord Clinton, with whom they did no more ſtay now than before; for in a ſhort Time he ſold them again to Mrs. Henry Herdſon; and her Grandſon, Mr. Francis Herdſon alienated them about the End of Queen Elizabeth, to his Uncle Mr. John Herdſon; who at his Deceaſe bequeathed them to his Nephew, Sir Baſil Dixwell, Knight and Baronet: From him they went to his Nephew Mark Dixwell, Eſq; and in Philpot's Time were in the Poſſeſſion of his Deſcendant Baſil Dixwell, Eſq;.

The Manors of the Court Leet and Court Baron, and alſo of the Priory of Folkſtone were A. D. 1697. ſold by Sir Baſil Dixwell, Bar. to Jacob Desbouverie, Eſq;. As were alſo,

2. Halton, 3. Woolverton, two other Manors which be in this Pariſh and Hundred; and of which Philpot hath made no mention.

4. Terlingham, 5. Ackhanger, are two more Manors here, which as appears by Domeſday Book, did, when that Survey was taken, belong to William de Muneville: By whoſe Daughter and Heir they went in Marriage to William de Averenches, whoſe Son of the ſame Name was the laſt of the Male Line here: But by Matilda, his only Daughter and Heir, theſe Manors went in Marriage to Hamon de Crevequer, Baron of Leeds Caſtle; who had then ſo great an Eſtate in this County, that he was called the Great Lord of Kent; and had ſo much Eſteem here, that by the Conſent and Counſel of the Barons of the Cinque Ports, the Cuſtody of the Sea Coaſts from Haſtings to Pool was committed to his Charge, Pat. 19. H. 3. Memb. 14. He died poſſeſs'd of theſe Places in the 47th Year of that Prince: But his Son of the ſame Name, involving himſelf in the Cauſe of Simon de Montfort, Earl of Leiceſter, againſt the King; loſt a good deal of his Hereditary Patrimony, though he himſelf was pardoned at the Pacification de Kenelworth: But Leeds Caſtle, Berſted, Chetham, theſe two Manors, and ſome other Lands in Kent he kept. And dying without Iſſue, his four Siſters became his Coheirs; one of which, Eleanor, marrying Bertram de Criol, carried theſe Manors into that Name: This Gentleman died poſſeſs'd of them in the 23d Year of King Edward the Iſt, leaving an only Son who died Childleſs: But by Joan his Siſter, they went in Marriage to Sir Richard de Rokeſly, who likewiſe left only a Daughter; who married to Sir Thomas Poynings, Father to Michael Poynings de Terlingham: And in this great Family theſe Manors continued till King Henry the VIIth's Reign; about the End of which, Sir Edward Poynings gave them in Dower with his Natural Daughter to Thomas Lord Clinton: and his Son Edward, Lord Clinton, about the Beginning of Queen Mary, ſold them to Herdſon; from whence they went by Teſtament to Dixwell, as the Manors of Folkſtone and Walton abovementioned did.

6. Morehall is a ſmall Manor in this Pariſh, which in the 27th Year of Henry the IIId was in the Poſſeſſion of William de Valentia, and who then obtained a Charter of Privilege for it: After this it was the Eſtate of a Family of the Name of Morehall; for John de Morehall paid Aid for it at making the Black Prince Knight. Next about the Middle of King Henry the IVth, it went into the Poſſeſſion of the Bakers; by a Daughter of that Family, into that of Brandred; thence it was ſold to Sir Thomas Brown, whoſe Deſcendant Sir Matthew Brown ſold it to Goodman, in whoſe Family it remained in Philpot's Time.

7. Hopehouſe is a Manor here which anciently belonged to the Houghams, a Family of great Note in theſe Parts: Robert de Hougham died ſeized of it in the 41ſt Year of Henry the IIId; but in King Edward the IId's Reign, it was become the Poſſeſſion of the Clintons; for William Clinton, Earl of Huntington, died ſeized of it in the 28th Year of Edward the IIId: From him it went to his Kinſman John de Clinton; whoſe great Grandſon, John Lord Clinton, about the Beginning of King Henry the VIIth, ſold it to Davis; from which Family by a Daughter, and partly by Purchaſe, it went to Lellington; and he ſold it to Hopday; whoſe Son was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

8. Bredmer or Berdmer is a Place here which lies part of it in Cheriton: It formerly had Proprietors of its own Name; as appears by ancient Deeds and Court Rolls: But in the 20th Year of King Edward the IIId, it was come into the Poſſeſſion of William de Brockhall, who held it as a fourth Part of a Knight's Fee. From this Family, by the Marriage of Elizabeth, Daughter of Thomas Brookhall, it went to Richard Selling, Eſq; in whoſe Family it ſtaid till the beginning of King Henry the VIIIth, and then was ſold to Edmund Inmith, a Retainer to Thomas Lord Clinton: He gave it his ſecond Son, Edmund Inmith, who left only two Daughters Co-heirs; one of which, by Marriage, carried this Eſtate to Baker, who ſold it to Benn, the Proprietor in Philpot's Time.

9. Hankewill in this Pariſh; which as appears by Rot. Eſc. had in the 20th Year of King Edward the IIId the Reputation of a Manor.

In the 48th Year of King Edward the IIId, the Church of Folkſtone was granted to the Abbot of Lollay in Normandy, becauſe the Priory built here by Segrave, and Lord Clinton was a Cell to that Abbey: But all the Religious Houſes belonging to the Priors Alreas, were ſuppreſſed by Henry the Vth; and this among the Reſt.

10. Caſtle-Hill is ſituated about a Mile and an half North North-Weſt from the Town, on a very high Hill: The upper Part of the Work is ſmall, and of an oval Figure; the outer Caſtle is alſo much of the ſame Form; and the whole containing about 2 Acres of Ground. On the South South-Eaſt Side, where the Hill is very ſteep, 'tis compaſſed but with one ſingle Ditch or Trench; but on the Eaſt with a double one, and on the North and Weſt with a Triple one. There is a fine Spring of Water at the Bottom of it. There is no doubt but that this is the Caſtle or Place where the Roman Watch-Tower ſtood. Lambard ſaith, Part of the Walls were remaining in his Time; but now ſcarce any Thing of that Nature is viſible.

Darell in his Manuſcript Treatiſe about Dover Caſtle, preſerved in the College of Arms by Doctors Commons, mentions a Place called Langdon, near Folkſtone; and which was given to Godfreyde de Say, by King Henry the IIId, towards the Repair of Arſicks or Say's Tower in Dover-Caſtle.

In the 7th Year of King Edward the Iſt. John de Sandwich and Bertram de Criol claimed the Hundred of Folkſtone, as held of the King in Capite, at a Rent of 20 s. per Ann. and to have ſeveral Liberties there, as Wreck of the Sea, Aſſiſe of Brandy, Beer, Freewarren, &c.

In the 6th Year of King John's Reign, a Wedneſday's Market, and a Fair on September the 22d, was granted to William de Albrincis for this Town of Folkſtone.

FORDWICH, Fordich, Fordwic; i. e. The Town upon the Ford. In Domeſday Book, 'tis called the little Burgh of Fordwich: It lies towards the North-Eaſt Part of Kent, by the River Stoure about two Miles and an half North Eaſtward from Canterbury, in the Bailiwick of Bridge and Petham, Lath of St. Auſtin, and Eaſt Diviſion of the County. 'Tis in the Deanery and Dioceſe of Canterbury; and the Church is dedicated to St. Mary's. A Rectory; and valued in the King's Books at 5 l. 15 s. 2 d.

'Tis a Member of the Town and Port of Sandwich, and incorporated by the Name of the Mayor, Jurats, and Commonalty of the Town of Fordwich; and before by the Name of the Barons of the Town of Fordwich. The Day of Election for Mayor is the Monday after St. Andrew's Day.

The Liberty of the Corporation and of the Cinque Ports claim over it; and 'tis in the Diviſion of the Juſtices of that Corporation. But the Liberty of St. Auſtin claims over the Manor of Fordwich, which was given to that Abbey by King Edward the Confeſſor, towards their Cloathing: Ad Veſtitem.

This Place paid 8 Pounds towards carrying King Philip beyond the Sea: From whence ſome gueſs may be made of its State at that Time: And I believe it hath been formerly a much larger Place than it is at preſent. And it ſeems plain, that the River here hath been Navigable; for in the Evidences of the Donations to the Church of Canterbury, it appears that A. D. 747. Eadbert King of Kent, gave to the Church of Reculver, the Tribute of one Ship in this Town.

Places of Note here:

1. The Manor of Fordwich was given, as is above-ſaid, to St. Auſtin's in Canterbury, by King Edward the Confeſſor. And ſome ſay that a Place called Hemphale in this Pariſh, and which is as an Appendage to this Manor, paid to that Abbey a Quit-Rent in Hemp. On the general Diſſolution in King Henry the VIIIth's Reign, this Manor came to the Crown, and ſtaid there till King Edward the VIth, in his Seventh Year, granted it to Sir Thomas Cheyney; who not long after ſold it to John Johnſon; and he parted with it the ſame way to Paramour; who ſold it to Elizabeth Finch, Widow of Sir Moile Finch: And her Son Sir Thomas Finch, afterwards Earl of Winchelſea, ſold it to John Finch, Baron of Fordwich, and Lord Keeper of the Great Seal of England, A. D. 1640; and he continued the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

2. Hermeſland is a Manor here, omitted by Philpot, which formerly was the Eſtate of Mr. Simon Harleſtone. But he, A. D. 1596. ſold it to John Graydon, Eſq; who was Vice-Admiral of the White Squadron, and commanded that Fleet which went to the Weſt-Indies in the Year 1703. and he now lives here in Poſſeſſion of it.

3. Tancrey Iſland: This is a Place omitted by Philpot alſo, in his ſpecial Mention of this Place, but ſpoken of occaſionally in his Deſcription of Betſhanger: Where he ſaith, p. 76. That in the Beginning of King Richard the IId, it was poſſeſſed by Bertram de Tancrey, whom he calls Lord of Tancrey Iſland in Fordwich; and who had an Eſtate in Betſhanger in this Reign, and which continued in his Family till the End of King Henry the IVth. And at p. 179. he ſaith alſo, That the Family of Beverly de Beverley in Harbledown removed to this Iſland from thence.

Fordwich is famous for excellent Trouts which are taken hereabouts: And as I am informed, go all out of the River into the Sea at certain Times in the Year; ſo that not a Trout is then to be found in the River.

FRINDSBURY, Frendesbury, Freondesbirig, anciently Æſlingham, ſaith Kilburn; lies towards the North Side of the County, by the River Medway, about a Mile Northwards from the City of Rocheſter, in the Bailiwick of Hoo, Hundred of Shamell, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and North one of Juſtices in that Lath: In the Deanery and Dioceſe of Rocheſter. The Church is dedicated to All-Saints. A Vicarage; and valued in the King's Books at 10 l. 3 s. 11 d. ob. The Church is neat, and in good Repair: And in it are Memorials of the Interment of Norton, Minor, Canon, Needler, &c. and a Monument of John Butler in the Year 1621. and another of Mr. Watſon. The Liberty of the Biſhop of Rocheſter claims here. Laurence de St. Martin, Biſhop of Rocheſter, by Licenſe from the Pope, appropriated the Church of Friendſbury to that See.

This Pariſh ought anciently to have contributed towards the Repair of the firſt Peer or Arch of Rocheſter-Bridge.

In the Textus Roffenſis f. 209. b. is this Note: Frandesberia defendebat ſe T.E.R. pro x. ſolinis & nunc pro vij. & eſt appretiatum xxv. Libr. & infra Leugam de Tonabrigge eſt: Inde tantum x. ſolidos & etiam de Hallinges eſt tantum infra eandem Leugam quod eſt appretiatum vij. Solidos. And then 'tis ſaid, in the ſame Place, of the Manor of Southfleet: Ricardus habet inde infra Leugam ſuam valens 20 Solidos. This was Richard de Clare, who was Earl of Glouceſter, and Lord of Tunbridge Caſtle; and having ſome Eſtate hereabouts, got theſe Places where it lay, to be accounted within the Juriſdiction of the Lowey or Leucate of Tunbridge: Of which I ſhall give you a full Account under Tunbridge.

The Church of Stroud is reckoned in the Textus Roffenſis as a Chapel to Friendsbury.

Places of Note here:

1. Æſlingham, or Eſlingham, which was anciently a Place of that Note and Eminence, as to give a Name to the whole Pariſh, before that of Friendsbury came in uſe. This Place was given to the Church of Rocheſter, by Offa King of Mercia, A. D. 764, as 20 Plow Lands; with all its Appurtenances and Advantages, in as full a Manner as it ever was enjoyed by the Earls and Princes of the Kings of Kent. This was done when Eardulf was Biſhop of Rocheſter, with the Conſent of Bregowine the Archbiſhop, and of Heabert then King of Kent: And with it, as appendant to it in the common Wood, he gave three Denberies; viz. Hollandſpic, Lindbricg and Wedanbricg. Vid. Textus Roffenſis, f. 124. And this Grant of King Offa's was confirmed by Sigered, King of half the Province of Kent; and Livery and Seiſin given to Biſhop Eardulf, by the Delivery of a Turf of this Land: (Which ſhews by the bye the Antiquity of that way of giving Poſſeſſion:) And this Prince added to the Gift four more Denberies in the common Wood, or the Wealdſeweſtra; Billingden, Chalkbury, Meoſden, and Rindigſel. And if theſe Denberies were near this Place, 'tis a probable Argument that the Weald then came up thus far.

In the ſame moſt valuable Manuſcript, f. 202. I find theſe Words: De Æſlingham Terra Sancti Andreæ quam Epiſcopus Gundulfus dedit Goesfrido Talebot, retinuit idem Epiſcopus omnem decimam omnium rerum ad opus monachorum ſuorum, quam & dedit illis eternaliter poſſidendam. Now whether this were a real Gift, or only granting this Talebot a Leaſe of the Premiſes, I can't determine from this Paſſage only: But the latter appears plain from ſubſequent Accounts. For Philpot ſaith it appears, that John de St. Clere was Tenant to the Convent for this very Land in the 9th Year of King Edward the IIId. After him it went into the Tenure of a Family of the Name of Neal, who had a large Eſtate about Higham in this Neighbourhood. In the 6th Year of Henry the VIth, John Rykeld was Tenant to the Convent here; was Sheriff of Kent then, and kept his Sherivalty at this Place: In King Henry the VIIth's Reign it was come into the Tenure of the Frogenhalls: But at the general Suppreſſion in the next Reign, it was in Leaſe to Audley and Fiſher: But coming to the Crown, King Henry the VIIIth, granted the Fee-ſimple in Reverſion to Thomas Lord Cromwell, Earl of Eſſex; but on his Execution in the 32d Year of King Henry VIIIth it reverted to the Crown, and was granted to Sir William Drury of Norfolk: In whoſe Family it ſtaid till the Beginning of King Charles the Iſt, and then was ſold to Henry Clerk, Eſq; Recorder of Rocheſter: And in Philpot's Time was in the Poſſeſſion of Francis Clerke, Eſq; his Son and Heir. This Family he ſaith are deſcended from Sir John Clerk of Willoughby in Warwickſhire, who for taking the Duke of Orleance Priſoner in the Battel of Bomy and Speurs in King Henry the VIIIth's Time, had this Augmentation given to his Coat of Arms; viz. on a Canton Azure, a Demy-Ram Saliant Argent, between two Flowers de Lis, and over all a Button or Truncheon.

Whether the Church here at Eſlingham were originally the Parochial one or not, I don't know; but a long time after the preſent Church of Frindsbury became ſo, here was a Church or Chapel remaining, in which Divine Service was performed; though of late Years the People of Elſlingham come to Frindsbury Church, and have gotten leave to bury their Dead there; which before they did in their own Chapel.

2. Chaddington; this is a Place in Friendsbury, which anciently belonged to the Lords Cobham; and continued in that Noble Family till the Time of King James the Iſt, when it became forfeited to the Crown by the Attainder of Henry Lord Cobham. That King ſome Years after gave it to his Kinſman Lodowick, Duke of Lenox; but he dying without Iſſue it deſcended to his Nephew James Duke of Lenox; who left a Son, which after the Dutcheſs his Mother who was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time, was Heir at Law to this Manor.

3. Goddington is a Place here which formerly belonged to the Ancient Family of Charles: Robert Charles who had an Eſtate at Hilden by Tunbridge, and was Bailiff of the Foreſt or Chace there under Robert de Clere, Earl of Glouceſter, died poſſeſs'd of this Place in the 29th Year of Edward the Iſt. His Deſcendant Nicholas Charles dying without Iſſue in the 11th Year of King Richard the IId, one of his Siſters, Alice, carried this Eſtate in Marriage to William Smith, Eſq; who was Sheriff of Kent in the 9th Year of King Henry the IVth; and a Daughter of this Name carried it likewiſe by Marriage to one of the Wattons of Rydley near Aſhe: And in that Family it continued in Philpot's Time.

4. Wainſcott is a Place in Frindsbury, which anciently was part of the Eſtate of the Colepepers of Preſton, in Aylesford Pariſh, and continued there till Queen Elizabeth's Reign; and then was ſold to Randolph: And again in the next Reign it was alienated to Somers, who was deſcended from William Somers, Chancellor of the Exchequer to King Henry the VIth; and who had a great Eſtate about Hoo, in this Neighbourhood: But from this Family, about the End of King Charles the Iſt's Reign, it went by Sale to Mr. Robinſon of Rocheſter, the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

5. Brombege, in the Text. Roffenſis, Bromgebege; is the old Name of an Eſtate here belonging anciently to the Priory of Rocheſter; and was given to it by Ecbert King of Kent, A. D. 778. the Charter of which is Regiſtred in the Textus; it was half a Plow Land, and had a Marſh belonging to it beſides, there called Scaga, and ſaid to be then compaſſed all round with Water; and Two Years after he gave to that Convent another more dry Marſh containing Fifty Acres: This lay near the Bank of Jaenlade, Ynlade, or Inlett, which perhaps is the North Yenlet in Allhallows Pariſh, by the Iſle of Grain. The Grant was confirmed afterwards by a Charter of King Offa; and then the whole Eſtate of the Convent at Brombege was accounted at a whole Plow Land. After this, Coenulf King of Mercia gives Three Plow Lands to Swithune his Miniſter in common, with the Conſent of his Brother Cuthred King of Kent; and Swithune, at his Death, leaves it to that Convent. I have alſo an Original Charter of one William de Ros, in which he remits a Rent of 15*s.* due from the Church of Rocheſter for this Land at Brombege: This Deed, tho' dateleſs, muſt be as old as the Year 1100, becauſe Ernulfus is a Witneſs to it, and he was then Prior of Rocheſter.

6. Court-Lodge, is now the Houſe of the Manor of Friendsbury, which belongs to the Dean and Chapter of Rocheſter; and 'tis endowed with a Charter of Freewarren, and other uſual Privileges of Manors, with the Royalties of Fiſhing, Fowling, Hunting, &c.

7. Thorndune, or Thurnden, is a Place here which was given to Rocheſter Priory by the Widow of one Robert Latimer; for which Gift, the Monks ſtipulated with her to maintain her during her Life, with ſuch a daily Proviſion of Victuals as each Monk had; and beſides a Diſh of Fleſh-meat Four times a Week; to give her alſo ſuch Cloaths as became her Rank, to keep her two Servants; and over and above all this, to pay her 20*s. per Ann.* They alſo gave her in Hand at the executing the Donation, Sixty Shillings; but that Money ſhe had the Misfortune to have wheedled away from her by one Brodo a Presbyter, who had alſo gotten away her Daughter. One would think this were an Eſtate of good Value; for the Gentlewoman was only Tenant in it for Life, the Remainder being given to the Convent. Vid. Text. Roff. f. 200. b.

8. Upnor Caſtle; this Fort was built by Queen Elizabeth in the 3d Year of her Reign; of which I ſhall ſay more in the Chapter of the Caſtles in Kent.

Lambard in his Perambulation of Kent, p. 396. tells a pleaſant Story of the Original of the Term Friendsbury Clubs; which he ſaith was in uſe even in his Time.

In King Edward the Iſt's Reign, there being a great Drought, the Monks of Rocheſter, in order to obtain Rain by their Prayers, agreed upon a ſolemn Proceſſion from their Convent thro' the City, and ſo up to Friendsbury: But the Day appointed being very Windy and Stormy, they feared it would blow out their Tapers, diſorder their Banners and Veſtments, and make their Singing leſs heard; therefore they got leave of the Maſter of Stroud Hoſpital, to go thro' his Orchard: But the Brethren of that Houſe imagining that the Monks had ſome Deſign upon their Privileges (for there had formerly been Conteſts and Squabbles between the Two Houſes) without acquainting their Maſter with it, got together to aſſiſt them a certain Company of Fellows (whom the Hiſtory calls Ribalds) and Armed with Clubs and Batts, waited the Monks coming, in a kind of Ambuſh; and as ſoon as they had paſſed thro' the Hoſpital, and were got into the Orchard; theſe Brothers and their Aſſociates fell upon them and beat them moſt ſeverely, putting the Proceſſion all into diſorder, driving the Monks back out of their Houſe, and Bruiſing and Laming ſeveral of them. Theſe Ribalds who aſſiſted the Hoſpitallers in this Skirmiſh, ſeem to have been Friendsbury Men; for the Convent of Rocheſter afterwards got it enjoined upon this Pariſh as an Annual Penance, that a certain number of them ſhould come to the Priory in Proceſſion on Whitmonday with their Clubs, in memory of this Inſult: But how long the Friendsbury Men continued to perform this Penance, I don't know.

It appears by the Cuſtumale Roffenſe, f. 47. that this Eſtate at Friendsbury was ſo conſiderable, as to afford the Priory of Rocheſter a Firme or Subſiſtence in Proviſion for Three Months in the Year.

In the ſame Manuſcript is alſo an Account of the Cuſtomary Services of this Eſtate under this Title.

FRINSTED, Frenſtede, lies towards the Middle of Kent, about three Miles North from Lenham, in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Eyborne, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Eaſt one of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery of Sutton, and Dioceſe of Canterbury: And the Church is dedicated to St. Dunſtan: It hath a Low Tower, but is large. A Rectory; valued in the King's Books at 9 l. 11 s. 8 d.

This Place was anciently part of the Eſtate of the Family of Cromwell; of old written Crombwell, who had here a Seat now called,

Places of Note here:

1. Meriam-Court, but anciently Mereham-Court. John de Crombwell of this Place, in the 8th Year of King Edward the IId, was written Banneret (a); and his Son Ralph had a Charter of Freewarren for his Lands here, and at Meriam-Court in the Year following: But his Son Richard about the beginning of King Edward the IIId, ſold it to Hugh Girund; by whoſe only Daughter Maud it went in Marriage to Henry de Chalfhunt; in which Family it ſtaid till the beginning of King Henry the VIth, and then was ſold to Hadde, now called Hadds; hence about the End of Queen Elizabeth's Reign it went by Sale to Archer, and thence in King Charles the Iſt's Reign, the ſame way to Thatcher; who I ſuppoſe was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

(a) Spelman's Gloſſ. in voce Bannere-tus.

2. Yokes-Court is another Ancient Seat in Frinſted, which very early belonged to the Northwoods; but in the 35th Year of King Edward the IIId, Roger de Northwood dying without Iſſue-Male, his only Daughter, Albina Northwood, carried it in Marriage to John Diggs of Diggs-Court in Berham, Eſq; She lies buried in Barham Church, and had a French Epitaph on a fair Monument. In this Family it ſtaid till King James the Iſt's Reign, and then was ſold to Archer; and thence went with Meriam-Court above-mentioned to Thatcher.

In the Church are ſtill Memorials of the Thatchers as old as 1413. and of the Slaughters.

FRITTENDEN, lies towards the South Part of Kent, about three Miles and an half North Eaſtward from Cranbrook in the Bailiwick of the Seven Hundreds, Lath of Scray, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Lower one of Juſtices in that Lath: In the Deanery of Charing, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Church ſtandeth in the Hundred of Cranbrook, and is called St. Mary's. 'Tis a Rectory; and valued in the King's Books at 15 l. 18 s. 8 d.

The Liberty of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury claims over that Part of this Pariſh as is within the Manor of Hollingbourn. So much of it as is in the Borough of Stepherſt, is in the Hundred of Barckley; but the reſt is in the Hundred of Cranbrook.

Places of Note here:

1. Combden; this was once belonging to the Priory of Leeds; but after the Diſſolution of the Monaſteries, it was, in the 32d Year of King Henry the VIIIth, granted to Sir Walter Henley; who 12 Years after ſold it to Sir John Baker; whoſe Deſcendant of the ſame Name in King Charles the Iſt's Reign, ſold it to Mr. — Clayton of London; who I ſuppoſe was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

2. Bewper is a Place here, which was once part of the Revenue of the Abbey of Feverſham: But after the general Suppreſſion of the Monaſteries, King Henry the VIIIth, in his 35th Year, granted it to Sir Thomas Moyle; who, not long after, ſold it to Thomas Pratt; whoſe Son Francis Pratt, in the 1ſt Year of Queen Elizabeth, conveyed it by Fine to Mr. Edward Bathurſt; and he in a little Time after ſold it to Sir Richard Baker, Anceſtor of Sir John Baker of Siſinghurſt; who was in Poſſeſſion of it in Philpot's Time.

3. Upper Peaſridge; this Place did anciently belong to the large Inheritance of the Family of Badeleſmer; and was forfeited to the Crown by Bartholomew Lord Badeleſmer; but reſtored with the reſt of the Eſtate by King Edward the IIId, in his 2d Year, to his Son of the ſame Name and Title, who died poſſeſs'd of it 10 Years after. But his only Brother Giles, who was his Heir, dying without Iſſue, their great Eſtate became divided into Parcels, and this went by Maud one of his Siſters and Coheirs in Marriage to John Vere Earl of Oxford, who died poſſeſs'd of it in the 34th Year of King Edward the IIId. And in this noble Family it ſtaid till about the beginning of King Henry the IVth's Reign; and then was ſold to St. Leger; in which Name it continued till Queen Mary's Time, and then went again by Sale to Lone deſcended from the Lones in Lancaſhire; who was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

4. Wallingherſt, and 5. Buckherſt, are two Manors in this Pariſh, which once belonged to the Abbey of Feverſham: But after the Diſſolution were granted by King Henry the VIIIth, in his 29th Year, to Thomas Cromwell Earl of Eſſex; On whoſe Attainder and Execution, three Years after, coming to the Crown again, they were granted to Sir John Baker of Siſingherſt: And in that Family continued in Philpot's Time.

St. GEORGE's, in the City of Canterbury, is a Pariſh Church which now hath that of Burgate, whoſe Chapel is long ſince demoliſhed, united to it. 'Tis a Rectory; and valued in the King's Books at 7 l. 18 s. 0 d. In the Gift of the Church of Canterbury.

In the Chancel is a Memorial of John Lovel, who was formerly a Benefactor to the Priory of Chriſt-Church.

This Church in the Ancient Rates was valued at Ten Marks a Year. It is now among the other Churches whoſe Benefices are very ſmall, excuſed from all Taxations.

GILLINGHAM, Gelingham, or Geldingeham, lies towards the North Part of Kent, by the River Medway, about two Miles North Eaſtward from Rocheſter; in the Bailiwick of Hoo, Lath of Aylesford, and Weſt Diviſion of the County. In the Deanery of Shoreham, and Dioceſe of Rocheſter. The Church which is well built and handſome, ſome, ſtands in the Hundred of Chetham and Gillingham, and is dedicated to St. Mary; and by King Henry the Iſt was given to the Monaſtery in Shepey Iſland. 'Tis valued in the King's Books at 6 l. 13 s. 4 d. And then called Donativa in Gillingham. The famous Image of our Lady of Gillingham (ſee the pleaſant Story in Chetham) ſtood in the Niche over the Porch at the Weſt End of this Church; and to her, Wever ſaith, Pilgrimages uſed formerly to be made. And into this Porch formerly alſo the Bell Ropes came down in order to Ring there.

There was, for a long while ago, a great Hole in the Place in this Church-Yard where the grinning Sailor was buried; (ſee before in Chetham) which the Vulgar would have to ariſe from the Earth's ſinking preternaturally to preſs down the ſaid Corps: But Mr. Harriſon the preſent Miniſter had it filled up; and ſo it continues without any further miraculous ſinking. But he told me the People were afraid the filling it up would prove very ominous. In this Church are Memorials of many Eminent Perſons long ſince deceaſed. In the North Side of the Chancel is John Bamme; his Mother died in the Year 1421, and was alſo buried here: She was the Daughter of John Martin, who was Lord Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas: Of John Beaufits who died in the Year 1427; Of his Son John Beaufits, in the Year 1433; Of Robert Beaufits, in the Year 1381; Of William Beaufits, in the Year 1433. In the Grange Chancel ſeveral Memorials of the Haywards: And in the Court-Lodge Chancel, of Painter and of Godfrey.

The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims over the Manor of Gillingham. But Part of it, as the Grange, is in the Liberty of the Town, and Port of Haſtings in Suſſex, and in that of the Cinque Ports; The reſt is in the Hundred of Chetham and Gillingham. This Pariſh is famous for a good Part of the Navy Royal riding here; of which more in its proper Place.

Places of Note here:

1. The Manor of Gillingham, which as appears by the Book of Domeſday, did of old belong to the Archbiſhops of Canterbury; and was eſtimated at 6 Plow Lands; and paid a Rent or Farm of 25 l. 18 s. 0 d. And they had here formerly an Eminent Palace, or Manor Houſe; where they ſometimes reſided, and have here given Conſecration to Biſhops, as appears by the Text. Roſſenſis. But of this Houſe there are now very little Remains to be ſeen; except a Barn, and a Piece or two of the old Building.

Archbiſhop Anſelm forgave to the Church of Rocheſter a Rent of 40 s. per Ann. which was due from the Priory of St. Andrews to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, for a Fiſhery they had in this Pariſh. Vid. Text. Roff. f. 179, & 182.

2. Eaſtcourt, and 3. Weſtcourt, are two Places here which anciently were united in the Poſſeſſion of a Family of the Name of Gillingham: For Richard, Son of Thomas Gillingham, died poſſeſſed of them in the 12th Year of King Richard the IId. But his Son Thomas leaving only two Daughters, they were divided between them; For Margaret who married John Thorpe had Weſtcourt; and Iſabella carried Eaſtcourt to her Huſband William Grenſted. Thorpe ſold Weſtcourt to Nicholas Lewſon of Whorns-Place in Cuckſtone; and he ſent it the ſame way to Duling of Rocheſter; by whoſe Daughter it went in Marriage to Stephen Alcock: From this Name it was ſold to that of Cæſar: And by two Daughters of that Name (who had an Act of Parliament for it,) it went again by Sale to Mr. Thomas Rogers, who is the preſent Poſſeſſor.

Grenſted bequeathed Euſtcourt to Benedict Webb his Siſter's Son. But his Two Grandſons Thomas and Chriſtopher Webb, joined in a Sale of it to Thomas Painter, Eſq; whoſe great Grandſon Mr. Allington Painter was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

4. Twidall is another Manor in Gillingham, which once had Owners of the Name of Twidall: Robert de Twidall flouriſhed here in King Henry the Iſt's Reign; from whoſe Son Adam de Twidall deſcended Richard de Twidall; who in the 4th Year of King Richard the IId ſold this Eſtate and Dane-Court to Richard de Beaufits, originally extracted from Reade in Marden: But they ſtaid not long here before a Co-heir Joan de Beaufits carried them in Marriage to Robert Arnold of Suſſex; he ſettled them in Dower upon his Daughter Elizabeth Arnold; who in the 13th Year of King Henry the VIIth, ſold them to her Brother Henry Arnold; and his Son William, in the 18th Year of King Henry the VIIIth, parted with them the ſame Way to Thomas Benolt, Clarencieux King at Arms; who ſold them to Sir Henry Wyat Privy Counſellor to King Henry the VIIIth; and his Son, Sir Thomas Wyat, exchanged them with the Crown for other Lands; the Crown granted them to Chriſtopher Sampſon, and he ſold them to Thomas Parker; who parted with his Right in Twidall to William Painter, Eſq; whoſe great Grandſon, Mr. Allington Painter, enjoyed it in Philpot's Time. But Dane-Court was ſold to Short, and thence in a few Years paſſed the ſame way to May of Rocheſter.

The Grange, anciently written Grench, is an Eminent Manor here, which in King William the Iſt's Reign, was in the Poſſeſſion of the old Lords Haſtings, Anceſtors to thoſe of that Name, afterwards Earls of Huntingdon. It appears by Teſta de Nevil, a Record in the Exchequer, That Manaſſer de Haſtings held this Grench from King Henry the IIId, by the Serjeantry of finding two Oars in that Ship which ſhould carry over the King from Dover to Whitſand near Calais. From this Name of Haſtings, it went by Sale to Richard Smelt, Alderman of London; and by his Daughter and Heir, Margaret, to Richard Croyden, another Alderman of the ſaid City; and by Margery his Daughter to John Philpot, Eſq; another Alderman of London, in King Edward the IIId's Reign; and Lord Mayor of it in King Richard's the IId's Time; and was Knighted by that King; and afterwards had an Addition to his Coat-Armour (viz. a Croſs between 4 Swords), for his double Services both againſt the inſolent Kentiſh Rebels Wat. Tyler, Jack Straw, and his Accomplices: And alſo for clearing the Seas of Pyrates, by a Fleet of Ships fitted out at his own Charge. From him it deſcended to his Grandſon of the ſame Name; who in the 11th Year of King Henry the VIth, exchanged this Manor for Twiford in Middleſex, with Sir Richard Bamme, Son of Adam Bamme, Lord Mayor of London: And from him it deſcended to John Bamme, Eſq; who was Sheriff of Kent in the 2d Year of King Richard the IIId; he ſettled it on his Daughter, Mrs. Katherine Bamme, who ſold it to Kemp and Wiat. Sir Thomas Kempe parted with his Moiety to Sir Thomas Wyat: But though he had now the whole, he unhappily forfeited it with his Life to the Crown in the 2d Year of Queen Mary's Reign; and there it lodged till Queen Elizabeth in her 24th Year granted it to the Lady Joan Wyat; her Son George Wyat ſold it to Heyward; and from that Name by a Daughter, it went into that of De Laune of London; where the Poſſeſſion was in Philpot's Time.

At this Seat there was formerly a Church or Chapel, which was valued at 6 l. per Ann. in the King's Books: It was built by Sir John Philpot; but is now only a Barn.

6. Upbery is a Manor of Gillingham, which once was part of the Demeſne of the Nunnery in the Iſle of Shepey; but after the Diſſolution of the Religious Houſes, King Henry the VIIIth in his 38th Year granted it to Sir Thomas Cheyney; whoſe Son, Sir Henry Cheyney, in the 16th Year of Queen Elizabeth, ſold it to Dr. Alexander Nowell, Dean of St. Paul's in London; who dying without Iſſue, A. D. 1601. left it by his Will to Braſenoſe College in Oxon, with this Proviſo, that the Leſſee of the College ſhould always be one of his Relations; and ſhould pay a Rent for it of 100 Marks per Ann. The Tenant in Philpot's Time was Colonel Thomas Blunt of Wricklemerſh, Eſq;, but 'tis now in the Tenure of Mr. John Simpſon of Southwark.

7. Lidſing, uſually called Lydging, is a Place here, which in the 24th Year of Edward the Iſt was in the Poſſeſſion of Simon de Sharſtede; I ſuppoſe a Branch of the Family of this Name, then of Dodington in this County. But in King Edward the IIId's Reign it was the Eſtate of Roger de Say, who about the 50th Year of that Prince gave it to Sir Robert Belknap the Judge. But he being baniſhed into Ireland in the 10th Year of King Richard the IId, it became forfeited to the Crown; and was by that King 12 Years after reſtored to him again. In the 2d Year of King Henry the IVth, Belknap gave it to the Priory of Rocheſter, on Condition that one Monk, who muſt be a Prieſt, ſhould celebrate Maſs for ever in the Church of Rocheſter, for the Souls of his Parents, of himſelf, and of his Deſcendants. And on the general Diſſolution in King Henry the VIIIth's Reign, it was by that Prince ſettled on the Dean and Chapter of the Cathedral Church of Rocheſter.

At Lidſing is now a Chapel of Eaſe to Gillingham, and hath been Time out of Mind; and 'tis endowed with all Tithes; and here Divine Service is performed: But there are but Seven Houſes in this Place.

There was alſo another Chapel at Twidall, which was founded by John de Beaufits, A. D. 1433. it was dedicated to St. John the Baptiſt: And Philpot ſaith, that by Seats and other Remains of it, it appears to have been a neat and elegant Piece of Architecture.

About 54 Years ago, a very large Urn, which would hold the Quantity of a Buſhel, and had ſome Fragments of burnt Bones and Aſhes in it, was dug up here in the Salt-Marſhes of Gillingham.

The Annals of St. Auſtin tells us, That at this Place was a very ſharp Battel between Edmund Ironſide and Canutus the Dane, in which the latter was worſted.

And here, as moſt Writers agree, it was, that Earl Godwine committed a barbarous Act of Cruelty. The Occaſion of which was this: King Knute the Dane, being dead, the Engliſh Nobility thought that now a fair Opportunity was offered, of reſtoring the Crown to the Royal Iſſue of King Ethelred: For that Prince fearing the Danes would deſtroy them, had ſent his Two Sons Ælfred and Edward to be educated and preſerved in the Court of Richard Duke of Normandy. To this Duke therefore they now ſent proper Meſſengers, and deſired him to ſend over to them the Two Young Princes: Which accordingly he did, with a great Retinue of Young Noblemen and Gentlemen to attend them.

But Earl Godwine, who had always ſome Deſign on Foot to aggrandize his Family, and who fruitleſsly had endeavoured to marry his Daughter Elgith to Prince Ælfred, began to imagine that if he could deſtroy the Elder Brother, and by that Means make Way for Prince Edward to come to the Crown, he might prevail upon him to marry his Daughter; as indeed he afterwards did. Godwine therefore inſinuates, by all the Arts he could, into the Minds of the Engliſh Nobility, too apt to conceive a Prejudice and Hatred againſt all Strangers; that here was ſuch a Train of Foreigners come over with theſe Princes, as would eclipſe the Engliſh Lords, appropriate to themſelves the King's Favour, and get all Places of Profit and Honour. And at laſt he prevailed with many of them, eſpecially on ſuch as were his Relations and Friends, to ſet upon the Young Princes here at Gillingham, in their Way to London; which they did in a moſt inhoſpitable and barbarous Manner, killing about 600 Perſons, and apprehending Prince Ælfred, whom they ſent to the Iſle of Ely; and there firſt moſt cruelly deprived him of his Eye-Sight, and ſoon afterwards of his Life. Prince Edward, no doubt by Connivance, eſcaped their Fury, and fled back into Normandy: With whom Godwine, after Hardicnute's Death, ſo managed his Affairs, aſſuring him of his own Aſſiſtance for his obtaining the Crown, and getting the Nobility to join with him in the Tender of their Service, that he prevailed with him to come over again, and to marry his Daughter, whom Ælfred had refuſed; and then he, with his Aſſociates, ſet the Crown of England upon his Head, which he long after enjoy'd. Some of our Hiſtorians relate this Story after another Manner, and differ as to the Time and Place of this barbarous Action; but I judge with Lambard, that this is the moſt probable Account of this Affair. And, as he obſerves, this was a Means of freeing the Nation from the Power of the inſulting Danes; and alſo prepared the Way for the Conqueſt of England by the Normans, as 'tis uſually called; or the Acceſſion of King William the Iſt. to the Crown of this Nation. For Harold, Earl Godwine's Son, being after this cruel Maſſacre taken Priſoner by William Duke of Normandy, and charged with his Father's Crime; artfully put the Duke in Mind of his near Relation to King Edward the Confeſſor, and of the Eaſineſs of his obtaining the Crown of England, if Edward ſhould die without Iſſue: And to this Deſign he promiſed heartily to contribute himſelf, and to bring his Relations and Friends into it. The wiſe Duke embraced this Offer, and taking Harold's Oath for his Performance of it, gave him his Daughter in Marriage, and ſent him away with all Marks of Honour and Eſteem. But though Harold on King Edward's Death forgot his Oath and Promiſe, and aſſumed the Crown himſelf, Duke William did not forget to reſent it: And no doubt the revenging this perfidious Action upon him, was a great Inducement to that ſucceeding Invaſion, whereby Harold loſt both his Life and his Crown; and the Engliſh Nation had the Happineſs of being governed by a Gallant and Good, by a Wiſe and Polite Prince.

GODMERSHAM, lies about the middle of the Eaſt part of Kent, by the River Stoure, about Two Miles Northward from Wye, in the Bailiwick and Lath of Scray, Hundred of Felborough, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in the Lath of Shipway. In the Deanery of Bridge, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. 'Tis a Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 9*l.* 3*s.* 8*d.* with the Chapel of Challock annexed to it. The Church is Dedicated to St. Laurence, which is a fair and large Building of Two Iſles, with a flat low Tower, on which formerly ſtood a Steeple: The Chancel is large, and in it there are Eight Collegiate Stalls, which ſeems to ſhew that here was formerly ſome Religious Fraternity; as I find there were, in many other Churches of this County.

On three of the upright End Boards of the Stalls in the Chancel is this Date, which certainly is in Memory of Thomas Chillenden Prior (of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury) A. D. 1409, for the ſecond Figure 6 in the Date, is the old Form of the Digit 4; the like being to be found in Badleſmere Church, and in ſeveral other Places. And it appears by Angl. Sacr. Vol. 1. p. 143. this Thomas Chillenden was at that Time Prior of that Monaſtery; and that he built much at Godmerſham; and 'tis very probable that he built the Court-Lodge-Houſe here, which ſtands juſt by the Church; and which was, as it Name ſhews, the old Manor-Houſe where the Courts were kept; for over the Door of the Principal Entry into this Houſe, is the Figure of an Archbiſhop with his Croſier and Mitre carved in the Stone; and this no doubt was the Effigies of Archbiſhop Arundell, who then ſat in the Metropolitical Chair, and died 1414; as Thomas Chillenden the Prior did, 1411.

T. P. C. Ann. Dom. 1609.

It was this Archbiſhop that A. D. 1397, appropriated this Church to the Priory of Chriſt-Church, by Licenſe from King Richard the IId, and from the Pope.

In the Church are Memorials of ſeveral of the Ancient Family of Broadnix; and they have a Vault here in the North Iſle of the Chancel: Here are alſo Memorials of the Name of Diggs and Carter.

Places of Note here.

1. The Manor of Godmerſham, which was given to the Priory of Chriſt-Church at the Requeſt of Wulfred the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, A. D. 822, by Kenulf, ſome ſay Beornulf, King of Mercia; and this Grant was confirmed to that Convent by Archbiſhop Egelnoth, A. D. 1036.

In Domeſday Book it is ſaid to defend it ſelf for Eight Plow-Lands, to be valued at 20 l. but yet that it paid a Rent of 30 l. to the Church.

It appears by the Tower Records, that in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, the King claimed this Manor as his own Inheritance, before the Juſtices Itinerant at that time ſitting in Canterbury; but the Jury gave it in favour of the Monks, as being the true Proprietors.

2, 3. Yolands and Ford, are Two ſmall Manors here, which once were part of the Eſtate of the Valoigns; Robert de Valoigns died poſſeſs'd of them in the 19th Year of King Edward the IId. His Son Henry was Sheriff of Kent in the 14th Year of King Edward the IIId: He had Iſſue Waretius de Valoigns and Stephen; the latter of which planted himſelf at Gore-Court in Otham; and was one of the Conſervators of the Peace, in the 29th and 31ſt Years of King Edward the IIId. But the former leaving only Two Daughters, one was Married to Fogg; and the other to Thomas, Son of Thomas de Aldon, one of the Conſervators of the Peace for this County, in the 10th and 12th Years of King Edward the IIId; and he in Right of his Lady became Poſſeſſor of theſe Manors. After ſeveral Deſcents in this Family they were at laſt ſold to Auſtin; in which Name they tarried till about the middle of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, and then went the ſame way to Broadnix, and in that Family have continued ever ſince, being now in the Poſſeſſion of Colonel William Broadnix, who reſides at Godmerſham, and hath a pleaſant Seat with fine Gardens.

4. Eggarton is another Manor here, which anciently was part of the Inheritance of the great Family of Valence, who were Earls of Pembroke. Aymer de Valence Earl of Pembroke died poſſeſs'd of it in the 17th Year of King Edward the IId; but leaving no Iſſue, this Manor, by the Marriage of Joan, one of his Siſters, became the Eſtate of John Comin Earl of Badzenoth in Scotland; but he dying alſo without Iſſue-Male, Joan, one of his Daughters and Co-heirs carried this Manor to her Husband David de Strabolgia, Earl of Athol: His Son and Heir of the ſame Name and Title dying in the 7th Year of King Edward the IIId, ſettled it by Deed on his Kinſman Sir Henry de Hills; and this Donation was afterwards confirmed by Catherine his Counteſs Dowager, in the 20th Year of King Edward the IIId; Gilbert de Hills was buried in this Church; and in this Name did this Eſtate continue till Queen Elizabeth's Reign, and then was ſold to Scott, a younger Branch of the Family of the Scotts of Scotts Hall. By a Daughter of this Name, Mrs. Dorothy Scott, it went in Marriage to Mr. Daniel Gotherſon; from hence it paſſed by Sale to Sir James Ruſhout; and from his Truſtees, with the conſent of his Son and Heir Sir James, it went the ſame way to the late Peter Gott of Suſſex, Eſq;.

In the 7th Year of King Edward the Iſt, a Fair was granted to Godmerſham on St. Laurence's Day. And in King Edward the IIId's Reign the Prior of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury obtained the Grant of a Market here on Tueſdays; and another Fair on the Thurſday and Friday of every Whitſon-Week.

GODNESTON near Feverſham; Goodwinſtune, perhaps the Town of Earl Godwine; lies at the North ſide of Kent towards the Sea, about a Mile Eaſtward from Feverſham, in the Bailiwick and Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Upper One of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Hundred of Feverſham, and ſo in the Liberty of St. Auſtin; Deanery of Oſpringe, and Dioceſe of Canterbury: And the Church is called St. Bartholomew's, is ſmall, with a poor little Spire. A Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 5 l. 2 s. 7 d.

Perhaps this Place might take its firſt Appellation from the famous Godwine E. of Kent. But in King Henry the IId's Reign it was the Inheritance of Ernoldus Chiche, who was a Perſon very Conſiderable in this and the Two following Reigns: This Family had large Poſſeſſions about Canterbury and in it; and to them did the Aldermanry of Burgate belong. Thomas Chiche of this Place was a great Benefactor to the Church of St. Mary Bredmin in Canterbury; his Name and Effigies having been in the Weſt Window of that Church, as his Coat of Arms was in the Chancel: He was Bailiff of Canterbury, Ann. 1259; and again, in An. 1271, his Son Thomas was Sheriff of Kent in the 44th Year of King Edward the IIId, and held his Office here, as was alſo his Son Thomas Chiche, in the 15th Year of King Richard the IId. And his Grandſon, Valentine Chiche, married Philippa, Daughter of Sir Robert Chicheley, who was Brother to Henry Chicheley Archbiſhop of Canterbury. This Archbiſhop had a Nephew, John Chicheley, who was Chamberlain of London, and had Twenty Four Children; one of which, Elizabeth, married Sir Tho. Keriell of Kent; but Robert dying without Iſſue, his Three Siſters divided his Eſtate between their Three Husbands, Kemp, Judd, and Martin; and by a joint Conſent about the beginning of King Henry the VIIth, ſold their Eſtate here and at Ewell to Pordage of Rodmerſham; and from hence it went by Sale to the Name of Fagg, deſcended from the Faggs of Willesborough; but Robert Fagg leaving only Two Daughters, Anne, who married Sir John Proude, had this Eſtate: And by Anne, another Daughter of this Sir John Proude, it went in Marriage firſt to Sir William Springate, and then to a ſecond Husband Mr. Iſaac Pennington, (whoſe Fa-

the Hon.ble Sr Brook Bridges Bart

Father was Lord Mayor of London, Ann. 1643.) and he was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

In the Church are Memorials of William and Thomas Pyx, 1572, 1573.

Sir John Proude above-mentioned, was killed at Groll in Guelderland 1628, in the Wars of the Dutch againſt the Spaniards.

His Lady's Siſter Mary, the other Daughter of Robert Fagge, Eſq; was married to Sir Edward Partriche, but died before him, and without having any Children by him.

It appears by the Tower Records, 1279, that Richard le Dagh, and Eleanor his Wife, ſold their Land here, and the Advowſon of the Church, to Stephen Chiche, Citizen of Canterbury; with part of Bleanwood, and ſome Land lying below it.

GOODNESTON near Sandwich, vulgò Gunſton, Godwineſton; the Town of Godwin, lies towards the Eaſt-ſide of Kent, about Four Miles Southward from Sandwich, in the Bailiwick of Eaſtry, Hundred of Wingham, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims over it. It is in the Deanery of Bridge and Dioceſe of Canterbury: The Church, which anciently was a Chapel to Wingham, is dedicated to the Holy Croſs; as to which, I can't but take notice by the bye, that this Dedication of a Church to the Croſs, is a Demonſtration that the Papiſts made the Croſs the real and proper Object of their Worſhip; and eſteemed it as a Divine Being which was capable of doing them good, and conferring a Benefit upon them; which is as groſs an Inſtance of Idolatry, as ever the moſt ignorant Heathen were guilty of.

This Pariſh Church being only a Chapel, is not valued in the King's Books. 'Tis a Donative in the Gift of Colonel Bridges. The Church is fair and in good Repair.

On Holy-Rood Day, viz. September the 14th, is a Fair kept in this Pariſh.

Places of Note here:

1. Goodneſton Manor; I think there can be no doubt, but that this Place took its Name from the famous Earl Godwine, it being in the old Books every where written Godwineſton. And there was anciently a Tower in the Caſtle of Dover called Godwine's Tower, towards the Maintenance and Repair of which, there was Land appropriated in this Pariſh, which very probably was then the Eſtate of the Heirs of Earl Godwine, and had formerly been in his Poſſeſſion. But afterwards, this became part of the Poſſeſſions of Haſtings Earl of Pembroke, and came to him by the Will of John de Haſtings, who was the firſt Husband of that great Heireſs Juliana, Daughter of Roger de Leybourn. After this Family, it came ſomehow into the Poſſeſſion of that of the Malmains; who by purchaſe from Pine and Beauchamp, had before this ſome other Lands in this Pariſh, about the Beginning of King Edward the IIId. In this Name it continued ſome time, but Henry Malmains leaving only a Daughter, Agnes, it went by her in Marriage to Thomas Goldwell; but hence it went alſo by Joan, a Daughter of this Name, to Thomas Took of Bere, Eſq;. Hence, in Queen Elizabeth's Reign, it went by Sale to Henekar, and from that Name it was removed the ſame way to Kelley; who ſold it to Engeham, deſcended from the Eminent Family of the Engehams of Woodchurch, who flouriſhed, ſaith Philpot, for many Ages at Edenham (whence, no doubt, they took their Name) and at Pleurinden in that Pariſh.

Sir Thomas Engeham parted with Goodneſton by Sale, with the Impropriation of the Church, and all the Tithes of the other Lands and Tenements, to Brook Bridges, Eſq; who was for many Years one of the Auditors of the Impreſt of the Treaſury. This Gentleman hath Built here a very handſome Houſe upon the Ruins of the old one, and very much improved the Gardens and Avenues belonging to it. And along the ſides of the Two Terras Walks ſtand the Buſts of the Twelve Cæſars in Marble, larger than the Life; they were brought from Rome, and, as I am informed, coſt there 600*l.* This Pleaſant Seat is now in the Poſſeſſion of Colonel Brook Bridges, Eldeſt Son and Heir of the Auditor above-mentioned.

2. Bonnington is an Ancient Seat here, from whence the numerous Family of the Bois took their Original; and from hence were branched out into thoſe Diviſions of this Name which have ſettled at Fredville, Betteſhanger, Hawkherſt, and other Places in this County, and they all derive themſelves from John de Boſco; who is mentioned in the Roll of Battle-Abbey, among ſuch Gentlemen as came into England with King William the Iſt; and at this Place they had continued for Seventeen Deſcents in Philpot's Time; when Bonnington was in the Poſſeſſion of that Brave Soldier Sir John Bois; to whoſe Coat Armour King Charles the Iſt gave the Augmentation of a Crown Imperial Or on a Cauton Az. for his Services at Donnington Caſtle in Berkſhire; where being Summoned by the Parliament Forces to Surrender the Place, under Peril of being put to the Sword, he ſtoutly anſwered, that he would never quit the Caſtle without the King's Order, nor take nor give any Quarter, Vid. Clarend. Hiſt. Vol. 2.

From him the Eſtate here deſcended to Three Daughters; who all concurred in a Sale of it to Thomas Brome Serjeant at Law, A. D. 1666; and his Son, Mr. William Brome of Farnborow, A. D. 1710, ſold it to Brook Bridges, Eſq; abovementioned.

3. Rolling is a third Place here, which anciently had Owners of the ſame Name: For Thomas Rolling held this Manor in the 15th Year of King Richard the IId; he held alſo ſome Lands by Leaſe belonging to a Chantry in St. Peter's Church in Sandwich, and which lay in Eaſtry, near this his Manor of Rolling: After this Family it came into the Poſſeſſion of that of Idley; who had alſo a good Eſtate about Mepham, Cobham, and Higham; as appears by an Inquiſition taken in the 43d Year of King Edward the IIId, Rot. Eſc. N. 58. In this Name Rolling continued till the Reign of King Henry the VIIIth, and then it was ſold to Butler of Heronden in Eaſtry; and thence, in the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth, it went the ſame way to Roger Manwood, Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer; and his Son Sir Peter Manwood, ſold it to Dickenſon: From whom it went by Sale again to Richards; and one Gabriel Richards, Eſq; the Poſſeſſor of this Place, A. D. 1672, gave an Hoſpital here for Four Poor Perſons, endowing it with 20*s. per Ann.* a-piece, beſides their Apartments in the Houſe. This Gentleman deviſed Rolling by Will to —— Hammond of St. Albans in Nonnington, Eſq; and he ſold it to Sir John Narborough, Baronet, Son of the Admiral of that Name; by the Marriage of whoſe only Siſter, it is now come into the Poſſeſſion of that worthy Gentleman Thomas D'Aeth of Knowlton, Eſq;.

4. Uffington is alſo a Seat here which belongs to the ſame Family of Bois.

In the Church are Memorials of the Family of Bois, and of that of Engeham, and of William Goodneſton, 1520.

GOUDHERST, the good Wood, lies at the South ſide of Kent adjoining to Suſſex, about Three Miles Weſtward from Cranbrook, in the Weſt Diviſion of the County, and lower one of Juſtices in the Lath of Scray. So much of it as is in the Borough of Faircrouch, is in the Bailiwick of the Seven Counties, Hundred of Cranbrook, and Lath of Scray. But that part of it which lies in the Burghs of Pattenden, Lilſden, Combwell, Chingley, or Bromley, is in the Bailiwick of Twiford, Hundred of Little-Barnfeild, otherwiſe called Weſt Barnfeild, and Lath of Aylesford; and the reſt is in the Bailiwick of Twiford, Hundred of Marden, and Lath of Scray.

The Borſholder of the Borough of Pattenden is choſen at the Court-Leet held at Looſe; and the Borſholder of Lilſden, at the Court-Leet holden at Eaſt Farley; and the Inhabitants of neither of thoſe two Burghs owe Service to the Court Leet held for the Hundred of Little Barnfeild; only at that Court may be choſen a Conſtable of that Hundred out of either of theſe Burghs.

The Liberty of St. Auſtin claims at Wynchet Hill; and that of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury, over the Burghs of Pattenden and Lilſden.

It is in the Deanery of Sutton, and the Dioceſe of Canterbury. It is a Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books according to the Printed Val. Beneficior. at 28 l. 19 s. 2 d. But in Biſhop Williams's Map of the Dioceſe of Canterbury, it is but 26 l. 19 s. 2 d.

The Church ſtands in the Hundred of Marden, and is Dedicated to the Virgin Mary: 'Tis very large and handſome, of Three Iſles, and as many in the Chancel, and ſtands on a high Hill: Formerly it had a very high Spire; but Kilburn ſaith, that on Wedneſday Auguſt 23, 1637, about Eleven at Night, there happened a Terrible Storm of Thunder and Lightning, which ſet fire to the Steeple, burnt and conſumed four Lofts, and all the Timber and Wood-Work, and melted five of the Bells; and ſo ſhattered the Stone-work of the Steeple, that it was neceſſary to take it all down: The Church-Roof which is covered with Lead, was alſo very much damaged by the fall of the Timber, Stones, &c.

In the Year following there was a Brief obtained towards its Repair, and a Pariſh Tax alſo made for that purpoſe; and the Foundation of the Steeple was begun a-new of Stone, and carried almoſt as high as the Top of the Roof of the Church; but by the Falſity of the Collectors Abroad, and the Diſſention of the Neighbours at Home, the Work went no further; only a ſmall low Wooden Top was ſet upon the Stonework, and only one great Bell hung up there, and ſo it remained in Kilburn's Time.

In the middle Chancel of this Church, are Two Figures in Stone of William and Rachael Campion, A. D. 1606; and a large one of William, Son of Sir William Campion, who was killed at Colcheſter by the Rebels in the late Civil Wars. In the South Chancel are Two fair Figures with Twelve Children in Marble, of Tho. Colepeper of Bedgebury, Eſq; and of Elizabeth his Wife, whoſe Name was Maney. There is alſo a fair Marble Tomb with Two Figures, but the Inſcriptions are obliterated; which they tell you is in Memory of the Founder of the Church. In the South Iſle of the Church is a Braſs Figure inlaid on a Stone of Jack Bedgebury, as the People call him; who ſay alſo, that he was a Fool, and begged by the Colepepers; and they imagine the Eſtate went that way into that Family: But I ſhall ſhew below that this is a Miſtake, for it paſſed by Marriage from Bedgebury to Colepeper. This John, Son of John de Bedgebury, died near Three Hundred Years ſince.

In the Church are alſo Memorials of Roberts, Foule, and Bathurſt.

The Communion Table, and the Wainſcot behind it, are very handſome; and in ſeveral of the Windows are Remains of good Painted Glaſs.

A Market is kept in this Town every Wedneſday; and about the Year 1652, the Market-place was removed from the flat place in the Town, below where it is now kept, to one more elevated, on the Top of the Hill adjoining to the Church-yard.

There is alſo a Fair here on Auguſt the 15th, being the Day of the Aſſumption of the Bleſſed Virgin, as the Papiſts expreſs it.

Another Fair is alſo kept on July the 22d, being the Feaſt of St. Mary Magdalen, at Combwell in this Pariſh.

The former Fair, as well as the Market, were obtained by Joan, Wife of Roger de Bedgebury.

At Combwell was a ſmall Religious Houſe; an Account of which you will find in its proper Place.

Places of Note here:

1. Bedgebury, which is an Ancient Manor, formerly the Seat of a Family of this Name: Philpot takes notice of an old Deed without Date, whereby John de Bedgebury gives Lands to William de Comeden, (a Houſe ſo called in this Pariſh) the Seal of which he ſaith was the Effigies of a Chevalier Armed like a Knight Templer, and on Horſeback; and therefore he believes him to have been under the Vow of the Cruſade. Another John de Bedgebury, it appears, paid Aid for this place in the 20th Year of King Edward the IIId, at making the Black Prince Knight: But his Son of the ſame Name died without Iſſue; whereby his Siſter became his Heir; and ſhe carried this Manor as is above hinted, to her Husband Thomas Colepeper of Bayhall in Pepenbury, Eſq; This Gentleman was Sheriff of Kent in the 18th Year of King Richard the IId. And in this very Eminent Family did Bedgebury and the other Eſtate at Goudherſt continue till Philpot's Time. But Thomas Colepeper, Eſq; ſold Bedgebury to Sir James Hayes, in whoſe Family the Poſſeſſion ſtill continues.

2. Combewell; this Manor formerly belonged to the Nunnery here; but on the general Diſſolution, it was by King Henry the VIIIth, in his 34th Year, granted to Sir John Gage, whoſe Succeſſor conveyed it to Colepeper; and he ſoon after ſold it to William Campion, Eſq; Anceſtor to that Sir William Campion above-mentioned, who was killed at Colcheſter 1648; and in his Deſcendant doth this Eſtate ſtill continue.

3. Finchcocks was once the Seat of a Family of that Name, who were in Poſſeſſion of it in King Henry the III'ds Reign: After this, about the Beginning of King Henry the VIth's Reign, it came to be the Inheritance (by Purchaſe) of the Hordens of Horden. Edward Horden of this Family, was Knight of the Green-Cloth to King Edward the VIth, Queen Mary, and Queen Elizabeth; but he dying without Male Iſſue, by Elizabeth one of his Two Daughters, this Eſtate went in Marriage to Mr. Paul Bathurſt; and in the Deſcendants of that Family it continued in Philpot's Time, and doth to this Day.

4. Patenden; this Place was once the Seat, and gave Name to a Family in this County, of as long ſtanding as King Edward the Iſt; and in the 29th Year of King Henry the VIth, a Commiſſion being iſſued to Gervas Clifton, Eſq; then Sheriff of Kent, to return all ſuch as did bear Arma antiqua, Pattenden of this Place was among their Number; and in this Name did this Eſtate continue till King James the Iſt's Reign, and then it was ſold to the Bathurſts; who were the Poſſeſſors of it in Philpot's Time.

5. Twiſden Borough; is a Place which anciently had Poſſeſſors of the Name of Twiſden: Adam de Twiſden died ſeized of it in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the 1ſt; and in the 5th Year of King

King Henry the IVth, it was the Eſtate of Roger Twiſden; whoſe Seal was then a Cockatrice, the preſent Creſt of the Arms of the Family of Twiſden.

And by the bye, you may be informed that the firſt Original of Creſts was in the Wars between the Two Houſes of Lancaſter and York; for then they were born on their Helmets, that Perſons of the ſame Family, and perhaps very near Relations, who were of contrary Parties, might not Perſonally engage one another, and imbrue their Hands in their own Blood.

The laſt Poſſeſſor of this Place, of this Family, was another Roger Twiſden, who in King Henry the VIth's Reign, ſold it to Geofrey Allen; and he parted with it to Windhill the ſame way. After this it came ſomehow into the Family of Auſtin; and by a Daughter of that Name went in Marriage to Fowle, deſcended from the Fowles of River Hall in Suſſex; and in this Name it continued in Philpot's Time.

6. Shingley is another Manor in Goudherſt, which once belonged to the Priory of Leeds; but after the general Diſſolution of the Abbeys, was by King Henry the VIIIth, in his 36th Year, granted to Thomas Colepeper of Bedgebury, Eſq; who within Two Years after ſold it to Stephen and Thomas Darell; and they ſent it the ſame way to William Campion, Eſq; Councellor at Law, and Father to Sir William Campion above-mentioned; and in this Family it remained in Philpot's Time.

7. Bokingfold is a Manor here which once belonged to the Chantry, which was founded in Goudherſt Church by Hamon de Crevequer, and confirmed to it long after with all its Franchiſes, in the 41ſt Year of King Edward the IIId. On the general Diſſolution, King Henry the VIIIth gave it in his 31ſt Year to Mr. Paul Sidnore; who not long after ſold it to Sir John Gates; who being Executed on Tower-Hill for being concerned in the Treaſon of John Dudley, Duke of Northumberland, this Place became forfeited to the Crown; and was by Queen Elizabeth granted to Catherine Tong; who not long after ſold it to Colepeper of Bedgebury, and he parted with it the ſame way to Brewer, the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

8. Winchet-Hill was formerly a Place of Note in Goudherſt, where William Rokeberſt alias Roberts, a Gentleman of Scotland, purchaſed Lands in the 3d Year of King Henry the Iſt's Reign, and was the firſt Anceſtor of the Roberts of Glaſſenbury: The Houſe he built here was called, The Ladies-Den Rokeherſt; and this Family ſtaid here 274 Years; but in the Reign of King Richard the IId, Stephen Roberts marrying the Daughter and Heir of William Tully, Eſq; Lord of the Manor of Glaſſenbury, then removed thither.

9. Tagwell is a place here, which is the Seat of Thomas Lake, Eſq; Councellor at Law, and which hath been ſo long in his Family, that he aſſures me, he hath no Knowledge of the Names of any Proprietors or Occupants which were there before.

GRAVENEY, Gravene, Graven-ea, the Water in the Graef or Ditch; lies at the North ſide of Kent, near the Sea, about Two Miles Northward from Feverſham, in the Bailiwick and Lath of Scray, Hundred of Bocton under the Blean, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Upper One of Juſtices in that Lath. In the Deanery of Oſpringe and Dioceſe of Canterbury; a Vicarage, conſtituted by Boniface Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and valued in the King's Books at 12 l. per Ann. The Church is Dedicated to All-Saints: In it are Memorials of Robert Dodde, and Richard Feverſham his Son-in-Law, Lords of Graveney, 1304, of Boteler above 300 Years ago, and of Borgeris and Martin above 250.

The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims here: For A. D. 84, Archbiſhop Wulfred bought Graveney of King Kenulf, and gave it to the uſe of his Church; but being afterwards withheld from it by one Werhard a Powerful Prieſt, he was made to reſtore it in the Year 830, by Archbiſhop Fegeld, or Theogild, as ſome write his Name. And after this, A. D. 941, it was confirmed to Chriſt Church by King Edmund, by Eadred his Brother, and Edwin his Son.

Sir Adam Fitzwilliam was Lord of this Place in the Time of King William the Iſt, who was one of the Eight Captains or Lieutenant-Governors of Dover Caſtle.

In Domeſday Survey it was eſtimated at One Plow-Land, and was held in Fee of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury. In King Henry the IIId's Reign a Family of the Name of Gravenell were Lords of this Manor; and after them the Faverſhams: For Richard de Faverſham died ſeized of it in the 13th Year of King Richard the IId: By his only Daughter Joan it went in Marriage to John Boteler; who was High Sheriff of Kent in the 22d Year of King Richard the IId. But he died alſo without Iſſue-Male, and by Anne his Daughter and Heir it went to John Martin, one of the Judges of the Common-Pleas, who was buried in this Church 1436: From this Family it went by Sale to Pordage of Rodmerſham; and in that Name the Poſſeſſion continued in Philpot's Time.

In the 2d Year of King Edward the IIId, John de Iſlede, and other Commiſſioners of Sewers, came hither and to Hernbill, to view the State of the Walls and Banks againſt the Sea, which they found in a very ruinous Condition; wherefore they Summoned a Jury of Twelve Men; who certified, that in the Marſhes of this Place and of Hernbill, there were 550 Acres of Land in Northmarſh and Deule, of which 163½ belonged to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury; and this part was very liable to be drowned by the Sea. But that in Archbiſhop Walter's Time a Bank was made of 320 Perches in Length, and Two Perches Broad, which continued to defend the Marſh till the 1ſt Year of King Edward the IIId: But then by a Storm and a ſtrong Tide was broken through and almoſt deſtroyed; as was alſo a Bank made to defend Clyves Marſh, belonging alſo to the Archbiſhop. Upon this Report of the Jury, each Acre of Land of the 550, was aſſeſſed at 10 d. whereof the Portion for the Archbiſhop's Demeſn in North Merſh came to 6 l. 16 s. 3 d. and in Clyves Marſh, where there were but Seventeen Perches of the Bank down, to 33 s. 4 d. Dugdale of Inbank. and Draining.

GRAVESEND; in Saxon, ſaith Lambard, Gerefeſend; in Latin, Limes Prætorius, the Limit or Precinct of the Reve. And in this Etymology he is very elaborate. But as I never ſaw this Place called in Saxon, Gerefeſend; but in our Textus Roffenſis, and in our Cuſtumale, always Graveſend and Graveſentum; ſo, I am apt to think, it is rather learned than true. For I fancy its Name imports no more than the End of the Hollow Place; which terminates at the River. Grave in this Senſe is common in Kent: There was a Place called Grave in Darent, which was exchanged by the Church of Rocheſter for another of the ſame Name in Helles: and two ſo called in Southfleet: And there was a Bridge in Wickham Breux in Eaſt-Kent by Wingham, which for the ſame Reaſon was called Graves-Bridge; becauſe it was over a Hollow Place, which was like a Graff, or a Place dug down. But enough of this.

Graveſend lies at the North Side of Kent on the Thames, about 6 Miles North Eaſtward from Dartford; and as far from Rocheſter. In the Bailiwick of Hoo, Hundred of Toltingtrow, Lath of Aylesford, ford, West Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in the Corporation of Graveſend and Milton, the Liberty whereof claims over it. 'Tis in the Deanery and Dioceſe of Rocheſter. A Rectory; and valued in the King's Books at 15 l. 0 s. 0 d.

The Church is dedicated to St. Mary; which is old, and without any Steeple, but pretty well adorned within-ſide, and with a handſome Veſtry; a Thing not uſually met with in Countrey Churches. In it is a fair Monument of James Bear, in the Year 1609: And Memorials of Robinſon, Parker, &c.

A Market is kept here on Wedneſdays and Saturdays; and an Annual Fair on the 13th of October, which holds for a Week.

King Henry the VIIIth raiſed here a Platform of Guns, and another at Milton; as well as two others over againſt them on the Eſſex Side, for the Security of the River. Thoſe on the other Side are now much better ſupplied by Tilbury Fort; where there is a large Number of Guns always in good Order, and a Gariſon conſtantly doing Duty. But on the Kentiſh Side there are now only a few Guns planted, with a Magazine, where a ſmall Guard is kept.

This Place is the moſt uſual and frequented one of taking Boat for London, by all Perſons which come from Dover, Canterbury, Rocheſter, &c. Or through any Part of Kent from Foreign Parts. And in Queen Elizabeth's Reign, the Lord Mayor, and Aldermen, and Companies of the City, were ordered by her Majeſty to receive all Eminent Strangers and Foreign Ambaſſadors here, in their Formalities, and ſo to attend them to London in their Barges, if they came up by Water: And if they came by Land, they were uſually ordered to meet them at Shooters-Hill, or on Blackheath, on Horſeback in their Gowns. So much did that Wiſe Queen always conſult the Honour and Grandeur of the City.

Here is a very handſome Charity, given by one Mr. Henry Pinnock, A. D. 1624. of One and Twenty Dwelling Houſes, and a Houſe for a Weaver, to employ the Poor: And a good Eſtate is alſo ſettled for the Repairs; and alſo for that of an adjacent Houſe, given to the ſame good Uſe, by one Mr. Fry; as appears by proper Inſcriptions on the Walls.

In this Town, on the Eaſt Side, there is ſtill ſtanding the Body of an Ancient Chapel, which ſeems to have belonged to ſome Religious Houſe, Cloiſter, Cell, &c. For there are now Places in the Walls of the Vaults for Holy Water. And towards the Weſt End, in what is now a Lodging Room above Stairs, there is ſtill remaining the Picture of a Man kneeling on one Knee, and drawing a Bow in order to ſhoot forth an Arrow: The Manner of it is Ancient. But I can no where meet with any Account what this Place was, or by whom built.

The Town of Graveſend and Milton were incorporated in the 10th Year of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, by the Name of the Port-Reeve, Jurats and Inhabitants of the Towns of Graveſend and Milton. Their Arms is a Boat Or, with one Maſt, lying at Anchor in the River, on the Hills beyond a Porcupine Sable.

In this Place by the common Way Side, which leads down to the Water, was found a Medal of Alexander the Great: 'Tis of Silver; and was kindly communicated to me by the Right Honourable the Lord Paſton. See the Figure in the Copper-Plate.

A. D. 1380. This Town was burnt by the French and Spaniſh Gallies; and the Enemies carried away moſt of the Inhabitants Priſoners, which occaſioned King Henry the VIIIth afterwards to build the Forts here above-mentioned.

Places of Note here:

1. The Manor of Graveſend, was anciently the Poſſeſſion of a Family of the Name of Cramaville, who had likewiſe a conſiderable Eſtate in Eaſt-Kent; and Henry de Cramaville held it at his Deceaſe in the 54th Year of Henry the IIId. And his Wife Joan died alſo poſſeſs'd of it in the 8th Year of King Edward the IId. After this Lambard ſaith, it belonged to the Abbot of Tower-Hill in London, by the Gift of King Edward the IIId. And he, willing to promote the Intereſt of the Town, deſired of King Richard the IId, that the Inhabitants of Graveſend and Milton might have the only Trade of carrying Paſſengers from thence up to London; and that then they would provide Boats on Purpoſe, and undertake to carry all Perſons either at 2 d. per Head with his Bundle, or elſe the whole Boat's Fare ſhould be but 4 Shillings. To this the King aſſented for the Preſent; and ſome of his Succeſſors confirmed it: And 'tis now in a Manner eſtabliſhed by Uſage and Cuſtom, as well as by a Statute made for this Purpoſe in the 6th Year of Henry the VIIIth, Chapter 7.

And for the better ordering this Paſſage, there is belonging to this Manor, ſaith Lambard, a proper Court, entituled, Curia Curſus Aquæ; which was diſcontinued by the Negligence of the Farmers of this Manor for a while, but was again eſtabliſhed by the Care of Lord Cobham, Lord Chamberlain of the Houſhould to Queen Elizabeth: And by this Example of the Inhabitants of Graveſend, thoſe of London obtained the ſame Privilege of carrying Paſſengers down the River to Graveſend, which they ſtill enjoy. This is Lambard's Account. But Philpot takes no Notice of this Manor ever belonging to the Abbey of Grace on Tower-Hill, nor how it came into the Hands of Lord Cobham. As to the former of theſe, I find by the Tower Records, Chart. Arch. 1. and 35. that which way ſoever it came to the Crown, there was a Grant of it to John de Ufford, and his Heirs Male, in the 4th Year of King Edward the IIId, who perhaps dying without Heirs, eſcheated it to the Crown again; and by that Means it came into that Prince's Power to ſettle it on the ſaid Abbey; and then probably Reginald de Cobham, who died ſeized of this Eſtate in the 45th Year of King Edward the IIId, might be only the Leſſee of that Abbey. There was alſo another Reginald de Cobham, who held this Manor in the 7th Year of King Henry the IVth. From him by an Heir General it went to Braybroke; and by another Daughter thence to Brook; from whom deſcended that unfortunate Henry Brook Lord Cobham, who by his Attainder in King James the Iſt's Reign forfeited this, as well as his other Eſtate to the Crown: In whoſe Poſſeſſion it continued till King Charles the Iſt granted it to his Kinſman James Duke of Lenox; and from him it went to his Son Eſme Duke of Lenox, who in Philpot's Time was a Minor.

2. Parrocks: This is a Place in Graveſend Pariſh, which anciently had Owners of this Name. For it appears by Pat. de An. 52. K. H. 3. Memb. 10. That Robert de Parrock obtained a Saturday's Market, and a Fair for 3 Days before Oct. 13. for this Town. But afterwards this Manor, as well as that of Graveſend above-mentioned, came ſome-how to the Crown: For King Richard the IId, in his 6th Year, granted them to Sir Simon de Burleigh; on whoſe Attainder four Years after coming again to the Crown, they were then ſettled on the Abbey of Grace. After the Suppreſſion, coming to the Crown once more, it tarried there till the 13th Year of King James the Iſt, and then was granted to Mr. William Sal-

Salter; who not many Years after ſold it to Sir James Criſpe; and thence partly by Purchaſe, and partly by Exchange, it paſſed into the Poſſeſſion of Mr. John Child; and in his Deſcendant it remained in Philpot's Time.

In the 21ſt Year of Edward the Iſt, I find that the Bridge and Chalk Cauſeway, for ſo I render the Word Calceta in the Record, leading to the Water here, being very much out of Repair, the Watermen took extraordinary Fare-Money, to the great Injury of the Paſſengers; and that one half of this Cauſey or Bridge ought be repaired by Henry de Cramaville then Lord of the Manor of Graveſend; and the other half, viz. That next the Town, by the People of Milton: And thus it was repaired. Vid. Placit. Coron. cor. I de Berewyke, &c. Cantuar. 21. E. 1.

GREENWICH, formerly called Eaſt Greenwich, lies at the North Side of the County of Kent, adjoining to the River Thames, about four Miles South-Eaſt from London, in the Bailiwick of Sutton Bromley, Hundred of Blackheath, Lath of Sutton-at-Hone, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and upper one of Juſtices in that Lath. In the Deanery of Dartford, and Dioceſe of Rocheſter. A Vicarage; valued in the King's Books at 21 l. 0 s. 0 d. per Ann. The Church which is lately rebuilt is dedicated to St. Elphege; who was made Archbiſhop of Canterbury, A. D. 1006, and barbarouſly murder'd here by the Danes 6 Years after: As you will find hereafter at large related in his Life. He was afterwards Sainted, and the 19th Day of April appointed to be kept in Memory of him.

This Town hath been formerly very much injured by the Inſults of the Danes; for in King Ethelred's Reign the Daniſh Fleet lay off of Greenwich for almoſt two or three Years together; and their Army was encamped on Blackheath, and the upper Parts of Greenwich: For in the Park towards the South-Weſt Corner, there are Abundance of ſmall Tumuli, or little round Hills, where probably the Danes buried ſuch of their Men as died while they tarried here. And no doubt, in Memory of this Encampment, the ſeveral Places in this Pariſh which are called Combes, as Eaſtcombe, Weſtcombe, &c. took their Names: Comb and Campe, which in the Saxon Language ſignified the ſame Thing, being eaſily derived from the Latin Campus.

Places of Note here:

1. Greenwich Manor. Soon after the Conqueſt Greenwich was Part of the Poſſeſſion of the Biſhop of Lyſieux in France; and paid Service to Odo Biſhop of Bayeux, Earl of Kent: After this it came into the Hands of the Abbot of St. Peter's at Gaunt in Flanders; where it continued till King Henry the Vth wanting Money to carry on his Wars in France, ſeized on the Lands belonging to all the Houſes of the Priors Aliens, which were grown very numerous here. But this did not go to the Uſe of the War, but was, together with the neighbouring Manor of Leweſham, ſettled by that Prince on the Priory of the Charter-Houſe at Sheene, which he had then newly erected. And here it remained till the general Diſſolution, and then King Henry the VIIIth annexed it to the Crown.

2. The Palace here was firſt built by Humphrey Duke of Glouceſter, and Brother to King Henry the Vth; and by him it was named Placentia: He alſo built the Caſtle, and encloſed the Park: For doing both which he had a Charter from King Henry VIth, in his 11th Year, in theſe Words, ſaith Philpot.

Rex concedit quod Humfridus Dux Gloceſtriæ & Eleanora Uxor, ejus poſſent Karnellare Manerium ſuum de Eaſt-Greenwich, & imparcare 200 Acras Terræ inter Manerium ſuum prædictum.

By which it appears that here was another Manor; and this indeed was called the Honour of Greenwich: As alſo that it was not lawful for any one Kernellare, i. e. to embattel or fortify his Houſe Caſtlewiſe, without a particular Licenſe from the King. If any one did ſo, it was a Matter enquirable before the Eſcheator: For it was one of the Articles of his Office, to enquire de Caſtellis & Dominicis Kernallatis ſine Regis Licentid. This barbarous word Kernellare was brought in by the Normans; and as Du Freſne rightly interprets it, came from quarnellus or quadranellus, a four-ſquare Hole or Notch; ſuch as the Gaps in the Battlements of old Buildings, Towers, or Caſtles: And thus in Heraldry a Bend or a Feſſe, &c. which is drawn in that Form, with ſquare Notches in it is called a Bend Embattelled; and by the French, a Bend Crenelle. On this Palace King Edward the IVth beſtowed large Sums of Money, in enlarging and beautifying it; in which he was followed by King Henry the VIIth, who built a new Brick Front towards the Water; and all Parts of it were improved and adorned afterwards by King Henry the VIIIth; who never ſpared any Coſt in rendring his Palaces beautiful and magnificent. In King James the Iſt's Reign his Queen Anne built another new Front next the Gardens; and laid the Foundation of that Houſe next the Park, which is now ſtanding, and inhabited by that brave and worthy Gentleman Admiral Aylmer; who is Governour of the new Hoſpital at Greenwich. This Houſe was finiſhed and rendred very ſumptuous and fine by Henrietta Maria, Queen to King Charles the Firſt.

The Duke of Glouceſter above-mentioned begun, and King Henry the VIIth finiſhed that Tower on the Mount, in the Park, where now the Obſervatory ſtands, and where Mr. Flamſtede reſides: A particular Account of which Obſervatory, and of the Obſervations there made by Mr. Flamſtede, I would have given, if he would have let me, and communicated them to me; but according to his wonted good Humour, he hath ſtood to a Denial, after repeated Solicitations.

Henry Howard, Earl of Northampton, Lord Privy Seal, Knight of the Garter, and Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, who founded the old Hoſpital here by the Thames Side, (of which as alſo of the new one, you will find an Account in its proper Place) enlarged and beautify'd that which was then called the Caſtle; which was a more eminent Part of the Kings old Palace, from whence was a moſt delightful Proſpect towards the River. Of this Houſe, as it was in King James the Iſt's Time, Barclay in his Euphormio gives us a pretty Deſcription, Part 3. ſub Finem. I find by the Tower Records, That Humphrey, Duke of Glouceſter, had Licenſe in the 15th Year of King Henry the VIth, to build a Tower of Stone in the Park, which he had before encloſed.

This Palace hath been eminent for many remarkable Things: For beſides thoſe already mentioned; here on Shrove-Tueſday, 1526; and Ten Years after on May-Day, did King Henry the VIIIth hold moſt ſolemn and magnificent Jouſts and Tournments; as he often kept his Chriſtmas and other great Feſtivals at this Place. And that great King was born here; as was alſo Edmund, a Younger Brother of his, who was created Duke of Somerſet; but died before he was five Years old. This Place gave Birth alſo to that Excellent Princeſs Queen Elizabeth: And here likewiſe was her Predeceſſor Queen Mary born; and here died that moſt hopeful young Prince their Brother King Edward the VIth. King James the Iſt had alſo ſome Children born here; as his Daughters Mary and Sophia.

3. Blackheath is a Place alſo in this Pariſh, which hath been famous for many remarkable Tranſactions: Through it the Roman Watling-Street Way ran towards Shooters-Hill, and ſo to Rocheſter, Canterbury, and Dover, as you will find more fully in the Chapter of the Roman Ways, &c. in this County. And there are great Numbers of ſmall Tumuli, as well as ſome large and eminent ones, out of which Bones and Urns have been dug; which ſhew that many Perſons, and ſome of them of Eminence and Rank, have long ſince been buried here.

In this Place did the Daniſh Army lie a great while encamped, A. D. 1011. as was before obſerved: And many Trenches, and other Remains of the Lines of Camps, are very viſible here to this Day.

A. D. 1387. the Week after Whitſontide, King Richard the IId, came here with an Army of 40,000 Men againſt the inſolent Rebels Wat. Tyler and Jack Straw, John Bull a ſeditious Prieſt, and their Adherents, who had lain encamped here for ſome Time, with a Rabble of near 100,000 Men.

A. D. 1451. Jack Cade, that Impoſtor who pretended himſelf to be a Mortimer, and Kinſman to the Duke of York, encamped on this Heath for a Month together, with a large Number of Rebels, which he had gathered together in this and from the Neighbouring Counties; and from hence he ſent his Traiterous and Inſolent Demands to King Henry the VIth.

1452. Here that Prince pitched his Royal Pavilion in the Preparation he had made to withſtand the Force of his Couſin Edward Duke of York, who was afterwards King Edward the IVth. And here againſt that King did the Baſtard Falconbridge likewiſe encamp.

A. D. 1497. Did the Lady Audley, Flemmock an Attorney, and Joſeph the Blackſmith, encamp on this Place, in the fooliſh Rebellion they raiſed againſt King Henry the VIIth. And here that Wiſe Prince routed them, killing above 2000 upon the Spot, taking 150 Priſoners, and executing Audley, and Flammock, and the Blackſmith.

1411. Maurice, the Emperor of Conſtantinople, coming to pray for Help againſt the Turks, was met here with great Magnificence by King Henry the IVth, although it was in Winter, viz. Dec. 21.

1415. And here the Mayor and Aldermen of London, with 400 Citizens in Scarlet, and with Red and White Hoods on, came and met that Victorious Prince, King Henry the Vth, after the famous Battel of Agincourt in France, and conducted him to London.

And the next Year on this Place they met the Emperor Sigiſmund, and conducted him to the King at London. Some ſay the King himſelf met him here; which is very probable: He had been before at the Court of France, and came to mediate a Peace between that Crown and England.

1474. Here the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen of London in Scarlet, with 500 Citizens, all in Murrey Gowns, met King Edward the IVth at his Return from France.

1518. The Lord Admiral of France, and the Biſhop of Paris, both Ambaſſadors from the French King, with above 1200 Attendants, were met on this Heath by the Admiral of England, and above 500 Gentlemen.

1519. Here alſo Cardinal Campeius, the Pope's Legate, being attended hither by the Gentlemen of Kent, was met by the Duke of Norfolk, and many Noblemen and Prelates of England; and here in a Tent of Cloth of Gold, he put on his Cardinal Robes richly ermined, and hence rode to London.

1539. And on this Place King Henry VIIIth met the Princeſs Anne of Cleve, in very great State and Pomp, reſolving to marry her; though he had ſeen her before privately at Rocheſter, without being much in Love.

4. Weſtcombe is a place here at Greenwich, which with its Attendant Spittlecombe, and Two Water-Mills in Deptford, did of old belong to the Noble Family of Baddleſmere; but on the Attainder of Bartholomew Lord Baddleſmere, they came to the Crown; and were by King Richard the IId granted to Sir Robert Belknap the Judge; and upon his Attainder alſo coming to the Crown again, they were given to Robert Ballard, that King's Butler, as Philpot ſaith. But ſome Records of the Tower, which I have ſeen, acquaint us, that all theſe Places were given to George Ballard and his Heirs by the Archbiſhop of York. Vid. Dorſ. Clauſ. 19. R. 2. M. 12. as alſo 8, 9, 6, 4. In this Name of Ballard, however, they continued till about the 4th of Queen Mary; and then Weſtcombe was by Nicholas Ballard ſold to John Lambert; whoſe Succeſſor, Thomas Lambert, ſent it the ſame way to Hugh Forth, and he to Mr. Biddulf of London, who, I ſuppoſe, was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

I find by the Textus Roffenſis, that anciently there was a Chapel in Greenwich called Comba, which probably was here.

5. As to the Hoſpitallers here, and the Religious Houſes, I ſhall ſpeak of them in their proper Places.

6. Here is a School built by Sir William Boreman for Twenty Boys, who are maintained out of an Eſtate given by him for that purpoſe, with Lodging, Diet, Green Coats, and other Cloaths, and are alſo Taught Writing and Arithmetick.

7. Another School there is alſo in Greenwich, ſet up by Mr. John Roan, who left his Eſtate for Cloathing and Teaching Boys in Reading, Writing, and Arithmetick; allowing 40 s. per Ann. to each Boy for Cloaths; the preſent Number is Twenty.

Dr. Plume, late Archdeacon of Rocheſter, left ſome Houſes in Deptford to the Uſe of this Pariſh.

The following Verſes of Leland's upon Greenwich Palace, as I find them cited by Mr. Camden, are worth reprinting.

Ecce! ut jam niteat Locus petitus
Tanquam Sydereæ Domus Cathedræ!
Quæ faſtigia picta? quæ feneſtræ?
Quæ Turres vel ad Aſtra ſe efferentes?
Quæ porro Viridaria, ac perennes
Fontes? Flora ſinum occupat venuſta
Fundens delicias nitentis Horti.
Retum commodus æſtimator ille,
Ripæ qui variis modis amænæ
Nomen contulit eleganter aptum.

GUSTON, Gounceſton, Guſſeton, lies at the South-Eaſt End of Kent, about Two Miles Northward from Dover, in the Bailiwick of Stowting, Hundred of Bewsborough, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery of Dover, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; and the Church is Dedicated to St. Martin, which is in the Nature of a Chapel only, and ſo not valued or rated at all in the King's Books.

The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims here; but that of St. Auſtin over the Manor of Guſton.

Philpot ſaith nothing at all of this Place, any more than Lambert, Somner, or Wever. But if its Ancient Name be Gounceſton, as I believe it was, I find by a Manuſcript of the Placita Jur', held before the Judges Itinerant, in the 21ſt

Year of King Edward the Iſt, that the Abbot of St. Auſtin's did then claim to hold Pleas of the Crown here, to have Freewarren, and all the uſual Privileges of other Manors. And this is all I can find any where about this little and obſcure Place.

HACKINGTON, the Town at the Haga or Haw, which ſignifies a little piece of encloſed Land near a Town or Houſe: Thus that ſmall piece of Land lying between Rocheſter Church and the Vines, was called anciently the Haga or Haw; now corruptly the Hog-yard. This Place alſo had the Name of St. Stephens, from a famous Image here of that Saint which was much frequented by Pilgrims.

It lies towards the Eaſt part of Kent, by the River Stoure, about a Mile Northward from Canterbury, in the Bailiwick of Bridge and Petham, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath.

The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims over it.

Part of it is in the Hundred of Bridge and Petham; but the other part, viz. the Burgh of Shourt, is in the Hundred of Downhamford; the reſt is in the Hundred of Weſtgate, in which the Church ſtandeth. 'Tis in the Deanery and Dioceſe of Canterbury; and the Church is dedicated to St. Stephen. It was firſt begun by Baldwin, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, who with the King's leave pulled down an old Chapel which was here before, and had deſigned here a Collegiate Church, but he was inhibited by the Pope to go on with it, becauſe the Monks of Chriſt-Church had made Application to Rome againſt it, as juſtly fearing that it would have leſſened the Honour and Intereſt of their Cathedral Priory: Kilburn ſaith it was once but a poor Chapel; but is now a Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 5 l. 2 s. 2 d. In the 35th Year of King Edward the IIId, the Value of the Annual Profits of this Church was Thirty Marks.

Another Reaſon why the Monks of Chriſt-Church were againſt this Building, was not only that the Charge of erecting it and furniſhing it was ſupplied out of the Offerings made at Becket's Shrine; but they feared alſo, that theſe Canons or Brethren of St. Stephen's, would come in time to ſhare with them in the Election of an Archbiſhop.

When Baldwin found himſelf thus hindred, he built a new Chapel in this Pariſh, on a Place called St. Thomas's Hill, before St. Dunſtan's Church, A. D. 1187. But Gervas, the Monk of Canterbury, ſaith, that on the digging for its Foundation, there was a moſt terrible Storm and Tempeſt: For Heaven muſt needs ſhew its Diſpleaſure, where the Monks had diſcovered theirs.

This Chapel perhaps being Dedicated to Becket, gave Name afterwards to the Hill.

How Baldwin proceeded upon this, and what he deſigned to do at Lambeth, you will find more particularly in the Life of that Prelate. All I ſhall ſay more here is, that the Monks were ſo angry with poor Hackington, that it was with much ado they permitted a ſmall Chapel, without either a Font or a Church-yard, and with only one Prieſt, to ſtand here, which became afterwards the Parochial Church. The Image of St. Stephen, which was ſo celebrated by Pilgrims, did not ſtand in this Church, but in a Place where afterwards the Garden of Sir Roger Manwood was.

A. D. 1227, the Parſonage of Hackington was united to the Archdeaconry of Canterbury; and the Archdeacon had a Houſe here.

Places of Note here:

1. The Manor of Hackington did anciently belong to the Monks of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury: But Philpot ſaith, the Convent made an exchange of it with Archbiſhop Langton, for other Lands and Houſes ſituated near the Priory of St. Gregory's in Canterbury City; and he having here at Hackington erected a new Houſe, ſettled it on his Brother Simon de Langton, then Archdeacon of Canterbury; from whom it deſcended to the Archdeacons his Succeſſors, till at the Suppreſſion of the Religious Houſes in King Henry the VIIIth's Time; it was in that large Sweep torn away from the Church, and continued in the Crown till Queen Elizabeth granted it to Sir Roger Manwood, Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer; whoſe Grandſon, Sir John Manwood, ſold it to Sir Thomas Colepeper, then Colonel of a Regiment of Foot in the Low Countries; and in his Deſcendants it continued in Philpot's Time.

Sir Roger Manwood built an Hoſpital here for Aged and Poor Perſons, each of which had 4 l. per Ann. in Money, Bread, and Fewel: He lies buried in the Church; where was formerly a fair Monument for him; as alſo of Sir Chriſtopher Hales.

In this Church alſo was buried, ſaith Wever, Lora or Loreata, Counteſs of Leiceſter, Daughter of William Lord Brews of Bamber in Suſſex; and Wife of Robert de Bellemont, then Lord High Steward of England, and Earl of Leiceſter; retiring from the World, ſhe ſettled here privately to give her ſelf up to Acts of Devotion and Religion, and died A. D. 1219.

King Edward the IIId at his return Home from France, held a Tilt or Tournament at this Place.

2. Broad-Oak is a ſmall Manor in Hackington, which anciently belonged to the Family of Hadlow; for Nicholas de Hadlow had a Charter of Freewarren for his Lands here and at Medgrove, in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt; from this Name it went into that of Hardreſs; for one Edmund Hardreſs was in Poſſeſſion of it in the 4th Year of King Henry the IVth, as appears by the Court-Rolls: His Grandſon alſo died poſſeſs'd of it in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the IVth. But in the Beginning of King Henry the VIIIth's Reign, one of this Family ſold it to Sir Edward Boughton of Burwaſh in Plumſtede; and his Son Thomas Burwaſh, Eſq; in the 2d Year of King Edward the VIth, alienated both Medgrove and this to Reginald Highgate, and William Haniwick; who both joined in a Sale to Roper; and in Philpot's Time they were both in the Poſſeſſion of Edward Roper, Eſq; of Wellhall in Eltham.

3. Shelford and Medgrove, are Two Places which formerly were annexed to Hackington Manor, and in the 14th Year of Queen Elizabeth, were granted for Life to Sir Roger Manwood; but about the Beginning of King Charles the Iſt's Reign, the Fee Simple which remained in the Crown, was given to Sir Edward Sydenham and Mr. Smith; who not long after joined in a Sale of them to Mr. Robert Auſtin of Bexley in this County; where they continued in Philpot's Time.

HADLOW, Haudelo, lies towards the South-weſt part of Kent, by the Medway, about Three Miles Northward from Tunbridge, in the Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and South One of Juſtices in that Lath. Part of it is in the Bailiwick of Twiford, and Hundred of Littlefield; the reſt is in the Bailiwick of the Lowy of Tunbridge, and Hadlow Burgh. 'Tis all in the Deanery of Malling, and Dioceſe of Rocheſter. The Church ſtands in Hadlow Burgh, and is called St. Mary's. A Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 13 l. per Ann.

A Fair is kept here on Whit-Monday.

Kilburn ſaith Hadlow came under the Cuſtody of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, when Boniface Governed that See.

Places of Note here:

1. Hadlow Manor, this Place formerly gave Name and Seat to a Family of Note in theſe Parts, and probably the ſame with that which was ſeated at Hadlow Place in Crundale. Edmund de Hadlow died poſſeſs'd of this Eſtate in the 32d Year of King Edward the IIId; but ſome time after this it came into the Crown, tho' whether by Purchaſe, Forfeiture, or Eſcheat, doth not appear. And King Henry the VIth, in his 25th Year, granted this Place, and many other Lands lying near the Lowy of Tunbridge, to Humphrey Stafford, Duke of Buckingham; in which Noble Family it continued till the Attainder of Edward Stafford, Duke of Bucks, in King Henry the VIIIth's Reign; and then was by the Crown granted to John Vane, Eſq;, whoſe Succeſſor Sir Henry Vane, in King Charles the Iſt's Reign, ſold it to Mr. Thomas Petley; in whoſe Family it was in Philpot's Time.

I find that in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, Hadlow was in the Poſſeſſion of the Earl of Glouceſter and Hertford, then Lord of the Lowy of Tunbridge, Plac. Coron. 21. E. 1. And then this Manor was found to lie all within the Juriſdiction of the Lowy: And Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Glouceſter, claimed all Rights and Privileges of a Manor here.

2. Peckham is a Place in this Pariſh which once was part of the Eſtate of the Peckhams; John Peckham being Poſſeſſor of it in the 14th Year of King Edward the 4th, as appears by a Book called, A Survey of the Manors of Hadlow. From hence it was ſold to Colepeper, and thence to Leigh: and from that Name, after ſome time, it went by Sale to Sir George Rivers, whoſe Son, Sir John Rivers, was in Poſſeſſion of it in Philpot's Time.

3. Fromonds is another Manor in Hadlow, which had once Owners of that Name; but by Richard Fromond it was ſold to Colepeper; and after ſome time Richard Colepeper ſold it to one Richard Fromond again; and in that Name it continued in Philpot's Time.

4. Cauſton is another Place in this Pariſh, which had once alſo Owners of that Name; and from the Cauſton Family was ſold by Hugh Cauſton into that of the Wattons of Addington; but it ſtaid not long there before William Watton ſold it to Thomas Peckham, and from that Name it went the ſame way to that of Vane; and from thence, in King Charles the Iſt's Reign, it was ſold to Maynard of Mayfield in Suſſex.

5. Totlingbury is a Place in Hadlow, which anciently was reputed a Manor, and had too formerly Owners of the Name of Totlingbury; but was ſold from thence to the Family of Roberts of Glaſtenbury in Cranebrooke; and after that, to that of Vane; in which it remained in Philpot's Time.

6. Goldhell is another Place here, which once was in the Poſſeſſion of a Family whoſe Name was Beald; and thence went by Sale to the Fromonds above-mentioned: By John Fromond it was ſold to the Colepepers of Oxenhoath; and by a Daughter of that Branch of this great Name, it went in Marriage to Mr. Cotton of Lanwade in Cambridgeſhire; from whence it was demiſed to Sir George Chowne; and in that Name continued in Philpot's Time.

7, 8. Goding and Crombery are Two Manors which anciently belonged to the Family of Fromond; but by Thomas Fromond were ſold to John Goding; and from that Name they went the ſame way to the Peckhams, and from thence to the Vanes the ſame way; where they continued in Philpot's Time.

I find by an old Charter in our Church, that 5 s. per Ann. in lieu of Tenths is granted to it by the Hoſpital of St. John of Jeruſalem from Crankbery in this Pariſh; which perhaps is Crombery above-named.

9. Moatlands is another Manor there, which formerly was in the Poſſeſſion of the Bakers of Eaſt Peckham; and from thence was ſold to Burgeſs; and thence ſoon after to Henry Leigh; in whoſe Family, Philpot thinks, it remained in his Time.

10. The Manor of the Rectory of this Pariſh was A.D. 1287, by Thomas Inglethorp Biſhop of Rocheſter, appropriated to the Knights Hoſpitallers, and ſtaid in their Poſſeſſion till the general Diſſolution of the Monaſteries, and then lay in the Crown till the 2d Year of King Henry the VIth, who granted it to Sir Ralph Vane; and a Deſcendant of his, about the middle of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, ſold it to Roger Twiſden, Eſq; who was Captain of a Troop of Gentlemen of this County, in the Camp formed at Tilbury to oppoſe the Spaniſh Invaſion in 1458. And in Philpot's Time this Seat was in the Poſſeſſion of Sir Roger Twiſden, Knight and Baronet, of Roydon-Hall in this County.

11. Fiſh-Hall is a Place here which formerly was the Seat of John de Fiſher, who was ſo called from his having a Grant from Gilbert de Clare Earl of Glouceſter, and Lord of the Lowy of Tunbridge, to Fiſh freely within his Juriſdiction; and his Family hence retained the Name of Fiſher; and lived here till Richard Fiſher ſold this Seat to John Vane, Eſq; who parted with it the ſame way to Rivers of Chafford, in which Name it continued in Philpot's Time.

In the Church is a fair Monument of Sir John Rivers and his Lady, who lived at this Place of Fiſh-Hall.

Hadlow, lies upon a Rivulet which runs into the Medway, and this Brook hath two Springs which give riſe to it, which in Symondſon's old Map of Kent are called the Shode and the Shete; they riſe about Ightam.

HALDEN, or High-Halden, anciently Hathewolden, lies towards the South ſide of Kent, about Two Miles and a half North from Tenterden, in the Bailiwick of the Seven Hundreds, Lath of Scray, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Lower one of Juſtices in that Lath.

'Tis in the Deanery of Charing, and Dioceſe of Canterbury: The Church is called St. Mary's, and ſtands in the Hundred of Blackborne, as indeed is all the Pariſh; except what is in the Burgh of Omenden, for that lies in the Hundred of Barckley.

The Liberty of the Dean of Canterbury, and of St. Auſtin claims here; and that of Wye claims over the Denn of Romden.

The only Place of Eminence and Note in this Pariſh is,

Hales Place, which is famous in Deeds and Pedigrees, for being the Original Seat of the Family of the Hales; and 'tis ſaid to have been ſituate in Halden. And probably was where now that great Houſe ſtands, which was the Original Seat of the Scots, before they placed themſelves at Conoherſt in Hawkherſt; and which Reginald Scot ſold to Sir Edward Hales. (Philpot.)

This Pariſh in Val. Beneficiorum, 1695, is put down as a Vicarage; but Biſhop Williams, in his Map

Map of Canterbury, makes it a Rectory. 'Tis valued in the King's Books at 19 l. 4 s. 6 d. per Ann.

HALLING, Heallinges, lies towards the middle of the North part of Kent, by the River Medway, about Three Miles Southward from Rocheſter, in the Bailiwick of Hoo, Hundred of Shamell, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and North one of Juſtices in that Lath. The Liberty of the Biſhop of Rocheſter claims over it. 'Tis in the Deanery and Dioceſe of Rocheſter: The Church is Dedicated to St. John Baptiſt: A Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 7 l. 13 s. 4 d. per Ann.

In Domeſday Survey it defended it ſelf for $2\frac{1}{2}$ Sullings or Plowlands, as ſaith the Cuſtumale Roffenſ. f. 13. and the Textus Roffenſ. f. 209. tho' at firſt it was Ten, and in Edward the Confeſſor's Time Six; and then valued at Sixteen Pounds.

Places of Note here:

1. Halling Manor; this was given to the Church of Rocheſter by Ecbert King of the Weſt-Saxons and of Kent, A. D. 838. (together with Snodlande).) The Grant is Regiſtred in the Text. Roffenſis, f. 127. b. Dioran being then Biſhop of Rocheſter; and then it was eſtimated at Twelve Plow-Lands. He gave alſo along with it the following Denberies in the Weald or Common Wood, viz. Bixle, Speldherſt, Mereden, Therbe-Eaſtan and Ruſtwell, (perhaps now Ruſthall by Tunbridge-Wells) and Teppan-hyſe; and the Bounds of this Manor of Halling are there mentioned, viz. A Loco qui vocatur Hroſes Breta, uſque in Arborem qui vocatur Cucues Ac, & inde via reata per medium Campum quæ appellatur Hivemhamſtedi uſque in locum qui dicitur Halleſmeri, ac inde circuiter per locum qui vocatur Heerteagu, uſque in Flumen Medewæge.

This Deed is witneſſed by one who writes himſelf there Heabertus Rex, and was King of a part of Kent at that Time, by Jaenbertus Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and ſeveral others of Note.

This Manor, tho' reduced from Ten Plow-Lands to Six, and at laſt to Two and a half, continued in the Poſſeſſion of the Priory of Rocheſter till the general Diſſolution of the Monaſteries; and then was ſettled by King Henry the VIIIth, as part of the Revenue of his New Cathedral and Collegiate Church there; and is now in the Poſſeſſion of the Dean and Chapter of that Church.

The Biſhops of Rocheſter had formerly a Palace here, which Kilburn ſaith was built by Hamo de Heth, who was Biſhop of this Dioceſe in King Edward the IId's Reign. But I find by old Deeds, that there was a Houſe of the Biſhop of Rocheſter's here before that time; for I have a Deed by me executed here by Biſhop Laurence, long before this. And the Accurate Mr. Lambard, who wrote the Perambulation of Kent, and who lived ſome Time in this very Houſe, and therefore was better qualified to underſtand the true State of this Place, ſaith, that Hamo only raiſed from the Ground the Hall and high Front of this Palace; as he repaired another Manor Houſe belonging to the See, at Trotteſcliff; the Mill at Holborow, or Holenbergh in Snodland, and all the other Buildings at this Place.

And that here was a Houſe of the Biſhop of Rocheſter as long ago as King Henry the IId's Reign, is plain by the Story of Richard Archbiſhop of Canterbury; who being frighted with a Dream, came to this Place, lay here, and breathed out his laſt in this Houſe; as you will find more fully in his Life.

There are a good part of the Ruins of this Houſe ſtill remaining; as the Chapel, part of the Hall, and a Gate with the Arms of the See of Rocheſter in Stone. It was an uſual thing in thoſe Days for the Biſhops to have ſeveral Houſes in ſeveral Places of their Dioceſes, as the Archbiſhops had in their Provinces; and there were no leſs than Four belonging to this little Biſhoprick; one here, another at Trotteſcliff, one at London, and another at Lambeth; beſides the Palace at the Cathedral at Rocheſter.

2. Langridge, alias Bavent; this is a Place in Halling, which is ſo written in Ancient Records and Deeds; becauſe formerly it gave Name and Seat to a Family ſo called; and in Philpot's Time in a Field called by the Name of Bavents, the Ruins of this Houſe was to be ſeen.

Roger de Bavent died Poſſeſs'd of this Place in the 31ſt Year of King Edward the IIId.

But when this Family became extinct here, this Manor came into the Poſſeſſion of the Langridges; and was denominated from them; they came hither out of Hantſhire. After this it came into the Name of Melford; but tarried not long before it paſſed into that of Raynwell; one of which Family, as appears by the Book of Aid, ſold it to Robert Wotton in the 27th Year of King Henry the 7th. This Gentleman ſoon after alienated this and other Lands, to Whorn of Whornes Place in Cuckſton; hence it was ſold to Vane, and thence again to Barnwell; after this it paſſed the ſame way to Lewſon; and Sir Richard Lewſon, the Grandſon of the Purchaſer, ſold it to Barber, in whoſe Poſſeſſion it ſeems to have been in Philpot's Time.

In the Church is a Memorial of Sylveſter, Daughter of Robert Dene, Gent. who was the Wife of that Judicious, Laborious, and Honeſt Antiquary, Mr. William Lambard, Eſq; abovementioned.

HALSTED, Hilteſtede, lies about the middle of the Weſt ſide of Kent, about Three Miles Southward from St. Mary's Cray, in the Bailiwick of Sutton-Bromley, Hundred of Codſheath, Lath of Sutton-at-Hone, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Lower One of Juſtices in that Lath.

'Tis in the Dioceſe of Rocheſter, but Deanery of Shoreham, and a Peculiar of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, whoſe Liberty claims here. A Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 5 l. 17 s. 10 d. per Ann.

Sir Thomas Watſon, ſometime of this Pariſh, was a great Benefactor to the Church: For A. D. 1609, he built a new fair Chapel of Stone on the North ſide of the Church; and adorned the Eaſt End thereof with a fine painted Glaſs Window: Repaired and new Tiled both Church and Chancel; built a new Steeple and Porch, gave Four new Bells, a reading Desk and Pulpit, and made a Wall from the North ſide of the Churchyard to the Weſt.

In the Church is a Stone over Dame Elizabeth, Widow of Sir Thomas Watſon, 1623, laid there by the Right Honourable Thomas Earl of Downe her Grandſon; Sir Thomas died 1621, and is buried here alſo.

In King John's Time Hulſted was the Inheritance of Robert de Malavill, who was one of the Recognitores Magnæ Aſſiſæ, in the 4th and 10th Years of that Prince; and it continued in this Family till about the End of King Edward the IIId, and then went by Purchaſe to that of Bures; John Bures held it in the 4th Year of King Richard the IId, and was Son of William Bures, who paid Aid for part of a Knight's Fee which lay in Bromley, at making the Black Prince Knight. And one William Bures lies buried in the Church here, and had an Inſcription over him that he was Lord of Hulſted, and died 1444; and he was Sheriff of Kent in the 11th Year of King Henry the VIth.

In

In the beginning of King Edward the IVth's Reign, this Eſtate was got into the Poſſeſſion of Thomas Bourchier, deſcended from the Bourchiers of Eſſex; but he, about the End of that King's Reign, ſold it to Stephen Petley, Eſq; who alſo lies buried in this Church.

And in this Family did this Manor continue till the beginning of King James the Iſt, and then it was ſold to Sir Thomas Watſon above-mentioned; but he died without Iſſue-Male, and his only Daughter and Heir married Sir William Pope, who was afterwards created Earl of Downe in Ireland by King James the Iſt. His Son William Earl of Downe, ſold it to Mr. Edward Aſh; and his Widow held it in Dower in Philpot's Time.

William de Chellesfield, who, as Philpot ſaith, lived in King Henry the IIId's Time, lies buried in this Church, under a large Stone with an Inſcription in old Letters.

Hic jacet Willielmus de Ciellesfield, Miles, cujus animæ propitietur Deus.

In the Textus Roffenſis, there is mention of a Chapel belonging to this Pariſh of Halſted, which is there called Greten erſce.

In the Liſt of the Benefices within the Dioceſe of Rocheſter, in the Textus Roffenſis, there is mention of a Pariſh called Heure, but I can find no Account of it any where elſe, perhaps 'tis Hever.

HALSTOW, Halegeſtow, i. e. the Holy Place, lies towards the North ſide of Kent, about Three Miles Northward from Milton, in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Milton, Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Upper One of Juſtices in that Lath.

'Tis in the Deanery of Sittingbourn, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; and the Church is Dedicated to St. Margaret; and was given about 500 Years ago to the Convent of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury, by Hubert Archbiſhop of that See, towards the Repair of the Library: He endowed the Vicarage with an Annual Stipend of 3 l. 6*s.* 8*d.* or Five Marks, which in thoſe Days was thought a competent Maintenance.

The Vicarage is rated in the King's Books at 8 l. 2 s. per Ann.

And this was afterwards confirmed by Boniface, one of his Succeſſors.

The Liberty of the Dean of Canterbury claims here.

Baſſer, or Barkeſore Court here, was given by King Stephen to ſupply perpetual Lights ante capſam, or before the Shrine of St. Anſelm, Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

And for many Years paſt hath been held by the Darells of Calebill, as Leſſees; and in Philpot's Time was in the Poſſeſſion of Sir John Darell of that Place.

HIGH HALSTOW, lies at the North Side of Kent, about four Miles and an half Northward from Rocheſter, in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Hoo, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and North one of Juſtices in that Lath. In the Deanery and Dioceſe of Rocheſter: And the Church is dedicated to St. Margaret; which is neat, and in good Repair, with a Spire Steeple. A Rectory; and valued in the King's Books at 14 l. 5 s. 6 d. per Ann.

This Place was anciently Part of the Barony of Bardolph; but by Iſolda, Daughter of Hugh de Bardolph, it went in Marriage to Henry Lord Grey: And his Succeſſor, Richard Lord Grey ſold it to John Lord Cobham, who died poſſeſs'd of it in the 36th Year of King Edward the IIId. His Heir alienated it to Zouch; and William la Zouch extracted from the Zouches of Barringworth in Northamptonſhire, died poſſeſs'd of it in the 5th Year of King Richard the IId. But in Tract of Time it went the ſame Way from this great Family to Norris, and thence to Sir Edward Hales, Grandfather to that Sir Edward, Bar. who was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

It hath the Name of High-Halſtow to diſtinguiſh it from the precedent; which lies low by the Water-Side, between the Medway and the Swalle. But how either of them came by its Name of Holy I can't find; nor that they did in the Saxon's Time ever belong to any Religious Houſe; only in King Edward the Iſt's Reign, I find the Abbey of Boxley to have had ſome little Eſtate in the former Halſtow.

HAM, Hamme, lies near the Eaſt End of Kent, about two Miles Southward from Sandwich, in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Eaſtry, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath: In the Deanery of Sandwich, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Church is dedicated to St. George. A Rectory; and valued in the King's Books at 5 l. 6 s. 6 d. per Ann. The Church is a mean ſmall Building, with nothing Remarkable in it.

One half of this Place was given to the Priory of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury, A. D. 934. by Ælſtede, ſome write him Eylſteda; and continued there till the general Diſſolution of the Abbeys, and then was in the 35th Year of King Henry the VIIIth granted to Sir Thomas Moyle; who not long after ſold it to Sir Robert Oxenbridge; and thence it went the ſame Way in Queen Elizabeth's Reign to Bois of Betſhanger: And I ſuppoſe was in that Family's Poſſeſſion in Philpot's Time.

The other Part of Ham, anciently belonged to the Criols of Walmer: Simon de Criol was in Poſſeſſion of it in King John's, and Part of King Henry the IIId's Reign; whoſe Son Nicholas de Criol held it at his Deceaſe in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt. His Deſcendant Sir Thomas Criol, who was beheaded by Queen Margaret, after the ſecond Battel of St. Albans, in the 38th Year of King Henry the VIth, was alſo in Poſſeſſion of this Eſtate: He left only Two Daughters Co-heirs, one of whom had this Place, and was married to John Fogg of Repton, Eſq;, Son and Heir of Sir William Fogg; by her he had Iſſue Thomas Fogg, who was Serjeant Porter of Calais, a Place in thoſe Days of Truſt and Honour. He left alſo only Two Daughters, Anne, firſt married to William Scot, Brother to Sir Reginald Scot; and again, to Mr. Henry Iſham. Her Siſter Alice, was firſt the Wife of Edward Scot of the Moat in Suſſex, Eſq;; and afterwards of Sir Robert Oxenbridge of Hantſhire.

But this Moiety of Ham by her went to Mr. Scot; and his Deſcendant ſold it to Bois of Betſhanger: And his Deſcendant, John Bois of Betſhanger, Eſq; became entire Poſſeſſor of this Manor, having the former Part by Purchaſe from Oxenbridge: And thus it ſtood in Philpot's Time.

HARBLEDOWN, Herbaldon, lies towards the North Side of Kent, by the River Stoure, about a Mile and a half Weſtward from Canterbury, in the Bailiwick of Bridge and Petham, Hundred of Weſt-gate, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. A Rectory; and valued in the King's Books at 9 l. 2 s. 6.

The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims here.

In a Charter of King Henry the Iſt, 'tis called the Hoſpital of Blenwood: So that the Wood extended hither in thoſe Days: And perhaps its being cleared of the Wood, gave it the Name of Herbaldown.

Places

Places of Note here:

1. On the Top of a Hill by the Way Side here was anciently an old Chapel, in which was preſerved one of that inſolent Rebel Becket's Slippers as a moſt precious Relick. This Slipper, which they told you was ſprinkled with his Blood, they had gotten all ſet over with Diamonds; and it uſed to be let down for Paſſangers to kiſs, in Hopes of bringing up with it ſome of their Money by Way of Offering. In Eraſmus's Time, it was only the upper Leather of an old Shoe ſet in Copper and Chryſtal. This Chapel belonged to an Hoſpital built here by Lanfranc, of which I give an Account in its proper Place.

2. Polres is a Manor in this Pariſh, which had anciently Owners of that Name: John de Polre paid Aid for it at making the Black Prince Knight. After this Family was extinct it came into the Poſſeſſion of the Martins, who held it a good while: But by a Daughter of this Name, it went to Roger Brent; from whoſe Family it went by Sale to Sir Thomas Bind: And in that Name it continued in Philpot's Time.

3. Beverley is a Manor alſo here, which anciently belonged to the Beverleys, before they removed to Tancrey Iſland in Fordwich. And by a Daughter of this Name it went in Marriage to Thomas Norton, Eſq;, in which Family it continued till Queen Elizabeth's Reign; and then it was ſold to Merſeday; where it ſtaid till about King Charles the Iſt's Time, and then was ſold to Mr. —— Richardſon, who was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

William Wittleſey, Archbiſhop of Canterbury A. D. 1371. founded a Chantry in this Church to the Honour of St. Nicholas; which was afterwards confirmed by Archbiſhop Arundel in the Year 1402. The Prieſt who officiated here had Cure of Souls, and was tied to perpetual Reſidence: Becauſe when Archbiſhop Stratford had appropriated the Parſonage of St. Nicholas to Eaſtbridge Hoſpital, the People here wanted one to perform Religious Offices. The preſent Church is a pretty fair Building, and was much improved by Dr. Jackſon, formerly Maſter of Eaſtbridge Hoſpital. This Church was anciently, as now, accounted Parochial, having a Font, and Church-yard; and pays Procurations now as a Rectory. And to this Parſonage Theobald, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, annexed the Tithes of his Manor of Weſt-gate. But his Succeſſor, Archbiſhop Stratford, A. D. 1342. appropriated it to the Hoſpital of Eaſtbridge, which he had then newly reformed and eſtabliſhed.

But becauſe the Poor People of St. Nicholas's Hoſpital had been uſed to have the Sacrament adminiſtred to them, by the Incumbent of this Church, Stratford now obliged the Hoſpital of Eaſtbridge to find a Chaplain to officiate here; which they did till Archbiſhop Wittleſey eſtabliſhed the perpetual Chantry above-mentioned; and then that Prieſt officiated here.

This Church was firſt built by Archbiſhop Lanfranc, the Founder of the Hoſpital here, and for the Uſe of that Place.

HARDRES, called Upper or Great Hardres, lies about the Middle of the Eaſt Side of Kent, about three Miles and a half North Weſtward from Elebam, in the Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in the Lath of St. Auſtin. Part of it is in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Bridge and Petham, and the reſt in the Bailiwick of Stouting, Hundred of Lonningborough, and Lath of Shipway. The Liberty of St. Auſtin claims here; and that of Elebam over ſo much of it as is in the Hundred of Lonningborough. 'Tis all in the Deanery of Bridge, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Church ſtands in the Hundred of Bridge and Petham; and is dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul; is a pretty large Building, but with a low flat Tower. In it is a fair Monument of Sir Thomas Hardres and his Lady, Daughter of Henry Thoreſby, Eſq; who brought a very great Eſtate into this Family, in the Year 1628. Another of Sir Thomas Hardres of Canterbury: Another of Sir Thomas, Son of Sir William Hamon of Acryſe. Memorials of George Hardres, in the Year 1472: Of Mabill Hardres, in 1579; Of Sir Thomas Hardres, Bar. who married Urſula, Daughter of Sir William Rook, in 1688.

The Pariſh is a Rectory, and with the Chapel of Stelling annexed, is valued in the King's Books at 19 l. 13 s. 00 d. per Ann.

Places of Note here:

1. The Manor of Hardres hath a long Time had Owners of its own Name. We read the Name in the Book of Domeſday, where 'tis ſaid that Robert de Hardres held half a Suling or Plow-Land in Liminge, in the 20th Year of King William the Iſt. He was Anceſtor of Philip de Hardres, who was once of the Recognitores Magnæ Aſſiſæ in King John's Reign: And his Son of the ſame Name was a Man of great Eminence under King Henry the IIId, and married Grace, Daughter and Heir of Stephen de Heringod; who ſettled upon him the Manor of Elmſtede, and other Lands in this Tract. But it doth not appear, that the Gentlemen of this Name had always all the Land in this Manor; though they always kept ſome: For 'tis apparent from the Records, that Oliver Bohun had a Charter of Freewarren for his Lands at Upper Hardres in the 1ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, which was renewed to Nicholas de Hadloe, to whom he had ſold his Eſtate here: In this Name this Part continued till towards the End of King Richard the IId; and then all the Manor came into the Poſſeſſion of the Hardres: And one of them of this Place was Juſtice of Peace for this County in King Henry the IVth's, and King Henry the Vth's Reigns: Whoſe Deſcendant was Sir Richard Hardres, who was Lord of the Manor in Philpot's Time; and I ſuppoſe in this Name it doth at preſent continue.

2. Southcourt is another little Manor in Upper Hardres, which anciently belonged to the Family of Garwinton, once of great Name in Kent. Thomas and William de Garwinton are in the Liſt of thoſe Gentlemen of this County who attended King Henry the IIId in his Expedition into Gaſcoigny, in the 37th Year of his Reign. But about the 11th Year of King Henry the VIth, this Name was extinct; and by an Heir General, this Manor went into the Poſſeſſion of the Family of Haut; and thence after two Deſcents, the ſame Way into that of Iſaack, where it tarried till the Beginning of King Henry the VIIIth, and then was ſold to Diggs; a Name which had ſome Intereſt in this Place before, as appears by the Book of Aid in the 20th Year of King Edward the IIId. From the Diggs it went by Sale to Hales of the Dungeon in Canterbury; and in that Name it remained in Philpot's Time.

I find by the Records, That Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Glouceſter and Hereford, and Lord of Tunbridge Caſtle, had a Manor here, or in Lower Hardres, and claimed all Privileges to it as uſual, before the Juſtices Itinerant, in the 21ſt Year of Edward the Iſt.

HARDRES the Nether or Little, lies about the Middle of the Eaſt Side of Kent, about two Miles and a half South from Canterbury, in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Bridge and Petham;

Lath

Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery and Dioceſe of Canterbury. And the Church is called St. Mary's. A Rectory; and valued in the King's Books at 7 l. 19 s. 8 d.

The Liberty of St. Auſtin claims here.

Places of Note here:

1. Hepington is a Place or Seat here, which anciently belonged to the Chichs of the Dungeon: From them it went to the Fogges, about King Henry the IVth's Time, where it continued for ſome Ages; but at length was ſold to the Hales. One of which Family, in King Charles the Iſt's Reign, ſold the Houſe to Sir Thomas Godfrey; but the Propriety of the Manor continued in the Hales.

2. Lindeſhore, commonly called Linſore, is another Manor here, which in the 8th Year of King Edward the IIId, was the Eſtate of Thomas de Garwington; and here it tarried a good while, till by Joan, a Niece and Heir General of Thomas de Garwington, and Grandſon to the former, it went in Marriage to Richard Haut, a Younger Brother of the Hauts of Hauts-Bourn, alias Biſhopſbourn: From hence it went by another Daughter to William Iſaack of Blackmansbury in Bridge: And from this Family it went by Sale to John Brent, Eſq;: and from that Name by a Daughter to John Dering; and from thence it paſſed by Purchaſe from a Deſcendant of him in King Charles the Iſt's Reign, to Mr. Yong of Canterbury. In whoſe Poſſeſſion it continued in Philpot's Time.

HARRIETSHAM, Hrietſham, Herigeteſham, in the Tower Records, lies near the Middle of Kent, about a Mile and an half North Weſtward from Leneham, in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Eyhorn, Lath of Aylesford, and Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Eaſt Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. In the Dioceſe of Canterbury, and Deanery of Sutton. The Church is dedicated to St. John the Baptiſt. A Rectory; and valued in the King's Books at 11 l. 10 s. 00 d.

In the Church are Memorials of the Interment of Parteriche: An Altar-Tomb over William Stede, Eſq; in the Year 1574; and a handſome Marble Monument of Sir Edwin Stede of Stedehill, who was Lieutenant Governor of Barbadoes.

The Liberty of the Dean of Canterbury claims over ſo much of it, as is within the Manor of Hollingborn.

A Fair is kept here on June 24.

Places of Note here.

1. Harrietſham Manor. This Place was anciently Part of the Eſtate of the Noble Family of Creſcy. Hugh de Creſcy died ſeized of it in the 47th Year of Henry the IIId, whoſe Grandmother Margery was Daughter to William de Cheyney of Patrickbourn Cheyney. But he dying without Iſſue, it went to his Brother Shephen de Creſcy: And in this Family it ſtaid, till about the End of King Edward the IId's Reign, and then came ſome-how into the Poſſeſſion of Northwood: For Roger de Northwood paid Aid for it at making the Black Prince Knight; and in this Name it ſtaid till King Henry the Vth's Reign; and then went into the Name of Adam. After a Deſcent or two here, it came into the Poſſeſſion of James Peckham of Yaldham, Eſq;: and his Son Reginald Peckham, who was Sherff of Kent in the laſt Year of King Henry the VIIth's Reign, lived then here. I ſuppoſe at Court-Lodge, where the Manor of Harrietſham is ſtill kept. In the 15th Year of King Henry the VIIIth, it was ſold to Edward Scott, Eſq; who not long after ſent it the ſame Way to John Hales, one of the Barons of the Exchequer. And he ſold one half of it to John Norton, Eſq; in the 28th Year of King Henry the VIIIth; and in a while after, the other, to Sir Anthony St. Leger. Norton conveyed his Part to Aſhburnham of Suſſex, and that Family, and St. Leger joined in a Sale of the whole to Sir John Steed, whoſe Son Dr. Steed, L. L. D. was Grandfather to Dutton Steed, Eſq; the preſent Poſſeſſor.

2. Eaſt-Farbon, and 3. Bentley, are two ſmall Manors in this Pariſh, which of old belonged to the Priory of Leeds; and coming to the Crown on the Suppreſſion, ſtaid there till King Edward the VIth, in the 4th Year of his Reign, granted them to Sir Anthony St. Leger, whoſe Great Grandſon Sir Warham St. Leger, about the Beginning of King James the Iſt's Reign, ſold them to Mr. —— Steed, Father to Dr. William Steed, who on the Deceaſe of his Nephew Mr. Cromer Steed, without Iſſue Male, became Poſſeſſor: And in this Name it ſtill continues.

4. Weſt-Farbon, in ſome old Deeds called Little Harrietſham, is a Place in this Pariſh, which in the 52d Year of King Henry the IIId, was granted to William de Valentia, Earl of Pembroke. But in the 20th Year of King Edward the IIId it was come in the Poſſeſſion of John Pennington; and probably this Family held it till near the Time of King Henry the VIIIth's Reign; But then it came to be the Inheritance of Hede, or Head: And in King Edward the VIth's Reign was thence ſold to the St. Legers, where it ſtaid till Sir Warham St. Leger, ſold it to Mr. Benedict Barnham, in the Beginning of King James the Iſt's Reign. And by one of his four Daughters and Coheirs, the Eſtate went by Marriage to Mr. —— Conſtable, the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time. The other three Daughters married Audley, Doble, and Soam.

5. Harbilton is an ancient Manor here, which in the 20th Year of King Edward the IIId, belonged to Thomas de Malmains, as appears by the Book of Aid. But this Family went out about the End of King Richard the IId; and then it came into the Poſſeſſion of William Maris, whoſe Son William Maris, Eſq; was Sheriff of Kent in the 21ſt Year of King Henry the VIth. After this it became the Inheritance of the Moiles: For Walter Moile, Eſq; Juſtice of the Peace for this County, left this Eſtate, and a much greater in other Places, to his Son John Moile, Eſq;. But his Son Robert Moile, about the Beginning of King Henry the VIIIth, alienated it to Jeffery St. Leger, Eſq;: in which Family it continued, till, with other Land in this Pariſh above-mentioned, it was ſold to Steed, Anceſtor to Dr. William Steed, whoſe Grandſon Dutton Steed, Eſq; is the preſent Poſſeſſor.

5. Marley and Hopme-Mill, in ſome Copies written Holme-Mill, did of old belong to the Chaunter or Precentor of the Canons of the Church of St. Paul, London. At the Suppreſſion coming to the Crown, it was by King Edward the VIth granted to Sir Edward Wotton, one of his Privy Council; whoſe Grandſon of the ſame Name, was by King James the Iſt made Lord Wotton of Marley: And by his Son, Edward Lord Wotton, they were ſettled in Marriage on his Daughter Katherine, who married Henry Lord Stanhope, Son and Heir to Philip Earl of Cheſterfield, in which Family they ſtill continue.

Steedhill is a pleaſant Seat in this Pariſh, which ſtands on the Top of the Chalkhill, and overlooks all the Countrey to the Southward. 'Tis ſuppoſed to have been built by Sir John Steed, and is now the Eſtate of Dutton Steed, Eſq;. 'Tis indeed a fine Seat; but the ſhady Groves, tall Trees, &c. mentioned in the great Hiſtorical Geographical Dictionary, are all Creatures of Imagination.

In

In Harrietſham are Twelve Alms-Houſes, for ſo many Poor Perſons, and about 6 l. per Ann. for each. Half of the Alms-Men are put in by the Pariſh; and the other half by the Fiſhmongers Company: The Founder being one Mr. Mark Queſted, Fiſhmonger of London.

Nicholas Wood the famous great Eater was of this Pariſh. See Wanley's Wonders, B. 4. p. 390.

I find by the Placita de Jur. & Aſſiſ. &c. held before the Judges Itinerant, in the 21ſt Year of Edward the Ift, That the Manor of Harrietſham was ſo early in the Poſſeſſion of the Northwood Family; and therefore Philpot is much miſtaken in ſaying, that the Creſcys continued in Poſſeſſion till about the End of King Edward the IId. For John de Northwode, at the Time above-mentioned before thoſe Judges, claimed Freewarren, and other the uſual Privileges of a Manor here; and alledged that this Manor was given to his Father, Roger de Northwode, by Roger Loveday; who therefore muſt have been in Poſſeſſion of it long before.

HARTLEY, Hertlee, lies towards the North-Weſt Part of Kent, about four Miles Southward from Graveſend, in the Bailiwick of Sutton Dartford, Hundred of Axtone, Lath of Sutton-at-Hone, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and upper one of Juſtices in that Lath.

'Tis in the Deanery and Dioceſe of Rocheſter: And the Church is called All-Saints. A Rectory; and valued in the King's Books at 7 l. 0 s. 0 d.

The Church is ſmall, and hath no Monuments or Inſcriptions.

This Place anciently was Part of the Inheritance of the Noble Family of Montchenſie, whoſe chief Seat was at Swanſcomb: Warren de Montchenſie got a Charter of Freewarren for his Land here, in the 37th Year of King Henry the IIId. But his Son William dying without Iſſue, by his Siſter Joan it went in Marriage to William de Valence, Earl of Pembroke: But his Son Aymer de Valence dying alſo without Iſſue-Male, in the 17th Year of King Edward the IId, his Daughter Iſabell carried it to her Husband Laurence de Haſtings, who was afterwards Earl of Pembroke: His Grandſon John de Haſtings died Childleſs, A. D. 1389, and left this Eſtate to his Kinſman Reginald Grey; from which Name it went by Sale about the End of King Henry the VIth, to that of Penbale; from hence, towards the End of King Henry the VIIth, it ſhifted the ſame Way to Creſſells, and ſoon after to Ballard: And again, at the End of King Edward the VIth's Reign to William Sydley Eſq; in whoſe Deſcendants Poſſeſſion, Sir Charles Sydley, it was in Philpot's Time.

In this Pariſh I ſaw two Box-Trees at a Farmer's Doot, as tall as Oaks of 30 Years growth, and with clear Bodies.

I find by ſome Records, that I have ſince peruſed, that Dionyſia de Monte Caniſio (i. e. de Monchenſie) was in Poſſeſſion of 20 Librates of Land here, in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Ift. And therefore 'tis likely ſhe might be the Lady that Philpot calls Joan: At this Time ſhe was unmarried.

N. B. A Librate of Land ſome make to be four Oxgangs, or ſixty Acres: Others ſay, it was the ſame with a Sulling or Plow-Land.

HARTLIP, Hertlepe, lies at the North Side of the Middle of Kent, about four Miles Weſtward from Middleton or Milton; in the Bailiwick and Hundred of that Name, Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Upper one of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery of Sittingburn, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. And the Church is dedicated to St. Michael.

Places of Note here:

1. Gorecourt was anciently a Manor that had Owners of the Name of Gore: Henry de Gore held it at his Death, in the 31ſt Year of King Edward the IIId; and in this Family it continued till King Henry the Vth's Reign, and then was ſold to Werdecre or Wordegar, in which Name it ſtaid till the 11th Year of King James the Ift. And then by William, Son of George Wordegar, was ſold to Sir Nicholas Tuſten; whoſe Son and Heir John Earl of Thanet was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time. The Famous Juliana de Leybourn, called the Infanta of Kent, had ſome Eſtate here alſo; which eſcheating to the Crown in the 43d Year of King Edward the IIId, was by that King ſettled on the Abbey of St. Mary of Grace on Tower-Hill, London: And at the general Suppreſſion of the Religious Houſes, coming to the Crown again, was granted by King Henry the VIIIth to the above-mentioned William Wordegar; whoſe Succeſſor ſold it alſo to Sir Nicholas Tuſten. I find alſo by the Records, That the Hoſpital of St. Katherine of the Tower of London had ſome Land here in the 31ſt Year of King Edward the Ift. Vid. Placita Coron. coram I de Berwyke, &c.

2. Popes-Hall is a Place here which had once Owners of the Name of Pope, who had alſo an Eſtate at Gaeſden near Tenterden; but about the End of King Henry the VIIth, this Seat was by Richard Pope ſold to Chriſtopher Bloer; and by his Daughter and Heir Olimpia it went in Marriage to Mr. John Tuſton, Anceſtor to the Earls of Thanet.

3. Eagar-Court or Croſs, anciently Ealgar or Ealdigar, is a Manor here which was of old the Eſtate of William de Elmeſted; but continued not long in that Name; for in the 13th Year of King Edward the Ift, it was in the Poſſeſſion of Roger de Northwood, in whoſe Family it continued till King Henry the VIth's Reign, and then was ſold to Mr. Norton of Borden; from whom in the 4th Year of King Edward the IVth, Part of it went the ſame Way to Champneys; and at laſt, all of it. Here the Property continued till King Henry the VIIIth's Time; and then by Sale it went back again to Norton: But in Queen Mary's Reign it was ſold to Gilbert Fremlin; who alſo in the 15th Year of Queen Elizabeth alienated it to John Palmer, Eſq; Father to Sir Anthony Palmer, and Grandfather of Dudley Palmer, Eſq;, the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

4. Grayney, corruptly from Graveney, is another Manor in this Pariſh, which anciently had Proprietors of the Name of Graveney; and they held it till the Time of King Henry the VIth. After this, in King Henry the VIIIth's Reign it was gotten to be in the Poſſeſſion of John Mayney of Biddenden, Eſq;, whoſe Great Grandſon, Sir John Mayney of Linton was the Owner of it in Philpot's Time.

Mary, Daughter of Robert Osborn, Gent. and Relick of Thomas Gibbon, Gent. of this Pariſh, died in the Year 1678, and endowed here a Charity School, (for 6 poor Children, to be taught to read), with 6 l. per Ann. 20 s. to the Vicar, and 4 l. to the Schoolmaſter; and the other 20 s. to buy Bibles for ſuch of the Children as can read well in that Book.

This Pariſh is a Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 9 l. 10 s. 8 d. per Ann. The Church ſmall, in it there is a Chancel belonging to the Osborn Family, many of which lye here; as John Osborn, who was Auditor of the Exchequer in Queen Elizabeth's Time, in the Year 1577. Here are Memorials alſo of the Name of Fanſhaw, in the Year 1668.

HARTY is a ſmall Iſland lying at the North Side of Kent, adjoining to, and may be accounted Part of the Iſle of Shepey; 'tis about Two Miles and a half Northward from Feverſham, in the Bailiwick and Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Upper one of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Hundred of Feverſham; and therefore the Liberty of St. Auſtin claims over it: It is alſo in the Deanery of Oſpringe and Dioceſe of Canterbury; and the Church is dedicated to St. Thomas the Apoſtle. 'Tis in the Nature of a Chapel, being appropriated to Mr. Thornhill, and he is obliged to find a perpetual Curate with a Stipend of 20 l. per Ann. who preaches here once a Month. However 'tis highly rated in the King's Books at 20 l. 5 s. 11 d.

Harty did anciently belong to the Abbot and Convent of Feverſham, but in the 10th Year of King Henry the VIIIth, John, then Abbot, obtained a Licenſe from the Crown to alienate it to Thomas Colepeper Eſq; who about the End of that King's Reign ſold it to Sir Thomas Cheyney; and his Son Henry Lord Cheyney, about the Middle of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, ſent it the ſame Way to Richard Thornhill, Eſq; in whoſe Deſcendants it ſtill continues.

But there was alſo a Place in this Iſland, which in Queen Elizabeth's Time, had the Reputation of a Manor; for in the 13th Year of that Princeſs, Simon Low, and John Kime brought a Writ of Right againſt Thomas Paramour, for a Manor and ſome Lands in Harty by Shepey in Kent: Upon this, Paramour offered to defend his Right by Combat; which the Petitioners accepted. Accordingly Paramour brings his Champion, which was one George Thorne, a ſtrong well-ſett Man, and offers him before the Lords Juſtices of the Common Pleas at Weſtminſter. The Petitioners brought one Henry Nailer, a Fencing Maſter, not very tall and ſtrong, but a clever nimble Fellow. Thorne throws down his Iron Gauntlet in Defiance, which Nailer took up, and thereby accepted the Duel: And they were both ſworn to fight this Combat in Tuttle Fields in Weſtminſter, on the Monday next after Cras Trinitatis next enſuing. Againſt the Day appointed a ſquare Place was marked out in Tuttle Fields, of 21 Rods every Way, and fenced in with double Bars or Liſts to include the Combatants, and exclude the Mob. On the Weſt Side of this Place of Battel was a Place built up, a Tribunal fix'd for the Judges of the Court of Common-Pleas, who were to be the Judges of the Duel; and on the other Three Sides Scaffolds for the Spectators: On the Back-ſide of the Judges Scaffold were Two Tents placed, one for Thorne, and another for Nailer. On the Morning of the appointed Day Nailer appeared clad in red Sattin, with a Kind of Thrum Cap on his Head, adorned with a Band and Plume of Scarlet Feathers; and thus with Drums and Trumpets before him, marched in a very menacing Manner through London, and bore on the Point of his Sword, Thorne's Gauntlet; and one of his Gang carried the Club with which he was to fight the Duel, and a ſtrong Leathern Target before him. The Club was about an Ell long, and was armed with Horn at the End. In this pompous Manner he marches into the Field of Battel, and was there received with great Solemnity by Sir Jerome Bowes, and conducted to his Tent. Thorne alſo had been before him placed in his, by Sir Henry Cheyney. About Ten-a-Clock in the Morning comes to the Place the whole Court of Common Pleas, with their Serjeants, &c. in their ſolemn Habits: And as ſoon as they were ſeated, the Crier three Times calls the Petitioners to appear: But they not doing ſo, Nailer's Securities were called upon to produce him. Accordingly Sir Jerome Bowes leads into the Liſts his Champion Nailer, with his Head bare, and bare-legged alſo, from the Knees downwards; Sir Jerome carried his Club, and placed him juſt before the Court, where he made his Bows, &c. Sir Henry Cheyney in like Manner leads in his Champion Thorne, and places him over-againſt the other. Then the Crier made Proclamation, that no one ſhould preſume to enter into the Liſts: And thus all Things look'd as if they would have immediately engaged. But one of the Serjeants, who was Council for Paramour, upon a new Proclamation, made for the Petitioners to appear in Court, and they not doing ſo, moved that their Non-Appearance might be recorded. After which, the Lord Chief Juſtice ſtated the whole Matter of the Diſpute in Order, and declaring the Petitioners to be Nonſuited for not appearing, adjudged the Land to Paramour; diſmiſſed the Combatants, and ordered Nailer to return the Gauntlet to Thorne, and allowed Paramour Coſts. For indeed the Queen had before ordered that they ſhould not fight; but all this Form was adjudged neceſſary to aſcertain the Right of Paramour. See Spelm. Gloſſ. in the word Campus. Dyer's Reports; Coke's Entries, &c. And this is the laſt Inſtance of a Duel being prepared upon a Writ of Right, which is grown now quite out of Uſe, as indeed all ſuch barbarous Ways of Trial ought to do.

I find by the Pleas of the Crown in the 21ſt Year of Edward the Iſt, before the Judges Itinerant in this County, That there was formerly a Bridge leading from this Iſland over into Shepey; and then called Thremſeth-Bridge. But this was broken down by a violent Inundation of the Sea; and the Chanel thereby made ſo deep, that a new one could not be laid, or the old one repaired: And therefore the Inhabitants of Shepey, who were before obliged to repair the ſaid Bridge, did maintain two Ferry Boats (Bargæ) to carry Paſſengers to and fro.

HÆSELHOLTE is the Name of a Pariſh, which was in Being when the Textus Roffenſis was compiled, and lay within the Dioceſe of Rocheſter, but whereabouts, I can't diſcover.

HASTINGLIGH, Haſtingleigh, lies towards the South Eaſt Part of Kent, about three Miles South Eaſtward from Wye, in the Bailiwick of Chart and Longbridge; Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in the Lath of Shipway. So much of it as is in Town-Burgh, is in the Hundred of Wye, and within its Liberties; but the reſt is in the Hundred of Bircholt Barony: And the Liberty of the Dutchy of Lancaſter claims over the Manor of Haſtingligh. 'Tis alſo in the Deanery of Elebam, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Church ſtands in the Hundred of Bircholt Barony, and is called St. Mary's. 'Tis ſmall, conſiſting of only one Iſle; in it is a Memorial of the Interment of John Halke, in the Year 1604. In the Windows of the Chancel were painted the ſeven Romiſh Sacraments. 'Tis a Rectory; and valued in the King's Books at 10 l. 5 s. 0 d. per Ann.

Places of Note here:

The Farm-Houſe by the Church is called,

1. Court-Lodge, becauſe no doubt the Manor Court was formerly kept here; and that I conclude to be the Caſe where-ever I find a Houſe ſo called.

2. Haſtingligh Manor did anciently belong to the Family of Haut: But in the Beginning of King Henry the IVth, Edward Haut ſold it to Robert Poynings of Oaſtenhanger: And in this Name it ſtaid till the 12th Year of King Henry the VIIIth; and then Sir Edward Poynings leaving no Iſſue, it eſcheated to the Crown, and ſtaid there there till King Edward the VIth in his laſt Year gave it to the City of London. But the Manor of,

4. Aldelowe, which was part of it, was ſettled by that King on the Hoſpital of St. Thomas in Southwark.

5. Kings-Mill Down was a Seat here, which formerly belonged to the Name of Beling or Belling: Which Name is preſerved in the Glaſs of the Weſt Window of the Church to this Day: But the preſent Poſſeſſor is Mr. Abraham Jacob of Dover.

HAWKHERST, lies at the South ſide of Kent, by a Rivulet running into the Rother, about Three Miles and a half Southward from Cranbrook; a ſmall part of it called Hiſelden, (viz. only Two Houſes and a little Land to each) is in the Hundred of Shoyſwell, and County of Suſſex: But the reſt is in Kent, in the Bailiwick of the Seven Hundreds, Lath of Scray, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Lower Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath.

So much of it as is in either the Borough of Hawkeherſt, otherwiſe South-borough, anciently called the Half Hundred of Barnfeild; and lately called, but falſly, the whole Hundred; or in the North-borough, truly called the Half Hundred; ſo much of it, I ſay, is in the Hundred of Great Barnfeild; and here the Liberty of St. Auſtin claims over the Dens of Ockley, Chittenden, and Parrock, in that North-borough.

But ſo much of it as is in the Weſt-borough, is in the Hundred of Selbrittenden.

The Liberty of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury claims over the following Dens, viz. Foxhole, Little Henſell, Pipſden, Congherſt, and Little Riſeden.

The Borough of Crothall, which is but a ſmall part, is in the Hundred of Cranbrook.

The Borough of Hawkeherſt hath a Court-Leet of its own, where the Borſholder of that Borough is choſen; and its Inhabitants owe no Service to the Court-Leet holden for the Borough of Great Barnfeild: But at that Court an Inhabitant of this Borough may be choſe Conſtable of that Hundred. The Liberty of Wye claims over this Borough.

The Pariſh is in the Deanery of Charing, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Church ſtands in the Hundred of Great Barnfeild, and is Dedicated to St. Laurence.

The Rectory which is impropriated to Chriſt-Church in Oxford, is valued in the King's Books at 36*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* But in Dr. Williams's Map of Canterbury, 'tis marked as a Curacy. The Church is handſome, and hath a good Tower; in it are ſeveral Memorials of the Family of Bois, and one of Humphrey Scot, Eſq; ; a Monument of Richard Kilburne, Eſq;, formerly Principal of Staples Inn, and Author of the Survey of Kent, Printed in the Year 1656, who had an Eſtate and lived here; and hath given a large Account of this Place. Formerly there was fine Painted Glaſs in the Windows of this Church: In the great Window of the middle Chancel, were Pictures of the good Kings and Prophets of Iſrael. In the North Windows were alſo the Pictures of Twelve Men and their Wives all kneeling; all which are now nearly defaced and gone, and began to be damaged when Kilburn wrote his Survey; but the Names of ſome of them were then preſerved; for the Fourth in Order was named Ockley, the Fifth Delmynden, the Sixth, Sieſley; the Seventh, Cockſhot; the Eighth and Ninth, Badcock and Bartilt. 'Tis probable theſe Twelve Men and their Wives were the moſt Eminent Inhabitants at the time of the Foundation of the Church; tho' the common Tradition is, that they were the Owners of the Twelve Dens which are in the Liberty of Wye; Seven of which are in this Pariſh, and the other Five near it. In the South Chancel was anciently an Image of the Virgin; over the North Porch is a Room called formerly the Treaſury; wherein was a Cheſt containing ſeveral Ancient Writings concerning the Bounds, Rights, and Lands of this Pariſh.

This Church was founded by the Abbot of Battle in Suſſex, in the Reign of King Edward the IIId; and from thence to the time of the general Diſſolution of the Monaſteries, there was a Rector here appointed by the Abbot as Patron. But after that, King Henry the VIIIth granted the Patronage and Preſentation of the Rectory to Charles Brandon Duke of Suffolk: And then again, in his 38th Year, he granted the Parſonage to the Dean and Chapter of Chriſt-Church in Oxford; appointing them to preſent a Clerk to the Ordinary, who ſhould be named perpetual Vicar of the ſaid Church; ſhould bear all Charges, except Reparation of the Church; ſhould have a Dwelling, and an Annual Penſion of 12*l.* 10*s.* 10*d.* and ſhould pay 25*s.* every Year to the King as Tenths, and be charged with the Firſt Fruits. But all this being done without the Conſent of the Duke of Suffolk, no Vicar was ever endowed; but the Office of Curate was given by the Dean and Chapter as a Donative, and no Firſt Fruits were ever paid, but only 11*s.* 8*d.* as a Stipendiary.

Afterwards, in the 2d and 3d Years of Queen Mary, the ſaid Dean and Chapter granted to Sir William Peter 8*l.* per Ann. out of the Parſonage, to be paid by the Church-Wardens to the Curate. Juſt before the Troubles the Dean and Chapter paid the Curate 20*l.* per Ann. Salary, and then he had the Advantage of the Eaſter Book, ſome Rooms in the Parſonage Houſe, (which were called the Vicarage Rooms) a ſmall Croſt, called Vicarage Croft, and the Church-yard. But all this was ſo inconſiderable, that upon his being Sequeſtred in 1646, no one would accept the Place, and the People were without a Miniſter for Fourteen Months. After this an Augmentation was obtained from the State; but that was ſoon taken away again, and the former Allowance left only for the Miniſter, which, Kilburn ſaith, was not above 24*l.* per Ann. What is done ſince I don't know.

Places of Note here:

1. Hawkherſt Manor was granted by King William the Iſt to, and conſidered as part of, the Manor of Wye, which with all its Appendages was to hold of the Abbey of Battle: And in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, the Abbot claimed to have all Privileges belonging to this Manor; and tho' the Abbey be ſuppreſſed, this Place ſtill holds (ſaith Philpot) of that Court.

The Royalty and Rents of this Place, after the Suppreſſion, were in the 33d Year of King Henry the VIIIth, granted to Sir John Baker of Siſingherſt, then Attorney-General and Chancellor of the Exchequer, as he was likewiſe afterwards in the Two next Reigns. But Differences and Diſputes ariſing between his Deſcendants and the Heirs of Lord Hundſon, Lord of the Manor of Wye; Sir Henry Baker, to prevent all future Suits and Quarrels, in the 17th Year of King James the Iſt, ſold his Right to Henry Cary, Lord Hunſdon and Earl of Dover; who in the next Reign paſſed it the ſame way to Sir Thomas Finch, Father of the Right Honourable Heneage Earl of Winchelſea; and here it continued in Philpot's Time.

2. Congherſt is a Place in Hawkherſt, adjoining to Suſſex, now called Old Congherſt, which anciently gave Name to, and was the Seat of a Family ſo called. The Moat about it, and the Site, were viſible in Kilburn's Time. How long the Congherſts had continued here I can't find; but about 150 Years ſince the Name went out in a Daughter, viz. Mildred, only Child and Heir of Thomas Congherſt, who carried this Eſtate in Marriage to Thomas Scott, Eſq; in whoſe Deſcendants it continued in Philpot's Time. The Arms of Congherſt were carved on the great Beam at the Top of the North Chancel.

In this Pariſh it is the Cuſtom (ſaith Kilburn) to pay for the Tithe of an Acre of Graſs (cut in the Land at or near the Moore) for fore Paſture, and after Paſture, Two Pence; and in all other Places in the Pariſh but Three Half-pence, and Three Half-pence alſo for the Tithe of every Ten Buſhels of Apples; for the Profit of every Milch Cow One Peny, and a Half-peny for the Calf; and theſe are all payable at Eaſter. And there being once a Suit about this Modus in the Spiritual Court, commenced by the Farmer of the Parſonage; Gibſon, one of the Pariſhioners, obtained a Prohibition in the 5th Year of King James the Iſt; and on a Tryal at Rocheſter Aſſizes in Lent following, he obtained a Verdict and had Judgment given for him.

Moſt of the Lands in this Pariſh are within the Liberty of Wye; which of old belonged to the Abbey of Battle; and that Convent granted to their Men of Hawkherſt (as they are called in the dateleſs Deed) and their Heirs, the Ville of Hawkherſt; at the Yearly Rent of 10 l. 20 Hens, and 250 Eggs.

After this, in the 14th Year of King Edward the Iſt's Reign, the Convent again granted to them, all their Tenements in the Dens of Hawkherſt, Amboldeſſers, Delmynden, Seſſele, Beratylts, Fiſſenden, Markden, Frechele, Wyneſſe, Wynchinden, Chittenden, and Watringhope, at the ſame Rent; reſerving Suit to their Court at Wye from Three Weeks to Three Weeks; and becauſe the Abbot then took into his Hands Anglingle, before a part of this Tenancy; he abated them 40 s. per Ann. of the Ten Pounds Annual Rent, and compounded with them for the Hens and Eggs at Eight Shillings, and for the Suit of Court at Six Shillings; ſo that ever ſince, their Rent to the Owners of Wye is fixed at 8 l. 14 s. and 8 d.

By the preceding Grant they were allowed to have a Reeve of their own, and to hold an Annual Court, to raiſe the ſaid Rent, by a due proportion on the Lands, and to chuſe their Reeve; which Court is ſtill kept here, but is now called the Court Baron of the Lord.

In the 22d Year of King Edward the IVth, Henry Parſon, and William his Son, gave a Houſe adjoining to the Church-yard, and uſually called the Church-houſe, with an Acre of Land, towards the Repairs of the Church: On part of which Land an Alms-houſe was erected for the Benefit of the Poor; and in the Cloſe belonging to the ſaid Houſe, another Houſe, in which the Sexton of the Pariſh lives.

A. D. 1556, one Thomas Iddenden gave ſeveral Houſes and pieces of Land lying in a Place called Highſtreet in this Pariſh, to be for ever employed to the uſe of the Poor, &c.

And in the 15th Year of Queen Elizabeth, Thomas Gibbon granted an Annuity of 43 s. and 4 d. per Ann. out of his Houſe, and Three Pieces of Land at Amboldherſt in this Pariſh; which was purchaſed of him by the Pariſh towards the Repair of the Church.

In the 5th Year of King Edward the Iſt, a Tueſdays Market was granted to this Place, to be kept on the Green by the Moor; and Philpot ſaith, that within the Memory of Men then living, a Market Croſs was ſtanding there, but this is now diſuſed for many Years paſt. But here is a Fair held Auguſt the 10th, which was granted in the ſame Reign, and to hold Three Days. There was alſo another Fair kept here formerly on February the 14th, but this hath been down this many Years.

In this Pariſh there ſtood anciently Five Croſſes, viz. Badcocks-Croſs, Cocks-Croſs, lately called Philpot's-Croſs, Skelcrouch-Croſs, Highgate-Croſs, and Pipſden-Croſs.

Hawkherſt was formerly divided from Saleburſt in Suſſex, by a Bridge called Kent-Bridge. And in the Weſt-hedge of a Field here ſtill called Beacon Field, ſtood formerly a Beacon and a Watch-Houſe.

HAWKING lies at the South-Eaſt part of Kent near the Sea, about Four Miles and a half North-Eaſtward from Hithe, in the Bailiwick of Stowting, Hundred of Folkſtone, Lath of Shipway, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath; in the Deanery of Dover, and Dioceſe of Canterbury, and the Church is Dedicated to St. Michael. 'Tis a Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 7 l. 7 s. 10 d. per Ann.

The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims here.

Places of Note here:

1. Bilcheſter; which is a ſmall Manor here, formerly belonging to the Knights Templers; but as they were ſuppreſſed in the 2d Year of King Edward the IId, this came to the Crown, and was Fifteen Years afterwards ſettled on the Knights Hoſpitallers of St. John of Jeruſalem; and here it continued till the great Suppreſſion, and then was by King Henry the VIIIth, in his 33d Year, granted to Sir Anthony Aucher in Leaſe only; who not long after aſſigned it over to Thomas Somerſhall, who ſent it the ſame way to Richard Simonds, who was the Occupant in Philpot's Time, but the Fee-ſimple continued in the Crown.

2. Fleggs-Court is another little Manor here, which anciently belonged to the Neighbouring Abbey of St. Rodigunds; but on the general Diſſolution of the Abbeys came to the Crown, and then was exchanged by King Henry the VIIIth, in his 29th Year, for other Lands with Thomas Cranmer, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and after that, continued in the Poſſeſſion of that See.

HAYES, (Heyes) lies at the Weſt End of Kent near Surrey, on the River Ravensburne; about Two Miles Southward from Bromley, in the Bailiwick of Sutton-Bromley, Hundred of Rokeſley, Lath of Sutton-at-Hone, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Upper One of Juſtices in that Lath.

'Tis in the Dioceſe of Rocheſter, but being in the Deanery of Shoreham, is a Peculiar to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

'Tis a Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 6 l. 18 s. per Ann.

This Place did formerly belong to the Squiries, a Family of great Note in theſe Parts, for many Deſcents; but at laſt the Name went out in Two Daughters Co-heirs, Margaret and Dorothy, the former was Married to Sir William Cromer; but the latter carried this Eſtate to her Husband Mr. Richard Merwin; and one of his Deſcendants ſold it into the Name of Peche. But Sir John Peche dying without Iſſue-Male, his only Daughter, Elizabeth, carried it in Marriage to John Hart, Eſq; in whoſe Family it continued in Philpot's Time.

HEDCORNE, Hedecorne, Hedycrone, a Place where Corn was heedfully Sown; lies about the middle of Kent by the Medway, about Five Miles South-Weſtward from Lencham.

It lies in ſeveral Hundreds: The Burgh of Stepburſt is in the Hundred of Barkley, and the Bailiwick of the Seven Hundreds.

The North Burgh is in the Hundred of Cranebrook, and in the Bailiwick of the Seven Hundreds.

Another part of this Pariſh is in the Hundred and Baliwick of Eyborne.

Another part is in the Hundred of Tenham, and Bailiwick of Scray.

And the reſt is in the Hundred of Colehill, and Bailiwick of Chart and Longbridge.

Thoſe Parts of it which are in the Hundreds of Barkley and Cranbrooke, are in the Lath of Scray, and Weſt Diviſion of the County.

That part which lies in the Hundreds of Tenham and Calehill, is alſo in the Lath of Scray, but in the Eaſt Diviſion of the County.

And ſo much of it as is in the Hundred of Eyborne, is in the Lath of Aylesford, and Weſt Diviſion of the County.

This Pariſh is in the Eaſt Diviſion of Juſtices of the Lath of Aylesford.

The Liberty of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury claims over the Den of Habenbury.

'Tis all in the Deanery of Charing, and Dioceſe of Canterbury.

The Church ſtands in the Hundred of Eyborne, was founded by one of the Colepepers (whoſe Monument and Arms are, or were, in the South Wall of the ſame; and alſo over the Bellfrey) and was Dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul: A Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 15 l. 13 s. 4 d.

This Church was anciently appropriated to the Maiſon de Dieu at Oſpringe.

A Fair is kept here on the 29th of June, St. Peter's Day.

Places of Note here:

1. Mottenden Priory in this Pariſh (of which ſee an Account in its proper Place) on the Suppreſſion, was granted by King Henry the VIIIth to Sir Anthony Aucher, who in the 2d Year of King Edward the VIth, ſold it to Sir Walter Herley, by whoſe Daughter it went to Thomas Colepeper of Bedgebury, Eſq; from that Family it was ſold to Francklyn, and George Francklyn bequeathed it by Will to his Kinſman Sir William Sydley; in which Family it remained in Philpot's Time.

2. Kents Chauntry, is another Place here, which was ſo called from a Chauntry founded here by one John Kent, in the 6th Year of King Edward the IVth. On the Suppreſſion in the 32d Year of King Henry the VIIIth, it was granted by the Crown to Sir Anthony St. Leger; whoſe Son Sir Warham, about the beginning of Queen Elizabeth, ſold it to Beresford of Weſtram; from which Name it went the ſame way to Southland, and he alienated it to Belcher, then Miniſter of Ulcombe; in whoſe Poſſeſſion it was in Philpot's Time.

3. Kelſham, which, tho' now but a Farmhouſe, was once the Reſidence of a good Family of that Name; whoſe Arms were Sable a Feſs engrailed Argent between Three Garbs Or; and one of them had his Effigies in the Glaſs Window of the Church, with his Arms on his Tabard; but about the End of Queen Elizabeth, this Seat was ſold from this Name to Johnſon: And about the End of King Charles the Iſt, went the ſame way to that of Stringer; in whoſe Poſſeſſion it was in Philpot's Time.

3. Riſhford is another Manor in this Pariſh, which in the 20th Year of King Edward the IIId was in the Poſſeſſion of a Family whoſe Name was Pend; and there is a good deal of Land in this Pariſh, which Philpot ſaith bore the Name of Pend Land; and it continued among them till about the End of Queen Elizabeth, and then was ſold to Dominic alias Fullaker; who about the End of King Charles the Iſt, ſent it the ſame way to Mr. John Hulkes of Newenham, and in his Son was the Poſſeſſion in Philpot's Time.

I find by the Pleas of the Crown, before the Juſtices Itinerant, in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, that Complaint being made againſt the Inhabitants of the Hundred of Eyborn, that Hokinby Bridge, and another at Hedcorne, (which is called the New Bridge in the Old Map of Kent) being broken down, they ought to Repair part of the former, and all the latter, except ſuch Tenants as Rented Lands belonging to the Knights Hoſpitallers: As to Hedcorne Bridge it was determined as above: But as to Hokinby Bridge it being alledged, that the Tenants of the Hundred of Eyborne were obliged to repair one Pyle or Peer of Rocheſter Bridge, &c. the Jury found them liable to repair only one half of it.

HERDEY is a Pariſh mentioned in the Text. Roffenſis, f. 221. as lying within the Dioceſe of Rocheſter, and paying 9 d. for the Chriſm, as other Pariſhes did (as a Rent) to the Cathedral; but I can find nothing of it elſewhere.

HEREMANSCIRCE DE HOU, is alſo mentioned and rated there as another Pariſh in Rocheſter Dioceſe, of which I find no other Account.

HERNE, probably ſo named (as alſo Hernehill was) from the Quantity of Herns which uſed to frequent theſe Parts, lies at the North ſide of Kent, near the Sea, about Four Miles and a half Northward from Canterbury, in the Baliwick of Bridge and Petham, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath.

The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims here; but that of St. Auſtin claims alſo not only near the Church, but almoſt over all the Pariſh; becauſe 'tis in the Hundred of Blengate, which belonged to that Abbey.

'Tis in the Deanery of Weſt-Bere, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; and the Church, which was anciently a Chapel to Reculver, is dedicated to St. Martin; and was made a perpetual Vicarage by Robert Winchelſey, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and is now rated in the King's Books at 20 l. 16 s. 1 d. The preſent Church is a large handſome Edifice, in it was formerly an Organ, and there is now a fair Stone Font. Here is a Monument of Sir Chriſtopher Mills of Eddington in this Pariſh; and another of Sir William Thornhurſt. Memorials alſo of the Interment of Edward Ewell, Gent. of Philips Lord Mayor of London 230 Years ſince, and of Fineux and Laverick about 200 Years ago. A Braſs Plate with the Figure of a Man in Armour over Peter Hall, Eſq; without Date, and ſeems ancient; and another over John —— B. LL. in a Rich Prieſtly Habit.

In the 25th Year of King Edward the IIId, here was a Market obtained to be held on Monday; and a Two Days Fair at the Feaſt of St. Martin, by the Intereſt of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury; and in the 38th Year of that Prince, I find by the Tower Records, that the Church yard here was much enlarged.

Places of Note here:

1. Hawhouſe, which long ſince belonged to the Famous Family of Apuldrefeild, and by Elizabeth, a Daughter and Heir of that Name, went in Marriage to Sir John Fineux or Phineux; and here it continued till another Daughter of John Phineux, a Deſcendant of this Family, carried it to her Husband Sir John Smith, who was Grandfather to Philip Viſcount Strangford; the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

2. Seas or At-Seas-Court, is another Place here, which formerly was accounted a Manor, and belonged to a Family of the Name of Atſea, and continued in the Family a great while; but about the beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, it was ſold ſold to Knowler; and in this Name it continued in Philpot's Time; but it hath loſt its own of Seas Court; the Place where the Knowler's live being now called Strode.

3. Underdown was the Name of a Place here, where John Sea, Eſq; formerly inhabited; as appears by his Monument in the Church.

HERNEHILL lies towards the North ſide of Kent, about Two Miles and a half South-Eaſt from Feverſham, in the Bailiwick and Lath of Scray, Hundred of Boughton under Blean, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Upper one of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery of Oſpringe, and Dioceſe of Canterbury, and the Church is called St. Michael, is a handſome one, with a good Tower.

The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims here.

This Pariſh is a Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 15 l. per Ann.

Places of Note here:

1. Durgall-Stroude, which anciently belonged to the Martins, a Family of Note, whoſe principal Seat was at Graveny hard by; but in Proceſs of Time, by Margaret Daughter and Heir of Matthew Martin, this Manor went in Marriage to William Norton of Cokesditch in Feverſham; whoſe Heir, Thomas Norton, alienated it to Sir John Wild of Canterbury; in whoſe Heirs General the Poſſeſſion continued in Philpot's Time.

2. Apes-Court or Lockley, is a Place from whence the Epes of Canterbury ſeem to have taken their Name: And this is the more probable, becauſe they were Tenants to the Church of Canterbury, for the Manor of Seaſalter adjoining to this Place. But this is moſtly Conjecture. Afterwards the Nevinſons were Owners of this Manor, and made this their Seat of Reſidence before they went to Eaſtry. But in King James the Iſt's Time, Sir Roger Nevinſon ſold it to Sir John Wild of Canterbury, whoſe Son Dudley Wild deceaſing without Iſſue in Philpot's Time, left this and Durgall-Stroude above-mentioned, to his Heirs General.

HERST, Hurſt, i. e. Wood, lies about the South-Eaſt part of Kent, about Four Miles Weſtward from Hithe, in the Bailiwick and Lath of Shipway, Hundred of Streete, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in the Corporation of Romney Marſh, the Liberty of which claims over it. 'Tis in the Deanery of Limpne, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; the Church was Dedicated to St. Leonard, but hath been Demoliſhed ever ſince the Year 1530. It was a Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 4 l. 18 s. 4 d. In ſome of the Printed Values, 'tis called Fakenerhurſt for Fauconerherſt. The Reaſon of which is, that it once belonged to the Eminent Family of Falconer. For Robert de Fauconer held Ten Librates of Land here, by the Serjeancy of keeping yearly for the King one Falcon, at his Majeſty's Charge, Vid. Placit. de Libertat. coram Juſt. Itiner.

And the ſame Year, being the 21ſt of Edward the Iſt, I find that Robert le Fauconer claimed to have Freewarren, View of Frank-pledge, Aſſize of Bread and Beer, &c. for this Manor of Hurſt.

HEVER, lies towards the South-Weſt part of Kent, by the River Medway, about Five Miles South-Eaſtward from Weſtram, in the Bailiwick of Sutton-Bromley, Lath of Sutton-at-Hme, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Lower One of Juſtices in that Lath.

Moſt part of it is in the Hundred of Somerden, and the reſt, viz. the Borough of Linckhill, is in the Hundred of Rokeſley.

'Tis all in the Deanery of Shoreham, and ſo a Peculiar of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, but in the Dioceſe of Rocheſter. The Church ſtands in the Hundred of Somerden.

The Pariſh is a Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 15 l. 17 s. 4 d. per Ann.

The Church is ſmall, but neat, with a fine Steeple. On the Floor of the Belfrey is a Braſs Inſcription in Old French of John de Cobeham of Devonſhire, Eſq; 1399. In the Wall by it is a Tombſtone of another of that Name. (Arms then a Chevron between Three Eagles diſplayed, with a Star in the Dexter Quarter). In the Chancel is a Braſs Image with Two Eagles at its Head, on the Tombſtone of Mary, Wife of William Gleyne, 1419. And under a large Fair Altar Tomb, with his Effigies in Braſs, in his Garter Robes, and with a fair Inſcription, lies buried the Famous Sir Thomas Boleyn, Earl of Wiltſhire and Ormond, Father of Anna Boleyn, who was Queen to King Henry the VIIIth, and Mother of that Mighty Princeſs Queen Elizabeth, A. D. 1538.

Places of Note here:

1. Hever-Caſtle; this Place was Built by one Thomas de Hever, as Philpot ſaith, who had Licenſe to Embattel here in the 4th Year of King Edward the IIId. But long before this, Stephen de Pencheſter had a Manor here, for which he claimed Freewarren and other Privileges in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, as I find by the Placita de Libertat, &c. coram Juſtic. Itinerant, at that Time. William de Hever, a Deſcendant of the above-named Thomas, dying without Iſſue-Male, left Two Daughters Co-Heirs; one of which, Joan, was Married to Reginald Cobham of Sterborough; and the other to Brocas: And this Eſtate ſeems to have continued between them, becauſe in the Records (ſaith Philpot) this Caſtle is ſometimes called Hever Brocas, as well as Hever Cobham. From theſe it went by Purchaſe into the Family of Boleyn: And Sir Thomas Boleyn, the Father of Queen Anne Boleyn, lived here, and was buried in Hever Church: He was the Grandſon of Geofrey Boleyn, the firſt Purchaſer. But his Unfortunate Son, George Viſcount Rochford, being Attainted for Treaſon in King Henry the VIIIth's Reign, it was forfeited to the Crown, and here it continued a good while; and Queen Anne of Cleves reſided here for ſome time after her Repudiation. Here alſo, before that, Anna Boleyn lived, when King Henry the VIIIth courted her, there being ſeveral Letters of his Extant, which were written to her when ſhe was in this Place.

In the 5th Year of Queen Mary, Hever Caſtle was granted to Sir Edward Walgrave, and in his Deſcendants the Poſſeſſion continued in Philpot's Time.

2. Seyliard is a Place here, which in King Henry the IIId's Reign belonged to a Family of that Name; and which have been Eminent in theſe and other Parts of Kent.

HIGHAM, Heigham, Heaham, Heyham, lies at the North ſide of Kent, near the Thames, about Four Miles North Weſtward from Rocheſter; in the Bailiwick of Hoo, Hundred of Shamell, Lath of Aylsford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and North One of Juſtices in the Lath.

'Tis in the Deanery and Dioceſe of Rocheſter, and the Church is called St. Mary's.

A Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 8 l. 10 s. per Ann.

The Liberty of the Biſhop of Rocheſter, and of the Dean of Canterbury claim here.

A Fair yearly on the 29th of September, granted by King Henry the IIId.

For

For the Nunnery here, ſee the Chapter of Religious Houſes.

This Pariſh ought anciently to have contributed towards the Repair of the Ninth Arch or Peer of the Bridge at Rocheſter.

Places of Note here:

1. Okeley, Great and Little, tho' now made diſtinct by Sale and Partition, were once, viz. in the 20th Year of King Edward the IIId, united in the Poſſeſſion of John de St. Clere; who held them as the 4th Part of a Knight's Fee, of the Honour of Monchenſie, or of Swanſcombe Caſtle. But from this Family they were ſold about the End of King Edward the IVth, to Neile of London; from which Name, about the End of King Henry the VIIth, Great Okeley went by Sale to John Sydley, Eſq; Anceſtor to Sir Charles; who had the Poſſeſſion of it in Philpot's Time. And Little Okeley was ſold to Cholmley or Colmeley; whence, in the End of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, it went the ſame way to Thompſon, and thence again by Sale to Beſt, who, I ſuppoſe, poſſeſs'd it in Philpot's Time.

2. Merſton. This was anciently a Pariſh by it ſelf; its Church Dedicated to St. Giles, being viſible in its Ruins in Philpot's Time: But was annexed to Higham. It anciently belonged to the St. Clere Family; and next, to that of Smith; but theſe, about the Beginning of King Henry the VIIIth, gave way to the Fordans; who held it not till the End of that Reign, before they ſold it to Anthony Tutſham; and he ſoon after conveyed it the ſame way to George Lord Brook of Cobham; in whoſe Family it continued in Philpot's Time.

The Family of Neal had once large Poſſeſſions hereabouts. Vid. Philpot, p. 152.

Thomas Shawe gave Two Dozen of Bread to the Poor of this Pariſh, to be diſpoſed of every Sunday; to make good which Gift, he ſettled the Sun-houſe, with the Yard, Three Acres and Three Roods of Land.

Here was anciently a Cauſey and Bridge leading down to the Thames, in order to give the better and eaſier Paſſage to ſuch Perſons, as would here Ferry over into Eſſex. And in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, the Charge or the Maintenance of the ſaid Bridge and Cauſey, was found to belong to the Prioreſs of the Nunnery of Heigham. See the Placita de Libert. &c. coram Juſtic. Itinerant at that Time.

HINCKSELL, Hinkxhil, lies towards the South Eaſt Part of Kent, about two Miles North Eaſt from Aſhford, in the Bailiwick of the Hundred of Chart and Longbridge, Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in the Lath of Shipway. 'Tis in the Deanery of Limpne, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. And the Church is called St. Mary's. In which is a fair Monument of Sir Robert Edolph and his Lady, Owners once of the Manor of Hinckſell: She was a Rowbottom. Memorials alſo of the Family of Coveney. 'Tis a Rectory; and rated in the King's Books at 8 l. 1 s. 8 d.

There are Quarries of Ragſtone here, and at Sevington, Willesborow, &c.

Places of Note here:

1. Hinxhill was once Part of the Eſtate of the Family of the Strabolgies, Earls of Athol. John Strabolgie, Earl of Athol, forfeited it to the Crown in King Edward the Iſt's Time; and it was reſtored by King Edward the IId, to David de Strabolgie, Earl of Athol. But his Grandſon dying without Iſſue-Male, in the 49th Year of King Edward the IIId, it went by Philippa his Daughter and Co-heir in Marriage to John Halſham of Suſſex; whoſe Son (by her) Hugh Halſham in the Beginning of King Henry the VIth, paſſed it away to Sir Robert Scott, Lieutenant of the Tower of London, A. D. 1424, whoſe Daughter Alice Scott, carried it in Marriage to William Kempe, Nephew to Cardinal Kempe: But about the End of King Henry the VIIIth it was by Sir William Kempe ſold to Browning; from whence in the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth, it went the ſame Way to Mr. Robert Edolph; whoſe Grandſon dying A. D. 1632, without Iſſue, left it, (with Goodchepes, a Farm in this Pariſh which once had Owners of its own Name for many Deſcents, till King Henry the VIIIth's Reign,) to his Wife; who afterwards married Sir Francis Knowles of Reading. She paſſed one half of it away to Mr. Samuel Edolph, her former Huſband's ſecond Brother; and the other Part was inveſted in Mr. Thomas Edolph, another Brother. Samuel Edolph bequeathed his Intereſt in Hinckſhill to his Brother-in-Law, Mr. John Angel of Crowherſt in Surrey, to diſcharge Debts and Legacies; who ſold the Moiety of Hinxill with Goodchepes to Edward Chowte, of Surrenden Court in Betherſden, Eſq;.

2. Waltham is another Manor here which was once Part of the great Eſtate of the Family of Criol; by a Daughter of which Name it went to Rokeſley; and by another Daughter of that Family to Poynings: But Sir Edward Poynings dying without Heirs in the 12th Year of King Henry the VIIIth, it eſcheated to the Crown; and was by that Prince, 2 Years after, granted to Sir Richard Damſel; who not long after ſold it to Goldbill; and he to Edolph, from whence it went with Hinxhill, above-mentioned, to Angel, and ſo to Chowte.

3. Godchepes, now Goodchepes, is an Eminent Farm in this Pariſh, which for many Deſcents had Owners of the Name of Godchepe; as appears by an Inquiſition taken after the Death of Thomas Godchepe, in the 31ſt Year of King Edward the IIId. Rot. Eſc. N. 47. And it continued in this Family till about the End of King Henry the VIIIth; and then as Philpot ſaith, Thomas Godcheape ſent for one John Barrow an Attorney, to make a Settlement of this Eſtate on Eight ſeveral Perſons, who were to ſucceed one another in the Inheritance of it: And when Barrow asked him whether he would have any one elſe named after thoſe Eight, he bid him inſert his own Name; which the Attorney willingly did: And thoſe Eight Perſons dying all without Iſſue, he came to inherit the Premiſes. By Elizabeth his Eldeſt Daughter and Co-heir, it went in Marriage to Mr. Robert Edolph, who, I ſuppoſe, was the Poſſeſſor of it in Philpot's Time.

HITHE, Hethe, Hede, Hide, the Haven or Port: Leland calls its Portus Hithinus. This is one of the Cinque Ports, and lies at the South Eaſt Part of Kent near the Sea, about Three Miles and a half South Weſtward from Folkeſtone, in the Bailiwick and Lath of Shipway, and Eaſt Diviſion of the County. It was incorporated in Queen Elizabeth's Time, by the Name of the Mayor, Jurats, and Commonalty of the Town and Port of Hithe; and before that by the Name of Barons of the Town and Port of Hithe. The Day of Election for Mayor is Febr. 2. It is in the Diviſion of the Juſtices of that Corporation; and the Liberties thereof, and of the Cinque Ports, claim over it. The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims alſo here: And anciently it was an Hundred by it ſelf. 'Tis all in the Deanery of Eleham, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. And the Church, which is dedicated to St. Leonard, was anciently and ſtill is a Chapel annexed to Saltwood: And ſo is valued with that in the King's Books, and not apart. In it are Memorials of the Interment of Button, Eastday, Knight, Bean, Collins, and Taylour.

Leland ſaith, That formerly it was a Place of much greater Note and Dimenſions than at preſent; it extended it ſelf once for two Miles in length, along by the Sea Shore, and had then four more Pariſh Churches; viz. St. Bernard, St. Nicholas, St. Michael, and of our Lady of Hithe, which are now all demoliſhed: He ſuppoſes, and that very probably, that this Place dates its Riſe and Increaſe to the Decay of Weſthithe and Limne, which of Courſe happened when the Sea left them. And this Town did not hold it very long before the Sea ſerved it in the ſame manner. Beſides, Kilburn tells us, that about 300 Years ago it had a very great Loſs both by Peſtilence and Fire. For beſides loſing almoſt all their People they had 200 Houſes burnt, and 5 Ships.

In King Edward the Iſt's Reign, a Fleet of French Ships attempted a Deſcent at this Place; but the Inhabitants gave them ſo warm a Reception, killing all the Men that were landed, that their Deſign was ſoon put by.

Here alſo Henry Huntingdon tells us, Earl Godwine and his Sons (when they were baniſhed the Kingdom) landed and took away a great many Veſſels, as they did alſo from Romney.

Dr. Wallis in Phil. Tranſact. N. 275. ſaith, here was in our Fathers Time a convenient Harbour for ſmall Veſſels; which is now ſwarved up: Several Attempts have been made to recover it, but without Succeſs: For as ſoon almoſt as it hath been opened (which to effect is a Work of great Labour and Charge) the Sea fills it up again by the Slubb, Beach, and Sand, which it brings in and caſts up here.

Hythe uſed to ſend out 5 Ships in the Service of the Ports, with an Hundred Men, and five Garſons (or Boys) for 15 Days whenever required: But after their dreadful Plague and Fire above-mentioned, King Henry the IVth excuſed them by Charter the Performance of that Duty for 5 Turns following, unleſs very great Neceſſity ſhould require their Attendance.

This Town hath two Hoſpitals, and both under the Juriſdiction of the Mayor and Jurats; of which you will find a fuller Account in its proper Place.

A Market is kept here on Saturdays, and two Annual Fairs; on the 29th of June, and on the 20th of November.

On Wedneſday in Eaſter-Week, being April 6. 1580. there was ſo great an Earthquake in this Town, as to ring the Bells in the Steeple; Kilburn.

A. D. 849. King Ælfred gave Hithe to the Priory of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury, Plegmund being then Archbiſhop; but afterwards it fell into other Hands. For An. 1036, one Halden, a Prince, gave it again to the ſame Church. And after this it got ſome how or other into the Crown again: For there it was in King Henry the IId's Reign.

Anciently the Archbiſhop of Canterbury did appoint an Annual Bailiff to govern this Town together with the Jurats: But afterwards his Office was ſuperſeded by that of the Mayor.

The Account of this Place in Domeſday ſtands thus:

In Limwardlæd in Hundred de Hede habet Hugo de Monford de Terrâ Monachorum. 1. Manerium Saltwoode de Archiepiſcopo, &c. & in Burgo de Hede ſunt 220 Burgenſes qui pertinent huic Manerio: de quibus non habet Hugo niſi 3. forisfacta & eſt appretiatum xxviij. l. vj. s. & iv. d.

Neither Philpot nor Wever ſay any Thing about Hithe.

In the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, I find by the Records, that a Bridge being broken down between Hithe and Stanford, the Jury which were ſummoned before the Judges Itinerants, found it to belong to Nicholas de Criell to repair it.

Dr. Gale, in his Comment on Antony's Itinerary, ſaith he read ſomewhere in an Ancient Book Burgus Hethe pertinet ad Saltwoode.

In the Charnel-Houſe, or in a Vault under the Church of Hithe, there are great Numbers of Human Bones, piled up in Heaps or Stocks: They look white with Age; and the People that ſhew them, pretend to diſtinguiſh Men's Bones from thoſe of Women. It hath been a long and very common Enquiry, how, and on what Occaſion they came there, and perhaps will ſtill continue a Secret; for I can find nothing particularly in Hiſtory about them: And therefore can only offer my Conjectures: Which are theſe Two.

1. That when this Town came into Decay, by the Seas leaving it, &c. they might gather the Bones of ſuch Perſons as had been formerly buried in the four other Churches and Churchyards, and pile them up in the Vault of this (perhaps then) new Church built upon the Hill: And this will receive ſome Confirmation, from conſidering that there have been, and are ſtill to be ſeen, ſuch Charnel Houſes in other Churches, which are ſuppoſed to have been made for the ſame Uſe.

But the other Conjecture ſeems to me more probable; which is, That they were collected and piled up here on ſome Eminent Occaſion. And for this, two Tranſactions bid very fair: Firſt, the French Invaſion above-mentioned, in King Edward the Iſt's Reign; viz. about the Year 1295, as Knighton places it: For it is not unnatural to ſuppoſe, that after ſo memorable an Action, as their killing all the French that landed here, they might gather up their Bones and place them in the Vault under their Church; in perpetual Memory of ſo great a Deliverance, and ſo gallant an Action.

But I am inclined to think, they have yet an older and a more eminent Original; which is, That I mentioned before (under Folkſtone): viz. That they are the Bones of the Saxons and Britons, whoſe Bodies fell hereabouts, and at Folkſtone, in the laſt Battle which Vortimer had with the Saxons; and when the Saxons were driven with ſo great a Slaughter back to their Ships, that they troubled us with no Invaſion for five Years after. And this will appear yet more probable, if what Mr. John Wilkinſon of Shelve in this County kindly informs me of, be true, viz. That on digging a Grave in Folkſtone Church they found a Vault, where great Quantities of Bones, like theſe, were piled up: For I judge the Battel to have been fought between Folkſtone and Hithe; and that the Saxon Ships lay at Hithe, where then might be good riding for them.

WEST-HITHE lies at the South Eaſt Part of Kent, near the Sea, about a Mile and a half Weſtward from Hithe, in the Bailiwick and Lath of Shipway, and Eaſt Diviſion of the County. Part of it is a Member of the Town and Port of Hithe, in the Diviſion of the Juſtices of that Town and Port; and the Liberties thereof, and of the Cinque Ports, claim over it: The reſt is in the Hundred of Worth, and Diviſion of Juſtices in the Lath of Shipway. The Liberty of Wye claims alſo in this Pariſh; 'tis in the Deanery of Limpne, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; and the Church, which is long ſince demoliſhed, ſtood in the Hundred of Worth, and was dedicated to St. Mary.

When

When the Sea left the Haven of Limpne, below Stutfall Caſtle (which moſt Authors think to have been the ancient Portus Lemanis); the next Port that the Romans had was probably here; for there are good Remains of that great People's Works hereabouts: The whole Arch of the Weſt Door of the old demoliſhed Church here is turned with Roman Bricks: And there are the Ruins alſo of another Church or Chapel, within a Bow-ſhot of the former; which ſhews this to have been formerly no inconſiderable Place. But by degrees, the Tides which flowed up into the Mouth of the River Rother here, falling off, and becoming ſtill ſhorter and ſhorter, Ships and Veſſels could not come up ſo far as this Weſt Hithe, but were forced to ſtop ſomewhere ſhort of it. The River Rother alſo it ſelf ſeems, as Dr. Plot in ſome Manuſcript Papers that I have of his, (and which were kindly communicated to me by Mrs. Plot and her Son) obſerves, about this Time to have changed its Courſe, from its former old Channel under the Hills, and where its Track is ſtill viſible; and to have run out into the Sea a Mile more to the Southward; probably about Willupgut, where a Stone Bridge was built over it, now called Botolf-Bridge; one Arch of which ſtill remains above Ground: and bids fair to be the firſt Stone Bridge that ever was made in England. And perhaps the Ships might come up no further than this Bridge in Antoninus his Time; which if true, will both account for the 16 Miles Diſtance of the Portus Lemanis from Durovernum in the Itinerary (without venturing boldly as ſome do to correct the Numbers) and alſo to explain that Reading of Jerome Surita, who puts ad Pontem Lemenis, inſtead of ad Portum. But of this more in another Place.

HOLLINGBOURN, Holingeburn, (the running Brook) lies about the Middle of Kent, and about three Miles North Eaſtward from Lenham, in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Eyborne, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Eaſt one of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery of Sutton, and Dioceſe of Canterbury: And the Church is called All-Saints; in the Church are Remains of Painted Glaſs, and the Memorials of the Interment of Challoner, Clapham, Goddin; and a Noble Monument of Elizabeth, Daughter of John Cheyney, Eſq; of Gueſtling in Suſſex, and Lady to Sir Thomas Colepeper, in the Year 1638. Another of Philippa, Sir John Colepeper's Lady: A fair Monument of Sir Martin Barnham; another of Francis Colepeper of Greenway-hill in this Pariſh, Eſq; in the Year 1591. A fair Marble Monument of John Lord Colepeper, Privy-Counſellor to King Charles the Iſt. Another of the Lady Grace Gethin, great Grand-Daughter of Sir Thomas Colepeper.

The Liberty of the Dean of Canterbury claims over the Manor of Hollingbourn. Becauſe in the Year 980. it was given by Athelſtane Son of Ethelred, to that Church: And was continued to it at the Suppreſſion.

King Henry the IId did alſo give ſome Lands in this Pariſh upon the Hill, to the ſame Church.

Philpot ſaith, that the Prior and Monks of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury ſurrendred Hollingbourn into the King's Hands, in the 29th Year of King Henry the VIIIth, who exchanged it that Year with Thomas Cranmer, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, for other Lands.

In the 7th Year of King Edward the Iſt. when before the Juſtices Itinerant the Prior of Canterbury claimed all Privileges to this Manor, there is this Exception. Quod tenentes de prædicto Manerio ſolebant ſolvere Pontagium ad Pontem Roffenſem de ſex Sulingis & Dimidio de Maydeneſtan.

At this Place the Priory of Chriſt-Church had a Gallows, on which they executed ſuch Criminals as had committed Murder, Felony, &c. within the Liberties of the Convent; according to their Privilege of Infangtheof and Outfangtheof Furcas, &c.

Hollingbourn is a Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 28 l. 14 s. 9 d. In the Valor. Beneficiorum 'tis falſely put down as a Rectory.

In Domeſday is this Note of this Place. Hollingbourn eſt Manerium Monachorum & T. E. R. ſe defendebat pro vj. Sullingis & nunc ſimiliter; & eſt appretiatum xxx l.

Places of Note here:

1. Ripple, a Manor which once had Owners of this Name; for in the 30th Year of King Edward the Iſt's Reign, as appears by Rot. Eſc. N. 91. Richard de Ripple held this and other Lands in Leaſe from the Priory of Chriſt-Church. From this Name before the End of King Edward the IIId, it was gotten into that of Septvans; from William, Son of Sir William Septvans, it went by Sale to the Gowers; and ſtaid in that Family till King Henry the IVth's Time; and then was alienated to Brockhull; a younger Branch of that Ancient Family which flouriſhed at Calehill: And here it continued for ſome Deſcents; but in the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth, Henry Brockhull dying without Iſſue, Anne his only Daughter carried it in Marriage to Sir John Taylour; and from thence, at the End of that Queen's Reign, it was transferred to Sir Martin Barnham.

2. Elnothington is another Manor here, which anciently alſo had Owners of this Name; as appears by old Deeds: But this Family was extinct or gone from hence before the End of King Edward the IIId; for in the 42d Year of that Prince's Reign, Sir Arnold St. Leger of Ulcomb was in Poſſeſſion of it; and in this Family it continued thence down till it came to Sir Anthony St. Leger; who in King James, or in King Charles the Iſt's Time, ſold it to Sir Thomas Colepeper.

3. Pen-Court was a Seat once belonging to the Family of the Name of Pen; but that was here extinct before the End of King Edward the IIId, and then this Place went into the Name of Donet, but ſtaid not long there; for by an Heir General it went, with much other Land, to the St. Legers of Ulcomb: and there continued, till with Elnothington above-mentioned, it was ſold to Sir Thomas Colepeper: And he paſſed it the ſame Way to Mr. Mark Queſtwood of London; who, on his Deceaſe ſettled it for ever on the Company of Fiſhmongers in that City.

4. Muſton, in old Deeds written Moſton; which in the Reign of King Edward the Iſt gave Name to the Family of the Moſtons; but theſe about the Time of King Richard the IId, were extinct here; and were ſucceeded in this Eſtate by Wood. In which Name it continued in Philpot's Time.

5. Greenway-Court, is a Place which anciently was in the Poſſeſſion of the Atleezes. But Sir Richard Atleeze dying without Iſſue, A. D. 1394, gave it to his Brother Marcellus Atleeze, by whoſe Daughter and Coheir Cicely it went with Perry-Court in Preſton by Feverſham, to Mr. Valentine Barret. And he about the Beginning of King Henry the IVth, conveyed it to Fitzwater; in which Family it continued till King Edward the IVth's Reign, and then was ſold to St. Leger, where it continued till King Charles the Iſt, and then was ſold to Sir Alexander Colepeper; who on his Deceaſe gave it to Sir John Colepeper of Loſenham.

Mrs. Elizabeth Cuſſier of this Place, gave by Will, dated Sept. 29th, 1612. 20 l. to buy a Piece of Land; out of the Rent of which ſhe ordered

10 s. per Ann. ſhould be diſtributed to the Poor of Hollingbourn; 5 s. to Ten Poor Perſons of Leeds; and 5 s to Ten of the Pariſh of Bromfield, on Sept. 22d, the Day of her Deceaſe.

HOO, How, Hou, in the Textus Roffenſis, Hohg, ſeems to take its Name from the Saxon Ho, or Hob; which ſignifies ſometimes a Heel, and ſometimes the Ham of the Leg (whence our word Hough, to Hough or Hamſtring) and 'tis likely the Hundred of Hoo was ſo called, becauſe it runs out into a kind of a Point like a Heel; or lies in a Bending between the Two Rivers like a Ham.

The Pariſh of Hoo, or Hoo St. Warburgh, lies towards the North Side of the County, by the River Medway, about three Miles North Eaſtward from Rocheſter, in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Hoo, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and North one of Juſtices in that Lath.

The Liberty of the Biſhop of Rocheſter claims over it; 'tis in the Deanery and Dioceſe of Rocheſter; and the Church is dedicated to St. Warburgh. A Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 18 l. 6. s. 0 d.

The Church is handſome, with a Spire Steeple, and two good Porches to it. In it are Memorials of Stephen and Richard Carlis, in the Year 1417. Of Thomas Cobham and Matilda his Wife in the Year 1465; alſo of Beddyl, Plamley, Baily, and Holmwood.

Hoo gives Name to the whole Hundred in which it ſtands: And in King Henry the VIth's Reign, gave a Noble Title to one Thomas Hoo, (perhaps born here) for he was created by that Prince, Baron of Hoo and Haſting; and by one of his Daughters, who was married to Geoffrey Boleyn, ſome of his Blood was derived down into the Veins of Queen Elizabeth.

Places of Note here.

1. The Manor or rather the Barony of Hoo, for ſo I have ſeen it called in ſome old Records; was in King Henry the IId's Time in the Poſſeſſion of Hugo de Bardolfe: And it came to him by Exchange for the Honour of Banton, with the Crown; and he held it as an entire Knight's Fee: And from him it deſcended down to another Hugh Bardolfe, who was rated for it alſo as a whole Knight's Fee in the 2d Year of King Richard the Iſt. But his Son Hugh Lord Bardolfe left only three Daughters, who divided his Eſtate amongſt them. Tho' I find that he gave ſome of it to the Abbot of Reading, which was confirmed by King John, and by King Henry the the IId. For I find him in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, claiming View of Frank-Pledge, for his Manor of Hoo; as did alſo Grey and Points at the ſame Time, for their Manors here, and they got the Better of the Crown in a Trial; which had aſſerted a Right to one Moiety of theſe Manors.

For of theſe Three Daughters, the Eldeſt Maude, was married to Hugo Points; Margaret, to Robert Aguillon; and Iſolda, to Henry Lord Grey of Codnor. Points and Aguillon agreed in a joint Sale of their Share (which was half a Knight's Fee) to John de la Pole: And he paid Aid for it at making the Black Prince Knight in the 20th Year of King Edward the IIId. But it ſtaid here no longer than King Henry the IVth's Reign, and then it came all into the Name of Grey; and here continued till the 22d Year of King Henry the VIth. But then Henry Lord Grey of Codnor dying without Iſſue-Male, by one of his Daughters it went in Marriage to John Lord Zouch; but his Deſcendant John Lord Zouch being attainted by King Henry the VIIth, for eſpouſing the Cauſe of the Houſe of York in the Battel of Boſworth-field; this Eſtate was given to Sir Henry Wyat, Privy-Counſellor to that Prince: and his unfortunate Grandſon, Sir Thomas, being attainted in the 2d Year of Queen Mary the Iſt's Reign, it came again to the Crown; and here ſtaid till King James the Iſt in his IIId Year granted it to William Earl of Salisbury; whoſe Son Robert alſo Earl of Salisbury ſold it to Sir Edward Hales Knight and Baronet, and his Grandſon of the ſame Name was in Poſſeſſion of it in Philpot's Time: But 'tis now come to be the Eſtate of the Earl of Jerſey.

2. Beluncle is a Seat in Hoo of very great Antiquity and Eminence; in King Henry the IId's Reign it was in the Poſſeſſion of Jordanus de Foliot, and was accounted as a fifth Part of a Knight's Fee: But his Son and Heir Richard de Foliot, in the 20th Year of King Henry the IIId. ſold it to Reginald Cobham, who was Sheriff of Kent in the 33d Year of that King, and for 7 Years after ſucceſſively. This was then reckoned as one of the Principal Seats of that great Family; and in Old Deeds they are frequently written Cobham, of Beluncle: Of this Family was Henry de Cobham, who was ſummoned to Parliament as a Baron in the 7th Year of Edward the Iſt; and alſo Stephen Cobham, who was likewiſe ſummoned thither as a Peer, in the 18th Year of that King; and Thomas Cobham, who ſate alſo in Parliament as a Baron, in the 38th Year of King Edward the IIId. In this Name, and afterwards in that of Brook, did Beluncle continue till George Brook, Lord Cobham, forfeited it to the Crown, in the 1ſt Year of King James the Iſt. However, that Prince reſtored it to Henry Brook, Lord Cobham; but he dying without Iſſue it devolved to Sir William, Son of George Brook; but he alſo died without Iſſue-Male, A. D. 1643. by which means it deſcended to Sir John Brook, then Lord Cobham as Reverſioner in Entail. 'Tis now in the Poſſeſſion of Colonel Charles Cobham.

3. Abbeys-Court in the Borough of Boxle is a Place in Hoo, where is a Seat now belonging to the Earl of Jerſey.

In the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, a Complaint was brought againſt Gilbert, Earl of Tunbridge, that he had encloſed ſome Ground here in Toxwood, (and reckoned it within his Lowy,) which was common and belonged to the Barony; and had got ſome Tenants, which formerly owed Suit and Service to the Hundred Court at Hoo, to be exempt from thence, and to be alſo within the Lowy; but they could not make it out, and ſo were caſt. But certain it is that Part of the Hundred of Hoo, was then reckoned to be within the Lowy of Tunbridge.

Holling ſhed the Hiſtorian, (who was a Kentiſh Man) ſaith, That Hoo in his Time was nearly an Iſland: And of the Hundred of Hoo, he ſaith the People had this Rhime or Proverb;

He that rideth into the Hundred of Hoo,
Beſides pilfering Seamen ſhall find Dirt enow.

Dr. Peter Gunning, who was firſt Biſhop of Chicheſter, and then of Ely, was born in this Pariſh, and left a Service of Communion Plate to the Church, when he died.

HOPE, Hope-all Saints, lies about the Eaſt Part of Kent, in Romney Marſh, about a Mile and an half North Weſt from New Romney, in the Bailiwick and Lath of Shipway, and Eaſt Diviſion of the County. Part of it is in the Hundred of St. Martin, and the Reſt in that of Langport. 'Tis all in the Diviſion of Juſtices and Corporation of Romney Marſh. The Liberty whereof claims over it; as alſo doth that of St. Auſtin in ſome Places.

'Tis

'Tis in the Dioceſe of Canterbury, and Deanery of Limpne. The Church is called All-Saints, and ſtands in the Hundred of Langport. 'Tis a Rectory; and valued in the King's Books at 10 l. 10 s. 00 d.

Crawthorn is the only Place of Note in this Pariſh; which anciently belonged to the Cheyneys; but about the End of King Henry the VIIIth's Reign the Henleys had it in Poſſeſſion: Some of whoſe Deſcendants in Queen Elizabeth's Time, ſold it to Thomas Lord Borough of Sterborough, who not long after ſent it the ſame way to Tooke of Bere, in Weſtcliffe; and thence it went again by Sale to Mr. Edward Chowte; who dying without Male-Iſſue, ſettled it on his Brother Mr. George Chowte.

HORSMONDEN, in Textus Roffenſis, Horſhundinne, lies towards the South Side of Kent, by the River Medway, about a Mile and a half Northweſt from Goudherſt, in the Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and South one of Juſtices in that Lath. So much of it as is in the Hundred of Brenchly and Horſmonden is in the Bailiwick of Twiford: Another Part is in the Hundred of Larkfield, and Bailiwick of Hoo; the Reſt, viz. the Borough of Rugmerhill, is in the Ancient Demeſne of Aylesford, and the Bailiwick of Hoo. 'Tis all in the Deanery of Malling, and Dioceſe of Rocheſter. The Church is dedicated to St. Margaret, and ſtands in the Hundred of Brenchley and Horſmonden. The Church is a good Building: Over the Weſt Door are in Stone the Arms of Poynings; and probably one of that Family might build the Tower, or that Portal. Sir Edward Poynings when he went to the Holy War, gave 24 Acres of Land to maintain Lights in this Church; and this Land ſtill bears the Name of Torchfield. On the South Side of the Chancel is a fair Altar-Tomb of Stone, but without any Inſcription; and I believe never had any. The like Inſtances I have met with in ſome other Places of this County, as in the Churches of Maidſtone, Feverſham, Stroud, &c. So vain is the Expectation ſometimes of Poſthumous Glory! In the Chancels are Memorials of the Browns; of Spelmonden; of Belwick, Grovehurſt, Wickham, Courthope, Auſten, and Oldſworth.

This Pariſh is a Rectory; and valued in the King's Books at 26 l. 3 s. 10 d.

The Reverend Mr. Bates, the preſent Incumbent; who by the bye is but the Fifth here in Succeſſion ſince the Diſſolution of the Monaſteries, and therefore this is probably a very healthful Place, as before I obſerved Cranebrook in this Neighbourhood to have been: This Gentleman ſhewed me the Roof of the Parſonage Houſe, which is ſo uncommon that I never ſaw the like before. 'Tis framed of huge ſtrong compaſſing or circular Timbers, juſt like the Ribs of a Ship; and really it looks very much like the Hold of a Ship inverted.

A Fair is kept here on July the 15th, being St. Swithin's Day.

Places of Note here:

1. Horſmonden Manor. In the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Glouceſter and Hertford, and Lord of Tunbridge, claimed to have View of Frank-Pledge, &c. for his Manor of Horſmonden, and which he held then of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury. Placita de Libertat. c. I de Berewyke, &c. So that then the Eſtate was in that Family.

But afterwards, as Philpot ſaith, it was in the Poſſeſſion of the Rokeſleys, who had a large Eſtate hereabouts: By a Daughter of Richard de Rokeſley it went in Marriage to Thomas de Poynings; from whom it, by a long Deſcent, came to Sir Edward Poynings; who dying without any lawful Iſſue, in the 12th Year of King Henry the VIIIth, all his Eſtate, and this among the reſt, eſcheated to the Crown; and that King 24 Years after granted it to Richard Darell, Eſq; whoſe Son, George Darell, in the 10th Year of Queen Elizabeth, ſold it to Richard Paine, and he parted with it the ſame Way to Beſwick, Anceſtor to Mrs. Mary Beſwick, who in Philpot's Time had bequeathed it for Life to Mr. —— Haughton.

2. Groveherſt, with its Appendages Capell, Auguſt-Pits, Hoath, (or Hothfield,) and Sneade, was anciently in the Poſſeſſion of the Groveherſts; one of which Name, John Groveherſt, lies buried in the Chancel of this Church, with his Figure in Braſs upon a Stone; and with an Inſcription in Latin, expreſſing, That he gave the Manor of Lewes Hoath to the Abbey of Begham, on Condition that they ſhould find a Prieſt to officiate perpetually in this Church, and in a Chapel which then was in being at Lewes Hoath: In Memory of which there is a Field ſtill called Chapel-Field. By Anne, one of the Heirs of Richard Groveherſt, in the latter End of King Richard the IId, this Eſtate went in Marriage to Richard Hextall, who purchaſed the other Places mentioned above, as Appendages to Groveherſt. And his only Grand-Daughter Anne, carried them in Marriage to William Whetenhall, Eſq; and one of his Deſcendants, of the Family of the Whetenhalls of Great Peckham in this County, ſold it in Philpot's Time to Mr. Francis Auſtin.

3. Lewes Hoath above-mentioned, after the Suppreſſion of the Religious Houſes came into the Crown, and there remain'd till Queen Elizabeth granted it to Anthony Brown, Viſcount Montague; who ſold it to Beſwick, and by that means it went to Haughton, with other Lands abovenamed.

4. Sprivers is a Manor here, which anciently had Owners of the Name of Spriver: For Robert Spriver died poſſeſs'd of it, A. D. 1447, and ſettled it by Will on his Son of the ſame Name. After it had ſtaid a great while in this Family, it came ſomehow into that of Vane; and thence into that of Bathurſt; and after that it was in the Poſſeſſion of Malbert. And in Philpot's Time, was got into the Name of Morgan.

5. Spelmonden is a Seat here which alſo had anciently Poſſeſſors of its own Name; there being in old Writings frequent mention made of John de Spelmonden; who was Owner of, and Reſided at, this Place. From his Name it went ſome-how into that of Poynings: And Michael Poynings died poſſeſs'd of it in the 43d Year of King Edward the IIId; as appears by Rot. Eſc. Part 2. N. 14. and from him it deſcended down to Sir Edward Poynings; who in the 14th Year of King Edward the IVth ſold it to John Sampſon; and his Son Chriſtopher Sampſon, in the 37th Year of King Henry the VIIIth, ſent it the ſame Way to Stephen Darell; whoſe Son George Darell ſold it in the 10th Year of Queen Elizabeth to Paine; and he in the 28th Year of Queen Elizabeth alienated it to William Nutbrown; who the Year after ſold it to George Cure of Surrey; and he to Arthur Langworth; and he to William Beſwick, whoſe Father had been Lord Mayor of London; and his Grand-Daughter, Mrs. Mary Beſwick, ſettled it by Will on Mr. —— Haughton for his Life, as ſhe did other Lands abovementioned.

6. Bidmonden was a Religious Houſe here: Of which I ſhall ſpeak in another Place.

HORTON-KIRBY, lies at the North Side of Kent, upon the River Darent, about Three Miles towards the South-East from Dartford, in the Bailiwick of Sutton-Dartford, Hundred of Axtone, Lath of Sutton-at-Hone, West Diviſion of the County, and Upper One of Juſtices in that Lath.

'Tis in the Deanery of Dartford, and Dioceſe of Rocheſter; the Church is called St. Mary's; a Vicarage valued in the King's Books at 5 l. 7 s. 4 d.

The Liberty of the Dutchy of Lancaſter claims here; and that of the Dean of Canterbury over the Lands late of Sir Anthony Roper in this Pariſh.

It had the Addition to its Name of Horton, from one William Kirby, ſometime Owner of this Place; whoſe Wife probably lies in the Church in the North Iſle, with a Braſs Figure over her.

Places of Note here:

1. Horton-Caſtle; this Place, as appears by Domeſday, was held by A. Retellus Rubitonienſis or Roſſe, in the 20th Year of King William the Iſt; and Alexander Roſſe, one of this Family, and Owner of Horton Manor, was one of the Recognitores Magnæ Aſſiſæ in the 1ſt Year of King John. But about the End of King Edward the Iſt, Lora de Roſſe, an only Daughter of William de Roſſe, who held an entire Knight's Fee hereabouts, carried it to her Husband —— Kirkby; who left his Ancient Seat of Kirkby-hall in Lancaſhire, and came and lived here at Horton, and new named the Place, Horton-Kirby. Darell, in his Book de Caſtellis Cantiæ, ſaith, that Horton Caſtle owns the Roſſes for its Founders: And Philpot ſaith, Kirby Rebuilt it, and Built the Manor Houſe. About the Beginning of King Henry the IVth, by a Daughter of the Name of Kirby, this Eſtate went to Thomas Stoner of Stoner in Oxfordſhire; whoſe Great Grandſon, John Stoner, forfeited Horton Caſtle to the Crown, by being engaged with my Lord Audley in his Inſurrection againſt King Henry the VIIth. And here it continued till King Henry the VIIIth granted it to Robert Rudſton, Eſq; and by a Daughter of that Family it went to Mr. — Michell of Richmond; in whoſe Poſſeſſion it was in Philpot's Time.

2. Franks is an Eminent Seat in this Pariſh, which in King Henry the IIId's Time belonged to a Family of this Name, which came out of Yorkſhire and ſettled here; and ſometimes are written Frankiſh: From this Name, in King Henry the VIth's Time, it went into that of Martin, and continued in it till the beginning of Queen Elizabeth; and then was ſold to Launcelot Bathurſt, Alderman of London; who built here a Noble and Magnificent Seat, which in Philpot's Time was in the Poſſeſſion of Sir Edward Bathurſt, and continues ſtill in that Name.

In the Church are Memorials of this Family of the Bathurſts.

3. Reynolds or Reginalds, is a Place here which very early had Owners of that Name; and who continued here till about the End of King Edward the IVth; but then it was ſold to Sir John Brown, Lord Mayor of London, A. D. 1480; from him it deſcended to John Brown, Eſq; who was Sheriff of Kent in the 10th Year of Queen Elizabeth, and kept his Shrievalty here; and who Married a Bathurſt, and is buried here: But about the End of King Charles the Iſt, it was ſold to Sir John Jacob; and from him it went ſoon after, and the ſame way, to Sir Harbottle Grimſton of Eſſex, Baronet, the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

MONKS-HORTON, lies towards the Eaſt part of Kent, by the River Stoure, about Three Miles North-Weſtward from Hithe, in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Stowting, Lath of Shipway, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath.

The Priory here, which gave it this Name, was a Cell to Lewes.

Places of Note here:

1. Sherford, alias Shurfare, alias Eaſt Horton, is a Manor here, which once had Owners of the Name of Spicer, derived from the Spicers of Retling in Nonnington; and one of that Name Married Joan, Sole Daughter of Sir Richard de Retling; and died Poſſeſs'd of it in the 10th Year of King Richard the IId; and here it ſtaid till about the Beginning of King James the Iſt, and then was ſold to Thomas Morris, Gent. whoſe Grandſon, Thomas Morris, of Mount Morris, Eſq; hath Erected in the ſaid Manor, at the Foot of the Hill by which the Old Roman Way called Stone-ſtreet paſſes, a Fair Brick Houſe, with an handſome Platform of Lead, and a Cupulo, and with Rails and Baniſters round the Top. It ſtands finely on an Eminence, and hath good Avenues to it, Gardens and Offices.

2. The Manor of Horton which belonged to the Priory here founded by Robert de Vere, Earl of Oxford, (the Priory ſee elſewhere). This Manor, on the General Suppreſſion, was granted by King Henry the VIIIth to Thomas Lord Cromwell Earl of Eſſex; and returning to the Crown on his Attainder, ſtaid there till King Charles the Iſt granted it to the City of London; and they, 1630, conveyed it to George Rook, Eſq; Father to Mr. Laurence Rook; whoſe Son, Heyman Rook, Eſq; ſold it to Thomas Morris of Mount Morris in this Pariſh, Eſq; the preſent Poſſeſſor.

But the Abbey Houſe was by King Henry the VIIIth granted to John Tate of Northamptonſhire, Eſq; who in the 6th Year of King Edward the VIth, ſold it to Walter Mantle, Eſq;; but he being concerned in the unfortunate Attempt of Sir Thomas Wiat, forfeited it to the Crown, where it ſtaid till the 13th Year of Queen Elizabeth, and then was granted, or reſtored, to the ſaid Walter Mantle, and continued in his Family in Philpot's Time.

HORTON-PARVA, is a ſmall diſuſed Chapel, (now a Barn) lying on the Stoure, in the Hundred of Bridge and Petham; and is united to Chartham.

Philpot ſaith, there was a great Conteſt between John Beckford, Vicar of Chartham, and Chriſtopher Shuckborough, Eſq; Lord of Horton, about Celebration of Divine Offices in the Chapel of Horton; and there was an Appeal to William Courtney then Archbiſhop of Canterbury: who Commiſſioned his Official, John Barnet, *A. Steward of the Houſhold, gave it in Frank-Marriage with his Daughter Joan, to John de Northwood; whoſe Great Grandſon, John de Northwood, did alſo, in the 8th Year of King Richard the IId, diſpoſe of it the ſame way with his Daughter, to Chriſtopher Shuckborough of Warwickſhire, Eſq; and he, in the 9th Year of King Henry the IVth, ſold it to George Ballard, Eſq; in whoſe Family it ſtaid a good while; till Nicholas Ballard, in the 4th Year of Philip and Mary, alienated it to Roger Trollop, Eſq;; and he, in the 2d Year of Queen Elizabeth, parted with it the ſame way to Sir Edward Warner, then Lieutenant of the Tower of London. This Gentleman, Fourteen Years after, ſold it to Sir Roger Manwood, Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer; whoſe Son, Sir Peter Manwood, parted with it by Sale to Mr. Chriſtopher Toldarbye, who left it to his Son of the ſame Name; but he dying without Iſſue, Jane, his only Siſter and Heir, carried it to her Husband Sir Robert Darell of Colehill; and his ſecond Son, Mr. Edward Darell, was the Poſſeſſor of it in Philpot's Time.

HOTHE, or Hoad, lies at the North Side of Kent near the Sea, about Five Miles and a half North Eaſtward from Canterbury, in the Bailiwick of Bridge and Petham, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. It is in the Deanery of Weſt-Bere, and Dioceſe of Canterbury, and the Church is called St. Mary Holy Croſs.

'Tis now called Hothe Chapel, and is a ſmall, but neat Place, and annexed to Reculver.

The Liberty of St. Auſtin claimeth here, becauſe it is in the Hundred of Blengate, which belonged to that Abbey.

In the Chancel is a Braſs Plate over Iſabella Chakbone, which ſeems Ancient, but the Date gone.

A Memorial of Anthony Maggot, 1535.

Neither Philpot, Wever, nor Lambard, ſay any thing of this Place. Becauſe 'tis a Chapel, 'tis not valued in the King's Books apart from Reculver.

Ford, an old Seat of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, lies partly in this Pariſh, and partly in Chiſtlet.

This Palace of Ford was the moſt Ancient Seat belonging to the See, and given to it by Ethelbert King of Kent; but it was Demoliſhed about the Year 1658, and the Bricks, Timber, and other Materials ſold to any Purchaſer.

Archbiſhop Cranmer uſed to reſide much at Ford, eſpecially about the End of King Edward the VIth's Reign.

There was a Park then about it, and the Houſe was large, but it ſtood ill, the Situation being unhealthy: So that Archbiſhop Parker would have pulled it down to improve and repair the Palaces at Canterbury and Bekesbourn; but he met with ſuch Delays in his Suit to the Queen for leave ſo to do, that it diſcouraged him, and he dropt the Deſign.

HOTHFEILD, vulgo Hotfeild, lies towards the middle of the South-Eaſt part of Kent, by the Stoure, about Two Miles and a half Northward from Aſhforde, in the Bailiwick of Chart and Longbridge, Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in the Lath of Shipway.

Part of it is in the Hundred of Chart and Longbridge, in which the Church ſtands, and is called St. Mary's; and part is in the Hundred of Calehill.

'Tis in the Deanery of Charing, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Pariſh is a Rectory, and rated in the King's Books at 17 l. 5 s.

Here Alexander Eden, a Gentleman of this County, took and killed in ſingle Fight that famous Rebel Jack Cade; for which Service, King Henry the VIth gave him 1000 Marks, and Knighted him.

The Hiſtory of this Jack Cade's Rebellion, in ſhort was thus.

Richard Duke of York, in the 29th Year of King Henry the VIth, deſigning at the Sovereignty, thought it proper to begin his Work with ſome Rebellion or Sedition among the People; which would ſound theirs and the Great Mens Affections to his Cauſe; and alſo engage ſome in Crimes too great to be pardoned, and conſequently oblige them to continue in his Intereſt. The Engine he pitch'd upon for this purpoſe, was one Jack Cade an Iriſhman; a Fellow who had been formerly a Servant to Sir Thomas Dagre of Suſſex; but having barbarouſly killed a Woman with Child, was forced to fly the Realm into France. From which Kingdom he now came, under the Name of Sir John Mortimer; and pretending to be Brother to the Earl of March, and Couſin to the Duke of York, he raiſed a great number of Rebellious People together in this County, and marching at the Head of them, encamped upon Blackheath. Cade was an Active Stout Fellow, and gave himſelf a good ſwaggering Title, viz. Captain of Kent; and ſometimes, to ſhew the Goodneſs of his Deſigns, Captain Mendall: For his Pretences were all for Reformation, and the Good of the Nation, as thoſe of Rebels uſually are. Accordingly he ſent many Articles of Complaint and Demands to the King; one of which was, that the Duke of York ſhould be recalled out of Ireland, and be placed at the Head of the Council-Board here; he delivered his Demands in very Inſolent and Threatning Language; ſo that the King judging who were at the Bottom of all this, raiſed an Army of 15000 Men, and Marched in Perſon againſt Cade and the Rebels; on which the Kentiſh Captain drew his Forces into the Woods by Sevenoke; and the King thinking it not ſafe to Attack him there, withdrew back to London. But his Courageous Queen Margaret, with her uſual Fire and Haſte, ſent the Two Suffolks, Sir Humphrey and William, with as many bold young Gentlemen as could be found about the Court, to follow and Attack the Rebels; theſe bravely attempted it, but with ill Succeſs; for Cade received them in ſo good Order, that he ſlew both the Leaders Sir Humphrey and his Brother, and put all the reſt to Flight. And Cade had ſo managed his Affairs, and perverted the Army, that tho' the King's Troops lay all this while at Blackheath, they could neither by Perſuaſion, nor Threatning, be brought to March to Reſcue the Queen's Men; but rather wiſhed that all things might go well for the Rebels: And indeed a great many of them deſerted privately, and got to Cade's Army; which alſo did daily increaſe by Supplies out of Suſſex and Surrey. And now he was got to be ſo conſiderable, that the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and the Duke of Buckingham were ſent to Treat with the Rebels, and to know their Demands. To theſe Captain Mendall vouchſafed indeed to give civil Language, but abſolutely denied to agree to any Ceſſation of Arms, unleſs the King would in Perſon pleaſe to hear their Complaints, and paſs his Royal Word for their Redreſs. The poor-ſpirited King not being ſufficiently aſſured of his Soldiers Fidelity, retired with his Queen to Kenelworth Caſtle in Warwickſhire; committing the Charge of the Tower of London to the Lord Scales, and to one Sir Matthew Gouge, (ſome call him Gough) a Gentleman of Wales, who had been very Famous for his Valour in the Wars againſt France, where he had ſerved above Twenty Years; and was equally Celebrated at Home for his Virtue and true Love to his Country. However, the King's King's Flight ſtruck ſuch a Terror into his Friends, and ſo encouraged the Rebels, that had the Earl of Warwick been here, perhaps he might eaſily have gained his Point. For in a few Days Captain Jack putting on Humphrey Stafford's Gilded Armour, had the Confidence to March his Men into the Borough of Southwark, and to Quarter them upon the People; but he charged them to commit no Outrages, nor Acts of Plunder, which they ſtrictly obſerved; and this got them great Credit. The next Morning, being July the 2d, Cade Marches to London-Bridge; and without any Oppoſition paſſes it, and proceeds at the Head of his Men to London-Stone; and ſtriking his Sword upon it, he cryed aloud, Now is Mortimer Lord of London! The Lord Mayor, Sir Thomas Charlton, ſtood at his Door; and bid him beware of doing any thing againſt the Peace of the City: To which the Pageant anſwered, Let the World judge of our honeſt Intentions by our Actions. And indeed his Men behaved themſelves ſo regularly in the City, that they had all the Mobs good Word. But in ſome time the Fellows Head grew dizzy with Succeſs, ſo that making himſelf Commander in Chief of the City, he ſent out his Letters of Safe Conduct to ſuch as he thought fit to employ; and in particular he wrote to one Thomas Cock, a Woollen-draper, to ſend him Horſes and Arms, and 1000 Marks in Money at the Charge of the Italian Merchants; honeſtly aſſuring him, that he would take off the Heads of all that denied to furniſh him. Cock was forced to do his Errand, and the Foreign Merchants to comply with his Demands: And had he had any one to adviſe or ſupport him, no doubt he had gained the entire Poſſeſſion of the City. But at Night he ſtalks back out of London into Southwark, where Robert Poynings, Eſq; for the Honour of his Family, was pleaſed to be his Sword-Bearer and Carver. The next Morning he returns into the City, and orders the Lord Scales, Governor of the Tower, to bring thence his Priſoner the Lord Say, then Treaſurer of England, to appear before him at Guildhall, where he had Summoned the Lord Mayor and Aldermen to attend him. After the Lord Say was Arraigned, and had deſired to be tried by his Peers, Cade ordered him to be immediately Beheaded at the Standard in Cheapſide; and carrying his Head on a Pole before him, and ordering his Body to be dragged into Southwark and Quartered, went to Mile-End to adviſe and concert Meaſures with the Eſſex Rebels; and in his way thither meeting, as ſome ſay, with Sir James Cromer, then Sheriff of Kent, and who had lately Married the Daughter of the Lord Say; or, as others ſay, ſending for him out of the Fleet-Priſon, he cauſed his Head alſo to be ſtruck off, and born, as the other was, before him, and made them kiſs one another as they were born along, to excite Laughter from the Mob. The next Morning he entred London again, and puniſhed ſome of his own Gang, who had diſobeyed his Commands; ſeized upon the Wares and Goods of one Alderman Malpas, and fined Horn, another Alderman 500 Marks. Theſe Inſolencies and Cruelties a little awakened and rouzed the Spirits of the Citizens; ſo that they ſent to the Lord Scales for ſome Aſſiſtance, and ſome Forces actually came to them in the Night, under the Command of the Brave Matthew Gouge above-mentioned.

Cade had again wiſely Marched out of the City, and was Quartered in Southwark, where having heard that his Paſſage into the City would be diſputed next time, he ran to Arms, and attempted to force the Bridge: But the Citizens defended it gallantly againſt him, tho' with the loſs of many Valiant Men, among whom the Brave Gouge himſelf was one, the Conflict holding all Night till Nine the next Morning. This Diſappointment and Defeat of the Rebels, produced a Ceſſation of Arms for ſome time; and then the Succeſs was prudently followed with a Proclamation of Pardon to all ſuch as ſhould now go home: And this being ſhewed them under the Great Seal by the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, who was Lord Chancellor alſo, had its deſired Effect; for the Rebels diſperſed, and all left Cade; who ſending his Things down by Water to Rocheſter, went by Land himſelf. And, as Stow ſaith, attempted to ſeize on Queenborough Caſtle; but not being able to effect it with the few Men that he had reaſſembled together, he fled away as faſt as he could, and lurk'd about in the Woods of Suſſex and Kent. After this a Proclamation was Publiſhed, ſetting forth his Original and former Crimes, and offering 1000 Marks to any one who ſhould take him alive or Dead. Upon which Mr. Eden, as is above ſaid, ſlew him at this Place, and carried his Body in a Cart up to London; where it was Quartered and ſent into Kent, and his Head ſet upon London-Bridge. The King cauſed about 26 of the Principal to be Executed in Kent, and Pardoned all the reſt, but made them come Naked (almoſt) to Blackheath, and beg their Lives.

1. Hothfeild Manor: This Place anciently belonged to the Family of Badeleſmere, being held by them in Grand Serjeanty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury. His Service was to hold the Baſon and Towel for the Archbiſhop to waſh his Hands on the Day of his Inthronization; and to be his Chamberlain the Night of his Inſtalment; for which the Baſon and Bed were his Fees. Bartholomew de Badeleſmere, Son of Gunceline, died poſſeſs'd of it in the 5th Year of King Edward the IId. But his unhappy Son Bartholomew Lord Badeleſmere, forfeited it to the Crown about Eleven Years after; but by King Edward the IIId it was again reſtored to his Son of the ſame Name; who in the 12th Year of that King dying without Iſſue, left Four Siſters Co-heirs; by Margaret, one of whom, this Eſtate went in Marriage to William Lord Roſſe of Hamlake: But one of his Deſcendants, Thomas Lord Roſſe, being taken Priſoner and Beheaded at Newcaſtle, for the Cauſe of the Houſe of Lancaſter, it was forfeited to the Crown again; and by King Edward the IVth, in his 4th Year, was granted to Sir John Fogge of Repton (for Life only); on his Death, in the 17th Year of King Henry the 7th, it returned to the Crown, and by King Henry the VIIIth was granted to John Tuſton, Eſq; Anceſtor to the Right Honourable the Earl of Thanet; and it is now in the Poſſeſſion, and the Seat of the Right Honourable the preſent Earl of Thanet; a kind Encourager of this Work. The Garden and Grove here is very fine.

2. Swinfort is a Manor here, which once belonged to a Family of that Sirname. But in King Henry the Vth's Time, it was in the Poſſeſſion of Bridges, deſcended from John at Bridg, (who is one of thoſe Eminent Perſons that is painted kneeling in Armour in the Windows at Great Chart Church). And there is a Place in this Pariſh not far hence, which ſtill bears the Name of Bridge. In this Family it continued till about the End of King James the Iſt; and then it went by Sale from Bridges to Sir Nicholas Tuſton, Anceſtor to the Earl of Thanet, and continues now in that Honourable Family.

3. Fouſley, Fauſley, anciently Fauleſley, is a Place here which once had Owners here of this Name; Sir John Fauleſley of this Place being called by Writ to Parliament, in King Richard the IId's Reign;

Reign: But about the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth, this Manor was ſold from this Name to that of Drury; and about the End of that Princeſs, went the ſame way to Paris, and thence ſoon to Bull; and after that to Paris again: But at laſt it was alienated to Sir Nicholas Tufton, Anceſtor to the preſent Earl of Thanet, whoſe Eſtate it now is.

The Church is neat but ſmall, with an handſome Altar-Piece, Pewing and Pulpit, given by the preſent Earl of Thanet.

In the Chancel is a fair Alabaſter Monument of Sir John Tufton, Knight and Baronet, and of his Lady, Daughter of Sir John Baker of Siſinghurſt; he was Great Grandfather to the preſent Earl of Thanet. He Rebuilt the Two Iſles of this Church after it was Burnt; and gave a Gift to the Poor of this Pariſh, and of Rainham, for mending the Highways.

HOUGHAM lies at the South-Eaſt ſide of Kent adjoining to the Sea, about Two Miles and a half Southward from Dover, in the Bailiwick of Stowting, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Lath of St. Auſtin: Part of it is in the Town and Port of Dover, and Liberty of the Cinque Ports: Part is in the Hundred of Bewsborough, and Lath alſo of St. Auſtin; the reſt in the Hundred of Folkſtone, and Lath of Shipway. All this Pariſh, except what is within the Liberties of the Ports, is in the Diviſion of Juſtices of the Lath of St. Auſtin: But that is in the Diviſion of the Juſtices of the Town and Port of Dover.

The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims over ſome part of this Pariſh.

'Tis in the Deanery of Dover, and Dioceſe of Canterbury: the Church is in the Hundred of Bewsborough, and is Dedicated to St. Laurence.

A Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

Places of Note here:

1. Hougham Manor; this Place was once the Poſſeſſion of a very Ancient Family of the ſame Name: Robert de Hougham died ſeized of it in the 41ſt Year of King Edward the IIId, and left it to his Son of the ſame Name, who was Governor of Rocheſter Caſtle in King Edward the Iſt's Reign. But in the next Deſcent, this Family ended in Two Daughters, one of which Married John de Shelving; and the other Waretius de Valoigns, who in Right of his Wife had this Eſtate; and in the 14th Year of King Edward the IIId, had a Charter of Freewarren for his Manor of Hougham; but he alſo leaving only Two Daughters, by the Marriage of one of them, this Place went to Thomas de Aldon; and by another Female of this Family, it went, before the End of King Henry the IVth, into the Poſſeſſion of Heron; who, in ſome Years, ſold it to Phineux; in which Eminent Name it continued for many Deſcents; but at length, in King Charles the Iſt's Time, was ſold thence to Mr. Neview of Dover.

2. Little Hougham, is another Manor in this Pariſh, which very anciently was part of the Eſtate of the Family of Baſing; William de Baſing died Poſſeſs'd of it in the 9th Year of King Edward the IId; and in this Name it continued till the Reign of King Henry the VIth, and then was ſold to Clive or Cliffe: But towards the End of that Prince, it was alienated to Hextall; hence, about the latter End of King Edward the IVth, it went by a Daughter to Whetenhall; and he ſold it to John Bois, Eſq; Anceſtor to John Bois of Fredville, who was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

3. Maxton, is a Place here which anciently was divided between Two Families, called Madekin and Walſham. A D. 1077, Stephen de Madekin was not only Lord of Madekin in Penton, and had the Moiety of this Place, but alſo had Land at Canterbury, as appears by Somner's Survey of that Place: And William de Walſham, who had the other Moiety, gave Land by Charter to the Parſon or Incumbent of St. Nicholas of Harbledown. After theſe went out, in the 20th Year of King Edward the IIId, it was found in the Poſſeſſion of the Archers; but in the 25th Year of King Richard the IId, it was ſold by William Archer to John Alkam of Alkam, a Family of Note hereabouts. But before the End of King Henry the VIIth, this Name was out of Poſſeſſion of this Eſtate, which was got into that of Herman, who was likewiſe Owner of May-Place in Crayford: And here it ſtaid till near the End of Queen Elizabeth, and then was ſold to Andrews; who alſo, in ſome Years, parted with it the ſame way to Pepper; and he to Sir Thomas Wilford of Ilden, who in King Charles the Iſt's Reign, ſold it to Richards of Dover.

The Priory of St. Martins in Dover had ſome Intereſt in this Place in the Reign of King Richard the IId; as appears by Rot. Eſc. N. 129. p. 2.

4. Siberſton is another Place in Hugham, which in elder Times was the Poſſeſſion of a Family of this Name; and from them it was ſold to the Monins; in whoſe Name it continued till King Henry the VIIIth's Reign, towards the End of which it was ſold to Pepper; and from thence, in King James the Iſt's Time, it was conveyed to Molton of Rotherhead, Rotherhith, or Redriff in Surrey; in whoſe Family it continued in Philpot's Time.

HUCKING lies towards the North part of the middle of Kent, about Four Miles and a half North-Eaſtward from Maidſtone, in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Eyhorn, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Eaſt one of Juſtices in that Lath.

The Liberty of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury claims here.

'Tis in the Deanery of Sutton, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; and the Church is Dedicated to St. Margaret. 'Tis eſteemed only as a Chapel, and ſo not rated in the King's Books.

Places of Note here:

1. Hucking is moſt of it contained within the Manor of Hollingbourn, and with that was given to the Priory of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury, A. D. 980.

And there is one Ancient Seat in this Pariſh called,

2. Rumpſtede, which did not belong to that Monaſtery; but had once Owners of this Name. Sir William Rumpſtede held this, and a Caſtellated Manſion in Sevenokes of the ſame Name in King Edward the Iſt's Reign: And it was his Son, the Owner of both theſe Rumpſtedes, that Tradition makes to have given Education to that poor Boy, who afterwards became Lord Mayor of London, by the Name of Sir William Sevenoke, A. D. 1418. In the IIId Year of King Henry the VIth, this Place was got into the Poſſeſſion of Richard Peverell; and afterwards it came into that of the Peckhams; but in Queen Elizabeth's Reign it was in the Name of Figge. About the Beginning of King James the Iſt, it was the Eſtate of Thompſon, who ſold it to Taylor, who was Fruiterer to that Prince: And his Deſcendant, about the End of the next Reign, ſent it the ſame way to Stringer of Goudherſt, and thence by Marriage it went to the late Dr. Belcher of Rocheſter.

HUN-

HUNTON, Huntington, Huntingdune, lies towards the Middle of Kent, by the River Medway, about four Miles South Weſtward from Maidſtone, in the Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and South one of Juſtices in that Lath.

So much of it, as is either in the Hundred of Larkfield or Ancient Demeſne of Aylesford, is in the Bailiwick of Hoo.

But that Part which is in the Hundred of Maidſtone is in the Bailiwick of Eyhorne; and the Reſt, being in the Borough of Hunton, is in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Twiford; which Borough hath a Court-Leet by it ſelf; where the Borſholder is choſen; and the Inhabitants thereof owe no Suit nor Service to the Court-Leet of the Hundred: Only at that Court a Conſtable of that Hundred may be choſen out of this Borough.

This Pariſh is in the Deanery of Shoreham, and ſo a Peculiar of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury; but 'tis in the Dioceſe of Rocheſter. The Church ſtands in the Hundred of Twiford: 'Tis a Rectory; and valued in the King's Books at 16*l*. 12*s*. 01*d*.

At the North Side of the Chancel is a fair Monument of the Fanes of Burſton in this Pariſh; and in the South Side is a Memorial of the Interment of the Noble Family of the Clintons, formerly Lords of Hunton: His Seat was near the Church at a Place called the Court-Lodge; whereof the Moat and ſome Remains were viſible in Kilburn's Time; and in the South Iſle of the Church is a Memorial of the Interment of Head; who once alſo was Owner of Hunton.

Places of Note here:

1. Hunton Manor had anciently Proprietors of the Name of Lenham. For Philpot ſaith, That Nicholas de Lenham had a Charter of Freewarren for his Land here in the 41ſt Year of King Henry the IIId. But about the Beginning of King Edward the IIId, Eleanora, Daughter of William de Lenham, carried it in Marriage to John Gifford together with,

2. Benſtede, another Manor in this Pariſh.

About the Beginning of King Richard the IId, both were ſold to John Lord Clinton. And Philpot ſaith, the Effigies of this John, and of his Grandſon alſo Lord Clinton were preſerved in the Glaſs Windows of the Church in his Time: But a Deſcendant of his, another John Lord Clinton about the Beginning of King Henry the VIIth, ſold it to Sir Thomas Wyat, Privy-Conſellor to that Prince; but his unfortunate Grandſon forfeited both his Life and this Eſtate to the Crown in the 2d Year of Queen Mary; and then it was granted to Sir John Baker of Siſinghurſt, that Queen's Attorney-General: And in this Family it continued in Philpot's Time.

3. Burſton is a Manor here which anciently was the Eſtate of one John de Burſton, probably as early as King Henry the IIId's Reign; and this Family had then alſo Lands about Wye and Crundale in this County. For in the 45th Year of King Henry the IIId, Warretius de Valoigns releaſes his Title to ſome Lands in thoſe Pariſhes, to John de Burſton; and in this Name did this Seat continue for many Deſcents; for in the 29th Year of King Henry the VIth, William Burſton of this Place is returned among ſuch as had a Right to bear Arms.

But ſome-how in King Henry the VIIIth's Reign it was got into the Poſſeſſion of Mr. Head, Alderman of London, who reſided at this Place, and added much to the Beauty and Magnificence of the Houſe; which is finely ſituated on a Hill, overlooking all the Wild of Kent and Suſſex. But he ſeems to have had only a Term of Years in it, notwithſtanding his Expence here: Becauſe about the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth, it was ſold by Burſton to Sir Thomas Vane; and the Widow of his Heir, Sir George Vane was in Poſſeſſion of it in Philpot's Time. But it is now Part of the Eſtate of the Honourable Colonel Fane, one of the Knights of the Shire for the County of Kent.

In the Liſt of the Manors belonging to the Priory of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury, extracted out of Domeſday, and publiſhed by Mr. Somner in the Appendix to his Antiquities of Canterbury, there is this Note;

Huntindune eſt Manerium Monachorum & de Veſtitu eorum & defendit ſe pro dimidio Sulingæ quod Godefridus Dapifer tenet, & firmam reddit, iſtud dimid. Sull. eſt de vj. Sull. de Fernlege. Which if it relates to this Place of Hunton, as I believe it doth, confirms what Kilburn ſaith, That the Manor of Hunton belonged once to Chriſt-Church in Canterbury. But of this Philpot takes no Notice.

Hunton had the Grant of a Market on Tueſdays, obtained by Nicholas de Leneham, which is now diſuſed: And a Five Days Fair, beginning the Day before the Aſſumption of the Virgin Mary, as appears by Pat. 41. of King Henry the IIId, Membr. 7.

St. JAMES in the Iſle of Greane. This Church and Pariſh is the only one in this Iſland: It lies at the North Side of Kent, adjoining to the Sea, about Three Miles (a-croſs the Medway) North Weſtward from Queenborough, in the Bailiwick of Hoo, Hundred of Chatham and Gillingham, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and North one of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery of Shoreham, but Dioceſe of Rocheſter; and therefore is a Peculiar of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury. The Church is dedicated to St. James; is very ſmall, without either Steeple or Tower. In it are Memorials of the Interment of William Wykes, in the Year 1499; of John Cardyſt, who paved the Chancel, in the Year 1452; and of Thomas Godfrey in the Year 1679. A Vicarage; and valued in the King's Books at 9 l. 11 s. 8 d. Dr. Plume, late Archdeacon of Rocheſter gave 5 l. per Ann. to teach the Children of this Pariſh to read Engliſh.

The Iſland of Greane, Green, Grain, or Greyan, (for all theſe Ways 'tis written) is about four Miles long, and two broad; and is divided off from the Main Land by a Water which is called the Dray, and which at its Southern End opens into the River Medway; and at its Northern one, into the Sea, by a Mouth which is called the North Yenlet, of which more below.

The Levels here are well deſcribed in the Draughts or Maps of them, kept by the Clerk of the Commiſſioners of the Sewers; and are called the South-Weſt and North-Weſt Levels in the Iſle of Grain.

There are ſome Salt-Works in this Iſland, and the Houſes ſtand by the Side of the Medway.

I can't ſay much of the Healthfulneſs of this Place, nor recommend it for the Society to be found here. Take this Account of it from Mr. Johnſon's little Book of the Kentiſh Plants:

'Tis entituled, Iter Plantarum inveſtigationis ergo ſuſceptum, Julij 13. 1629. —— Saith he, Navigiolo relicto quinque vel ſex milliaria ambulamus, nihil, quod aliquid delectationis præberet, viſo. Supar Ripas iter erat in diei Æſtu miſerâ ſiti in mediis aquis Tantali ritu cruciamur (ſalſæ enim erant) nec minus premebat fames in inhumano illo tracta, ubi nec opidum in propinquo erat, neque fumus ad oculos, nec canum lutratus ad aures, villarum ſolita indicia, perveniunt, quo languentes animos in aliquem ſpem erigere poſſumus, — &c. But I hope this won't diſcourage Gentlemen from going a Simpling.

Phil-

Philpot ſaith this Iſland had always the ſame Owners with the Manor of Malmains in Stoke, not far diſtant from hence. Nich. de Malmains held it at his Death in the 23d Year of King Edward the IIId. But from this Name it went by Sale in King Henry the IVth's Reign into that of Iden, of Ripley-Court in Weſtwell in this County. And here it continued till the latter End of King Henry the VIIIth, and then was ſold to John Parks, Gentleman; and by his only Daughter and Heir Elizabeth it went in Marriage to John Roper, Eſq; of Bedmancore in Lingfield in this County: And in Philpot's Time was in the Poſſeſſion of his Deſcendant, the Right Honourable Chriſtopher Roper, Baron of Tenham.

The Church of Rocheſter have at preſent ſome Land in this Iſland, which came to them by the Donation of King Henry the VIIIth; and did formerly belong to the Priory of St. Andrews. In the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, the Prior of Rocheſter claimed and was allowed before the Juſtices Itinerant, Wrecks of the Sea, &c. for a Marſh in the Iſle of Green, which came to the Convent by Exchange with Baldwin Archbiſhop of Canterbury, for the Manor of Lambeth in Surrey, together with the Manor of Darent, &c. A. D. 1197. And in the Famous Manuſcript called the Textus Roffenſis is an Account f. 182, 183, and 191, of three other Marſhes in this Iſland given to that Priory: Viz. Robertus Latimer imminente articulo mortis ſuæ (that was always the Time for the Monks to become ſucceſsful Beggars,) dedit Eccleſiæ St. Andreæ & Monachis Deo illic ſervientibus unum Mariſcum infra Inſula de Grean. Quod donum conceſſit libenter Archiepiſcopus Anſelmus de quo tenuit illum; & Monachi habent inde ſingulis Annis xxx. Solidos. By which Grant it appears, as well as by Baldwin's Exchange for Lambeth above-mentioned, that the Archbiſhops of Canterbury had formerly Lands in this Iſland: Which I think is not mentioned any where in our printed Books.

Next follows the Gift of a Lady, to the ſaid Priory:

Lyafrun quæ fuit uxor Siwardi de Hoo dedit Eccleſiæ Sancti Andreæ, &c. poſt mortem ipſius viri Siwardi unum Mariſcum infra Inſulam de Grean, eternaliter poſſidendum: & hoc donum fecit in tempore Gundulfi Epiſcopi. After Gundulf's Death, one Wulfward, ſirnamed Henry de Hoo, claimed this Marſh, as his Inheritance by Conſanguinity: And how it would have gone, the Manuſcript doth not ſay; but the Monks made all ſure by obliging him (in the Hour of Death) to breathe out his laſt in one of their Habits, and then he ſolemnly quitted his Claim for ever: And for this Marſh the Convent received 40 s. per Ann. Rent.

Their fourth Marſh in Grain came to them thus:

Ælfwine Preoſtes Sunu cum Uxore ſua (here you ſee was Marriage of Prieſts from Generation to Generation) dederunt Eccleſiæ Sancti Andreæ, &c. unum Mariſcum infra Inſulam de Grean per animabus ſuis in perpetuum. Pro quo Beneficio ipſi Monachi ſervitium in fine promiſerunt facere, ſicut pro Fratre & Sorore. For there were at that time of Day Siſters admitted into their Fraternity: As I have obſerved before in another Place.

The North Yenlet opening into the Thames, or rather the Sea, at its Mouth above-mentioned, hath been a Place of Note in this County; and as the Water of Wantſume, or the Paſſage anciently from Sandwich to Reculver by Sea, went out of the latter of thoſe Places by the Mouth which was called by Bede the Genlade, i. e. the Ynlade, or Inlett; ſo this Place had the ſame Name of Yenlade or Inlett; and for the ſame Reaſon: The other Inlett of the Dray which opens into the Medway, was called in Lambard's Time Colemouth.

At or about this North Inlett was kept formerly a ſtrict Watch and Ward, of which I find this Account in the Textus Roffenſis, p. 232.

Kanc. Warda aſſeſſa per Dominum Willielmum de Clynton Com. Huntington. Johannem de Cobeham, & Thomam de Aldon. in Com. Kanc. ſuper Coſteram Maris An. Regni Regis Edw. tertij undecimo. Videlicet: Apud le Yenlede in Hoo.

Theſe Hobelers were Light Horſe, who were to ride about from Place to Place in the Night, to get and to carry Intelligence of the Landing of any Boats, Men, &c. They were probably ſo called from their Hobbeys, or ſmall Horſes.

After this, follows an Account of the Vigiliæ Minutæ or the Leſſer Watch, which was kept on the whole Sea Coaſt of this County, in Ancient Times.

The Hundred of Hoo were to find 9 Men to keep Watch at this Yenlade; viz. 2 out of Hoo Pariſh, one out of Malling, five from Shamele, and one from Dartford.

The Watch of Shepey.

From about Feverſham were to come 33 Men, viz. from Milton and Marden xxv, from Boctton iii, and from Feverſham v, &c.

The Guard or Ward of Shepey was 5 Men at Arms, and 3 Hobelers, &c.

ICKHAM, Ikham, Icham, Jecham, Jicham, Nicham, lies towards the Eaſt End of Kent, by the River Stowre, about Three Miles and a half Eaſtward from Canterbury; in the Bailiwick of Bridge and Petham, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. The Liberty of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury claims over the Manor of Ickham, and Brampling in Ickham, being granted to that Church by King Henry the VIIIth, in his 33d Year. But the Liberty of St. Auſtin claims over the Pariſh, the ſame being in the Hundred of Downhamford which belonged to that Abbey. 'Tis in the Deanery of Bridge, and Dioceſe of Canterbury, and the Church is dedicated to St. John. A Rectory, and rated in the King's Books with a Chapel annexed at 29 l. 13 s. 4 d. In the North and South Parts of the Croſs Iſle of the Church, are Figures in Stone of Men in Armour lying under the Wall, perhaps ſome of the Family of Baa. In the Chancel are Eighteen Stalls remaining like thoſe in Collegiate Churches; which ſhews that here was formerly ſome Religious Fraternity Eſtabliſhed, tho' I can find nothing any where about them; but I have before obſerved, that ſuch Stalls are not unuſual in other Churches, where yet we have no Account of any Colleges founded.

Places of Note here:

1. Ickham Manor, this was given to the Priory of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury, by King Offa, A. D. 791. and was then eſteemed at Fifteen Plow-lands. And A. D. 958. more Land in Ickham was given to the ſame by the Will of one Athelard; Odo being then Archbiſhop of Canterbury; vid. Somner's Gavelkind, p. 13. But in the Domeſday Survey it is ſunk down to Four Plow-lands, and was appretiated at 30 l. In the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, the Prior of Canterbury brought his Claim to the uſual Privileges of a Manor here, and was allowed it. And here it continued till the general Diſſolution in King Henry the VIIIth's Reign, and then was ſettled on the New Dean and Chapter of Canterbury: They diſpoſed of it by Leaſe to Edward Iſaack, a zealous Proteſtant in Queen Mary's Reign; but being then forced abroad by her Perſecution, ſhe ſeized on the Eſtate, and granted it to George Lord Cobham; whoſe Grandſon, Henry Brook Lord Cobham, being attainted in King James the Iſt's Reign, that Prince gave it to Robert Earl of Salisbury, his Brother-in-Law: And his Son William Earl of Salisbury was in Poſſeſſion in Philpot's Time; though he had ſold ſome Part of it to Mr. Roger Lukin of London.

2. Apulton is another Manor here, which anciently had Poſſeſſors of the Name of Apylton. Afterwards it came into the Name of Denis; for one John Denis of Apulton in Ickham, was Sheriff of London, A. D. 1360, and founded a Chantry here in King Edward the IIId's Reign: The Lands which were given to ſupport it, being called, ſaith Philpot, to this Day Denis Lands. After this it came into the Name of Oldmeade, who held it in King Henry the Vth and VIth Reigns; but before the End of King Henry the VIth, it was ſold to Bemboe, and from thence to Hunt, thence to Dormer, and thence again to Gaſon; and ſo flitting was this Place, that after this it became the Purchaſe of Hodgekin, Rutland, Winter, and Dae, and thence it went the ſame Way to Froſtall, the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

3. Baa is another Manor in this Pariſh, which anciently was the Eſtate of a Family of that Name; the Remains of ſome of which were preſerved in the Glaſs Windows of the Church, in Philpot's Time. From this Name it went into that of Wenderton, of Wenderton in Wingham: But about the Beginning of King Henry the VIIIth, William Wenderton ſold it to Hugh Warham, Eſq; Brother to the Archbiſhop of that Name: And he gave it in Dower with his Daughter Anne, to Sir Anthony St. Leger, Lord Preſident of Ireland: And his Deſcendant, Sir Warham St. Leger, ſold it to Mr. — Denne of Dennhill in Kingſton; and his Heir, Mr. Thomas Denne, who was Recorder of Canterbury, ſold it to Mr. --- Curling, the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

There was one Peter de Ickham, who is mentioned by Pitſeus, in his Book de Scriptoribus Eccleſ. and by Bale in his Centuries, as a Man of Eminent Learning, and born in this Pariſh.

In the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, the Maſter of the Hoſpital of Poor Prieſts in Canterbury, defended himſelf againſt the Suit of William de Wingate, about Land here belonging to that Houſe, and the Jury gave it for the Hoſpital, and the Judges confirmed their Poſſeſſion.

IFEILD lies towards the North Side of Kent, about Two Miles South Weſtward from Graveſend, in the Bailiwick of Hoo, Hundred of Totlingtrow, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and North One of Juſtices in that Lath.

'Tis in the Deanery of Shoreham, and ſo a Peculiar to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, but in the Dioceſe of Rocheſter.

'Tis a Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 4 l. 7 s. 0 d.

One of the ſmalleſt Churches I ever ſaw; and nothing elſe remarkable.

In Ifield-ſtreet are two Houſes, which now belong to Northfleet Pariſh: Theſe are called Singlewell, formerly Shinglewell; (ſee Northfleet.) And from hence the whole Street and Pariſh is vulgarly called Singlewell or Shinglewell.

There is a ſtrange but common Report here, that the one (and only) Bell in this Church often rings of it ſelf, to give Notice of the Death not only of the Pariſhioners, but even of ſuch Neighbouring People as frequent this Church of Ifield. This Report the Miniſter told me of, and ſaith, that his Daughter hath often heard the Bell, as well as his Neighbours; and come to him to know who was dead. But I ſuppoſe the Ringing is only in their Heads, and not in the Steeple.

The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims here.

In the Textus Roffenſis, f. 232. I find this Note concerning this Place.

Ita convenit inter nos & Dominum Stephanum Ridel de decima de Ifield. Quod nos habebimus dimidium Frumentum & tertiam partem Ordei & Avenæ; Ipſe vero de Piſis, de Fabis, & Veſcis nihil percipiet; ſed nos totum. So that the College had all Tithes, but half the Tithe of the Wheat, and a third Part of the Tithe of Barley and Oats.

In the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, ſome Tenants of this Village in order to avoid attending at the Sheriffs Turns, Law-Days, &c. pretended they were within the Lowy of Tunbridge; but on due Examination, Richard Earl of Glouceſter and Lord of Tunbridge, diſclaimed them.

IGHTHAM, Itham, Eightham, Ehteham, lies towards the Middle of the Weſt Part of Kent, about a Mile and a half South Weſtward from Wroteham, in the Bailiwick of Hoo, Hundred of Wroteham, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and South one of Juſtices in that Lath. The Liberty of Wroteham claims over it. 'Tis in the Deanery of Shoreham, but Dioceſe of Rocheſter; and therefore a Peculiar of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury. A Rectory; and valued in the King's Books at 15 l. 16 s. 8 d.

A Fair is kept here on Wedneſday in Whitſon-Week, which is uſually called Coxcombs Fair.

In the Church are Three fine Monuments: One of Sir William Selby, another of his Widow, and the Third of another Sir William Selby, Nephew of the former; and who left the Eſtate to the late Sir Harry Selby's Father. There are alſo in the Chancel Memorials of the Interment of Sir Richard Clement, above 180 Years ſince, and of Aſtall above 160. And in the North Side of the Church, under an Arch in the Wall, lies the Figure in Stone of a Knight in Armour; which Philpot ſaith was Sir Thomas Cawne, originally of Stafford, but had ſome Eſtate at Nulcombe in Seale, which he purchaſed from John Aſhburnham, in the 39th Year of King Edward the IIId. But by his Lady, who was Lora, Daughter and Heir of Sir Thomas Morant of Morants-Court, he had a yet greater Fortune in this County; but he died before her, and probably without Iſſue, and ſhe afterward married a Peckam. Some think this to be the Monument of Sir Richard Haut, once Owner of the Moat here, and Lieutenant of the Tower of London: But becauſe Philpot ſaith his Arms were on his Coat-Armour upon his Breaſt,

I judge

Teghtham Court the Seat of William

James Esq. Son of Sr. Demetrius James Kt.

I judge he could not be miſtaken in the Perſon.

Philpot ſaith, This Place ought to be called Eightham; and that it took its Name from the Eight Hams or Burghs which lie in it; viz. 1. Eightham. 2. Redwell. 3. Ivy Hatch. 4. Barrow-Green. 5. St. Cleres. 6. The Moat. 7. Beaulies. 8. Oldborough. Which laſt (he ſaith) was of Roman Original: And that when Leland viſited Kent, which was about the Beginning of King Henry the VIIIth's Reign, there were ſome Remains of an Ancient Fortification here. And indeed though I can't agree that Woodcott in Surrey was the Noviomagus; nor that the Roman Military Way from Canterbury ever went over that Place; yet I believe there was once a Roman Way from the Portus Lemanis directly to London, without falling into the Watling-ſtreet Way, till it came to Lambeth-Ferry: And that this might paſs through or near enough to Ightham to account for the Fortification at Oldborough: (if it were a Square, as it is a round Form, and ſo not likely to be Roman); for then it might be as a Place of Strength, to ſecure the Soldiers in their March to and fro. See Craford, which I take to have been the true Noviomagus.

This Camp of Oldborough is on the Top of a Hill, with an extenſive Proſpect of the Country round about it; it is in a Wood belonging to the Worthy William James, Eſq; of this Place; and is now ſo overgrown with Wood, that 'tis difficult to trace its Lines, and to meaſure it; but as Mr. Puckle, Bariſter of the Middle-Temple, and who married Mr. James's Siſter, informs me, it contains about 8 Acres of Ground; and is of a Circular Form. Juſt on the Brow of the Hill there is an Entrance into a Cave, which is now filled up by the ſinking of the Earth, ſo as to admit a Paſſage but a little Way into it: But in the Memory of, and by the Report of, Ancient People, it went formerly much further in under the Hill. This was probably a Place to lay Stores or other Proviſions in, neceſſary for an Encampment.

By this Deſcription of it, I ſhould judge it rather to have been a Britiſh than a Roman Camp; which perhaps will receive Confirmation from the Britiſh Silver Coins which have been found at Wroteham in this Neighbourhood, and ſome of which are delineated in Camden. Of which more in Wroteham.

Places of Note here:

1. The Manor of Ightham, was in the Reign of King John in the Poſſeſſion of Hamon de Crevequer; and in King Henry the IIId's Reign, in that of Simon de Criol. But in King Edward the IId's Time it was come ſome-how to be the Eſtate of William de Inge, one of the Judges: He was of Bedfordſhire; and his Son of the ſame Name married Margery Daughter of Henry Grapenell; but by his Daughter Joan, this Eſtate went in Marriage to Eudo Lord Zouch of Harringworth: And in this Family it continued till about the Beginning of King Henry the VIIth, and then was ſold to Sir Robert Read, Lord Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas, who left Four Daughters and Coheirs: Of whom Dorothy was married to Sir Edward Wotton; Margaret, to Sir John Harcourt of Staffordſhire; Catherine to Sir Thomas Willoughby, Lord Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas; and Elizabeth, to Thomas Totihurſt, Eſq;: And on the Diviſion this Eſtate fell to Willoughby; and from this Name, in Queen Elizabeth's Reign, it was ſold to James, Anceſtor to William James, alias Haſtrecht, Eſq;, who in five Years Time was Thrice choſen Knight of the Shire for this County: Whoſe Eldeſt Son and Heir, Sir Demetrius James, ſucceeded in the ſaid Eſtate to his ſaid Father; and by Anne the only Daughter of the great Phyſician Dr. George Bate, had Iſſue as follows: William, his Eldeſt Son, who is now living, and ſince his Father's Death in Poſſeſſion of this Manor; Jane, Eldeſt Daughter, married to Sir John Rannen of Wroteham in Kent, Bar. who are now both deceaſed: Elizabeth now living unmarried; Anne married to Thomas Puckle, of the Middle-Temple, Eſq;: George, Henry, Sarah, and Haeſtrect, all dead, unmarried; and Roger an Infant dying very young. Which ſaid William James, the Eldeſt Son, inter-married with Anne, the ſole Daughter and Heir General of Sir Thomas Windham of Trent, in the County of Somerſet, Bar. deceas'd; (who was the Son of Sir Francis Wyndham, who both by himſelf and Family was ſo ſignally inſtrumental in the Preſervation of King Charles the IId, after the Battel of Worceſter;) and by her hath ſeveral Children of both Sexes now living; upon the Eldeſt of which Sons, and ſo upon the others in Taile Male, (as I am credibly informed) the real Eſtate of that Branch of the Wyndham Family is now ſettled by Sir Francis Wyndham, deceas'd, who was the only Brother of Sir Thomas Wyndham, in Caſe of Failure of Iſſue by the Grandſon and Granddaughter now living of the ſaid Sir Francis Wyndham; they of this Family who ſhall inherit by Virtue of this Settlement, being expreſly directed by the ſame to aſſume the Name and Arms of the Wyndham's Family, in Addition to their own former ones.

This Family of James were originally, ſaith Philpot, called Haſtrecht, as being Lord of a Place of that Name near Utrecht: And Roger Son of Jacob van Haeſtrecht coming over into England in King Henry the VIIIth's Reign, and being called after the Dutch Manner Roger Jacobs; the Engliſh at laſt called him Roger James; and ſo he and his Deſcendants proceeded to write themſelves James alias Haſtrecht. This Family of Haſtrecht were by Marriage allied to the ancient and eminent Houſe of Waſſenaer, and to that of Waermont near Leyden.

2. St. Cleres is another Place of Note here, which formerly was called Aldham, and gave Name to a Family who were Poſſeſſors of it: The laſt of which, Sir Thomas Aldham, left only three Daughters Coheirs; of which one was married to Newborough of Dorſetſhire; Margery to Martin de Peckham; and Iſolda, to John St. Clere; about the Beginning of King Edward the IIId, this Place by Partition fell to St. Clere, in Right of his Wife; and for a while was called Aldham St. Cleres; but in Time the old Name of Aldham was left out: In this Name of St. Clere did this Manor continue, till about the End of King Henry the VIIth, and then was ſold to the Famous Richard Empſon; but he with his Collegue Dudley, being executed for Treaſon in the firſt Year of the next Reign, this Place became forfeited to the Crown; and was not long after granted to Sir Thomas Boleign, Knight of the Garter, and who was created Earl of Ormond and Wiltſhire, A. D. 1529. But his unlucky Son, George Viſcount Rochford, forfeited it with his Life to the Crown again: And ſome Years after it was granted, by King Henry the VIIIth, to George Moulton, or Multon, Eſq; of Moulton in Hadloe: And his Grandſon Robert Moulton, Eſq; ſold it to Sir John Sydley, Knight and Baronet; who on the old Foundation built a noble Houſe here; and in this Family I ſuppoſe the Poſſeſſion ſtill continues.

3. The Moat. This Place was formerly the Inheritance of Ivo de Haut, who flouriſhed here in the Reign of King John, and Henry the IIId. His Deſcendant Henry de Haut died poſſeſſed of it in the 43d Year of King Edward the IIId. His Son Nicholas Haut was Sheriff of Kent in the 19th Year of Richard the IId ; and his Grandſon Richard Haut held the ſame Office in the 18th Year of King Edward the IVth ; and again in his 22d Year. But having together with ſeveral other Gentlemen of this County, as John Fogg, John Guldford, John Dante, James Horne of Weſtwell, William Clifford, Reginald Pympe, John Pympe, and Edward Poynings of Merſham, engaging unſucceſsfully then in the Cauſe of Henry Earl of Richmond, againſt King Richard the IIId, this Eſtate became forfeited to the Crown, and was by that Uſurper granted to Sir Robert Brakenbury, Lieutenant of the Tower of London. But not long after, on King Henry the VIIth's Acceſſion to the Crown, this Eſtate was reſtored again to Richard Haut, Eſq; ; and here it continued all that Reign : But ſome time after it went probably by Purchaſe into the Poſſeſſion of Sir Richard Clement, Knight, and who was Sheriff of Kent in the 23d Year of King Henry the VIIIth, but died without Iſſue, and lies buried in this Church. John Clement his Brother was his Heir ; whoſe Daughter Anne carried it in Marriage to Hugh Pakenham, Eſq; : And this Gentleman in Conſort with Sir William Sydley, who had married Anne her only Child, alienated it to Sir John Allen, Lord-Mayor of London, in the Year 1526, and again in 1536. He left it to his Son Sir Chriſtopher Allen ; who about the End of Queen Elizabeth, ſold it to Sir William Selby ; and his Nephew, Sir William Selby, having no Iſſue, gave it (to continue the Name) to Mr. George Selby of London ; whoſe Son, William Selby lately deceas'd, left it to his Son John Selby, Eſq; , who now lives here, and is the preſent Poſſeſſor.

King Edward the IId, in his 9th Year, at the Requeſt of William de Inge, granted him Licenſe to ſet up a Monday's Market at this Place ; and to keep a Fair here for Three Days following one another, and beginning on the Vigil of St. Peter and Paul.

St. JOHN's in Canterbury, now called St. John's the Poor ; and probably never was of any great Extent ; it ſtood in the upper End of the Lane leading from Caſtle-ſtreet, now called the Back Lane, but anciently St. John's Lane. It is now come into private Hands, and is uſed for a Malt-houſe : It was long ago united to St. Mary-Caſtle ; and ſince their being deſolate, they are both devolved to St. Mildred's, and for a good while were reckoned in that Pariſh ; but of late St. Mary-Caſtle hath begun to have an Incumbent of her own. In the Inquiſition which was made to eſtabliſh the Union of this Church, and St. Mary-Caſtle together, it was found that the Profits of St. John's amounted to but 40 s. per An. (a).

St. JOHN-BAPTIST's Church adjoining to Chriſt-Church Cathedral in Canterbury.

There ſeems plainly to have been formerly ſuch a Church ; and that as long ago as Archbiſhop Cuthbert who built it ; and he petitioned King Egbert, that for the Future all the Archbiſhops of Canterbury might be buried in it. This Church ſtood ſo near the Cathedral that it was burnt to the Ground with it, and never rebuilt afterwards. Capgrave, as cited in the Antiq. Britan. in Cuthbert's Life, ſaith, it ſtood almoſt contiguous to the Cathedral. Battely ſaith it ſtood near the Eaſt End of it, and probably near the Place where the Chapel of the Infirmary was. Which he had from Osborn (as is ſuppoſed) in his Life of Bregwine : Angl. Sacr. Vol. 2. p. 75, 76. who ſaith, Cuthbertus Eccleſiam in orientali parte Majoris Eccleſiæ eidem penè contiguam in honorem Johannis Baptiſtæ fabricavit. And then he acquaints us for what Purpoſe and Uſes it was built, in theſe Words : Ut & Baptiſtena & examinationes Judiciorum pro diverſis Cauſis ad correctionem Scelerum inibi celebrarentur : Et ut Archiepiſcoporum corpora in ed ſepelirentur, &c. And there was Cuthbert buried himſelf : As was alſo his Succeſſor Bregowine.

St. JOHN's near Margate, lies at the North-Eaſt Side of Kent, in the Iſle of Thanet, adjoining to the Sea, about ſix Miles Northward from Sandwich, in the Bailiwick of Bridge and Petham, Lath of St. Auſtin, and Eaſt Diviſion of the County.

'Tis a Member of the Town and Port of Dover ; and within the Diviſion of its Juſtices ; and within its Liberty, and that of the Cinque Ports.

The Liberty of St. Auſtin alſo claims over the Vicarage of St. John's and Margate. Which ſaid Vicarage is valued in the King's Books at 8 l. 0 s. 0 d. per Ann.

'Tis in the Deanery of Weſt Bere, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. And the Church is dedicated to St. John the Baptiſt : In it there is a handſome Veſtry with a Chimney.

In the Church are ſome Ancient Memorials : As of H. Petit, in the Year 1599. Of Elizabeth Wife of Thomas Thwaits in the Year 1382 ; of Richard Cautrys, in the Year 1431 ; of John Dandelyon in 1445, Arms 3 Lions between 2 Bars Dancettè : Of Peter Stone in 1442 ; John Stowell in 1475 ; Alexander Norwood in 1557 ; Thomas Smith Vicar here in 1433 ; John Parker in 1441 ; Richard Notfield in 1446 ; of Etheldred Barrow in 1513, who gave 15½ Acres of Land to the Uſe of the Poor here. Tho. Tady left Money to purchaſe 13 Acres for the Uſe of the Poor. Francis Butler, Eſq; in 1673, gave about 5 l. per Ann. in Houſes to the ſame Uſe.

The Font here is ancient, and of Stone, and matted round at the Foot for the Convenience of Kneeling.

Places of Note here :

1. Mergate, which was the Ancient Entrance from the Sea there ; and was a Member of Dover in the Time of King Edward the Iſt. And the Juſtices of the County aſſeſſing the Reſt of this Pariſh as lying in the foreign ; King Henry the VIIIth united it to Dover by his Letters-Patents.

2. Dendelion was, as appears by ſeveral Old Deeds, the Seat once of a Family anciently called Dent de Lyon ; and that in the Time of King Edward the Iſt. But about the Reign of King Henry the IVth they came to be called Dendelion : There being extant ſeveral Deeds of John Dendelion in that King's Reign : His Son of the ſame Name about the beginning of King Edward the IVth, had an only Daughter who was married to Petit of Shalmesford near Chartham : And this John Dendelion lies buried under a fair Marble in St. John's Church, A. D. 1445. and in this Family of Petit did the Eſtate remain in Philpot's Time.

There is a ſtrong and large Gate-Houſe of the ancient Seat of the Dendelions yet ſtanding, like that of a Caſtle, with Loop-holes for Arrows or Muskets : Over it I took notice of this Coat of Arms of the Dendelions in Stone, On a Feſs indented 3 Lions Rampant. Mrs. Giles the Gentleman's Wife that lives there, told us, the Houſe was very ancient ; and at Margate they report, that it was the Abode once of a famous Pirate.

3. Naſhcourt was anciently and a good while the Eſtate of the Garwintons, whoſe Seat was at Bekesbourn : But William Garwington dying without Iſſue in the 11th Year of King Henry the IVth, bequeathed this with much other Land to Richard Haut, who had married Joan his near Kinſwoman ; his Son Richard Haut left only a Daughter Margery, who carried this Eſtate to her Husband William Iſaac: The Arms of Haut and Iſaac are in ſeveral Panes of the Glaſs at Naſh-Court, ſaith Philpot. And near them are thoſe of William Warham, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, of whom this Manſion held. About the End of King Henry the VIIIth's Reign. The Lincolns came by Purchaſe into this Eſtate; and held it till the Middle of Queen Elizabeth, and then it went by Sale to Sir Roger Manwood, Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer; whoſe Son Sir Peter alienated it to Cleybrook: In the Church is buried William Cleybrook, Eſq; in the Year 1628. whoſe Son Mr. William Cleybrook's Widow was married again to Mr. George Somner, who was killed at Wyebridge, An. 1648. after which ſhe was married again to Mr. James Newman: And after his Deceaſe the Reverſion was to Mr. Alexander Northwood and his Heirs.

4. Dene, 5. Hengrove, are two Manors in this Pariſh, that of old belonged to the Family of Leybourn; and were left by the Famous Juliana, ſole Heir of Roger de Leybourn, to the Abbey of St. Auſtin in Canterbury, together with Weſtgate in Birchington: See Birchington. Which Donation of hers was confirmed by King Edward the IIId, in the Year 1363.

And Philpot judges it probable, that theſe Two Chapels at Dene and Hengrove, which the common Tradition of the Iſland ſays were erected by two Virgins, were built by this Juliana de Leybourn (who had no Iſſue) for two Chantry Prieſts, to ſay Maſſes for the Souls of her two deceaſed Husbands, the Earls of Pembroke and Huntington. On the Suppreſſion of the Monaſteries theſe two Manors came to the Crown, and ſtaid there till King James the Iſt gave them to Mr. William Salter, who ſold them to Mr. Manaſſes Northwood; and whoſe Grandſon Mr. Alexander Northwood, as Philpot thinks, had the Poſſeſſion of them in his Time.

6. Salmeſton, now Sampſons, and Sampſons Grange, is a Place here, that (as appears by Thorne's Chronicle) did An. 1362, belong to the Abbey of St. Auſtin in Canterbury, where it remained till the Diſſolution; and then was in the 29th Year of King Henry the VIIIth, granted to Thomas Archbiſhop of Canterbury; and in Philpot's Time, was in Leaſe for Life held by the Lady Mary St. Leger, Widow of Sir Warham St. Leger, who had it in Exchange, when he paſſed away the Manors of Berſted and Leed's Caſtle, to Sir Thomas Colepeper of Hollingbourn. 'Tis very likely that it was a Cell or Countrey Retirement for ſome of the Monks of St. Auſtin's in Caſe of Sickneſs, &c. There being now plain Remains of a Chapel and Refectory, as appears to me.

7. Fleet, partly in this, and partly in St. Peter's Pariſh, was the Eſtate very early of a Family, which in Latin Records are called de Fleta; and lived here about the Time of King John, or Henry the IIId. Their Coat of Arms being Chequee, on a Canton a Lion Rampant. Philpot ſaith, in his Father's Memory one of this Name ended in a Daughter which married a Philpot; and another of the ſame Name ended in Two Daughters; one of which married Smith, and the other Pomflete.

Two Fairs are kept here; on June the 14*th*, and Auguſt the 24th.

In my Way from Minſter to St. John's, on the Right Hand I ſaw the Ruins of an old Building, which is called Danes Chapel; and by its Poſition and Form no doubt was a Religious Place.

IVECHURCH lies towards the South East Part of Kent, about two Miles North Weſtward from New Romney, in the Bailiwick and Lath of Shipway, and Eaſt Diviſion of the County.

That Part of it which lies on the Ree-Wall is in the Liberty of the Town and Port of New Romney; Another Part of it is in the Hundred of Aloes Bridge; and the reſt is in the Hundred of St. Martin; and in the Diviſion of Juſtices in the Lath of Shipway. But the Reſidue is in the Diviſion of Juſtices of the Corporation of Romney Marſh; The Liberty whereof claims over it. The Liberty of St. Auſtin claims alſo in this Pariſh; and that of the Dean of Canterbury over ſo much of it as is in the Manor of Ickham.

'Tis alſo in the Deanery of Limpne, and Dioceſe of Canterbury.

The Church ſtands in the Hundred of St. Martin, within the Liberty of Romney Marſh, and is dedicated to St. George; in which are or were Memorials of the Interment of the At-Capells alias Capells of an ancient Knightly Family.

Places of Note here:

1. Capells-Court, the Seat of a Family of the Name of Capell; they had a good Eſtate about Linton and Boxley, in the 37th Year of King Henry the IIId, and they had this Place, and Capells-Court in Wereborne in the 15th Year of Richard the IId: Not long after which it expired in a female Heir, who was married to Harlackenden of the Burgh of that Name in Wood-Church: And in this Family Capells-Court continued till the Beginning of King James the Iſt; and then Deborah only Daughter of Walter Harlackenden, carried it in Marriage to Sir Edward Hales of Tunſtall, in which Name it continued in Philpot's Time; being then in the Poſſeſſion of his Grandſon Sir Edward Hales of Tunſtall, Baronet.

2. Cheyne-Court is another Place here which 'tis probable did very anciently belong to the Family of Cheyneys; for Alexander de Cheyney, who was famous in the Reigns of King Henry the IIId, and King Edward the Iſt, died poſſeſs'd of Lands in this Pariſh, as appears by Kirby's Inqueſt of Kent kept in the Exchequer. But ſome how or other it came to belong to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and that pretty early; and was exchanged by Cranmer in the 29th Year of Henry the VIIIth, for other Lands with the Crown; whence not long after it was granted to Sir Thomas Cheyney, whoſe extravagant Son, Henry Lord Cheyney, ſold it to Caroll, Bird, and Alderſey, who alienated the Manor to Roberts of Glaſſenbury in Cranbrooke: But the Demeſne was ſold to Knatchbull, and was in Philpot's Time in the Poſſeſſion of that Learned Gentleman Sir Norton Knatchbull.

3. Morecourt is a third Place here, which once was the Seat of the Moors, (in Philpot's Time) Barons of Mellifont in Ireland, before they went to More-Place in Benenden, and matched with the Heir General of Sir William Brenchley, Lord Chief Juſtice of the King's-Bench in King Henry the VIth's Reign. About the latter End of King Henry the VIIth it went from hence into the Name of Taylor, where it ſtaid till King Edward the VIth's Reign, and then was divided between William and John Taylor, Gent. who joined in a Sale to Mr. Peter Godfrey; in whoſe Family it continued in Philpot's Time, being in the Poſſeſſion of Sir Thomas Godfrey of Hepington in Nether Hardreſs, Great Grandſon of that Mr. Peter Godfrey the Purchaſer.

IWADE lies at the North Side of Kent, about two Miles North Weſtward from Milton, in the Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Upper one of Juſtices in that Lath.

Part of it is in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Milton; and the Reſt in the Hundred of Tenham, and and Bailiwick of Scray. The Liberty of the Church of Canterbury claims here.

'Tis in the Deanery of Sittingbourn, and Diocese of Canterbury. The Church which is esteemed but as a Chapel, and so not valued in the King's Books, stands in the Hundred of Milton, and is dedicated to All-Saints: In it there is no Inscriptions, but Remains of good Painted Glass in the Windows; in which were the Pictures of Christ on the Cross, and of the Virgin Mary, very well done.

It lies near the Swalle, in a marshy and unhealthful Soil; and yet had one Eminent Family which resided here for many Generations, as you will find below.

The only Place of Note in this Parish is,

Colstill, which in King Henry the IIId's Reign had Possessors of its own Name; after that it came into the Name of Alefs or Alephs; and some of this Family built the old Seat here, as appeared in Philpot's Time, by an A, and the Figure of a Leafe, by way of Rebus, in Allusion to the Name of Alefe, fix'd up in many Places of the Hall, and seemed to be as old (by the Character) as the Reign of King Edward the IIId. And in this Family did this Place continue till the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth; and then Margaret, only Daughter of Thomas Aleph, carried it in Marriage to John Monins, Esq;. But it staid not long here; for either in that, or the Beginning of the next Reign, it was sold to Lewin; by a Daughter of which Name it went in Marriage to Mr. Rogers of Brianson in the West: But Mr. Rogers leaving only a Daughter Elizabeth, by her it passed in Marriage to Charles Cavendish Lord Mansfield; and he was the Possessor in Philpot's Time.

KEDBROOK, Kedbroke. This Place which is now united to Charlton, was once a distinct Parish by it self. See an Account of it under Charlton.

KEMSING, lies about the Middle of the West Side of Kent, about three Miles Northward from Sevenoke, in the Bailiwick of Sutton-Bromley, Hundred of Codsheath, Lath of Sutton-at-Hone, West Division of the County, and Lower one of Justices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Dioceſe of Rochester, but Deanery of Shoreham; and so a Peculiar of the Archbishop of Canterbury. The Church was dedicated to St. Edith, who was Daughter to King Edgar, and Prioress of Wilton.

'Tis said in the Val. Benefic. that Kemsing is the Mother Church to which Seale is but a Chapel of Ease: And there 'tis placed in the Deanery of Malling: Is a Vicarage, and with the Chapel of Seale annexed, is valued at 19 l. 13 s. 4 d.

The Liberty of Sevenoke claims here; and that of the Dutchy of Lancaster over the Manor of Kemsing.

By a Grant from King Henry IIId, Falcatius de Brent obtained a Market to be kept here on Mondays; but it hath been long disused: However, here is a Fair on Easter-Monday.

In the Church-yard stood formerly a Famous Image of St. Edith, which was much frequented by the poor ignorant People to preserve their Corn from Blasting, Mildew, &c.

The Way was to bring a Peck or two, or a Bushel of Corn which was better, and to offer it before the Image; of which the Priest took a handful and sprinkling it with Holy Water, and then saying a few Prayers over it to the Image, he gave it back to the Offerer, (reserving all the Remainder to himself): And this consecrated Handful, if mingled with never so much Corn, as they were made to believe, would preserve it from producing any Smutty, Blasted, or Mildewed Crop, when sown in the Ground.

This Piece of advantageous Superstition, as Lambard shews(a), the Romish Priests learned from their Predecessors in Idolatry the old Romans, who had a Deity (from Robigo the Canker of Corn, called Robigus) to whom they used to apply by Sacrifice on the like Occasions: And indeed the Papists are but the Apes of Gentiles.

O! Imitatores servum Pecus! ut mihi sæpè
Bilem, sæpe Jocum movere! ——

The Manor of Kemsing, once belonged to a Family of this Name, whose Coat of Arms was a Fess and Chevron interlaced; and which is now quartered by Mr. Hart of Lullingston, in Right of Peche, who married the Heir General of Kemsing. But in the Reign of King Henry the IId it was in the Possession of Falcatius de Brent, who was also Castellan of Kemsing-Castle; a Place then of Note and Strength, though now long since run to Ruin. His Son of the same Name by his wild Extravagances, incurred the Displeasure of King Henry the IIId, who seized on all his Estate as a Traytor; and in the 6th Year of his Reign granted this Part of it, with the Manor of Sawters in Sutton-at-Hone, to Baldwin de Betun, Earl of Albemarle; whose Eldest Daughter and Coheir Hawis, carried Kemsing and Sawters to her Husband William le Marshal, Earl of Pembroke; whose Son, Anselm le Marshal, Earl of Pembroke, dying without Issue, Robert Bigod, Earl of Norfolk (in Right of Maud his Mother, who was an Heiress of that Family, and Sister to Gilbert Earl of Pembroke) had the Possession of this Estate at Kemsing; and he sold it to Otho de Grandison, together with the Advowson of the Church in the 11th Year of King Edward the Ist.

But in the 43d Year of King Edward the IIId, this Manor was got into the Possession of Geoffrey de Say; and by Elizabeth, a Daughter of this Family, went to Sir William Fiennes: But in the 2d Year of King Edward the IVth, William Lord Fiennes sold it to Sir Geoffrey Boleign, Great Grandfather to that Viscount Rochfort who was beheaded in King Henry the VIIIth's Reign; and neither his Father, nor himself, leaving any Issue Male, King Henry the VIIIth seized on it in Right of Queen Anne of Boleign: And so it continued in the Crown till Queen Elizabeth granted it to her Kinsman Henry Cary Lord Hunsdown; whose Grandson, Henry Earl of Dover, sold it to Richard Earl of Dorset; and he to Mr. Henry Smith; who on his Decease settled in on St. Thomas's Hospital in Southwark, with Lands in Eleven Parishes more in Surrey.

In the 7th Year of King Edward the Ist, Roger Bigod, Duke of Norfolk and Suffolk, and Marshal of England, claimed before the Justices Itinerant, very large Privileges for this Manor: As Otho de Grandison did afterwards for the same in the 21st Year of that King. And this Otho de Grandison engaging personally in the Holy War, King Edward the Ist did that Year give him this Grant.

KENARTON, Kennardington, Kynardeton in ſeveral old Manuſcripts; lies towards the South Eaſt Side of Kent, about five Miles South Weſtward from Tenterden: Moſt Part of it is in the Hundred of Blackborne, Lath of Scray, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and lower one of Juſtices in that Lath: The Liberty of St. Auſtin claims over it.

The reſt is in the Bailiwick and Lath of Shipway, Hundred of Ham, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of the Juſtices of the Corporation of Romney Marſh, in which Liberty it lies. But the Liberty of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury claims over ſo much of this Pariſh as is within the Mannor of Appledre.

'Tis all in the Deanery of Limpne, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Church ſtands in the Hundred of Blackborne, and is dedicated to St. Mary: It was formerly a much larger Building than it is at preſent; being about 150 Years ago burnt by Lightning: But the Foundations of the old large Church ſtill are viſible. This little one which is now ſtanding, was built out of the Ruins of the Former. And to its Erection one Mr. Horne, then of this Pariſh, was a good Benefactor.

'Tis a Rectory; and valued in the King's Books at 12 l. 00 s. 11 d. per Ann.

Places of Note here:

1. Kenarton Manor did as long ſince as the Reign of King John belong to one William de Normannia; and his Grandſon Thomas de Normannia, or Normanville, died poſſeſs'd of it in the 11th Year of King Edward the Iſt: And afterwards in the 21ſt Year of that Prince the Jury preſented before the Juſtices Itinerants, that the late Thomas de Normanville held this Manor of the King in Capite, by the Service of 10 s. per Ann. towards the Guard of Dover-Caſtle; that the Manor was worth 40 Marks per Ann. and was then held by John de Lovetot, to whom the King had granted the Wardſhip of Normanville's Daughter, and the Rents of his Eſtate till ſhe came of Age, or married (a). Philpot omits all this, but ſaith, that this Thomas's only Daughter and Heir carried this Eſtate in Marriage to Sir William de Baſing, together alſo with the Manor of Cockridge. This Gentleman was one of thoſe Kentiſh Knights that attended on King Edward the Firſt, in his 28th Year, when he undertook the Conqueſt of Scotland. William de Baſing his Son (as I ſuppoſe) was poſſeſſed of this Manor, and was Sheriff of Kent in the 8th Year of King Edward the IId, and died in that Year; ſo that his Widow Margaret accounted for the Profits of the County; as appears by the Records of the Pipe-Office. His Son, Sir Thomas de Baſing, died ſeized of it in the 23d Year of King Edward the IIId; his Son John ſucceeded him, who was Knighted; but his Grandſon Thomas dying without Iſſue, the Eſtate went to his Uncle John de Baſing; but he alſo died Childleſs in the 24th Year of King Henry the VIth; and his Siſter and Heir Alice, carried it in Marriage to Mr. Thomas Mackworth. But in this Name it continued no longer than the Beginning of King Henry the VIIth, and then was ſold to Horn of Hornes-Place in this Pariſh.

(a) Plac. Coron. 21. K. 1. in M.S.

2. Hornes-Place, which had been the Seat of a Family of this Name very early; for one Ralph de Horne of Kenarton, was one of the Recognitores Magnæ Aſſiſæ in King John's Reign; and in this Name did both Kenarton and Hornes-Place continue till about the 12th Year of Queen Elizabeth, and then by Benet, a Daughter of this Family, they went in Marriage into that of Guildford; but her Husband being a Papiſt, and deſerting the Kingdom with his Wife, the Queen ſeized upon their Eſtate; and granted that Part of it here to Walter Moyle of Buckwell, Eſq; whoſe Deſcendant Mr. Robert Moyle was in Poſſeſſion in Philpot's Time. But his Son John leaving only a Daughter, ſhe carried it in Marriage to Robert Breton, Eſq;; and his Son, Moyle Breton, Eſq; is now the Proprietor.

The Place called Baſinghall in London owes its Name to the Baſings above-mentioned: Some of which Families have been Sheriffs and Lord Mayors of London before they came to ſettle at at this Place.

Dr. Plot in ſome Manuſcript Papers I have of his, ſaith he was told of ſome old Works here, which were formerly to be ſeen under the Hill: Perhaps here it was that the Danes ſtopt a while before they went to Appledore.

KENNINTON lies towards the South Eaſt Part of Kent by the River Stoure about a Mile and a half Northward from Aſhford, in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Chart and Longbridge, Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in the Lath of Shipway.

The Liberty of St. Auſtin claims over the Manor and the Parſonage of Kennington.

'Tis in the Deanery of Charing, and the Dioceſe of Canterbury. And the Church is dedicated to St. Mary. 'Tis a large Building with an handſome Tower: In the Church were Memorials of the Interments of Brent and Walkeſly very ancient; but now there is nothing remarkable in it; but the Situation of it is very fine, on the Side of a Pleaſant Common called Kennington Lees, from the Saxon Ley, which ſignifies Terra inculta, Waſte Ground. A Vicarage; and valued in the King's Books at 12 l. 01. 0*d.*

Places of Note here:

1. Kennington Manor, Philpot ſaith did always belong to the Crown: But he muſt of Neceſſity be miſtaken, for I find that in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, the Abbot of St. Auſtin's being ſummoned to ſhew by what Warrant he claimed the uſual Privileges of Manors at this and other Places; the Jury gave it for him, that he had a Right to them here as well as at other Places: And he acquainted the Court, that Kenningbrooke, as 'tis now called, or as there, Coningbroke and Kennington, were one and the ſame Villa. But undoubtedly both theſe Names of Kennington (or Kingſton), and Coning or Kenningbroke, do ſufficiently ſhew, that once this Place did belong to the Crown; as they came thither again on the Diſſolution of the Monaſteries: For after that, it remained in the Crown till the 1ſt Year of Queen Elizabeth, and then was by her granted, as was alſo the Manor of Wye, to her Kinſman Henry Cary, Lord Hunſdown; and his Grandſon Henry Earl of Dover, ſold it to Sir Thomas, Father of Heneage Finch, Earl of Winchelſea, who was the Proprietor in Philpot's Time.

2. Bibroke is a Place here, which in King James, and King Henry the IIId's Reigns was the the Eſtate of one Godwin, and ſtaid in this Name till the 32dYear of K. Edward the IIId; but then it went ſome how into the Name of Belknap: On Sir Robert Belknap's Baniſhment and Attainder in the 10th Year of King Richard the IId it came to the Crown; and three Years after was granted to William Ellys of Burton in this Pariſh, then one of the Conſervators of the Peace for this County. But in King Henry the VIth's Reign it was gotten by Purchaſe into the Poſſeſſion of Shelley; and by a Daughter of his, went in Marriage to May; and from this Name was ſold to Tilden; and thence in the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth, it paſſed the ſame Way to Beſt; and about the End of her Reign was ſold to Hall, whoſe Deſcendant Nevil Hall was in Poſſeſſion in Philpot's Time. But,

3. Burton continued in the Name of Ellys, till about the End of Queen Elizabeth, or perhaps till King James the Iſt's Time, and then was ſold to Hall: And in Philpot's Time was alſo in the Poſſeſſion of Mr. Nevil Hall, that Purchaſer's Deſcendant.

4. I was informed alſo that there was another very ancient Seat in this Pariſh, which is long ſince demoliſhed; and which they will have to have been the Reſidence formerly of ſome of the Kings of Kent; and that from thence this Pariſh had its Name. But of this I can trace out nothing in our Hiſtories.

Near this Place I ſaw a little Well, called Crooksford-Well, which they told me did ſometimes run over ſo exceſſively, as to overflow a good Part of the Common below.

KESTON, Cheſton; Keſtune, lies towards the Weſt Part of Kent, about three Miles and a half South Weſtward from St. Mary Cray, in the Bailiwick of Sutton, Hundred of Ruxley, Lath of Sutton-at-Hone, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and upper One of Juſtices in that Lath. In the Deanery of Shoreham, and ſo a Peculiar to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury; but in the Dioceſe of Rocheſter. A Rectory; and valued in the King's Books at 6 l. 10 s. 00 d. per Ann.

Places of Note here:

1. Keſton Manor. This Place as appears by Domeſday Book, did in the 20th Year of King William the Iſt belong to Gilbert de Magminot; and is there written Cheſton: The ſound of the Saxon C being often expreſs'd by the Letters Ch. And in this Name it continued till about the End of King John's Reign, and then went by a Daughter into the Family of Say of Says-Court in Deptford. But it ſtaid not long here; for in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, I find by the Records, that Richard, Son of John de Eſthalle, with John and Reginald his Brethren, claimed before the Judges Itinerant, the Privileges of a Manor here; the two latter being then under Age. How in three Years after this, Alexander de Cheyney came to dye poſſeſs'd of it, I don't know: But Philpot ſaith, ſo it appears by Rot. Eſc. N. 26. From this Name he ſaith it went by Sale to Stephen de Aſhway, who had a Charter of Freewarren for it in the 38th Year of King Edward the IIId. In the Beginning of King Henry the IVth it was ſold with,

2. Baſton, to Squerry of Squerry's-Court in Weſtram: But in the latter End of King Henry the VIth's Reign it went by Dorothy, Daughter and Coheir of Thomas Squerry, to Richard Mervin of Fountell in Wiltſhire; and he paſſed away both Keſton and Baſton to his Truſtees, Philip Reynolds and Thomas Tregarthen; and they in the 8th Year of Edward the IVth, conveyed them both to Richard and Stephen Scroope; from whom (ſaith Philpot) about the latter End of that Reign they went to Henry Heydon, Eſq; who, as appears by the Rolls, held a Court here, in the 1ſt Year of King Richard the IIId, and in this Family it continued till about the End of Queen Elizabeth's Reign; when Sir Chriſtopher Heydon ſold all his Intereſt in both theſe Places to Sir Samuel Lennard; and his Grandſon of the ſame Name, Baronet, is the preſent Poſſeſſor.

3. Keſton-Camp. I went to ſee the famous Camp in this Pariſh, mentioned by Dr. Holland in his Notes on Camden, p. 187. and by Philpot, &c. It is indeed a very large and ſtrong Place, with a triple Vallum round it, and the Banks very ſtrong and high. I meaſured one Side of the innermoſt Vallum, and found it above 700 Yards in length from the Brow of the Hill to the Eaſt End, juſt beyond Mr. Perch's Houſe. The North Weſt is very much longer; but was ſo over-grown with Buſhes, Brambles, &c. that I could by no means come to meaſure it; having indeed much ado to walk along it, but with Difficulty I did; and found all the North Eaſt Side to be without any Vallum at all; the Steepneſs of the Hill there pretty well ſupplying the Want of a Line. But the Depth of the other Trenches, and Height of the Banks, eſpecially on the South and South Weſt Sides were very eminent. It hath a very large Proſpect from it every Way; ſo that an Enemy could make no Motions hereabouts, but they would be diſcovered from this Camp; and that to a ſufficient Diſtance. I believe it is near two Miles in Compaſs; and muſt have been the Work of ſo much Time, and ſo many Hands, that I agree entirely with the Editor of the laſt Edition of Camden's Britannia, that it could not be formed in Julius Cæſar's Time; not even in his ſecond Expedition hither; and much leſs in his Firſt. But however, I am fully perſuaded it is Roman; not only from its Form, but alſo from the Roman Bricks, Tiles, and other ancient Remains which have been turned up hereabouts by the Plow. And I am informed that about the Windmill, the Ruins of Houſes, or ſome other ancient Buildings, have been diſcovered. Out of this Camp is the Remains of a plain Way made down to the Spring-head of the River Ravensbourn; from whence the Soldiers were, as they might very well be, ſupplied with Water.

It is a Matter of too much Difficulty for me to undertake, to aſſign the Time when this famous Entrenchment was made, and on what Occaſion. I once was inclined to think this might have been the Place where Aulus Plautius lay with his Army encamp'd, while he expected the Emperor Claudius to come to him: I know no Place that will bid fairer for it: But becauſe 'tis ſaid that the Emperor went directly to his Forces, which expected him at the Thames; I dare not adhere to that Notion, having not Data enough to aſſert it.

Perhaps it was formed much later, after the Romans had left Landing at Sandwich, and at Dover; and had brought the Portus Lemanis into Uſe; And as they made Royal or Conſular Ways, from thoſe Two Ports, which met at Canterbury; as well as from Canterbury to the Portus Lemanis; So 'tis very natural to ſuppoſe that they made at laſt a new One from the Portus Lemanis to London; (of which more in another Place). Such a Roman Way as that, would run very near this Camp; and therefore 'tis not improbable that after they had made ſuch a Way whereon to march and remarch their Soldiery between their Landing Port and London, they might pitch on this Place as one by its Situation and Diſtance from London, very proper for a Camp; and one where their Troops might lie in Safety, till Occaſion ſhould call them to any particular Attempt on the Britons, or Defence of themſelves.

And

And I hope to ſhew in its proper Place, that the tracing out ſuch a new and undeſcribed Roman Way as this, may ſerve to rectify ſome Miſtakes in Camden; and ſuch others as had rather Errare cum Magiſtro, than purſue Truth contrary to the Dictates of Great Men.

I don't think there is any Probability in their Conjecture, who make the Name of this Town to be derived from Cæſar: But as in Domeſday 'tis written Cheſton, ſo no doubt it was called Cheſton or Keſton, quaſi Cheſterton; i. e. the Town where the Camp, Caſtle, or Fortification was; i. e. from this very Camp.

But becauſe I can trace the Roman Watling-ſtreet Way directly through Rocheſter to Canterbury, I can't allow this to be the Noviomagus of Antonine; or the Neomagus of Ptolomy, as the Right Reverend Author of the Additions to Camden's Britannia ſeems willing to believe.

KINGSDOWN near Sittingbourn, lies towards the Middle of the North Side of Kent, about Three Miles and a half South Eaſtward from Milton, in the Bailiwick and Hundred of that Name, Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and upper one of Juſtices in that Lath.

'Tis in the Deanery of Sittingbourn, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Pariſh is a Rectory; and valued in the King's Books at 5 l. 9. s. 2 d. The Church is Dedicated to St. Catherine, which was founded by Roger of Chicheſter, who was Abbot of St. Auſtin's in the Year 1252.

This Place was given by Hubert de Burgh to the Maiſon Dieu at Dover, which he had newly erected there as a Houſe of Convenience for the Knights Templers, when they viſited their Manors and Eſtates at Temple Ewell, and other adjacent Parts. And I find in the 21ſt Year of Edward the Iſt, that the Maſter of the Maiſon Dieu at Dover claimed before the Juſtices Itinerant, then ſitting at Canterbury, to have Freewarren, &c. at this Manor. Upon the Aboliſhment of the Order of Knights Templers here, which was in the 17th Year of King Edward the IId, this Manor was united to the Revenue of the Knights Hoſpitallers; and there continued till the general Diſſolution of the Religious Houſes in King Henry the VIIIth's Reign; but then was granted by that Prince to Sir Thomas Cheyney; who in the 1ſt Year of Queen Elizabeth ſold it to Mr. Thomas Finch; and his Deſcendant, Mr. Thomas Finch was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

KINGSDOWN by Wrotham, lies towards the Middle of the North Side of Kent, about Three Miles North Eaſtward from Wrotham, in the Bailiwick of Sutton Dartford, Hundred of Axtone, Lath of Sutton-at-Hone, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and upper one of Juſtices in that Lath. In the Deanery and Dioceſe of Rocheſter. The Church is dedicated to St. Edmund the King; and as Kilburn ſaith, was anciently a Chapel, and given by King Henry the Iſt to the Church of Rocheſter. As indeed appears by Textus Roffenſis, where 'tis called a Chapel. But 'tis now accounted a Rectory; and valued in the King's Books at 6 l. 0 s. 0 d.

Places of Note here:

1. Northcourt, and 2. Southcourt, are Two Manors here, which together, make up the Manor of Kingſdown, and which anciently were part of the Eſtate of the Fitzbernards, who flouriſhed here under the Title of Barons, and had theſe by Grant from King Henry the Iſt; and with them the Privileges of Toll and Theam, Sac and Soc, Infang-theof and Outfang-theof, Tumbril and Pillory, and Aſſize of Bread and Bear, &c. And all theſe were allowed to Ralph Fitzbernard by the Juſtices Itinerant, in the 7th Year of King Edward the Iſt. His Father John Fitzbernard was rated for his Manor of Kingſdown, after the Value of a whole Knights Fee, as appears by Teſta de Nevil, in the 20th Year of King Henry the IIId, at the Marriage of Iſabel that King's Siſter. Another John Fitzbernard dying without Iſſue in the 36th Year of King Edward the IIId, the Four Daughters of Bartholomew Lord Badleſmere, who were married to Roſſe, Vere, Mortimer, and Tiptoft, entred on the Poſſeſſion of all the Eſtate, as Heirs to their Mother, who was Siſter and Heir to John Fitzbernard. And on the Partition, this Eſtate fell to William Roſſe of Hemlake, in Right of his Wife Margaret, who was alſo Coheir to her Two Brothers Bartholomew and Giles, Lords Badleſmere, and who both died without Iſſue. John Roſſe, this Man's Son, died poſſeſs'd of it in the 17th Year of King Richard the IId: But his Grandſon Thomas Lord Roſſe being attainted and beheaded at Newcaſtle in the 4th Year of King Edward the IVth, for endeavouring at the Regal Promotion of the Houſe of Lancaſter, it was forfeited to the Crown; and in the 18th Year of King Edward the IVth, that Prince gave it for Life to Margaret, Wife of Roger Lord Wentworth, the Widow of the Lord Roſſe above named: But after her Death returning to the Crown again, it ſtaid there till King Henry the VIIIth granted it to John Wilkinſon; from which Name towards the End of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, it was ſold to Richard Lovelace; who dying without Iſſue-Male, his only Daughter Margaret, married to Henry Cook of Lanham in Suffolk Eſq; carried Kingſdown Manor into that Family, who were in Poſſeſſion of it in Philpot's Time.

2. Hever is another Manor in Kingſdown, which anciently belonged to the Hevers of Hever-Caſtle in this County. William de Hever had a Charter of Freewarren for his Lands here in the 9th Year of King Edward the Iſt, which was renewed to Thomas de Hever, in the 4th Year of King Edward the IIId. But he enjoyed it not long; and dying without Iſſue, this Eſtate went by Joan, his Siſter and Coheir, to her Husband Reginald Lord Cobham, who in her Right died poſſeſs'd of it in the 35th Year of King Edward the IIId; but before the End of King Richard the IId, this Family was extinct here, and then Hever went into the Poſſeſſion of the Urbans: And John Urban held it at his Death, in the 8th Year of King Henry the Vth, and left it to his Siſter and Heir, Emma Penhale, who enjoyed it at her Deceaſe, in the 5th Year of King Henry the VIth. But after this, it came into the Poſſeſſion of the Lovelaces: Richard Lovelace bequeathing by his Will, made A. D. 1465, this Manor to his Daughter Catherine; and in caſe of her dying without Iſſue (which ſhe did) to John Lovelace his Son; from whence it deſcended to Richard Lovelace above-mentioned in Northcourt, and Southcourt, and by his only Daughter Margaret it went to Henry Cook of Lanham in Suffolk, Eſq; in whoſe Name it was in Philpot's Time.

3. Chipſted is a third Manor here, which certainly did once belong to a Family of the ſame Name. For it appears by Rot. Eſc. N. 16. that Adam de Chipſted died poſſeſſed of it, in the 41ſt Year of King Edward the IIId; after this Family went off here, it went into that of Mowbray, who continued in Poſſeſſion of it from the End of King Richard the IId, till the Beginning of King Henry the VIth, when it was ſold to Thomas Martin, Juſtice of the Common Pleas; whoſe Son John Martin in the 33d Year of King Henry the VIth, alienated it to Thomas Underdown of Dertford; who not long after gave it to Richard Thetcher of Warbleton in Suſſex: And he in the 19th Year of King Edward the IVth, ſold it to William Atwood; whoſe Son Robert in the 14th Year of King Henry the VIIIth, demiſed one Moiety of it to Nicholas Taylor; and in the 22d Year of King Henry the VIIIth, he ſold the other Half to Sibil of Littlemoat in Eynsford. And in the 1ſt Year of Queen Mary, both Taylor and Atwood ſold their Part of it to Sir John Champneys; whoſe Son Juſtinian, not long after, alienated it to Lovelace; and by Margaret, his Heir General, this Part went to Mr. Cook of Suffolk, above-mentioned. The other Part, by Anne ſole Heir of Lancelot Sibil, came into the Poſſeſſion of Mr. John Hope; but from that Name it paſſed by Sale to Mr. Hodſoll, of Hodſoll in Aſh, the next Pariſh, who was poſſeſs'd of it in Philpot's Time.

4. Woodland is another Manor here, where anciently was a Chapel of Eaſe to Kingsdown; and continued ſo till A. D. 1557. and then was by Cardinal Pool, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, united to Wrotham. But the Manor continued ſtill in this Pariſh. It formerly belonged to the Ancient Family of the Crevequers; Baron Hamon de Crevequer dying poſſeſs'd of it in the 47th Year of King Henry the IIId. But about the 9th Year of King Edward the IIId, it was gone out of that Name, being then in the Poſſeſſion of John Son of John St. Clere: In this Family it ſtaid till about the latter End of King Henry the VIIth, and then was ſold to Pett of Petthouſe in Sevenoke. But John Pett his Succeſſor, in the 17th Year of Queen Elizabeth ſold it to William Rowe of London; by whoſe Daughter and Heir it went to —— Fenny of Norfolk, who was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

KINGSNOTH, or Kingſnode, lies towards the Middle of Kent, or rather a little to the South Eaſt Part, about a Mile and a half Southward from Aſhford, in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Chart and Longbridge, Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in the Lath of Shipway. 'Tis in the Deanery of Limpne, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. And the Church is dedicated to St. Michael. A Rectory; and valued in the King's Books at 11 l. 9 s. 10 d.

The Liberty of Wye claims over it.

Places of Note here:

1. Kingſnoth Manor. This Place anciently belonged to a Family of this Name, whoſe Arms were Erm. on a Bend 5 Chevrons: And John de Kingſnoth flouriſhed here in King Edward the Iſt's Reign. But Bartholomew Lord Badleſmere, who was attainted in the 17th Year of King Edward the IId, had ſome Eſtate here; which by King Richard the IId was granted to Sir Robert Belknap the Judge; and who had before purchaſed Kingſnoth's Portion: But on his Attainder and Exile, the Crown ſeized it all; and there it remained till King Henry the VIth in his 27th Year granted ſome Part of it to Sir Thomas Brown of Beckworth in Surrey, with a Charter to encloſe a Park, and Liberty of a Freewarren: And a Fair was granted to the Pariſh to be held on Michaelmas Day. But the principal Part of it was granted to Cardinal Kemp, who in the 28th Year of King Henry the VIth, ſettled it on the College of Wye. I find by the Tower Records that this Manor was claimed by the Abbot of Battell in the 21ſt of Year of King Edward the Iſt; ſo that how it came into private Hands I can't tell; nor whether Philpot mean the Manor of Kingſnoth, or ſome other Land in that Pariſh. But on the Suppreſſion in King Henry the VIIIth it was granted to Thomas Lord Cromwell; and on his Attainder in the 32d Year of that Prince, coming again to the Crown, one half of it was in the 35th Year of King Henry the VIIIth, granted to Sir John Baker, whoſe Succeſſor Sir John Baker of Siſinghurſt, ſold it in King Charles the Iſt's Reign to Mr. Nathanael Powell of Ewhurſt in Suſſex. The other Moiety continued in the Crown till the 1ſt Year of Queen Elizabeth, and then was granted by that Princeſs to her Kinſman Mr. Henry Cary, after Baron Hunſdown; whoſe Deſcendant Henry Cary, Earl of Dover, conveyed it to Sir Thomas Finch, afterwards made Earl of Winchelſea; in which Family it continued in Philpot's Time.

2. Munſidde in this Pariſh, was anciently the Seat of the Le Clere's; but about the End of King Edward the IIId, Henry le Clere left only a Daughter Suſan, who carried this Manor in Marriage to Sir Simon Woodchurch; and he on this Account wrote himſelf Clere alias Woodchurch; and in this Family it continued till about the End of Queen Elizabeth, and then it was ſold to Taylor of Shadoxherſt; and from thence in King Charles the Iſt's Time, it went the ſame Way to Whitwick.

3. Weſt-Halks is a Place here which anciently belonged to a Family of the Name of Halks (whoſe Arms was 3 Hawks or Falcons on a Feſs.) Sampſon de Halk died poſſeſs'd of this, and much other Land hereabouts in A. D. 1360; But about the latter End of King Henry the VIth, the Property of this Place was from that Family paſſed to Taylor of Great Chart; in which Name it continued till the End of King Henry the VIIth, and then was ſold to Clere; and from that Family about the End of Queen Elizabeth's Reign it went the ſame Way to Robert Honeywood of Charing, Eſq; in whoſe Family it continued in Philpot's Time; being in the Poſſeſſion of Colonel Honeywood, Fourth Son by a Second Wife to Robert Honeywood above-named.

KINGSTON lies towards the Middle of the Eaſt Part of Kent by the Stoure, about Three Miles and a half North Eaſt from Elcham, in the Bailiwick of Bridge and Petham, Hundred of Kinghamford, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery of Bridge, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. And the Church is called St. Giles. In which are Memorials of John Netherſol of Netherſol in the Year 1627; of Robert Denne in 1594; of Turner and Taverner.

'Tis a Rectory; and rated in the King's Books at 16 l. 0 s. 0 d.

Places of Note here:

1. Kingſton Manor. This Place was one of thoſe Knights Fees which was aſſigned to Fulbert de Dover, for his Aſſiſtance to John de Fiennes in the Guard of Dover-Caſtle. William de Dover was a Witneſs to the Charter of Maud the Empreſs, when ſhe created Miles of Glouceſter, Earl of Hereford: From him it went to Richard de Dover, who was baſe Son to King John; and who took that Name becauſe he had married Roſe de Dover, Heir General of that Family. He dying in the Beginning of King Henry the IIId, left it to Iſabel his Co-heir, who was married to David de Strabolgy Earl of Athol; whoſe Son, John Earl of Athol, was hanged on a Gibbet 50 Foot high, at London, ſaith Daniel, but rather at Canterbury, as it is in an Old Manuſcript in the Hands of Sir Dudley Digs, which Philpot ſaw.

And now the Manor being forfeited to the Crown, was in the 5th Year of King Edward the IId, granted to Bartholomew Lord Badleſmere; who unluckily forfeiting it again to the Crown, that Prince granted it for Life to David de Strabolgy, Earl of Athol: And after his Death (which was in the 1ſt Year of King Edward the IIId) it was granted again to Bartholomew Badleſmere; who dying Childleſs, left it to his Brother Giles; and he dying alſo without Iſſue, it was divided between his Two Siſters, Margaret, who married William Lord Roſſe of Hemlake; and Margery, who was wedded to John Tiptoft: But before the End of King Edward the IIId, the entire Poſſeſſion was ſurrendred to Roſſe; but his Succeſſor Thomas Lord Roſſe, being attainted in the 4th Year of King Edward the IVth, it came to the Crown; and was granted by the ſaid King to Roger Lord Wentworth; from whom it deſcended to Richard Lord Wentworth, who in the 21ſt Year of King Henry the VIIIth, ſold it to Thomas Colepeper, Eſq: And from thence, in the 24th Year of that King, it was ſold to Sir Anthony Aucher; whoſe Succeſſor Sir Anthony Aucher of Bourn, Bar. alienated it to Mr. Gibbons of Weſtcliff; in which Name it continued in Philpot's Time.

From him it went by Sale to Dr. Primroſe of London; and thence the ſame Way to Dr. John Peters, Phyſician in Canterbury; whoſe Widow —— is the preſent Poſſeſſor.

2. Ilden is a Place here which very anciently belonged to the Garwingtons of Bekesbourn: And Thomas de Garwington was poſſeſſed of it in the 2d Year of King John, after a long Diſpute between him and Theobald de Twitham; which was ended by making 14 Recognitores Magnæ Aſſiſæ for that Purpoſe, and whoſe Names you have in Philpot, p. 206. as follows: Henry de Cobham, Geoffrey de Say, Hugh de St. Leger, Ralph de St. Leger, Giles de Badeleſmere, Fulk de Peyforer, Robert de Malewill, Alexander de Roſſe, Robert de Gatton, Robert de Campania, Richard de Bere, Henry de Sorne, Henry de Enbroke, Alured de Corton; who on a thorough Hearing gave it for Garwington. At length by Joan a Daughter of Thomas Garwington, in the 11th Year of King Henry the IVth, it went to Richard Haut; and by his Grand-Daughter Margery it went the ſame Way to Iſaack; but tarried there no longer than the Beginning of King Henry the VIIth; and then was ſold to Diggs of Diggs-Court in Berham, where it ſtaid till King Charles the Iſt's Reign, and then went by Sale to Wilford: And in Philpot's Time was Part of the Dower of Sir Thomas Wilford's Widow; and from her it deſcended to her Son Sir James Wilford, who with Concurrence of Truſtees ſold it to Sir Robert Faunce: And he afterwards transferred it by Sale to John Caſon, Eſq; who after a Poſſeſſion of 12 Years, parted with it the ſame Way to Thomas Turner, Eſq; the preſent Poſſeſſor.

N. B. This Eſtate was particularly diſgavelled by the Act of Parliament of of King Henry the VIIIth.

The Situation is very fine, and the Proſpect exceeding pleaſant for 20 Miles in Length towards the Sea: For, from thence you may ſee the Sea at Ramſgate; and again off of Swaycliffe and Reculver, and at the Entrance into the Eaſt Swale, by the Eaſt End of the Iſle of Sheppey.

3. Parmeſted was of old the Eſtate of a Family of that Name; but before the End of King Edward the IId, it was got into the Poſſeſſion of Garwington above-mentioned; and went along with Ilden to Haut, and thence to Iſaack; but about the Beginning of King Henry the VIIIth, it was ſold to Edward Knevet of Newington Bellhouſe, Eſq; whoſe Daughters by joint Conſent ſold it to Thomas Lord Cromwell; and he in the 29th Year of King Henry the VIIIth, paſſed it the ſame Way to Chriſtopher Hales, Eſq; who was firſt Attorney-General, and then Maſter of the Rolls to that Prince. His Son Sir James Hales ſold it to Thomas Alphew alias Alphy, Yeoman; and he to Wiliam Downe of Maidſtone, Draper; and he to Dr. Vincent Denne, Grandfather to Vincent Denne of Grays-Inn, Eſq; the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time: But by a Daughter of that Mr. Serjeant Denne, it went by Deſcent to Beke of Denhill.

4. Denhill was a Seat here, which anciently belonged to the Family of Denne: One of which Name was Butler or Sewer to King Edward the Confeſſor. Sir Alured de Denne was famous in King Henry the IIId's Reign, for aſſiſting the Judge Henry de Bath in making the Laws about Romney Marſh; and ſealed with 3 Leopards Heads couped, the preſent Arms of this Family. And which is very Remarkable, there hath been no Gap in the Succeſſion of this Family between Ralph de Denne, who had this Eſtate in the 20th Year of King William the Iſt, and Thomas Denne, Eſq; whoſe youngeſt Daughter Mary, marrying Vincent Denne of Grays-Inn, Eſq; kept this Place in the ſame Name in Philpot's Time. But on his Death it went at laſt by his Daughter Anne in Marriage to Beke; and her Husband being dead, ſhe is the preſent Poſſeſſor.

KNOWLTON, Cnolleton, i. e. The Town on the Top of the Hill; lies towards the Eaſt End of Kent, about three Miles South Weſtward from Sandwich, in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Eaſtry, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. The Liberty of St. Auſtin claims here. 'Tis in the Deanery of Sandwich, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. A Rectory, ſaith the late Biſhop of Chicheſter's Map of Canterbury Dioceſe; but the Valor Beneficiorum puts it down as a Vicarage; and 'tis there rated at 6*l.* 5*s.* 2*d.*

Kilburn ſaith, that the Church (which is ſmall, but in good Repair) is ſuppoſed to have been Founded, or at leaſt Re-edified, by one of the Langleys, an Ancient Family here; whoſe Arms were in Wever's Time, and are ſtill, over the Door, on the Font, and in the Windows of this Church. There were alſo then very ancient Memorials of the Interment of the Ringleys; one of whom was Kneeling in compleat Armour, with his Arms fix'd on the Monument in Wever's Time, but now gone. There are now ſeveral Monuments of the Family of Peyton: and an Altar Tomb over the famous Sir John Narborough; and a very fine Marble Monument of his Two Sons, who were unhappily drowned in the ſame Ship with that Valiant and Faithful Admiral Sir Cloudleſley Shovell, who had married Sir John Narborough's Relict.

Places of Note here:

1. Knowlton Manor was once Part of the Eſtate of the great Family of St. Leger: For Hugh de St. Leger held this Place in the 4th Year of King John; and was then one of the Recognitores Magnæ Aſſiſæ for this County. His Son John de St. Leger in the 12th Year of King Henry the IIId exchanged it for other Lands, with Reginald de Cornhill; and he Thirteen Years after ſold it to the Priory of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury; and they (probably not long after) exchanged it with Ralph Perot: For in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, I find him claiming the Liberty of Freewarren for his Lands in Knowlton: So that the Thomas Perot mentioned by Philpot, was probably the Son or Grandſon of this Ralph Perot. By a Daughter of this Gentleman it went in Marriage to Langley, deſcended from an eminent Family of that Name in Warwickſhire: And ſeveral of this Name who were Poſſeſſors of this Manor and Seat, were very Eminent Men; as William, Son of William de Langley, who was Sheriff of this County in the 21ſt, 23d, 24th, and 25th Years of King Edward the IIId; another William Langley of Knowlton held the ſame Office in the 4th Year of King Henry the 5th, and was alſo Juſtice of the Peace for this County. John Langley was Sheriff of Kent in the 20th Year of King Henry the VIIth; and his Son Edward

Langley, Eſq; married Elizabeth, Daughter of Thomas Peyton, Eſq; of Peyton-Hall in Cambridgeſhire; but he dying without Iſſue about the End of King Henry the VIIIth's Reign, his Wife's Brother, Sir Robert Peyton, on the Account of a former Match in King Henry the Vth's Time between Peyton and a Daughter of the Langley Family, was found to be Heir at Law; and he aſſigned this Place to his Second Son Sir John Peyton; who was the Grandfather of that Sir Thomas Peyton, that was made the firſt Baronet in this County. And he parted with it by Sale to Sir John Narborough, one of the Admirals of the Navy Royal and Commander in Chief for ſeveral Years in the Straits. But his Son, Sir John Narborough, Baronet, with his Brother James, being both loſt at Sea, with their Father-in-Law Sir Cloudleſly Shovel, this Eſtate went to their only Siſter Elizabeth, the preſent Wife of the Worthy Sir Thomas D'aeth, Bar. who now reſides here, and is handſomely rebuilding the Ancient Seat of Knowlton; which indeed is finely and moſt heathfully ſituated, with all the Advantages of good Ground round it for Sports and Riding; and with a very fine Grove of Trees behind it.

LABORNE, Leibourn, Leybourn (i. e. the Paſture Land by the River or Brook,) lies about the Middle of the Weſt Part of Kent, by the River Medway, about a Mile Northward from Weſt-Malling, in the Bailiwick of Hoo, Hundred of Larkfield, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and South one of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery of Malling, and Dioceſe of Rocheſter. And the Church is dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul. It is ſmall, and hath nothing now remarkable in it. The Pariſh is a Rectory; and valued in the King's Books at 17 l. 13 s. 4 d. And it ought anciently to have contributed towards the Repair of the Fifth Arch or Peer of Rocheſter Bridge.

1. Labourne-Caſtle. Of which ſee an Account in the Chapter of Caſtles.

2. The Grange in this Pariſh, is a Houſe which for many Deſcents hath been in the Name of Oliver; whoſe Original Sirname was Quintin: For they are deſcended from Anſelinus or Anſelmus de Quintin, who paid Aid for his Manor of Woodfield in Yalding, at making the Black Prince Knight. And thus came the Name to be changed into Oliver: One William, the Son of Oliver Quintin, in the 11th Year of King Henry the VIth, purchaſed Lands called Hilks, in the Pariſh of Seale: And in that Deed was often ſtiled William the Son of Oliver, without the Addition of Quintin; and from hence the common People would and did call him Oliver; and his Deſcendants wrote themſelves Oliver alias Quintin.

Juliana the laſt of the Name of Oliver here, was married to Edward Covert of Suſſex; and her only Daughter by him being married to Mr. Henry Saxby, carried the Grange into that Family: Which pleaſant Seat is now in the Poſſeſſion of Captain William Saxby his Son.

There is a ſmall Rivulet here, which as it runs near the Mill makes a very pretty Caſcade; which at firſt Sight one would really judge to have been Artificial.

LAMBERHURST, Philpot ſaith it was ſometime written Lambertſhurſt, from Lambert a Saxon, who was formerly Owner of it; but the ancient Spelling of it in the Textus Roſenſis is Lamberherſte, in which there is no Regard to the Name of Lambert: And perhaps its Name there and at preſent may be a Corruption from Lamburſt; that is, a Wood in the Clay, or in a Loamy-Soil, which agrees very well with the Situation and Nature of the Place. And I can't find it called Lambertſhurſt any where but in Philpot. And to confirm this Conjecture about the Derivation of its Name, I find it written Lambherſt often in King Edward the Iſt's Reign; which allowing for the uſual Interſertion of the b in ſuch Pronunciations by the Vulgar, will make the very Word Lam-herſt.

This Place lies at the South Side of Kent, adjoining to Suſſex; from which it is parted by a little Rivulet, which hereabouts joining with the Tey or Theyſe coming down from Tiſeherſt in Suſſex, runs by Gafford-Bridge into the Twiſt, and ſo into the Medway. A conſiderable Part of Lamberherſt is in Suſſex; viz. All of it that lies from Lamberherſt Bridge to Beale Bridge.

That Part of it which is in Kent is in the Bailiwick of Twiford, Hundred of Brenchley and Horſmonden, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and South one of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery of Malling, and Dioceſe of Rocheſter; a Vicarage, and rated in the King's Books at 12 l. 10 s. 9 d. per Ann. The Church is dedicated to St. Mary; in which are Memorials of the Interment of Bathurſt and Thomas: And in the Church Porch lies buried one Lindrige, who was born A. D. 1566, and lived in a Houſe adjacent. He built the handſome and moſt uſeful Stone Cauſey here; which from him was formerly called Lindrige's Cauſey.

Lamberhurſt lies about Two Miles and a half, or Three Miles South Weſtward from Goudherſt.

A Fair is kept here annually on Lady-Day. The Place of it is Part of the Land which formerly belonged to the Neighbouring Abbey of Begham or Bayham; which Land in the Main is in the Poſſeſſion of Mr. Juſtice Pratt, by Purchaſe from Ambroſe Brown, Eſq; of Surrey. But the particular Field on which the Fair is kept, and the Benefit of the ſaid Fair, is now in the Poſſeſſion of Mr. Francis Butler, Sen. Prothonotary of the Exchequer Office: Whoſe only Daughter is the Wife of my very good Friend William Dewe, Eſq; Juſtice of the Peace for this County, who reſides at the Parſonage of Lamberhurſt, and hath much improved the Houſe and Gardens; and to whom I have been much obliged for his Company in my Travels about Kent.

There is an eminent Furnace for ſmelting of Iron Ore in this Pariſh, of which I ſhall give a full and particular Account in its proper Place; as alſo of the ſeveral Kinds of Iron Ore found in this County.

Places of Note here.

1. The Abbey of Beyham or Begham; which lies partly in this County, and partly in Suſſex; of which you will find a full Account in the Chapter of Religious Houſes, &c.

2. Hodleigh. This was Part of the Eſtate which formerly belonged to the College of Lingfield in Surrey. And after the general Diſſolution of the Monaſteries, was by King Henry the VIIIth granted to Thomas Cardan, from which Name it went by Purchaſe to Edward Filmer, Eſq; Anceſtor of Sir Edward, Eldeſt Son of the then lately deceaſed Sir Robert Filmer; in whoſe Poſſeſſion this Place was in Philpot's Time.

3. Scotney, which Philpot ſaith took its Name from the low Situation and ſhooting down of the Water upon it; as if it were derived from the Saxon, Scotian, to ſhoot or ſend forth, and ea Water. But for all that, it hath been a Houſe of Note and Antiquity; and is now a handſome Seat, moated, walled, and embattled round, with Stone Macheocollated Towers to defend the Gate. It had very early, Proprietors of its own Name: And in the Year 1259, was in the Poſſeſſion of Walter de Scotney: But indeed the Character of this Owner of Scotney is very infamous, if what Philpot ſaith be true; viz. That he poyſoned Richard Clare, the Earl of Glouceſter, and his Brother; of which the Latter died, and the former narrowly eſcaped. But Mat. Paris ſaith this Fact was laid to the Charge of the Poictovines, the great Favourites of King Henry the IIId at this Time; and who being Strangers were univerſally hated; and that the Poiſon was ſuppoſed to be prepared in the Houſe of one Elias, a baptized Jew. Daniel ſaith, The Man that gave the Poiſon to the Duke was one Walter Scoyney, his Steward, and that he was executed for it. Whether he were the Perſon that Philpot charges with this vile Act, I muſt leave undetermined. But he goes on and ſaith, that after this Family of Scotney had mouldred away at this Place, it came into the Poſſeſſion of the Aſhburnhams of Aſhburnham in Suſſex: Roger Aſhburnham, who was one of the Conſervators of the Peace for Suſſex in the 1ſt Year of King Richard the IId, reſided here, and perhaps embattled and fortified this Place. But his Deſcendant ſold it to Henry Chichley, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, who ſettled it on his Niece Florence Chichley, on her Marriage with John Darrell of Colehill, Eſq; and he gave it to his Second Son, whoſe Deſcendants have ever ſince enjoyed it, and are now in Poſſeſſion of this Place.

4. The Seat of the Chitcrofts, a Family, ſaith Philpot, of eminent Degree and Worth, was formerly in this Pariſh; whoſe Arms he ſaith were preciſely the ſame with thoſe of the Colepepers of Bay-hall in Pembury Pariſh, adjoining to Lamberhurſt. And on this Occaſion, it being in the Way of his Profeſſion, he gives many Inſtances of the Coat-Armour of Two Families, being the very ſame; as of St. Nicholas, a Family formerly in the Iſle of Thanet, and Peckham in Weſt Kent, becauſe they held Land of the Lord Say, ſaith he, and ſo made both their Arms like his. Heraldry being not my Profeſſion, I ſhall not undetake to contradict him in this; but in 8 or 10 ſeveral Books of Arms of the Gentlemen of Kent, and of ſeveral Dates, I can find no ſuch Thing; but the Arms of St. Nicholas and Peckham are as different as 'tis almoſt poſſible for any two Coats to be. But he goes on and ſaith, Tutſham of Tutſham-Hall in Weſt Farleigh, and Eaſton Grave of Eaſton Grave in Edenbridge, bear alſo both alike: As do likewiſe Brenley of Brenley in Boughton under Blean, and Ratling of Ratling in Nonnington; and the ſame is the Caſe of Peyforer of Northcourt in Eſeling, and Lenham of Lenham; and the ſame Arms he ſaith alſo were born by Watringbury of Watringbury, as by the Savages of Bobbing Court. The Reaſon of which he ſaith was to preſerve the Memory of thoſe who though of different Families, had yet given them Education, or Lands; or to acknowledge their holding Lands, or paying Rent, Service, or Homage to ſome Principal Manor, of which they whoſe Coat Armour they aſſumed, were the Proprietors: Thus Philpot. But Mr. Camden in his Remains ſpeaking of the ſame Thing of Families in this very County (as of Hardreſs, &c.) if I remember right, ſaith, there was always ſome Difference in the Imitator's Coat to diſtinguiſh it from the Original.

Philpot ſaith nothing at all of,

5. Lamberhurſt Manor properly ſo called; and yet that there was ſuch a Manor, and ſo named too, is plain from the Records in the 21ſt Year of the Reign of King Edward the Iſt, where I find that Nicholas Kevy held ¼ of a Knight's Fee in Lamberhurſt, of the Anceſtors of Robert de Crevequer, who held the ſame of the King in Capite: And that this Land was then in the Poſſeſſion of the Abbot of Roberts-Bridge, who claimed View of Frank-Pledge, &c. and other Privileges of a Manor as belonging to it. Againſt this Claim of the Abbot the King brought a Writ of Right, claiming the Manor as belonging to the Crown. The Abbot appeared to defend his Title, and produced a Charter of this very King Edward the Iſt, whereby it was found that his Predeceſſors had held this Manor of Lamberhurſt with its Appurtenances, from the Crown as Part of the Barony of Leeds, which Robert de Crevequer had given to the Crown; and that before this, the Abbey had held this Manor of the ſaid Robert and his Anceſtors in puram & perpetuam Elemoſynam; and without paying any Homage for it, &c. And that after this Manor was come to the Crown, the ſaid King had remitted to the Abbot all Homage, &c. for him and his Succeſſors for ever. And therefore the Abbots Claim was allowed as good before I. de Berewyke, and the other Juſtices Itinerants at that Time.

But what became of this Manor afterwards; or whether it were granted away from the Crown upon the general Diſſolution, to any particular Perſons, I am not able to determine. But wonder it ſhould totally eſcape Philpot's Enquiry.

EAST-LANGDON, lies towards the Eaſt End of Kent, about three Miles North Eaſtward from Dover, in the Bailiwick of Eaſtry, Hundred of Cornilo, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath.

It is in the Deanery of Sandwich, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. And the Church is dedicated to St. Auſtin.

The Liberty of St. Auſtin claims over the Manor of Eaſt Langdon.

In the Church are Memorials of Marſh, Paramour, Culmer, and Maſters. A Rectory; and rated in the Kings Books at 7*l.* 0*s.* 0*d. per Ann.*

Places of Note here:

1. Eaſt-Langdon Manor. This Place anciently belonged to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury. But A. D. 824, Wilfred Archbiſhop of Canterbury exchanged this Manor and Eytborn with the Monks of Chriſt-Church, for the Manor of Berham. And in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, the Priory of Canterbury claimed all Privileges of a Manor here, and was allowed them.

On the Suppreſſion of all the Religious Houſes in King Henry the VIIIth's Time, this Place was granted by that Prince in his 30th Year to Mr. John and Thomas Maſters of Sandwich; and their Deſcendant Mr. Richard Maſters was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

2. Marton, or Marton-ſtreet, or anciently, more truly, Marſh-Town, is a Burgh which lies in this Pariſh of Eaſt Langdon; and gave Name to the Family of the Marſhes, which anciently were written de Mariſco. This Family had been in Poſſeſſion of this Burgh above 300 Years, and continued ſo in Philpot's Time: And in the Chancel of the Church is a Monument of Thomas Marſh, of this Place of Marſton, Eſq; in the Year 1634.

WEST-LANGDON lies towards the Eaſt End of Kent, about three Miles and a half Northward from Dover, in the Bailiwick of Stowting, Hundred of Bewsborough, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. In the Deanery of Sandwich, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Church was dedicated to St. Mary, but is now deſolate: And

I ſup-

I ſuppoſe was originally only a Chapel, for 'tis not rated in the King's Books.

As to the Abbey here, you will find an Account of it in the Chapter of Religious Houſes, &c.

Places of Note here:

1. Weſt-Langdon Manor did anciently belong to the Abbey here; and on the general Diſſolution of all the Religious Houſes in King Henry the VIIIth's Reign, came to the Crown, and ſtaid there till Queen Elizabeth in her 33d Year granted it with all its Privileges to Samuel Thornebill of London, Eſq; and his Son Sir Timothy Thornebill ſettled it in Jointure on his Lady; where it ſeems to have remained in Philpot's Time.

LANGLEY, Langele, Langelegh, the Long-Place, lies near the Middle of Kent, about Three Miles South Eaſtward from Maidſtone, in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Eyhorne, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Eaſt one of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery of Sutton and Dioceſe of Canterbury: And the Church is dedicated to St. Mary. In it are no Monuments or Inſcriptions. 'Tis a Rectory; and rated in the King's Books at 6*l.* 19*s.* 8*d.*

Places of Note here:

1. Langley Manor. This Place was in the 20th Year of King Henry the IIId, in the Poſſeſſion of William de Aſhway, as appears by the Book called Teſta de Nevil, in the Exchequer: Next it came into the Poſſeſſion of the great Family of Leybourn: For William de Leybourn claimed, and was allowed the uſual Privileges for this Manor in the 21ſt Year of K. Edward the Iſt. And by Juliana de Leybourn, the great Heireſs of Roger de Leybourn, Lord of Leybourn Caſtle, it went in Marriage to her Husband William de Clinton, Earl of Huntington, who died poſſeſs'd of it in the 28th Year of King Edward the IIId; but as ſhe outlived him, and conſequently had it in Poſſeſſion after him; ſo ſhe died Childleſs, and without any Heir that could be found; and therefore it eſcheated to the Crown; where it ſtaid till King Richard the IId, in the Beginning of his Reign, granted it to Sir Simon de Burley, Knight of the Garter, and Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports; but on his Attainder in the 10th Year of that Prince it came to the Crown again; and then this Manor was ſettled on the Dean and Chapter of the Church of St. Stephen in Weſtminſter, where it ſtaid till the general Suppreſſion of the Religious Houſes, and then was by King Henry the VIIIth granted to Leven Buffkin, deſcended from an ancient Family in Suſſex of that Name. His Deſcendant ſold it to Nathanael Powel, Eſq;; and he not long after parted with it the ſame Way to Sir Edward Hales, Knight and Baronet: And in Philpot's Time it was in the Poſſeſſion of Sir Edward Hales of Tonſtall, Barcnet: From whom it went the ſame Way, with Sutton Valence, firſt to Drake, and thence to the preſent Poſſeſſor, Sir Chriſtopher Desbouverie of London, Merchant.

But the Cuſtody of the Park here, which in King Edward the IIId's Reign had been enlarged by taking in 200 Acres of Land, was in King Richard the IId's Reign granted to William Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury: And afterwards in the 27th Year of King Henry the VIth, this Park was granted to Thomas Kent, and Iſabella his Wife, as appears by the Tower Records, Patent. Part. 2. Membr. 18.

2. Briſing, Briſhing, or Biſing, is a Manor here, which in King Edward the IIId's Reign, had Owners of the Name of Riſing. For Surin de Riſing paid Aid for it at making the Black Prince Knight. In King Edward the IVth's Time, it was got into the Poſſeſſion of the Family of Aſtry; and here it ſtaid till King Henry the VIIIth's Reign, and then went by Purchaſe to Leven Buffkin, Eſq; one of the Juſtices of the Peace for this County: And from this Name in King James the Iſt's Reign it went by Sale into that of Powell; and thence the ſame Way back again into the Family of Buffkin; being in Philpot's Time in the Poſſeſſion of Mr. Ralph Buffkin: And in his Deſcendants it ſtill continues.

In our Textus Roffenſis, f. 184. I find this Entry;

Robertus de Langleia cum Uxore ſuâ habuit ſocietatem noſtram & dedit nobis ſuam Decimam de Langeleia. Et quando obierint ſepelimus eos & habebimus partem ſuæ ſubſtantiæ quantum cuique pertinet.

Near the Park and Hoth (a Heath) of Langley, riſes a ſmall Spring, which about a Mile off at Briſhing above-mentioned, is uſually ſuppoſed to fall into the Ground, and hides it ſelf under the Earth for about half a Mile near Cooks-Hoth: And then at the great Pit of the Stone Quarrey there diſcovers it ſelf again, and runs above Ground to Looſe; between which Place and its Mouth, where it pours it ſelf into the Medway, as it doth at Touelle between Maidſtone and Eaſt-Farley, in which Courſe it doth not exceed Two Miles in Length; it bore in Lambard's Time 13 Fulling Mills, and one for Grinding Corn; and brought in thereby 1400 l. per Ann. Profit. So much greater was the Manufacture of Kent at that Time hereabouts than it is now.

Kilburn ſaith, The Spring or Bourn here in the Park did newly break out of the Earth in the Year 1472: As did another the ſame Year in Leweſham. I ſuppoſe he means ſuch an one, as in this County they call an Eylebourn; (or vulgarly a Nailbourn,) which is a Spring that riſes all of a ſudden out of the Ground, runs a while like a Torrent, and then diſappears. Of theſe I ſhall ſpeak more particularly in the Natural Hiſtory Part of this Book.

St. LAWRENCE in Thanet, lies towards the North-Eaſt ſide of Kent, in the Iſle of Thanet, about Four Miles and a half North-Eaſtward diſtant from Sandwich; in the Bailiwick of Bridge and Petham, Lath of St. Auſtin, and Eaſt Diviſion of the County.

'Tis in the Deanery of Weſtbere, and Dioceſe of Canterbury, and the Church, which is dedicated to St. Laurence, ſtands in the Hundred of Ringſlow; and is ſuppoſed to be founded by the Family of the Maunſtons; as alſo by that of St. Nicholas; which Families married into one another; of both which there are ſeveral ancient Memorials in this Church; as of Sayen Nicholas, Eſq; 1489; Nicholas Maunſton, Eſq; of Maunſton-Court, 1464. Several Memorials of the Spracklyns, as of Robert Spracklyn, 1590; Sir Adam Spracklyn, 1610. As alſo of Gillon, Johnſon, Wilſon, Skinner, and of Parker of Ramſgate, a Benefactor to this Pariſh.

The Church is large and handſome; with a Tower in the middle, and ſeveral Galleries in it.

A Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 7*l.*

Part of St. Lawrence, which is called Ramſgate, (and the People will have it to be Romans-Gate) is a Member of the Town and Port of Sandwich, and within the Diviſion of the Juſtices thereof; and the Liberties of that Town and Port, and of the Cinque Ports claim over it.

The reſt is in the Diviſion of Juſtices of the Lath of St. Auſtin, and the Liberty of St. Auſtin claims claims over the ſame; becauſe 'tis in the Hundred of Ringſlow which belonged to that Abbey.

The Juſtices of the Foreign attempting to Aſſeſs Ramſgate; Henry the VIIIth by Letters Patents united it to Sandwich, as he did many other Places hereabouts to That and Dover about the ſame time.

Places of Note here:

1. Ellington, once the Seat of a Family of this Name; ſome of which lie buried in the Church, ſaith Philpot, but the Memorials are gone. But about the End of King Edward the IVth this Family was extinct, and then Ellington came into the Poſſeſſion of the Thatchers, where it ſtaid till the beginning of Queen Elizabeth, and then went to the Spracklins, in whoſe Poſſeſſion it continued in Philpot's Time.

2. Manſton, is another Ancient Seat of a Family call'd Manſton in this Pariſh: Richard de Manſton was one of the Recognitores Magnæ Aſſiſæ for Kent, in King John's Reign, as appears by the Rolls in the Pipe-Office. William Manſton was Sheriff of this County in the 14th Year of King Henry the VIth, and held his Shrivalty at this Place: His Son Nicholas Manſton, married Eleanor, only Daughter of Edmond Haut, Eſq; by by whom he alſo had an only Daughter Juliana, who was married to Thomas St. Nicholas of Thorn, in the Pariſh of Minſter in Thanet, a Seat which came to his Grandfather by Marrying the Daughter and Heir of Sir John Goſhall. This Gentleman died A. D. 1474; and his Son Roger left but one Daughter and Heir, Elizabeth, who married John Dynley of Worceſterſhire; and one of his Deſcendants, about the beginning of Queen Elizabeth, ſold this Eſtate at Manſton, together with Powcies and Thorn, to Sir John Roper, who was afterwards made Baron of Tenham by King James the Iſt; and in that Family, I ſuppoſe, Manſton and Thorn continue ſtill; but Powcies was ſold to Sir Edward Monins of Walderſhare, Baronet.

3. Upper-Court, is a Place here which once was part of the Eſtate of the Eminent Family of Crioll; and continued ſo till the latter End of King Henry the VIth's Reign; and then Sir Thomas Crioll ſold it to John White, Eſq;: From this Family it went by Sale to that of Bere; and from thence, about the End of Queen Elizabeth, to Johnſon; in whoſe Family it was in Philpot's Time.

4. Nether-Court, a Place anciently in the Inheritance of the Knightly Family of the Goſhals of Goſhall in Aſh; and continued ſo till the Reign of King Henry the IVth, and then went by a Daughter to the Family of St. Nicholas: but in the latter End of King Henry the VIIth's Reign, it went by Elizabeth, a Daughter of this Family, together with Manſton, into the Poſſeſſion of John Dynley of Worceſterſhire; and from hence, about the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, was ſold to Maycott; and from thence, not long after, it went the ſame way to Lucas; hence it was ſold to one John Anthony, and from thence was alienated to Johnſon, in whoſe Poſſeſſion it remained in Philpot's Time.

In the 7th Year of King Edward the Iſt, Hugo de Souden claimed the Poſſeſſion, and the uſual Liberties of a Manor in this Pariſh; but 'tis ſaid in the Record, that the Abbot of St. Auſtin's in Canterbury claimed the ſame Right and Privileges in this Manor, and it was adjudged for the Abbot. Vid. MS. Placit. de Libertat. coram J. de Reggate & aliis Juſtic. Itinerant.

As Philpot makes no mention of this Manor, I can't tell what to call it; unleſs it be the Manor of St. Lawrence, properly ſo named.

LAYSDOWN, Leyſdon, lies at the North-Weſt Side of Kent, in the Iſland of Shepey, adjoining to the Sea, about four Miles Northward from Feverſham, in the Bailiwick of Milton, Hundred of the Iſland of Shepey, Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Upper One of Juſtices in that Lath. In the Deanery of Sittingbourn, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. A Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 10*l.* 10*s. per Ann.* The Church is dedicated to St. Clement; the Body of which is fallen down, and only a Shed built up for the preſent Celebration of Divine Offices.

The Liberty of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury claims over the Manors of Layſdown and Boyeton in and near this Pariſh; as being given to that Church by King Henry the VIIIth in his 33d Year, on its new Foundation.

Places of Note here:

1. Layſdon Manor; this Place, in the 7th Year of King Edward the Iſt, was claimed with all Privileges belonging to it by the Prior of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury, as appears by the Records; and after the Diſſolution of the Monaſteries, was ſettled on the new Collegiate and Cathedral Church of Canterbury by King Henry the VIIIth. It appears alſo by the Donations to the Church of Canterbury, printed by Somner in his Appendix, N. xxxvi, that King Henry the IId gave the Rent of 25 Librates of Land in Leyſdown to the Priory of Canterbury. The Eſtate therefore which Philpot mentions as lying in this Pariſh, and which he calls Layſdown Manor, cannot be properly ſo; and therefore muſt be ſome other Land in Leyſdown.

But he ſaith that which he calls Layſdown Manor, was anciently belonging to the Family of Grey of Rotherfield in Suſſex: John de Grey was called to Parliament as a Baron in King Edward the IIId's Reign, and in his 43d Year died poſſeſs'd of this Manor; as did his Deſcendant Robert Grey in the IId Year of King Henry the IVth: About the Beginning of King Henry the VIth, it came by Purchaſe into the Name of Lovell, and Sir William Lovell held it at his Death in the 26th Year of King Henry the VIth; from hence it went to the Cheyneys of Shurland, and there continued till Henry Lord Cheyney exchanged it with Queen Elizabeth; but what came of it after its being in the Crown, I know not.

2. Nutts, as 'tis uſually called, but in the old Court-Rolls 'tis Notts; is a ſmall Manor here, which anciently had Owners of the Name of Nott; but about the Beginning of King Edward the IVth's Reign, it went thence by Sale to Bartholomew, a Family which then had much Land about Linſted, Throuley, and other Places thereabouts; from this Name in King Henry the VIIIth's Reign it went by Sale to Sir Thomas Cheyney; and his Son Sir Henry Cheyney, about the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth, ſold it to Sampſon, a Family which had reſided at Sampſon's Court, not far diſtant, for many Hundreds of Years; and Deſcended from William Sampſon, who often ſat in Parliament as a Baron in King Edward the Iſt's Reign. But from this Name in King James the Iſt's Reign it was alienated to Osborne, in whoſe Deſcendants the Poſſeſſion was in Philpot's Time.

The Tower of this dilapidate Church is a very good one; but the Ground is ſo ſunk under it to the Weſtward, that it leans and hangs over that way, as the People told me, above Seven Foot; and indeed it doth lean ſo terribly that way, that it looks as if it were juſt tumbling; and yet it hath continued in this oblique Poſture a good while, and I ſuppoſe doth ſtill.

LEEDS,

LEEDS, Ledes, Lodanum, Ledanum Caſtrum, lies in the middle of Kent, by the River Medway, about three Miles and a half South-Eaſtward from Maidſtone, in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Eyhorn, Lath of Aylsford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Eaſt Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Dioceſe of Canterbury, and Deanery of Sutton; the Church is called St. Nicholas. 'Tis large and hath three Iſles, a low Tower, and ſmall Steeple. The Liberty of the Dean of Canterbury claims over that part of it which is in the Manor of Hollingborn. A Curacy, with the Chapel of Bromfeild annexed to it, and ſo not rated in the Valor Beneficiorum: But in Biſhop Williams's Map 'tis valued at 9 l. 12 s. 2 d. per Ann.

As to the Caſtle and Priory here, ſee an Account of them under the Chapters of Caſtles and Religious Houſes.

In the Church is a Braſs Inſcription of William Marden, 1509: A Stone over Sir John Smith of Leeds Caſtle, married a Franklyn of Eſſex.

A fair Marble Monument of Jane Counteſs Dowager of Carbery, and Daughter to Sir Thomas Wingham; ſhe was firſt married to Sir William Meredith of Derbyſhire, and after that to the Earl of Carbery.

Several Memorials of the Mereditbs of Leed's Abbey: Which Family have now there a very handſome Seat.

Remains of good Painted Glaſs in the Windows of the Church.

Places of Note here:

1. The Manor of Leeds you will have a full Account of in the Chapter of Caſtles under Leed's Caſtle.

Only I may add here, that at the Court-Leet for this Manor are yearly choſen three Borſeholders, one of which is for Berſted, for ſo much of that Place as is in the Hundred of Eythorne: And this Manor is divided into ſeveral Parts which are called Yokes.

2. Battel-Hall, near the Church here is a Houſe called now Battel-Hall, the Habitation of Mr. Worth; and which ſeems to have been ſome Religious Place. It was ſold to Mr. Harſnett by Sir John Covert, as part of the Lands belonging to Leeds Priory. There is ſtill ſtanding a large Stone Arch, (like thoſe in the Iſles of Churches) ſupported by two Gothick Images, and which goes clear up to the Top of the Roof of the Houſe. There is alſo a Door-place of Stone, where there hath formerly been a Portcluſe or Portcullis, and it ſeems to have led into ſome Place for a Treaſury. There is a very fair Place for Holy Water on the other ſide the Houſe, with good Conveyances of the Water to and from it; ſo that I can't but think the preſent Building to have been part of the Chapel of ſome Religious Houſe: Some think it to have been a Cell belonging to Battel-Abbey; I ſuppoſe from the Name of Battel-Hall.

But more probably it was built by ſome of the Crevequers: For I find by a Paper called the Michel Manuſcript, and which is often cited in ſome other Manuſcripts which I have peruſed, that Hugh de Crevequer, who built this Caſtle, founded alſo a Chapel on the North-Weſt part of it, where he placed Three Canons; which Canons by Robert de Crevequer his Son, were removed to the next Town: Now 'tis very likely, that this was the Place above-mentioned called Battel-Hall.

And here perhaps they ſtaid awhile till the larger Priory of Leeds might be built for a greater Number of Canons.

LEE, Leigh, (Laga in old Latin), lies near the North-Weſt End of Kent, about three Miles and a half South-Weſtward from Woolwich, in the Bailiwick of Sutton-Bromley, Hundred of Blackheath, Lath of Sutton-at-Hone, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Upper Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath.

A Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 3 l. 11 s. 8 d.

It is in the Deanery of Dartford, and Dioceſe of Rocheſter, and the Church is called St. Margaret's.

In the Church are Memorials of Nicholas Anneſly, Serjeant of the Exchequer to Queen Elizabeth, A. D. 1593; and of Brian Anneſly, 32 Years Penſioner to Queen Elizabeth, Died 1604; of Henry Byrde, 1545; Elizabeth Cornhill, 1513.

Here Mr. Chriſtopher Boon of London, Merchant, founded an Hoſpital: And here the Famous Mr. Purchas wrote a good Part of that Collection of Travels, which is called his Pilgrim.

This Place was anciently the Reſidence of a Family called Bankwell: And there is a Place ſtill here called Bankers, by corruption from Bankwells. In the 31ſt of King Edward the Iſt, John de Bankwell had a Charter of Freewarren for all his Lands in Lee, Leveſham, and Bromley; and in the 17th Year of King Edward the IId, John de Shelving, then High-Sheriff of Kent, returns William de Bankwell in the ſecond Degree of Knights, or Men at Arms, in this County. His Son Thomas Bankwell, who had a very great Eſtate in Lee, Bromley, Eltham, and many other Places hereabouts, left three Sons who Inherited according to the Cuſtom of Gavelkind: John, William, and Robert: This Eſtate was the Portion of John Bankwell, in whoſe Family it continued, till at length it went by a Daughter in Marriage to John Arrapon: After this, ſomehow, it came to be in the Poſſeſſion of Richard Woodvill Earl Rivers; whoſe Son being beheaded at Pomfret by King Richard the IIId, it came to and ſtaid in the Crown till King Henry the VIIIth's Time; and then it was granted to Sir Thomas Wrotely; and afterwards it was in the Poſſeſſion of Thomas Sackville Lord Buckhurſt, about the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign; tho' how it came thither, Philpot could not find: His Grandſon, Richard Sackville Earl of Dorſet, exchanged this Eſtate with King James the Iſt; and King Charles the Iſt ſold the Royalty and Fee-ſimple of it to Sir Ralph Freeman, Lord Mayor of London; who gave it in Marriage with his Daughter and Heir, to Sir George Sands of Lees Court in Shelvich, and Knight of the Bath.

The Manor of Leigh belongs now to the Earl of Rokingham's Son and Heir, Edward Lord Sondes of Lees-Court, and came the ſame way as that Manor and noble Seat did. See Lees-Court.

The Meadow Land here in the Valley is very rich; being worth about 40 s. per Acre; lying along the ſides of a little Bourn or Brook, which ſometimes on ſudden Rains ſwells ſo as to riſe near as high as the Tops of the Rails of the Bridge by Lee-Green, which is about Ten Foot; it empties it ſelf into the Ravensbourn at Leweſham; running firſt along by the Wall of the old Seat of the Anneſlies, now quite ruined; about the Southſide of which it ſeems to have made a kind of Moat.

This Pariſh of Lee is finely ſituated, at a due diſtance from London, and juſt by Blackheath; and 'tis as well inhabited, by Perſons of Faſhion only; who as they are all to a Man hearty Friends to King George, the Church of England, and the Proteſtant Succeſſion; ſo they live in an entire Friendſhip and good Correſpondence one with another.

Kilburn ſaith, that in the Morning of Aug. 4. 1585, the Ground ſunk ſo in a Lane at Modingham in this Pariſh, that Three great Elms, their Tops falling downward, ſunk out of ſight; the Hole Hole was Eighty Yards about, and above Fifty Fathom deep. Others placing this Hole in Eltham Pariſh, I did mention it there alſo.

LENHAM, Leanham, Leneham, (i. e.) the Place of the Farm: (Tho' Camden thinks it ſo called from the Brook Len, which riſes ſomewhere in this Pariſh, but I can find no ſuch Name as Len; It lies near the middle of Kent, about Seven Miles South-Eaſtward from Maidſtone, in the Eaſt Diviſion of Juſtices in the Lath of Aylesford. Part of it is in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Eyhorn, Lath of Aylesford, and Weſt Diviſion of the County; and the reſt, called Eaſt Lenham, is in the Bailiwick of Chart and Longbridge, Hundred of Calehill, Lath of Scray, and Eaſt Diviſion of the County. The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims there, and that of St. Auſtin over the Manor of Lenham. 'Tis all in the Deanery of Sutton, and Dioceſe of Canterbury: A Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 13 l. 15 s. 2 d. The Church ſtands in the Hundred of Eyhorne, and is dedicated to St. Mary. 'Tis a large and fair Building; in the Windows are Remains of good painted Glaſs; a Clock with Quarters, Chimes, &c. In the Chancel are Stalls as in our Collegiate Churches; ſo that formerly there was ſome Religious Fraternity here: A Stone Confeſſional Chair alſo is ſtill remaining. Kilburn ſaith there were Memorials here of the Interment of ſome of the famous Family of Apuldrefeild of above 500 Years ſtanding; their Seat was at Linſtede; and this Apuldrefeild was Eminent for his Services againſt the Turks in the Holy War; and of Barret, Moris, and Horn, of about 250 Years ſince. An old Altar Tomb without any Inſcription upon it, but ſeveral Coats of Arms are remaining: A fair Monument of Henry Thompſon of Royton Chapel, Eſq;; and a Memorial of Robert Thompſon, Grandſon of the Famous Mrs. Mary Honeywood, who is alſo buried in this Church: She was the Wife of Robert Honeywood of Charing, Eſq;, and had, at her Deceaſe, 367 Children, Sixteen of her own Body, 114 Grand-Children, 228 Great Grand-Children, and Nine of the Fourth Generation. Her Picture is at Mr. Nutt's at Nuckington near Canterbury; and at Mr. Criſp's of Roydon Chapel in this Pariſh; and her Monument at Marks-Hall in Eſſex.

A Market is kept here on Tueſdays, in a large ſpacious Place; and another for Bullocks at Sandway in this Pariſh, on every Tueſday after November the firſt, till Chriſtmas.

A Fair yearly on May 26.

Places of Note here:

1. Lenham Manor, the Donations to the Priory of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury, publiſhed by Somner in his Appendix, N. xxxvi. expreſly mention Lenham, as given to that Church by Queen Ediva or Edgiva, the Mother of the Kings Edmund and Edred. And in Domeſday 'tis ſaid; Lenham eſt Manerium Monachorum quod Godfridus de Mellinges tenet ab Archiepiſcopo in Feodo: & in T. E. R. ſe defendebat pro ij Sullingis, & nunc ſimiliter, valet viij l. & tamen reddit xij l. & x s. de firmâ.

The Account of the 21 Plowlands therefore mentioned by Philpot and Kilburn to be given to the Abbey of St. Auſtin's in Canterbury, by Kenulf King of Mercia, and Cuthred King of Kent, and which is ſaid by Lambert to have been confirmed afterwards by Ethelwulfe King of Kent and Weſt-ſex, and to have been Ratified by Edgiva, is not ſo clear and conſiſtent as I could wiſh; nor is it eaſy to diſtinguiſh how much Land each Convent had here, and which was which: But that both had Land here, appears plain by both their Liberties claiming in this Pariſh to this Day.

However, in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, I find the Abbot of St. Auſtin's claiming Freewarren, and the other uſual Privileges of a Manor here, before the Juſtices Itinerant: The moſt eaſy Solution of this Difficulty I think will be, that there were formerly two Manors in this Pariſh, which were both in old Times called by the Name of Lenham, as there is now, one being called Lenham, and the other Eaſt-Lenham.

The Manor of Lenham which belonged to St. Auſtin's, Philpot ſaith, on the Diſſolution, was granted by Queen Elizabeth to Henry Wilford, Eſq; whoſe Grandſon, Sir Thomas Wilford in King Charles the Iſt's Reign, ſold it to Anthony Brown, Viſcount Montague, who was in Poſſeſſion in Philpot's Time.

2. Eaſt-Lenham was formerly the Seat of the Huſſeys, of whom mention has been made before in Boughton Malherbe. Henry Huſſey had a Charter of Freewarren for his Lands at Eaſt-Lenham, Chilſton, and Stourmouth, in the 55th Year of King Henry the IIId; and in this Name it continued till his Deſcendant Henry Huſſey, about the 26th Year of King Henry the VIIIth, ſold it to Mr. John Parkhurſt, Anceſtor to Sir William Parkhurſt, who in Philpot's Time had parted with it the ſame way to Mr. Wood, Merchant in London. Afterwards it was purchaſed by the Honourable Mrs. Hamilton, and is by her ſettled on her Grandſon John, Son of William Hamilton, Eſq; of Chilſton in Bocton Malherbe.

3. Royton is an Eminent Place here which once had Proprietors of this Name; and here was a free Chapel founded by Robert de Royton, about the latter End of King Henry the IIId's Reign, and from hence took the Name of Royton Chapel: By a Daughter and Heir of one of this Family, this Eſtate went to James Dryland of Davington; but not long after it went thence by another Daughter, viz. Conſtance, his ſole Heir, who carried it in Marriage to Walſingham of Chiſelhurſt, whoſe Son James Walſingham alienated it to Robert Atwater of Putwood in Otteringden; and by Mary his Daughter it went to Robert Honywood, Eſq; a younger Branch of the Honywoods of Elmſted; and this Gentleman's Son, Mr. Robert Honywood, gave it in Dower with his Daughter to Mr. Thompſon, deſcended from the Thompſons of Petham.

4. Shelve-Cobham, is another Manor here, which anciently was part of the Eſtate of the Lords Cobham of Sterborough Caſtle; of which Family was Richard de Cobham, who was made a Knight Banneret by King Edward the IIId, as appears by Pat. 15. Edw. 3. pat. 2. Membr. 22. After many Deſcents here, by Anne only Daughter to Thomas Lord Cobham of Sterborough, it paſſed in Marriage to Edward Lord Borough of Gainsborough; whoſe Grandſon, Thomas Lord Borough, ſold it to Mr. John Pakenham in the 25th Year of Queen Elizabeth; and Ten Years after this he alienated it to Boteler, in which Name it ſtaid till the 6th Year of King Charles the Iſt, and then went the ſame way to Sir John Molton; whoſe Son John Molton, Eſq; in Philpot's Time, ſold it to Mr. Solomon Adye.

5. Weſt-Shelve, ſometimes written Middle-Shelve, is another Manor in Lenham, which formerly was in the Poſſeſſion of Bertram de Criol, and by Joan his Daughter, went in Marriage to Sir Richard de Rokeſly, and thence by another Female Heir, to Thomas de Poynings, ; and in this Family it ſtaid till the 14th Year of King Henry the VIIIth, and then Sir Edward Poynings dying without Iſſue or Heirs, it eſcheated to the Crown; and Three Years after was granted by that Prince to John Mills; from which Name it went by Sale into that of Darel; and by a Daughter of that Name, was, in Philpot's Time, become the Eſtate of Wilkinſon.

6. Sindal, is a Place here which in the Reigns of King John, and King Henry the IIId, had Proprietors of its own Name; and ſuch as were Men of good Figure in this County; but about the 23d Year of King Edward the IIId, it came ſome how into the Poſſeſſion of Fulk de Peyforer; but tarried not long in that Name before it paſſed into that of Henman; and in that Family it lineally deſcended down to a Poſſeſſor of that Name in Philpot's Time; viz. A. D. 1658.

Mr. Camden, Lambard, and Dr. Gale, conclude this Place to have been the Durolevum mentioned by Antoninus, in his ſecond Iter. The firſt of theſe learned Gentlemen ſtrains a Point to begin his Conjecture, (which I much wonder Mr. Lambard ſhould call a Strong Proof) and ſaith, that 'tis falſely written Durolevum inſtead of Durolenum, in ſome Copies of the Itinerary. Whereas 'tis allowed by every Body, that by far the greateſt Number of Copies have Durolevum: And Dr. Gale mentions only Anonymus Ravennus, for its being written Durolanum; though he eſpouſe Camden's Opinion: And he owns, that if this Opinion hold good, the Numbers are tranſpoſed, p. 76.

The next ſtrong Argument brought by Mr. Camden, is, That it takes its Name from the Britiſh Dur and Lenum, and ſo ſignifies the Water of Lenham. But as neither of the little Brooks which run different Ways out of this Pariſh, was ever called the Len, as I can find; ſo neither of them are conſiderable enough to give Name to this Place. There is a little Spring indeed ariſing in the Town; which the People, becauſe it riſes in the Street, call Street-Well; and this they will have to be the Head of the River Stoure; and I believe it is the remoteſt Spring from the Mouth of that River. But Camden therefore is groſsly miſtaken in ſaying this runs into the Medway. The other Spring, which Lambard ſaith riſes at Bigon, and whoſe Water is called Ewell, i. e. Ea-well, the Spring of Water, flows from a little Wood about a Mile Weſtward from Lenham; this the People ſay is the Head of the Medway; but that is not ſo; there being a much remoter Head at Goldwell; and this being only one of the Sources of that Brook, which runs by Leeds to Maidſtone.

As to his Argument from the Diſtance, the Learned Dr. Gale owns it to be a Miſtake; for Surita makes it but 13 Miles from Durobrovis (or Rocheſter) to Durolevum: The Pewtingerian Tables but 7; in ſomes Copies but 9, as in that uſed by Somner; in others 8; and Dr. Gale himſelf ſets it but 9; which will agree much better with Newington, where (with Mr. Somner) I find the beſt Reaſons to place this Station. Vid. Som. Cant. p. 12. And as to what he produces from Higden, that the Roman Conſular Way run through the Middle of Kent; I ſhall have Occaſion hereafter to ſhew 'tis in a good Meaſure true; but he doth not ſay it was the Watling-Street Way; of which Mr. Camden is ſuppoſed to ſpeak: For that there did go a Roman Conſular Way from the Portus Lemanis towards London, through or near this Place, I doubt not. But as Twine in his Lib. 2. p. 152. de Rebus Albionicis ſaith very truly, that the Roman Ways went ſummâ rectitudine tanquam protenſâ lineâ, per quæcunque Locorum incommoda, & tantâ latitudine, &c. So it is very unlikely that they ſhould make their Watling-ſtreet Way with ſuch in-and-out Turnings, as that the Traveller muſt go firſt 8 or 10 Miles out of his Way to Woodcote Common, and thence to Maidſtone, in his Way to Rocheſter; and after that to make Lenham his Road to Canterbury. But indeed (as I ſhall ſhew in the Chapter of the Roman Ways, &c.) we can actually trace the Roman Watling-ſtreet Way, running not to Woodcote in Surrey, but over Blackheath to Shooters-Hill; over Bexley Heath and Dartford Brent, and thence over the Medway at Chatham, and ſo by Rainham, Green-ſtreet, and over the Blean directly to Canterbury; which is a ſufficient Confutation of all this imaginary round-about Paſſage. As to the Notion which the Author of the Additions to Camden hath, of Bapchilds being the Durolevum, 'tis certainly much nearer the Truth, than to fix it at Lenham; but then it's utterly irreconcileable with making Maidſtone to be the Vagniacæ of Antonine, which yet his Author aſſerts; as well as that Woodcote is the Noviomagus; in which he himſelf thinks him in the wrong. I think Newington to be the Durolevum, as I ſhall ſhew when I come to that Place.

LEVELAND, Liveland, lies towards the Eaſt Side of the Middle of Kent, about four Miles South Weſtward from Feverſham, in the Bailiwick and Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and upper one of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery of Oſpringe, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; and the Church is dedicated to St. Lawrence; the Building of which is ſmall and mean, with a poor low Spire. Againſt the Chancel-Wall is a Monument of Mrs. Catherine Rooper, Relict of Mr. Edward Rooper, her Maiden Name was Whiteborne, but ſhe had been before married to Herdſon. The Pariſh is a Rectory; and valued in the King's Books at 4 l. 0 s. 0 d. per Ann.

Places of Note here:

1. Leveland Manor. This Place once had Owners of its own Name, who reſided here. In the 40th Year of King Henry the IIId, as appears by the Patents, Giles Badeleſmere of Badeleſmere, was pardoned by that Prince for marrying Margaret de Leveland, Heir of this Place, without the King's Licenſe; but he dying before her, ſhe was again married to Fulk de Peyforer, who in her Right died poſſeſſed of this Place in the 5th Year of Edward the Iſt. But neither of theſe eminent Men having Iſſue by her, one Ralph de Leveland became Heir to this Manor; who had then alſo the Wardenſhip of the Fleet, and the Cuſtody of the Palace at Weſtminſter: And after him his Brother Stephen de Leveland held this Eſtate, and both theſe Places as his Heir: He left one Daughter, Joan, who was firſt married to John Shench, and then afterwards to Edward de Cheyney; and her ſecond Husband in her Right enjoyed both the Places above-mentioned: But her Son and Heir John Shench, after his Death, held them both till that of his own, in the 23d Year of King Edward the IIId; and his Daughter Margaret was Heir both to the Land and the Places.

Roger de Northwood alſo in the 24th Year of King Edward the IIId, enjoyed a conſiderable Eſtate in this Pariſh. But before the End of King Edward the IIId's Reign, both theſe Families ſold their Eſtate here at Leveland to Richard Lord Poynings, who dying poſſeſs'd of it in the 12th Year of King Richard the IId, left it to his Kinſman Mr. Robert Poynings; and from him it deſcended in this Name and Family down to Sir Edward Poynings: But he dying without Iſſue or Heirs in the 12th Year of King Henry the VIIIth, all this Eſtate eſcheated to the Crown; and ſtaid there till that Prince granted it to Sir Robert Southwell; who in the 2d Year of King Edward the VIth, ſold it to Sir Anthony Aucher, and he long after ſent it the ſame Way to Sir Anthony, Grandfather to Sir George Sonds; by whoſe younger Daughter the Lady Catherine, it went in Marriage to the Right Honourable the Earl of Rokingham; and is at preſent in the Poſſeſſion of his his worthy Son and Heir, Edward Lord Sonds of Lees-Court, who with his good Father, the Lord Lieutenant of this County, hath been a very kind Encourager of this Work.

LEUSHAM, Leveſham, lies at the North Weſt Side of Kent, adjoining to Surrey, on the River Ravensbourn, about three Miles and a half North Weſt from Bromley, in the Bailiwick of Sutton Bromley, Hundred of Blackheath, Lath of Sutton-at-Hone, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and upper one of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery of Dartford and Dioceſe of Rocheſter: And the Church is dedicated to St. Mary.

A Vicarage; and rated in the King's Books at 23 l. 19 s. 2 d. per Ann.

The Reverend Mr. Abraham Calf, Miniſter of this Pariſh, did in his Life-Time Found here Two Free-Schools; one for Engliſh, and the other for Latin; with good Annual Allowances to the Maſters: As alſo ſome Yearly Penſions to maintain ſome of the ſaid Scholars in the Univerſities: And he committed the Care and Viſitation of theſe Schools to the Leatherſellers Company of London.

Places of Note here:

1. The Manor of Lewſham, belonged to the Priory or rather Cell of Benedictines, of this Place, and ſtaid here till King Henry the Vth diſſolving the Priors Aliens, appropriated the Revenue of this Houſe to that ſtately Monaſtery which he erected at Shene in Surrey. And here this Manor ſtaid till the general Suppreſſion in King Henry the VIIIth's Time; and then it came to the Crown, and remained there till the 5th Year of Queen Elizabeth, who then granted it to Ambroſe Dudley, Earl of Warwick: And he, not long after, exchanged it again with that Queen for other Lands: And ſhe, A. D. 1575, leaſed it out for 40 Years to Sir Nicholas Stodard of Modingham. At the Expiration of which Leaſe, A. D. 1605, King James the Iſt, granted a new one for the ſame Term of Years to Sir Francis Knolls, and the Fee-Simple in Reverſion to John Ramſey, Earl of Holderneſs, who dying before the Leaſe was run out, left it to his Brother Sir George Ramſey, whoſe Son John Ramſey, about the Year 1645, ſold the Fee-ſimple to Mr. Reginald Grime.

2. Catford in this Pariſh was a Manor which anciently was Part of the Inheritance of the Abells of Herring-Hill in Erith. John Abell had a Charter of a Freewarren for theſe and his other Lands in Lewſham, in the 23d Year of King Edward the Iſt. From this Family this Eſtate went to the Lord Montacute; for William de Montacute Earl of Salisbury, had a Charter of Freewarren for his Manor of Catford, in the 5th Year of King Edward the IIId: And in this Noble Family it ſtaid, till Eleanor, Daughter and Heir of Thomas Earl of Salisbury, carried this Manor and that Earldom to her Husband Richard de Nevil; whoſe Arms were in many Glaſs Windows in Lewſham. This Gentleman eſpouſing the Cauſe of the Houſe of York, was killed in the Battel between Sandall and Wakefield. His Two Sons alſo Richard Earl of Warwick, and John Nevil, created Marquis of Montacute, by King Edward the IVth, An. 1479, were both ſlain in the Battel of Barnet, warring againſt that Prince. On which probably this Eſtate eſcheating to the Crown, was given by King Edward the IVth to his Brother George Duke of Clarence: And he eſpouſed Iſabell, Daughter and Coheir of Richard Earl of Warwick: For in a Great Houſe in Philpot's Time belonging to Mr. Street of this Place, the Arms of the Duke of Clarence ſtood impaled in the Glaſs Window with thoſe of Nevill. Afterwards Catford came into the Family of the Polſteds, who were of great Antiquity in Surrey. And Francis Polſted, Couſin and Heir to Richard of that Name, ſold this Manor to Brian Anneſley, Eſq; in Reverſion after the Deceaſe of Elizabeth Wife of John Woolley, and Widow of the ſaid Richard Polſted; and this was done in the 20th Year of Queen Elizabeth. But he afterwards dying without Iſſue-Male, his Two Daughters were married; one to Sir William Harvey, afterwards Lord Harvey of Kidbroke in Kent; and the other to Sir John Wildgooſe; between which Two Families this Eſtate was divided.

In the Church are Memorials of a Lord Treaſurer of Ireland, George Hatcliff, Eſq; 1514, who left 10 s. for a Sermon on New-Years-Day to the Miniſter, 10 s. to the Church-Wardens, and 10 s. to the Poor for ever.

Between Lewſham and Dullidge, and in this Pariſh, is a Hill with an Oak on it, which was called the Oak of Honour; becauſe that mighty Princeſs Queen Elizabeth once dined under it: Indeed the Old Tree is now gone, but a new one is planted in its Room; and another planted alſo juſt by it, to ſupply its defect. So that what Quinctus ſaith in the Beginning of Cicero's Book de Legibus, of the Quercus Mariana, may be very true of this:

Dum Anglicanæ loquentur Literæ quercus huic loco non deerit quæ Elizana dicatur —— eaque caneſcet ſæclis innumerabilibus —— quare glandifera illa Quercus ex quâ olim evolavit,

Nuntia fulva Jovis miranda viſa Figura;

Nunc ſit hæc; ſed cum eam tempeſtas vetuſtas ve conſumpſerit, tamen erit his in locis quam Eliſanam Quercum vocent.

Kilburn ſaith, that A. D. 1472, here newly broke out of the Earth a great Spring: By which I ſuppoſe he means an Eylebourn or Nailbourn, as the Vulgar call it; ſuch an one as that which he takes notice of to have appeared the ſame Year in Langley before-mentioned.

As to the Priory and Two Chantreys here, ſee the Chapter of Religious Houſes.

LID, Lydd, Hlyda, and Lyden, in old Charters: probably from the Saxon Hlŷdan, which ſignifies to roar or make a Noiſe or Tumult, becauſe of the Noiſe or Roaring of the Sea here: and 'tis likely that this was the Occaſion of the Name of the little River Lid in Devonſhire, which Camden in his Britannia, p. 26, ſaith runs into the Tamar, and falling down from the Rocks makes a very great murmuring Noiſe: And hence alſo I believe came the Name of Lidford in the ſame County.

There was formerly another Place near Sandwich in this County which was called Lyd, or Hlyden; which in the Year 774, was given by King Offa to the Priory of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury, and this probably took its Name from the ſame Original. In the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, the Prior of Chriſt-Church claimed Wreck of the Sea there: And 'tis called in the Record a Member of Eaſtry.

This Pariſh of Lid lies at the South Side of Kent, adjoining to the Sea, about Two Miles and a half South Weſtward from New Romney, of which Town and Port it is a Member; being incorporated by the Name of the Bailiff, Jurats, and Commonalty of the Town of Lid; and before this, by the Name of the Barons of the Town of Lid: The Day of Election for their Bailiff is on July 22. 'Tis within the Liberties of the Corporation, and of the Cinque Ports. But the Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims here alſo, as doth that of Wye over the Borough of Dengemarſh; which in the Time of King William the Iſt, Kilburn ſaith, was a Member of Wye.

'Tis all in the Bailiwick of Shipway, and in that Lath; in the Hundred of Langport, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices of its own Corporation. 'Tis in the Deanery of Limpne, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; and the Church is dedicated to All-Saints. The Church is a large handſome Building, and in it are ſeveral Monumental Memorials and Inſcriptions of great Antiquity. Wever ſaith, that formerly there were Two Grave-Stones here, over Richard Dering, who died in the Reign of King Richard the IId, and of Thomas his Son; but Time which hath robbed his Tomb-Stone of its braſs Ornaments and Inſcriptions, hath alſo deprived it of its proper Memorials; for latterly it hath had another Name ſuperſcribed upon it: He ſaith alſo that there were in his Time Memorials of the Septvans; which Family with that of the Derings, were then of moſt Note here. Here alſo lie interred ſeveral of the Ancient and Eminent Family of the Godfreys; as Thomas Godfrey of Old Romney, A. D. 1430, who lies in the Middle of the Church. A Tomb in the Church-Yard of Peter Godfrey of Old Romney, with Five Sons, and Four Daughters, in the Year 1556; Peter Godfrey in 1566; Mary, Wife of Thomas Godfrey, and Daughter of Thomas Partridge of Iden in 1580; Catherine, Wife of John Benie, and Daughter of Peter Godfrey of Lid in 1613, under a Tomb in the Church-yard. Thomas Briggs in 1442; who, as appeared by his Epitaph, made the Roof of the Church as far as 45 Couplings for ſo many Marks; which will help us to gueſs at the Price of Work in thoſe Days. Here are alſo Memorials of the Interment of John Thomas in 1429; and of Hart, Motelfont, Stupney, Bate, Wilford, Wilcocks, Sir Walter Merrill, Kt. Sir John Hund, &c.

The Pariſh is a Vicarage; and valued very high in the King's Book; viz. at 55 l. 12 s. 0 d. per Ann.

There is a Market at this Place on Thurſdays, and a Fair on the 13th of July.

The Urtica Romana buccifera, or the Berry bearing Roman Nettle grows in the Church-yard very plentifully.

In the Sea Beach here, near a Place called Stone-End; or as it is in a Charter of King Offa's to the Church of Canterbury, Juxta Lapidem appoſitum in ultimo Terræ, are a great Heap of Stones, which the People call the Tomb of St. Criſpin and Criſpianus, whom they report to have been Shipwreckt, and then buried here. Dr. Batteley in his Antiq. Rutupin. p. 14. Conjectures, that they might anciently bear ſomething of the Name of, or by Tradition be reported to have been ſet up in Memory of ſome of the Family of the Criſpini among the Romans, who had Command here in Britain; but that in Proceſs of Time by the Ignorant and Superſtitious Saxons, (who had heard of ſome Martyrs or Saints of this Name) they might have the Memory of Criſpin and Criſpianus annexed to them.

Near the Sea alſo, at the South Side of this Pariſh, is a Place called Holmſtone. The Ground appears to be nothing in a Manner but Stones, Beach, and Pebbles; and yet Holm or Holly Trees grow there very plentifully.

Lambard ſaith, that this Town did formerly ſend out 7 Ships in the Service of the Ports.

It ſeems by the Charter above-mentioned, which was granted to Lambert Archbiſhop of Canterbury by King Offa, that the Sea then ran in with a large Arm or Eſtuary, between this Place and Romney. The Words as cited by Somner in his R. Port, p. 50. are theſe:

Offa, &c. Dabo & concedo aliquam partem trium Aratrorum quod Cantianitè dicitur Three Sullinge in Occidentali parte Regionis quæ dicitur Merſware, ubi nominatur ad Lyden: Et hujus Terræ ſunt hæc Territoria: Mare in Oriente, in Aquilone; & ab Auſtro Terra Regis Edwy —— nominant Dengemere uſque ad Lapidem appoſitum in ultimo Terræ; & in Occidente & Aquilone confinia Regni de Bleechinge: Et hoc prædictum Donum, &c.

By this it appears that about the Year 774, when this Charter bore Date, Lid did upon the Northern, as well as the Eaſtern Part of it, border upon the Sea: And indeed 'tis highly probable, as I ſhall more fully ſhew in its proper Place, that after the Limen or River Rother, had left going out into the Sea at Limne; and inſtead of running along under the Hills towards Appledre, had made it ſelf a new Way, along by what is now called the Rhee-Wall, out into the Sea at New Romney; that then it opened into the Sea with a very large and ſpatious Mouth, which there rather had the Appearance of an Eſtuary or Arm of the Sea, than that of a freſh River: For we find that in the Year 893, as Somner obſerves very juſtly, it was large enough to admit a Fleet of 250 Sail of Daniſh Pirates; who towing their Veſſels four Miles up within the Land, even as far as to the Weald, did there caſt Anchor, and deſtroying and burning a Fort or Caſtle which they found there, (perhaps at the Bottom of Kennington Hills) built a new one at Appledore. But of the Courſe of the Rother, and of the Portus Lemanis, I ſhall ſpeak more fully in another Place.

In this Pariſh, ſaith Philpot, was anciently a Water-Courſe, called Gueſtling; which in the 9th Year of King Edward the IId, was by an Inquiſition taken here, contrived to be altered: But I believe it is a Miſtake for the other Lid or Hlyden above-mentioned, which lies near Sandwich; for there was a Complaint againſt the Prior of Chriſt-Church for ſtopping up the Courſe of a Water there, called Gueſtling; becauſe the People of the Hundred of Cornilo had not Water enough to drown their Felons: For that kind of Death was by the Saxons often adjudged to common Felons, eſpecially Women; and therefore you find among the Privileges of ſome Manors the Grant of Foſſa, as well as Furca i. e. a Ditch to drown, as well as a Gallows to hang Malefactors. See South-fleet.

Places of Note here:

1. Lid Manor, as I ſuppoſe thoſe Three Plowlands above-mentioned may be called; which in the Year 774, were given to the Priory of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury; and the Grant was ſo publickly executed, that there were preſent the King and the Archbiſhop, Queen Kinedrith, Three Biſhops, Five Abbots, Duke Edbald, and Eleven Princes. Somner Cant. Appendix, N. xxxvj.

But of this Manor or Donation, Philpot ſaith not one word; and therefore I can't tell what became of it afterwards; but probably it continued in the Priory till the Diſſolution; and perhaps was ſettled by King Henry the VIIIth on his new Collegiate and Cathedral Church at Canterbury.

2. Old-Langport, is a Manor here ſo Eminent, as to have given Name to the whole Hundred in which it lies; and anciently it was the Eſtate of a Family of the Name of Ikin: John Ikin died poſſeſſed of it in the 2d Year of King Edward the IIId. Hence it went into the Name of Hund, and ſtaid there a good while; for Sir John Hund, who lies buried in this Church, reſided here in the Reign of King Henry the VIth. From this Fa-

Family it went by Sale into that of Belknap; but Sir Edward, Son to the Purchaſer Sir Henry Belknap, dying without Iſſue, his Three Siſters became his Co-heirs; of whom Anne was Married to Sir Edward Wotton; Elizabeth to Sir Philip Cook of Giddy-Hall, and Alice to Sir William Shelley of Michel-Grove in Suſſex: This laſt Gentleman ſold his Share in this Manor to Dannet; who afterwards joining with Wotton, alienated two parts of it to Godfrey; and the third part was ſold by Cook to Mr. George Man of Canterbury; from whom it deſcended to his Brother Mr. William Man, who dying without Iſſue, bequeathed it to his Nephew Sir William Man of Canterbury.

3. New-Longport, otherwiſe called Longport Septvans, was for many Deſcents part of the Eſtate of the Eminent Family of the Name of Septvans; Robert de Septvans died poſſeſs'd of it in the 33d Year of King Henry the IIId, as his Grandſon William did in the 25th Year of King Edward the IIId; but about the Beginning of King Henry the VIth, William Septvans, a Deſcendant of this Family, ſold it to John Writtle; whence, after ſome Years, it went the ſame way to Henry Fettiplace of Beſelſlith in the County of Oxford; and after ſtaying many Years in this Family, it went the ſame way into the Name of James; but here abode but a little while before Thomas James forfeited it to the Crown, by incurring a Premunire in the 6th Year of King James the Iſt; and that Prince, the next Year, granted it to John Lord Haddington; who to diſcharge Debts, ſold it to Mr. Edward Cropley of London.

4. Jacks, alias Jaques Court, is a Manor here which anciently belonged to the Echinghams, a Family of good Note in Suſſex: William de Echingham paid Aid for this Place at making the Black Prince Knight, in the 20th Year of King Edward the IIId; and William Echingham his Son, who was one of the Conſervators of the Peace for Suſſex in the 1ſt Year of King Richard the IId, died poſſeſs'd of this Place in the 15th Year of that Prince: But at length Thomas Echingham, a Deſcendant of this Family, leaving only a Daughter Margaret, ſhe carried this Place in Marriage to her Husband Walter Blount: But his Son Edward Blount, Lord Mountjoy, leaving no Iſſue, by his Siſter Elizabeth it went in Marriage to Sir Andrew Windſor, afterwards created Lord Windſor by King Henry the VIIIth: He ſold it to Clache, by whoſe Daughter and Heir it went into the Name of Stringer; and by another Female Heir of that Family into that of Scott; a Cadet of the Scots of Scot's-Hall; he ſoon parted with it by Sale to Wilcocks; and his Two Daughters and Co-heirs divided it between their Husbands Bates and Knight.

5. Belgar or Belgrave, is a Manor here, which together with the Manor of Bilſington, was given to the Priory of that Name by its Founder John Maunſell; and ſometime before the general Suppreſſion, it was exchanged by that Convent for other Lands with William St. Leger; by whom it was ſold to William Middleton and Edward Arthur; who joined together in a Sale of it to Mr. Shirley of Suſſex; and he in King James the Iſt's Reign ſent it the ſame Way to Abdy, deſcended from the Abdys of Abdy Houſe in the Pariſh of Waith in Yorkſhire; whoſe Heir, Sir Chriſtopher Abdy, was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time; and is by him celebrated as a Man of great Learning.

6. Scotney: This was here, as well as another at Lamberhurſt, the Ancient Seat of a Family of this Name; for Richard de Scotney in this Pariſh is mentioned in the Book of Ayde for holding Lands in the adjoining Marſh: After this it came into the Family of Aſhburnham of Suſſex, and probably by the Marriage of one of the Name of Scotney; as Scotney in Lamberhuſt went to them that way: From Roger Aſhburnham it went by Sale to Henry Chichley, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, who ſettled it on his College of All-Souls in Oxford, where the preſent Poſſeſſion of it remains.

7. Nod; this Place was for many Years the Seat of the Derings before they went to Pluckley; and there were ſeveral Lands hereabouts that anciently and do ſtill bear the Name of that Family. But in the 4th Year of Queen Mary, it was by one of them ſold to Mr. Peter Godfrey of Lidd; and Surrenden, ſaith Philpot, was tied for his peaceable Poſſeſſion of it.

8. Manerium Summi Altaris, as 'tis written in the old Latin Deeds, The Manor of the high Altar. This for many Hundred Years hath been united to the Vicarage; but both the Name of the Donor, and the particular Uſe it was at firſt given for, i. e. whether for Lights, Veſtments, &c. is now perfectly loſt.

9. Denge Marſh, this is a place in Lid, parted off by a Chanel of Salt Water which runs from Sea to Sea; over it about the middle, is, or was, a Bridge, called by the Name of Cockerell's Bridge, within it lies a Level of about 350 Acres of freſh Merſh, which is lower Ground than any about it; it was anciently the Eſtate of the Derings; of Peter Dering in King Edward the Iſt's Reign, and of Sir John Dering in King Edward the IId's Reign. Another part of it is called Dering's Way. And in King Edward the IVth's Time this Family had a very fine Houſe here, which was then called Dering's Marſh-Place.

This Account I had from the Dering Manuſcript, preſerved in the Library at Surenden.

10. Dengeneſs, is a Point or Cape of Land here running out about Two Miles into the Sea, it adjoins to Walland in Dengemerſh; and was famous formerly for Earl Godwine's landing here, A. D. 1052, who marched hence to London, and overawed the Nobles and Biſhops ſo far, that they obtained his Peace with the King.

The Neſs (or Noſe) Point lies out in a flat Sea, which is dangerous to Ships; on which account here is a Lighthouſe built, which is a Tower of Stone, with a Place made on the Top of it for a Hearth and Grate, where a Fire of Sea Coals is kept every Night, in order that Ships and Veſſels may keep off the Flats and Shoals.

Dr. Batteley thinks the Lapis Tituli of Nennius (Hiſt. Brit. c. 46.) was here at Stone-End; at the Lapis appoſitus in ultimo Terræ. (Somner Rom. Port. p. 47.) becauſe Bound Stones uſed to be called Tituli, by the Scriptores Rei Agrariæ, vid. Antiqu. Rutupin. p. 11.

LILE Cirice, or Lilly Church, was a Pariſh in the Dioceſe of Rocheſter formerly, and is mentioned in the Liſt of ſuch Pariſhes in the Textus Roffenſis, f. 221.

LIDDON, Lyddon, Lidden, called Ledene, in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt; lies towards the Eaſt Part of Kent, about three Miles and a half North-Weſtward from Dover, in the Bailiwick of Stowting, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in the Lath of Shipway: Part of it is in the Hundred of Bewsborough, and Lath of St. Auſtin, and the reſt is in the Hundred of Folkſtone, and Lath of Shipway. 'Tis all in the Deanery of Dover, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Church ſtands in the Hundred of Folkſtone, and is called St. Mary's. A Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 6 l. 6 s.

The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims here.

Places

Places of Note here:

1. Lydden Manor, this Place was anciently a Manor which belonged to the Knights Templers; but on the Extirpation of that Order in King Edward the IId's Time, it was by the Statutum de Terris Templariorum (made in the 17th Year of that Prince's Reign) ſettled on the Knights Hoſpitallers; and continued among their Revenue till King Henry the VIIIth put a final End to all the Monaſtick Orders at once; and then in the 36th Year of his Reign it was granted to John Wilde, Eſq; for Life only, and the Remainder in Fee to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury and his Succeſſors for ever.

I find ſince by the Records, that in King Edward the Iſt's Reign this Place belonged, as did alſo Cockleſcomb, to the Hoſpitallers of St. John of Jeruſalem; and therefore they were in Poſſeſſion before the Knights Templers were deſtroyed.

2. Cockleſcomb, and 3. Swinkfeild Mennes, were two other Places here, which firſt alſo belonged to the Knights-Templers, and then was given to the Hoſpitallers by the Statute above-mentioned: But after the General Suppreſſion in King Henry the VIIIth's Reign, the Crown granted them to Edward Monins, Eſq; whoſe Deſcendant Sir Edward Monins, was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

4. Swanton-Court is a Manor here which was very anciently the Eſtate of the Greenfords; the laſt of which was John Greenford, Eſq;, who dying in the 11th Year of King Edward the IVth without Iſſue Male, his only Daughter Alice marrying John Monins, Eſq;, carryed this Eſtate into that Family; and in Philpot's Time it was in the Poſſeſſion of Sir Edward Monins of Walderſhare, Baronet, above-mentioned.

LIMINGE, lies towards the South-Eaſt part of Kent, about two Miles Southward from Eleham, in the Bailiwick of Stowting, Hundred of Loningborough, Lath of Shipway, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in the Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery of Eleham, and Dioceſe of Canterbury, and the Church is dedicated to St. Mary and St. Eadburgh. 'Tis a Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 21 l. 10 s. And the Vicarage is there valued at 10 l. 18 s. 8 d. In the 25th Year of King Edward the IIId, this Church was held by the Lord Andomar de Rupy a Foreigner, and then Archdeacon of Canterbury, and valued at 20 l. per Ann.

The Liberty of Liminge claims over ſo much of this Place, as is in the lower half Hundred of Loningborough, and that of Eleham over the reſt; and the Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims alſo over the Manor of Liminge.

As to the Nunnery formerly here, you will have an Account of it in the Chapter about the Religious Houſes.

A. D. 693, Wightred King of Kent gave to the Church of St. Mary's here, but I doubt for the Uſe of the Nunnery, four Plowlands, lying in a Place called Nunhelmeſton.

Dr. Gale conjectures, that at this Village the Two Roman Ways, one from Lenham to Saltwood Caſtle, and the other from Canterbury to Stutfal Caſtle, do interſect each other, as indeed they do not far from it, but much nearer to Limpne; and that the word Lemen, now vulgarly ſounded Leming, was by our early Anceſtors uſed to denote a Publick Way: Thus the Military Way going from Aldburgh to Catarick, or from Iſurium to Cataractonium, is called Leming Lane; and a Town near it is called Leming: So in Glouceſterſhire on the Foſſway there is a Town called Lemington; and he thinks that Lenham in Kent had its Name on the ſame Account, as being ſituate on a Roman Way; And if this Derivation be good, as I can't diſprove it, one would think our Limhill in Kent, and the Town of Lemington in Hantſhire were named after the ſame manner; as being both ſituate on or near the Roman Way: Hence alſo our Portus Lemanis; and, as this Author conjectures, the famous Lacus Lemanus alſo might receive their Name. Nay, the Learned Doctor, ſuppoſes there was a Roman Military Way which went from Hithe (retrogrado curſu) to the Thames, and to have given Name on that Account to Lambeth, which he thinks ſhould be written Leme-hith, the Port and Publick Way.

And indeed, as I ſhew in the Chapter of Roman Ways, that the Watlingſtreet Way to Dover, croſſed the Thames at Lambeth; and as I find Lambeth written in many old Deeds and Charters Lambythe, I take this Conjecture to be very well grounded.

Places of Note here.

1. Liminge Manor, this, which before belonged to the Nunnery, was, on the general Suppreſſion of the Religious Houſes in King Henry the VIIIth's Time, granted to the See of Canterbury: But Archbiſhop Cranmer, in the 29th Year of that King, exchanged it for other Lands with the Crown; and then that Prince in his 36th Year, granted it to Sir Anthony Aucher, who was ſlain afterwards at Calais in the brave Defence of that City againſt the Duke of Guiſe, who cloſely beſieged it with a French Army; and in this Family it tarried till Anthony Aucher of Bourne, Eſq; ſold it in Philpot's Time to Sir John Roberts of Canterbury; But in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, I find the Archbiſhop of Canterbury had a Warren at this Place; for one John, Son of Peter de Hardreſs, was accuſed before the Juſtices Itinerant for Hunting here.

2. Eaſt-Leigh was the Seat of a Family here, which ſeem to have derived their Name of Leigh from hence; for William and Robert de Leigh both held Land here in Knights Service of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, in the 20th Year of King Edward the IIId; but in the Beginning of King Edward the IVth, it was got into the Poſſeſſion of the Allens, who came from about Borden and Sittingbourn: From this Name, in the next Age, it was alienated to Fogge, who ſoon after ſent it the ſame way to Cobbe of Cobbes Court, not far diſtant; from hence, in a few Years, it went by Sale to Salkeld; and thence the ſame way to Sawkins; and now in Right of his Wife, Daughter of Mr. William Sawkins, is in the Poſſeſſion of Mr. Anſell.

3. Sibeton, vulgarly called Sibton and Sifton; this is another Manor in Liminge, which anciently belonged to the Name of Tibetot; for Robert Tibetot died poſſeſs'd of it in the 17th Year of King Edward the IIId: His Son ſeems to have ſold it to Walter Leigh of Eaſt-Leigh in this Pariſh; and Thomas Leigh died poſſeſs'd of it in the 17th Year of King Henry the VIth; but after this it was ſold to Allen, where it ſtaid not long, before it paſſed the ſame way to Sir John Hales, who was Baron of the Exchequer in the Reign of King Henry the VIIIth; hence in an Age or Two it went to Salkeld, and thence to the Anceſtors of Mr. John Sawkins of Canterbury, Attorney at Law, the preſent Poſſeſſor.

LIMPNE, Limne, Lime, Limen, Limeane, Leman; 'tis very probable, as the Learned Dr. Gale conjectures in his Antonines Itinerary, that this place was ſo called from Lemen, which was uſed very early to ſignify (as I have lately obſerved from him) a Publick Military Way; For the Roman Way from Canterbury to Stutfall ending here, both named the Pariſh, and the Port then below; which from this Roman Way was called the Portus Lemanis: It lies towards the South-East ſide of Kent, about two Miles Weſtward from Hithe, in the Lath of Shipway, and Eaſt Diviſion of the County. Part of it is in the Bailiwick of Stowting, and Hundred of Heane, ſome of it in the Bailiwick of Shipway, and Hundred of Streete, and the reſt in the Bailiwick of Shipway and Hundred of Wroth. 'Tis all in the Deanery of Limpne, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. A Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 9*l.* 1*s.* 4*d. per Ann.* The Church ſtands in the Hundred of Streete, out of the Liberty of Romney Marſh; but the Liberty of the Marſh claims in ſome Parts of the Pariſh; and where it doth ſo, that Part is in the Diviſion of the Juſtices of the Corporation of Romney Marſh; and the reſt is in the Diviſion of Juſtices of the Lath of Shipway. The Church is Dedicated to St. Stephen, and A. D. 1379. was valued at 20*l. per Ann.* after the Tenths were Taxed. 'Tis an old Building, and ſeems to have been formerly much larger. In the Church are ſeveral old Tombſtones with Croſſes on them, which perhaps belonged to ſome of the Hermits of the Chapel here at Court of Street.

Port

In the Church alſo are Memorials of the Interment of Finch, who married a Twiſden.

In the Year 755, as appears by an Ancient Charter in the Cotton Library, there was a Salt-work in this Pariſh.

Places of Note here:

1. Limne-Court; this anciently was, and ſtill is a Manor; and perhaps the Park which was formerly here, and called Limne Park, belonged to the Owners of it: 'Tis now part of the Eſtate of Fettiplace Nott, Eſq; and it was this Place, and not Berwick, as Philpot miſtakes it, that was formerly the Seat of the Archdeacon of Canterbury.

2. Northern Town; this is the Name of a Part of this Pariſh, of which Mr. Nott juſt abovementioned is the Proprietor; and he acquaints me, that here are continually found the Ruins of many old Buildings; and many more have formerly been dug up, which makes it probable that this was part of the ancient Town of Limne in the Time of the Romans, when they made uſe of the Portus Lemanis below; and it receives further Confirmation from the ſame kind of Ruins having been diſcovered alſo on the South ſide of the Hill.

3. Courtop-ſtreet, vulgarly, but truly, ſaith Lambard, Court of Street; and Bellirica or rather Bellcaire anciently, i. e. Bello Caſtrum, the fair Caſtle. The Opinion of the Inhabitants of this Place (ſaith Leland) is, that Courtop-ſtreet, hath been ſome worthy Town; and for Proof thereof, they ſhew the Ruins of their fair Caſtle that ſtood hard by the Chapel here; and they do yet preſerve Signa Prætoriana; that is, a Mace and a Horn, which are aſſured Badges of a Corporation; But Leland rightly thinks it to have been only part of the Port of Limne, as it is now only a part of the Pariſh. This Place and Manor, Philpot ſaith, was once, and that very early, part of the Eſtate of the Ancient and Eminent Family of Hadloe: Nicholas de Hadloe had the Grant of Free-warren, of a Weekly Market on Fridays, and of an Annual Fair for three Days at St. Martins-Tide for this Manor, in the 41ſt Year of King Henry the IIId; and either himſelf or his Father is in the Liſt of thoſe Kentiſh Gentlemen who accompanied King Richard the Iſt at the Siege of Acon in the Holy War: John de Hadloe is among thoſe brave Gentlemen of this County, who attended King Edward the Iſt in his Siege of Carlaverack in Scotland, and was there made a Knight Baronet in the Field, by that Prince in his 28th Year; and in the 7th Year of King Edward the Iſt, claimed and was allowed the above-mentioned Privileges of a Manor here. In the 10th Year of King Edward the IId, a Licenſe was granted to John Hadloe, and to Maud his Wife, to Fortify and Embattle divers Caſtles and Manors, of which this was one; and hence it came to be called a Caſtle: And in King Edward the IIId's Reign, this Gentleman was called to ſit in Parliament as a Baron; but by Alice, one of the Daughters and Co-heirs of his Son Nicholas de Hadloe, this Eſtate went in Marriage to John Colvill; and from him it deſcended regularly down to Edward Colvile, Eſq; who in the 35th Year of King Henry the VIIIth, ſold it to Edward Thwaits, and he in the 11th Year of Queen Elizabeth, parted with it the ſame way to Edward Jackman; from which Name it alienated to Sir William Hewet; who ſettled it by Will on his third Son Mr. William Hewett, and he was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

In my Account of the Nunnery of Kent, under Aldington, I have mentioned Court at Street, as if it were in that Pariſh; but though it be very near, it is not ſo, but in Limne.

4. Bellaview, is not a Manor here, as Philpot ſaith it is; but was an Ancient and Moated Seat of the Family of Criol, before they ſettled at Oaſtenhanger; and came to them by Marriage of an Heireſs of the Name of Auberville. To this Family of Crioll belonged alſo,

5. Otterpoole, a Manor which by Joan, Daughter of Bertram de Crioll, went in Marriage to Richard de Rokeſley, in the 20th Year of King Edward the Iſt; and then by a Daughter of that Name to Thomas de Poynings; and in this Family it continued till Sir Edward Poynings eſcheated it to the Crown for want of lawful Iſſue in King Henry the VIIIth's Reign. On this, that Prince grants Bellaview immediately to Richard Bernys, Eſq;; and he ſoon ſold it to Thomas Wombwell of Northfleet; who in the 25th Year of King Henry the VIIIth, alienated it to Peter Heyman, Eſq;; and thence it went the ſame Way to Bedingfield; and being by Gavel-kind Cuſtom divided among the Sons of one of that Family, they all united in a Sale of it to Sir Edward Hales, Knight and Baronet; whoſe Grandſon Mr. Edward Hales was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time. But Otterpoole ſtaid in the Crown till the 37th Year of King Henry the VIIIth, and then was by Grant given to Sir James Hales; from which Family about the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth it was ſold to Thomas Smith, Eſq; commonly called Cuſtomer Smith; whoſe Deſcendant Philip Viſcount Strangford, was in Philpot's Time the Poſſeſſor of it; but this Place, as well as Oſtenhanger hard by in the Pariſh of Stanford, are now become the Eſtate of Juſtinian Champneys, Eſq; of Boxley Abbey in this County.

6. Wellop, is an Independant Manor here, and by no means appendant to Otterpoole, as Philpot makes it; being indeed one of the Lordſhips of the Marſh, it went as Otterpoole and Bellaview did from the Criolls to the Poynings; and then eſcheating with them to the Crown, the Fee-ſimple continued there till King Charles the Iſt's Time, and then was granted to Sir Edward Hales; though there had been in King Henry the VIIIth's Reign a Leaſe of it let to Knatchbull, but for what Term of Years I don't know. But Sir Edward Hales of Tonſtall, Baronet, and Grandſon to the above-named Grantee, was in Poſſeſſion of it in Philpot's Time. As to,

7. Berewick in this Pariſh, which Philpot ſaith, on the Suppreſſion of the Priory of Chriſt-Church, was re-given to the Archdeacon of Canterbury; and who had here, long before that, a Caſtellated Manſion, ſeated on the Brow of a Hill; Mr.

Mr. Nott informs me 'tis all a Miſtake; and that his Houſe of Limne-Court, was that which formerly belonged to the Arch-deacon, as I obſerved above. The Berewick then mentioned in Domeſday, if Philpot quote it right, muſt lie in ſome other Pariſh.

At this Place of Limne Prince Edward Son to King Henry the IIId, being then Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, took an Oath of Fidelity, from the Lords Barons Inhabitants of the ſame, to his Father, againſt thoſe who were engaged in the Barons Wars.

8. Stutfall-Caſtle was formerly a very ſtrong Place in this Pariſh, it contains within it about 10 Acres of Land; is plainly of Roman Original, and appears with the Face of Noble Antiquity. Its Walls are indeed now much broken and decayed; and Somner thinks that Limne Church and the Archdeacon's Houſe near it were both built out of the Ruins of it. The Walls were very thick, and have Three or Four double Ranges of Roman Bricks or Tiles, laid at about Five Foot Diſtance one from another; much after the Manner of thoſe which I ſhall ſpeak of in Richborough Caſtle: But theſe Tiles or Bricks have Edges turned back as Right-Angles to the Plains of their Lengths, to make them take the firmer Hold of the Mortar, which I did not obſerve thoſe at Richborough to have. Theſe Courſes of Bricks ſeem to be the Διάζωσις of Vitruvius, Lib. 2. cap. 8. Qui maximè religando confirmant parietem ſoliditate: In ſuch Caſes, where you work with round Pebbles, Flints, Chalk-ſtones, or any Stones of ſmall Dimenſions.

This Caſtle is ſituated on the Hanging or Falling of the Hill, below Limne Church; the lower Side of it coming down almoſt to the Valley. And I judge it had the Name of Studdefall, from Studa or Styde, a Bulwark or Place of Strength, rather than from Stod, a Steed or Stallion; for its being a Place to breed Colts in, was but a latter Circumſtance of it. At its Foot, I doubt not at all, was the Old,

9. Lemanis Portus, or the Ancient Haven or Roman Port at the Mouth of the River Limen, now called the Rother. That River which now diſcharges it ſelf into the Sea at Rye in Suſſex, did anciently run along here by Stutfall Caſtle, towards Hurſt, Bonnington, Bilſington, Rucking, Ham Green, Wereborn, and ſo under Kenardington Hill to Appledore, eſpecially at low Water, and at Niep Tides: For the Cliffs of the Hills are now to be ſeen waſhed or worn away by the former Courſe of the Water, all along under theſe Places; and the Ground ſtill remains lower here, than in any other Part of the Marſh; which appears by the Ditches; which as Dr. Plot in ſome Manuſcript Papers communicated to me had obſerved, will remain full here; when thoſe higher in the Merſh, as about Dym-Church, Romney, &c. are ſo empty, that the very Sewers have little Work to do.

Talbot in his Comment upon Antoninus his Itinerary, ſaith, the Haven of Limne ſtood at firſt under a high Rock in the Pariſh of Limne; where was alſo ſituated the ſtrong Caſtle of Stutfall, for the Defence of the Port; for here the Captain of the Company of the Turnacenſis (a Band of Roman Forces, ſo called from Tornacum, now Tourney in Flanders) under the Command of the Comes Litoris Saxonici, or Lieutenant of the Saxon Shore, had his Station: As you find in the Notitia of the Weſtern Empire.

That this Place was the old Portus Lemanis, all Writers almoſt agree, but Mr. Somner: And he fancies it to have been New Romney; for Reaſons which I ſhall conſider and refute, when I come to ſpeak of that Place. As to the Numbers in the Itinerary of Antoninus, expreſſing the Diſtance between the Portus Lemanis and Durovernum (or Canterbury) to be xvi. Miles, they agree very well with this Situation, without altering them to ſerve a Turn, as many Writers boldly do. To Studfall-Caſtle the Roman Military Way from Canterbury, which is now called Stone-ſtreet, can be fairly traced; lying ſtrait and conſpicuous to this Day; which is of it ſelf a convincing Argument that this was the Portus Lemanis.

But when it began firſt to be their uſual Port; when they left Sandwich or Richborough, to make uſe of Dover; and when they diſuſed that Port to come to this, 'tis very hard to determine: Nor is it much more eaſy to tell when this Portus Lemanis it ſelf did grow out of Uſe. But plain it is that the Sea did ſo deſert it, as to render it in Time uſeleſs: And then, as I have ſhewed in Hithe, 'tis probable their next Port was at Willup Gutt; after this, at Weſt Hithe; then perhaps in the Valley which runs up near Saltwood-Caſtle, where within this Forty Years was an Anchor dug up; and which ſeems to have been a Port before they had recourſe to Hithe; which I believe lay always open as it doth now, and expoſed to the Sea. And I conjecture that theſe Places were all made Ports before the Inning of Romney Marſh. There is a paved Way after the Roman Manner leading to Saltwood-Caſtle, all the Way up the Hill, which no doubt was the Way from the Port of Hithe, leading into the former Roman one, from Stutfall to Canterbury: And I am entirely of the Learned Dr. Gale's Opinion, that both from Stutfall formerly, and now from Saltwood, the Romans had alſo another Roman Way, which went directly to London, without going to Canterbury; and perhaps that Suppoſition will ſerve to account for many Things, otherwiſe unintelligible and inexplicable; of which more in the Chapter of Roman Ways.

The Place where the Danes entred with 250 Sail of Ships in King Alfred's Time, I take not to have been this Portus Lemanis, but a latter Mouth of the Limen, when it opened into the Sea about New Romney: Of which more when I ſpeak of that Town.

10. Shipway, Shipweyham, in the old Records often Shipway-Croſs, is a Place lying about half a Mile Eaſtward from Limne-Church, down on the left Hand, as you go from Weſtenhanger to Hithe; which very probably took its Name from the Ships taking their Way under it towards and from the Portus Lemanis. This was formerly ſo conſiderable a Place as to have denominated the whole Lath; which from hence is called the Lath of Shipway; the Ancient Name of this Lath was Limewareleth, i. e. the Lath of the Men of Limne. Somner ſuggeſts, with great Probability, that becauſe it lies as it were in the Middle between the two Extremes of the Cinque Ports, Sandwich and Haſtings, it was therefore pitched upon for the Place where the Limen Archa, or Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, was to be ſworn at his ſolemn Entrance into his Office; and for holding alſo all Plea's and great Aſſemblies relating to the Ports: And here it was, as Lambard concludes from a Paſſage in Bracton, that the Barons of the Five Ports uſed to appear before the Juſtices Itinerant.

The following Account of the Ancient Court of Shipway, is from a Parchment Manuſcript kindly communicated to me by Sir Baſil Dixwell, Bar. Lieutenant of Dover-Caſtle.

Court of Shipway.

ANY Time after his Patent, the Warden of the Ports, may under the Seal of his Office, order each Mayor and Bailiff of the Ports and and their Members, to ſend ſix, five, or four of their diſcreeteſt Jurats to attend him at the uſual Place of holding the Court of Shipway, and at a Time in the Summons appointed.

The Warden being there in Perſon, and the Court Sitting, Three Solemn Proclamations ſhall be made thus:

" All Mayors, Bailiffs, and Jurats of the Five " Ports, and their Members, that be ſummon'd " and named to appear in their proper Perſons " before my Lord Warden at this the King's Ma- " jeſty's Court of Shipway, here to be holden " this Day; draw ye near and attend to the " Court, upon the Peril that ſhall fall of it.

As to the Priority of delivering in the Precepts conſtituting the Jurats to attend: Haſting is always firſt called, then Dover and Sandwich, and which firſt the Court pleaſeth; then Rye and Winchelſea, which firſt the Court pleaſeth; then Hythe and Romney, after the ſame Manner; then Feverſham, Fordwich, and Folkſtone; and laſtly, Lydd, Pevenſey, Seaford, and Tenterden.

After this the Lord Warden's Patent or Commiſſion, and his Letter of Attendance annexed thereunto, muſt be read.

Then one of the Mayors of the five Ports, or Principal Towns, ſhall give the Charge to the Lord Warden thus:

" Sir, Ye ſhall keep and maintain the Fran- " chiſes, Liberties, and Cuſtoms, and Uſages, " of the Five Ports, in all that ye may do by " the Allegiance that ye owe unto the King of " England, and by your Knighthood.

And the Lord Warden ſhall hold up his Right Hand Breaſt high and more, and ſhall ſay, Yea, and if God will, I ſhall to my Power.

N. B. The Warden is not obliged to ſwear upon a Book, nor to repeat the Words of the Charge above; but only to hold up his Hand and ſay, Yea.

After this he is honourably received and acknowledged, and uſually hath a Preſent made him. Nothing more is done the firſt Day, unleſs any Writ or Mandamus be brought from the King: But the Court is adjourn'd by Proclamation, to the next Summons. And formely the Court uſed to be treated by the Lord Warden at the Caſtle of Saltwood.

And whenever the Court is to be holden for any other Cauſe; as, on a Complaint made for want of Juſtice done by any Mayor, Bailiff, &c. then lawful Warning of 40 Days muſt be given to all the Ports, to ſend their Repreſentatives thither, and the Lord Warden muſt be there in Perſon; for no Court of Shipway can be held, except the King himſelf, or the Lord Warden be preſent.

At the Time of Meeting, Three Proclamations ſhall be made as above; and then an Enqueſt of 12 Barons of the Ports ſhall be impannelled and ſworn; to enquire of Treaſonable Words, counterfeiting the King's Seal; counterfeited, clipped, or debaſed Coin; of Treaſure found and concealed; or if any Mayor, &c. hath given falſe and erroneous Judgment; or if any of the Ports have withdrawn or withheld their Part (on due Summons and Warning of 40 Days) towards fitting out the Royal Navy. And Treaſon ſpeaking, and falſe Coining, was to be puniſhed with Death; the other Crimes by Fines, Impriſonment, &c.

Their Order of Sitting is thus: The Lord Warden's Seat is in the Middle; on his Right and Left, the Mayors of Sandwich and Dover; the third Place on the Right, is the Mayor of Haſtings. The Fourth, on the Right and Left, belongs to Romney and Hythe. The Fifth, to Winchelſea or Rye. The Sixth, to Feverſham, Folkſtone, or Fordwich. The Seventh, to Lydd, Pevenſey, or Seaford: The laſt to Tenterden.

Then Proclamation ſhall be thrice made in Engliſh, requiring all the Mayors, Bailiffs, or Jurats to anſwer to their Names, and to attend the Court, as called over in the Order that they ſit. And after the Court is ſettled in this Form and Order, a Jury of 12 Barons ſhall be impannelled out of the Perſons preſent, whoſe Oath ſhall be this:

" You ſhall truly Enquire, truly Preſent, and " a true Verdict Give, of all the Points and Ar- " ticles, that ought to be enquired of at this " the King's Court of Shipway, according to " the Ancient Cuſtoms and Uſages of the ſame: " Ye ſhall not ſpare for any Thing the Truth " to ſay of all that ye ſhall be charged with by " this Court, as far forth as ye do or may know. " So God you help, and your Holy Dame, by " this Book, &c.

After they are all ſworn, the Seneſchal or Steward of the Court ſhall recite to them the ſeveral Articles of their Enquiry; which are ſuch as have been above-mentioned: And likewiſe whether any Port hath taken unlawful Cuſtoms of Merchants, &c.

If any Mayor or Jurats have a ſufficient Excuſe for his Abſence, he may make a Deputy.

But ſuch Excuſe muſt be certified under the Seal of his proper Port, or elſe he ſhall be fined 13 s. 4 d.

If one of them don't appear when called over, unleſs Affidavit be made of a Reaſonable Excuſe, he ſhall be fined a Noble.

If a Man be indicted at this Court for Treaſon done or ſaid againſt the King, Queen, or Heir Apparent; or for arreſting the King's People, and diſturbing them againſt the King's Peace; or for clipping, falſifying, or debaſing current Coin: On his being convict, and preſent, he ſhall be ſentenced immediately to be drawn round about the Place of Shipway, and then to be hanged in the ſame Place, till he be dead.

If the Offender be not preſent, it ſhall be given in Charge to the Mayors of the Towns of Hithe and Romney to make diligent Search for him, and to bring him to the Court, that he may receive the aforeſaid Puniſhment.

If any Mayor, Bailiff, &c. be indicted for giving falſe or erroneous Judgment, in any Cauſe that came before him, he ſhall immediately riſe out of his Place, and ſtand before the Lord Warden; and if he be convict, he ſhall be depoſed from his Office, and the Town diſfranchiſed during the King's Pleaſure.

But if on a Hearing, the Judgment given approve it to be right, then his Accuſer ſhall be immediately committed to Gaol, without Bail or Mainpriſe: And there remain till he hath paid ſuch a fine to the King, as ſhall be impoſed on him by the Court.

The like Procedure and Judgment ſhall be againſt him that is convict of withdrawing or with-holding the King's Service of Ships on the Sea.

If a Man be found guilty of concealing Treaſure found, he ſhall be arreſted by the Lord Warden's Marſhal, and lie in Priſon till he hath paid a Fine ſet by the Court.

The ſame Proceſs and Puniſhment is for him, that hath taken unlawful Cuſtom, &c.

When all is ended, the Court ſhall be adjourned or diſſolved by Proclamation, &c.

LINSTED lies towards the North Part of Kent, about Three Miles South Eaſtward from Milton, in the Bailiwick and Lath of Scray, Hundred of Tenham, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and upper one of Juſtices in that Lath.

The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims here.

'Tis in the Deanery of Oſpringe, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. And the Church is Dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul. The Building is ſmall, but neat, with a Spire Steeple. In it is a fair Monument of Chriſtopher Roper, Eſq; and of his Lady, in the Year 1622; he was Son to the Right Honourable John Roper, Baron of Tenham. Another very fair one of that Sir John Roper, Baron of Tenham, and his Lady the Daughter of Sir Richard Park, A. D. 1618. Several Monuments of the Hugeſſans, who have a Chancel here.

'Tis a Vicarage; and valued in the King's Books at 8 l. 3. s. 10 d.

Places of Note here:

1. Linſted Lodge, the preſent Seat of the Right Honourable the Lord Roper, Baron of Tenham. 'Tis a good Houſe, and finely ſituated in the midſt of a pleaſant Park.

2. Bedmancore. This Place was very anciently Part of the Eſtate of the Cheyneys; the laſt of which Family here, was William de Cheyney, who died poſſeſt of it in the 8th Year of King Edward the IIId. The principal Seat of this Family was at Patricksborn. Next it came, in the 27th Year of King Edward the IIId, into the Poſſeſſion of William de Apulderfield; who was deſcended from Henry de Apulderfield of Apulderfield in Cowdham: And both he and his Son were with King Richard the Iſt, at the Siege of Acon in Paleſtine. Another Henry de Apulderfield attended King Henry the IIId, in his Expedition into Gaſcony: And his Son of the ſame Name, with John de Lovelott, were, I believe, the firſt that ever ſate as Juſtices of Sewers, in this County, for Romney Marſh. Their Commiſſion bears date Nov. 15. in the 16th Year of King Edward the Iſt. This Gentleman alſo was Sheriff of Kent in the 28th, 31ſt, 34th, 35th, 36th, 38th, and 44th Years of King Edward the IIId, and kept his Shrievalty at Linſted. His Son of the ſame Name was Sheriff of this County, in the laſt Year of King Edward the IIId. But his Great Grandſon Sir William Apulderfield, leaving only one Daughter Elizabeth; by her this Manor went in Marriage to Sir John Phineux, Lord Chief Juſtice of the King's Bench, in Henry the VIIth's Reign; and who lies buried in Hern Church, in this County: He left only Two Daughters; Mildred, who was married to James Diggs of Diggs-Court in Berham, Eſq; ; and Jane, who carried this Eſtate to her Husband, John Roper, Eſq; whoſe Deſcendant Chriſtopher Lord Roper, Baron of Tenham, was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time. And in that Noble Family I ſuppoſe it ſtill continues.

3. Sewards. This Place was once the Seat of a Branch of the Family of the Finches, ſeveral of which were placed alſo at Kingſdown, Norton, Selling, and other Places in this Neigbourhood. But the Sole Heir of this Houſe of Sewards was married to Sir Drew Drury of Norfolk, who was Gentleman Uſher of the Privy Chamber to Queen Elizabeth; and he built the great Houſe againſt the Church here. Mr. James Hugeſſen kept his Shrievalty here in the 17th Year of King Charles the Iſt, having bought this Eſtate of Sir Drew Drury's Heir; and his Great Grandſon William, Son of Sir William Hugeſſen of Provender in Norton, is the preſent Poſſeſſor.

LINTON, lies about the Middle of Kent, about Three Miles and a half Southward from Maidſtone, in that Hundred, and Bailiwick of Eyhorn, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Eaſt one of Juſtices in that Lath. The Liberty of Maidſtone claims over it. 'Tis in the Deanery of Sutton, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. And the Church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. In it are Memorials of the Interment of Welldiſh; and a fair Marble Monument of Sir Anthony Maney, and his Lady, (who was a Tanfield) with both their Figures in white Marble; another with Three Figures alſo in Marble of —— Maney, and his Two Wives, but the Inſcription is near obliterated. The Pariſh is put down as a Vicarage in Biſhop Williams's Map; but in the Valor Beneficiorum, 'tis called a Perpetual Donative; and rated at 7 l. 13 s. 4 d.

Places of Note here:

1. Capells Court. This was anciently the Seat of a Family of the Name of Capell, which had Eſtates alſo in the Neighbouring Pariſhes: John at Capell held Lands in Boxley, called Tattlemell, in the 27th Year of King Henry the IIId. Thomas and James at Capell were taxed at Two Hobelers, or Light Horſe, for Dengemerſt, in the 11th Year of King Edward the IIId: And this Family ſtaid here till King Henry the VIth; but then this Eſtate got ſome how into the Poſſeſſion of Baeſden, where it continued a good while; but at laſt was ſold to Sir Anthony Maney, Grandfather of Sir John Maney, Knight and Baronet, who was in Poſſeſſion in Philpot's Time.

There were ſome Lands in this Pariſh which for many Deſcents were the Eſtate of a Family of the Name of Welldiſh, who claimed their Original from one of that Name who was Huntſman to King William the Iſt; and therefore they bore in their Coat 3 Talbots, and on a Cheife a Fox. They had formerly a Chapel here which bore there Name, and was called Welldiſh's Chapel. But at laſt the Eſtate they had here was purchaſed by Sir Walter Maney; and in Philpot's Time was in the Poſſeſſion of his Deſcendant Sir John Maney.

LISNA is the Name of a Pariſh in the Dioceſe of Rocheſter, which I find mentioned as ſuch in the Textus Roffenſis. But I have met with it no where elſe; nor is there any Thing ſaid of it: Perhaps it is Leſnes.

LITTLEBOURN, lies towards the Eaſt Part of Kent, by the River Stoure, about Three Miles North Eaſtward from Canterbury, in the Bailiwick of Bridge and Petham, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath.

The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims here: But that of St. Auſtin claims over the Manor of Littlebourn, as well alſo as over all the Pariſh; becauſe it is in the Hundred of Downhamford, which belonged to that Abbey.

'Tis in the Deanery of Bridge, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; and the Church is dedicated to St. Vincent. 'Tis a Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 8 l. per Ann.

Places of Note here:

1. Listlebourn Manor. This was given to the Abbey of St. Auſtin's, by Wightred King of Kent, above 1000 Years ago: And in the 21ſt Year of King Edward Iſt, I find the Abbot of that Convent claiming the uſual Privileges of a Manor here before the Juſtices itinerant.

What

What came of it at the general Suppreſſion in King Henry the VIIIth's Time, Philpot doth not tell us.

2. Welle or Well-Court is another Manor in this Pariſh, which anciently had Proprietors of that Name, who formerly were written at-Well: One of this Name, John de Welle, in the 44th Year of King Henry the IIId, made Ranulph Forester his Feoffee in Truſt; who for his Uſe ſold this Manor to Reginald de Cornbill; by whoſe Daughter and Heir it went in Marriage to one of the Garwingtons of Bekesbourn; in which Family it continued for four Deſcents; and then by Margaret, a Kinſwoman of William Garwington, who deceaſed without Iſſue, it went in Marriage to Richard Haut, who was a ſecond Branch of the Hauts of Bourn. This Gentleman's Son of the ſame Name left only a Daughter Margery, who carried it to her Husband Mr. William Iſaack; and his Son Edward Iſaack leaving only Two Daughters; the firſt, Mary, married Thomas Apylton of Waldingfield in Suffolk; and the other married firſt a Sydley, and then Sir Henry Palmer; whoſe Deſcendant alienated this Manor, which came to him by his Lady, to Lieutenant-Colonel Prude, who was ſlain at Maſtricht; his Son Mr. Searles Prude, left only Two Daughters and Coheirs; one of which, Anne, was married to Chriſtopher May, of Rawmere in Suſſex, Eſq;; and carried to him beſides this Manor, that of Wingate in this Pariſh.

3. Wingate, the Capital Houſe and Lands thereunto belonging, called Garwingtons, and ſeveral other Lands and Farm-Houſes in the Pariſhes of Minſter and St. Lawrence in the Iſle of Thanet; and in Wymingſwold: All which by Anne his only Daughter and Heir went in Marriage to Colonel William Broadnax of Godmerſham, Eſq; Son of the late Sir William Broadnax; and he is now the Poſſeſſor.

4. Lukedale is a Manor here, which in the 44th Year of King Henry the IIId, came into the Poſſeſſion of Reginald de Cornbill, by Exchange for other Lands with John de St. Leger: And here he founded a Chantry called Lukedale's Chantry (of which I will give a further Account in the Chapter of Religious Houſes.) In the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, this Manor was in the Poſſeſſion of this Family of Cornbill; as appears by the Pleas of the Crown before the Juſtices Itinerant in Kent at that Time.

The Manor of Wingate above-mentioned, the Account of which Philpot hath quite omitted, ſeems to have had once Proprietors of that Name; for I find Henry, Son of Thomas Wingate, claiming Lands and Tenements here, in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt; and Chriſtina his Daughter claimed alſo at the ſame Time a conſiderable Quantity of Lands in this Pariſh; as appears by the Records of the Proceedings of the Juſtices Itinerant in this County at that Time.

LONGFEILD, in the Text. Roffenſ. Langefelda, lies towards the North ſide of Kent, about Three Miles Southward from Graveſend, in the Bailiwick of Sutton Dartford, Hundred of Axtone, Lath of Sutton-at-Hone, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Upper One of Juſtices in that Lath.

The Liberty of the Biſhop of Rocheſter claims over part of it.

'Tis in the Deanery and Dioceſe of Rocheſter, and the Church is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen. A Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 5 l. 17 s. 6 d. per Ann.

In the Church are no Monuments or Inſcriptions; but in the Church-yard is an Altar-Tomb in Memory of Dr. —— Plume, late Arch-deacon of Rocheſter, and Miniſter of Greenwich in this County: 'Tis encloſed with wooden Rails; and a Sum of Money is left to keep it in Repair. The Arch-deacon left a good many Benefactions; and in particular a new Mathematick Profeſſorſhip in the Univerſity of Cambridge, for the Improvement of Algebra.

Philpot ſaith nothing of this Place.

The Farm-Houſe by the Church here ſeems by its arched Windows and Door-Caſes of Stone, to have been formerly a Place of ſome Note; perhaps a Cell or Retiring Place for ſome of the Monks of Rocheſter. For Longfeild-Court, is an Eſtate here which very anciently belonged to the Priory of St. Andrews in that City; for it was bequeathed to that Convent by the Will of one Brichtric (a) and Elfswithe his Wife above 700 Years ago:) See the Will at large in Meopham). He gave it as two Sulings or Plow-lands; but by that Time Domeſday Book was made, it came to be eſteemed at but one Plowland; for thus I find it cited in our Textus Roffenſis, f. 209.

Langefelda ſe defendebat T. E. R. pro uno Solino & nunc ſimiliter et eſt appretiat. C. ſolidi.

One Field of this Eſtate of about 14 Acres, and lying on the South ſide of the Way leading from Longfield towards Dartford, is called Fighting Acre: (Note, the word Acre anciently was uſed as largely as the Latin Ager for a Field in general:) and this very probably perpetuates the Memory of ſome Battel fought here; perhaps between the Danes and Saxons.

LOOSE, Loſe, in Saxon Hloſe; from Hloſan to loſe; perhaps ſo named from the little River's loſing it ſelf here; of which below.

It lies towards the Middle of Kent, by the River Medway, about Two Miles Southward from Maidſtone, in that Hundred, but in the Bailiwick of Eyborne, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Upper one of Juſtices in that Lath.

The Liberty of Maidſtone claims over it. 'Tis in the Deanery of Sutton, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. A Curacy, and ſo not valued in the King's Books; tho' put down in Biſhop Williams's Map as a Vicarage.

The Church is ſmall, but in good Repair, but without any Monuments or Inſcriptions.

Mr. Richard Beale, a Hamburgh Merchant, formerly of this Pariſh, left 500 l. for an Augmentation to the Living of Looſe; and with that Money 25 l. per Ann. was purchaſed and appropriated to that Uſe.

Places of Note here:

1. Looſe Manor was given to the Priory of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury, by one Sueta a Widow and her Daughter; and to her it came by the Gift of Ethelwulf, King of the South Saxons, about 850 Years ago. In Domeſday Book is this Entry about this Manor.

Hloſe eſt Manerium Monachorum & de Veſtitu eorum & pro 1. Sull. ſe defendit, quod Abel Monachus tenet & firmam Monachis reddit: Hoc. Sull. jacet in vj. Sull. de Fernlege.

Here you ſee was a Monk made a Farmer by his own Convent; which agreed well with his Vow of Poverty, and with the Notion of his excluding himſelf from the World; as the Monks of Rocheſter admitting Women into their Society, was a Security to their Chaſtity.

In the 7th Year of King Edward the Iſt, when the Prior of Chriſt-Church claimed the Liberties and Privileges of his Manors before J. de Reygate, and his Brother Juſtices Itinerant; there were ſome Exceptions as to this Manor of Loſe; as firſt, that a Thief taken in this Manor ſhould be carried to Maidſtone to be tried, but the Prior was to have his Goods and Chattels. He had not alſo Freewarren in this Manor; and the Tenants of it were alſo chargeable towards the Repair of Rocheſter Bridge.

Here this Manor ſtaid till the general Suppreſſion of the Monaſteries in King Henry the VIIIth's Time, who in his 33d Year ſettled it on his new founded Cathedral of Canterbury.

2. Pimps-Court, is a Place here which anciently was part of the Eſtate of the Family of Pimpe, but they uſually reſided at Nettleſtede. In the 20th Year of King Edward the IIId, William de Pimpe held this as a whole Knight's Fee; and from him deſcended John Pimpe, Eſq;, who was Sheriff of Kent in the 2d Year of King Henry the VIIth. This Gentleman ſold this Eſtate to Edward Stafford Duke of Buckingham, and Conſtable of England: But on his Attainder and Execution for High-Treaſon, King Henry the VIIIth, in his 13th Year, granted this Manor to Sir John Rainsford, and he ſold it to Sir Henry Iſley; who had the misfortune alſo to be attainted in the 2d Year of Queen Mary, for engaging in the Rebellion of Sir Thomas Wiat, and therefore this Eſtate being forfeited to the Crown again, was by that Queen granted to Sir John Baker, whoſe Deſcendant, Sir John Baker, Baronet, in Philpot's Time, ſold it to Thomas Lloyd of Gore-Court, Eſq;.

3. There is a ſmall Rivulet, which riſing in Langley, runs thro' this Pariſh, and ſo into the Medway between Eaſt Farley and Maidſtone; and tho' its Courſe be ſo ſhort, yet it drives two Fulling Mills, as many Corn Mills, and a Paper Mill; all ſituated within this Pariſh.

This Brook is ſuppoſed to run under Ground for near half a Mile, and then to break out again; and it certainly doth ſink into the Earth, at the place where the Gap is made to expreſs it, in the old Map of this County. But all this Pariſh doth ſo abound with Springs, and little Brooks, that it is not certain whether the Water that breaks out of the Earth again be the very ſame with that which ſunk in. But of this more in another Place. There is one fair Spring which riſes not far from the Church, and runs with a fine Stream thro' the Church-Yard. The Ground hereabouts is all Stoney, as it is indeed all round about Maidſtone, for a ſmall Extent.

LUDDENHAM, lies towards the North ſide of Kent, near the Iſle of Shepey, about two Miles and a half North-Weſtward from Feverſham, in the Bailiwick and Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Upper One of Juſtices in that Lath.

The Liberty of St. Auſtin claims over it; becauſe it is in the Hundred of Feverſham, which belonged to that Abbey. It is in the Deanery of Oſpringe, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Church is dedicated to St. Mary, in which there is nothing at all remarkable. The Pariſh is a Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 12 l. 8 s. 4 d.

Places of Note here:

1. Biſhopsbuſh Manor: This Place was anciently part of the great Eſtate of the Family of the Northwoods: Roger de Northwood was in Poſſeſſion of it in the 41ſt Year of King Henry the IIId, and then changed the Tenure of 90 Acres of Marſh Land, which lay partly in this Pariſh, and partly in that of Iwade, from Gavelkind, into that of Knight's Service; of which there is an Account in the Book of Aid in the Exchequer. After the Northwoods, the Frogenhalls were in Poſſeſſion of this Manor; and William de Frogenhall died poſſeſſed of it in the 8th Year of King Richard the IId; but his Grandſon Thomas Frogenhall leaving only Daughters; by one of them, (Anne) it went in Marriage to Thomas Quadring of London, and by Joan his only Daughter and Heir, it went again the ſame way to Richard Dryland of Cokeſditch in Feverſham; in which Name it continued till King Charles the Iſt's Reign, and then by another Female Heir it went into the Poſſeſſion of Kirton, and there it was in Philpot's Time.

LUDDESDON, Ludſdown, in the Textus Roffenſis, Hludeſdun, lies towards the North part of Kent, about Four Miles South-Weſtward from Rocheſter, in the Bailiwick of Hoo, Hundred of Toltingtrow, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and North one of Juſtices in that Lath. In the Deanery and Dioceſe of Rocheſter. The Church is dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul. This Pariſh is a Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 11 l. 11 s. 6 d. and it ought anciently to have contributed towards the Repair of the 9th Peer or Arch of Rocheſter Bridge.

The Church is ſmall, and in it I found nothing remarkable, but the Stone Stairs which formerly led up to a Rood Loft, and an old Altar Tomb with the Figure of a Man in Armour on it in Braſs; the Inſcription is gone, but there are two Coats of Arms Quartered, one of which is an Eagle diſplayed, with a ſingle Neck, over all a Batton dexter; the other Coat is defaced.

Places of Note here:

1. Luddeſdon Manor; this was anciently part of the Eſtate of the Barons of Montchenſie, or de Monte Caniſo: Warren de Monchenſie had a Charter of Freewarren for his Lands here, in the 37th Year of King Henry the IIId; and his Succeſſor, William de Montchenſie of Swanſcombe Caſtle, was Owner of this Place, and ſat in Parliament as Baron of Swanſcomb. He died A. D. 1287, and left this Manor, and much other Land, to his only Daughter and Heir Dionys, who was married to Hugh de Vere. And I find that in the Pleas of the Crown held before the Juſtices Itinerant in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, which was A. D. 1293; ſhe was then under Age, and the King's Ward, and unmarried, and held this Manor and that of Meleton as part of her Portion. She died without Iſſue, A. D. 1314, and her Aunt Joan de Montchenſie became Heir to this Eſtate, and carried it in Marriage to her Huſband William de Valentia Earl of Pembroke, half Brother to King Henry the IIId: By him ſhe had Iſſue Aymer de Valence; but he left only two Daughters; one of which, Iſabella, carried this Manor in Marriage to Laurence de Haſtings, and he in her Right became Earl of Pembroke: But his Grandſon, John Haſtings Earl of Pembroke, dying without Iſſue, in the 14th Year of King Richard the IId, left this and his other Eſtate in this County, to his two Kinſmen Reginald Grey, and Richard Talbot; the former of which had this Place; and in his Family it remained till the Beginning of King Henry the VIth's Reign. But then, ſomehow or other, it got into the Poſſeſſion of that Gallant and Prudent Soldier Thomas Montacute Earl of Salisbury, who hath left never-dying Monuments of his Valour and Conduct in France; but at the Siege of Orleance he had the misfortune to be kill'd by the Splinter of a Window made by a Canon ſhot, A. D. 1428. He left this Eſtate to his Natural Son James Montacute, who in the 30th Year of King Henry the VIth ſold it to Thomas Davy, Gent; and he ſoon after ſent it the ſame way to Edward Nevill, Baron of Bergavenny; and his Deſcendant Henry Lord Bergavenny, dying without Iſſue Male, in the 29th Year of Queen Elizabeth, gave it to his ſecond Brother Sir Edward Nevill; and from him it deſcended to John Lord Bergavenny, venny, the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time. So that this poor obſcure Place hath had as many Eminent and Illuſtrious Proprietors as any Eſtate in this County.

2. Buckland; this is a Place here which formerly had Proprietors of its own Name; and who reſided ſometimes here, and ſometimes at Preſton in the Pariſh of Shoreham. Sir John Buckland paid Aid for this Eſtate at making the Black Prince Knight in the 20th Year of King Edward the IIId; but by a Daughter of one of his Deſcendants, it went in Marriage, together with Preſton in Shoreham, to Polhill; and in that Family continued in Philpot's Time.

LULLINGSTONE lies in the Middle of the Weſt Part of the County, by the River Darent, about Three Miles and a half South-Eaſtward of St. Mary Cray, in the Bailiwick of Sutton-Dartford, Hundred of Axtone, Lath of Sutton-at-Hone, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and in the Upper One of the Juſtices in that Lath.

The Liberty of the Dutchy of Lancaſter claims over the Manor of Lullingſtone.

'Tis in the Dioceſe of Rocheſter, and Deanery of Dartford. A Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 7 l. 16 s. 8 d.

Places of Note here:

1. Lullingſton Caſtle, for here was anciently a Caſtle, the Seat of the Family of the Lullingſtones.

Philpot ſaith it was anciently written Lullington Roſſe, becauſe Anketellus Roſſe held Lands here in the 20th Year of King William the Iſt; his Grandſon William de Roſſe, as appears by the Pipe-Rolls, held Two Knights Fees in Lullingſtone in the 1ſt Year of King John: Alexander de Roſſe his Son, was one of the Recognitores Magnæ Aſſiſæ in the End of that King's Reign; but Lora de Roſſe, ſole Daughter to William de Roſſe, afterwards marrying William de Peyforer, this Place came to be called Lullingſtone Peyforer; but this William ſold it in the 7th Year of King Edward the Iſt to Gregory de Rokeſley, Lord Mayor of London; who the ſame Year obtained a Charter of Freewarren for it; and John, Son of Walter, Son of this Gregory, paid Aid for this Manor of Lullingſtone, which held by a whole Knights Fee, at making the Black Prince Knight.

But in the 33d Year of King Edward the IIId, Sir John Peche purchaſed this Eſtate of John de Rokeſly. His Father, Sir John de Peche, was Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, and Conſtable of Dover Caſtle, and was called to Parliament among the Barons in the 4th Year of King Edward the IIId.

When he had bought this Manor, he obtained a Charter of Freewarren for it; which was renewed and confirmed in the 35th Year of King Edward the IIId: And the Lady Joan Peche, this Gentleman's Son's Widow, died ſeized of Lullingſtone, and is buried in St. Mary Woolnoth Church in London. From her came Sir John, and afterwards his Son Sir William Peche who died at Lullingſton, 1487: His Son Sir John Peche was a Knight Banneret, Lord Deputy of Calais, and a Man very Eminent for Charity and Bounty to the Poor: He founded the Alms-Houſes at Lullingſton, and gave 500 l. to other Pious uſes, to be diſpoſed of by the Grocers Company, of which he was Free; he died without Iſſue, but his Siſter Elizabeth was his Heir, who married John Hart, Eſq; in whoſe Family this Seat and Eſtate now is.

Philpot, p. 131. ſaith, that in Lullingſton-Hall is preſerved a large Lance plated over with Iron, in memory of the Chivalry of the Peches.

LYGHE, near Tunbridge, Leigh; Weſt-Leigh, alias Paul's Leigh, commonly pronounced Lye; in the Textus Roffenſis, Lega, lies towards the South-Weſt part of Kent, about two Miles Weſtward from Tunbridge, in the Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Lower One of Juſtices in that Lath. Part of it is in the Bailiwick of the Lowy of Tunbridge, Hundred of Wachelingſtone, and Lath of Aylesford; and the reſt, (Part whereof is in the Hundred of Codſheath, and the other Part in the Hundred of Somerden) is in the Bailiwick of Sutton-Bromley, and Lath of Sutton-at-Hone.

The Liberty of Sevenoke claims here.

'Tis in the Deanery of Malling, and Dioceſe of Rocheſter; the Church is dedicated to St. Mary, and ſtands in the Hundred of Codſheath. There is now no Steeple to this Church. Remains of good painted Glaſs.

A Vicarage, and rated in the King's Books at 9 l. 19 s. 2 d.

In the Church are Memorials of the Interment of Thomas Chann, Eſq; 1407; and of ſeveral of the Family of Stace, of Towſe, and of Antrobus; and alſo of Sydney Carte, who married a Daughter of the Earl of Leiceſter.

Places of Note here:

1. Weſt-Lyghe Manor, this Place was very anciently the Eſtate of the Penchеſters; and in Domeſday-Book there is mention of Paul de Penchеſter, who had Lands here and at Penſehurſt; from him it deſcended to Sir Stephen de Penchеſter, who was Lord Warden of the Five Ports, and Conſtable of Dover Caſtle, in the 16th Year of King Edward the Iſt. He left only two Daughters, of which Joan the Elder married Henry Lord Cobham of Roundal in Shorne; and Alice, the younger, carried Penſehurſt and this Manor to her Husband John Lord Columbers: But his Son, Sir Thomas Columbers, in the 11th Year of King Edward the IIId, ſold this Manor to Sir John Poultney, then Lord Mayor of London, who died poſſeſſed of it. But ſoon after it came ſomehow, into the Poſſeſſion of Sir Nicholas Lovain, whoſe Son dying Childleſs, his Siſter Margaret Lovain was his Heir, and ſhe carried it in Marriage to Sir Philip St. Clere, of Aldham St. Clere, whoſe Father concurred with him in a Deed of Sale of this Eſtate to the Crown, in the 10th Year of King Henry the IVth. And that Prince bequeathed this Manor of Weſt-Leigh, to John Duke of Bedford, his Third Son; but he dying without Iſſue, it went to Humphrey Duke of Glouceſter, his 4th Brother; who being Strangled in the Abbey of Bury, and dying without Iſſue, King Henry the VIth, in the 25th Year of his Reign, granted it to Humphrey Stafford Duke of Buckingham, whoſe Deſcendant, Edward Stafford Duke of Buckingham, being Attainted and Executed in the 13th Year of King Henry the VIIIth, the Crown granted this Manor to Sir Ralph Vane, who was made a Banneret by that Prince for his good Service in Scotland: But being afterwards put to Death for being engaged in the Affair of the Duke of Somerſet in King Edward the VIth's Time; the Crown granted it again to Sir William Sydney, in whoſe Deſcendant, the Right Honourable the Earl of Leiceſter, the Inheritance at preſent continues.

2. Philipotts is another Manor here, which in the 28th Year of King Edward the Iſt belonged to a Family of this Sirname, and which reſided at Leigh; and in this Name the Poſſeſſion continued ſome Hundreds of Years, till at length by Alice, a Daughter of Thomas Philipot, it went in Marriage to John Petley, Eſq; but he leaving only Four Daughters, this Eſtate went with one of them to the Name of Children; and from thence by another Daughter into that of Polhill; where it continued in Philpot's Time.

MAID-

MAIDSTONE, is, as Lambard ſaith, and I believe rightly, a Contraction from Medwaies-Town; in Saxon, Medwegeſton, or the Town upon the Medway. In Nennius he thinks 'tis called Caer Megwad, corruptly for Medwag; and in the Ancient Saxon Book about the Bridge-work of Rocheſter, Meghanſtane; the Mighty or Strong Stone; a Name given it, probably, from the ſeveral Quarries of Stone which are round about it. And in the 7th Year of King Edward the Iſt, and in the 21ſt Year of that Reign, in the Records of the Proceedings of the Juſtices Itinerant, it is frequently written Maydeneſtane, which I take to be a vulgar Corruption, (as if it were Maidenſtown) without any ground from Hiſtory or Antiquity.

It lies towards the middle of Kent by the River Medway, about Four Miles and a half Eaſtward from Weſt Malling, in the Bailiwick of Eyhorne, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices of the Corporation of Maidſtone. 'Tis in the Deanery of Sutton, and Dioceſe of Canterbury: 'Tis in the Nature of a Curacy only, and therefore not valued in the King's Books; and the Curate is appointed by the Archbiſhop of Canterbury. And yet in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the 1ſt, I find the Miniſter here called Perſona de Maidſtone.

The Ancient Pariſh Church here was called St. Faith's; part of which (the Chancel) is ſtill ſtanding; but it hath been diſuſed a great while. Not many Years ago it was the Place for the Aſſembly of the Dutch Congregation in this Town.

That now reputed, and uſed as the Pariſh Church, was formerly a Collegiate one, and either built, or rebuilt by Archbiſhop Courtney, and is dedicated to All-Saints; and ſtandeth near the College, for whoſe uſe it was built. 'Tis a very fair large Building, and hath in it two very handſome Galleries; one of which was lately built there; and was the Gift of that Worthy and Noble Patriot the Right Honourable the Lord Romney; who hath been for many Years one of the Burgeſſes in Parliament for this Town, and always a firm and ſincere Lover and Promoter of the true Intereſt of his Country, and that alſo of this Town.

In the Chancel, the Stalls for the Brethren of the College are ſtill remaining; and under a broad Stone near the middle of it, lies the Body of Archbiſhop Courtney, who died in the Year 1396, (and his Epitaph you will find in Wever's Funeral Monuments) as appears by part of the Inſcription on the adjacent Monument of Henry Tufton, Eſq;, whoſe Body is ſaid to lye next to that of the Founder of this Church. There is alſo a Monument in the South Chancel, on which the Arms of Courtney are ſtill remaining; and probably was in Memory of ſome of this Archbiſhop's Family, but the Inſcriptions are gone; and ſhew the Vanity of the uſual Expectation which People have of Poſthumous Glory, by the Erection of fine Funeral Monuments. In this Chancel is a very remarkable, large, and fine Altar Tomb, but in Memory of whom, I cannot diſcover; all the Inſcriptions (if there were ever any) and Arms being obliterated. In Wever's Time the Tradition was, that it was in Memory of one Woodvile of the Moat.

In this Chancel is alſo a very handſome Monument, with two Figures in Marble of the Lord Jacob Aſtley and his Lady, and another with two Figures alſo in Memory of John Davy, Doctor of Phyſick, and his Lady, who was a Banks, A. D. 1651. A Monument in Memory of John Wotton, Prieſt, the firſt Maſter of Maidſtone College, 1417.

Benefactors to this Pariſh have been,

Mr. William Lamb, who was Gentleman-Uſher to King Henry the VIIIth, and a Freeman of the Clothworkers Company in London; he gave 10 l. per Ann. for ever to the Free-School.

Sir John Aſtley gave a large Silver Flaggon for the Communion-Service.

William Hewet, Gent. A. D. 1566. gave Four Marks per Ann. to the Poor for ever.

Robert Ganſley, Clerk, A. D. 1688, gave 15 l. in Bread per Ann. to the Poor for ever.

Alexander Fiſher, gave 38 l. per Ann. for ever, to bind out Annually Three Boys to Trades; and to afford Penſions to Four Widows of 40 s. per Ann. a-piece, during Life.

Sir John Banks, Baronet, built Six Alms-Houſes, and endowed them with 60 l. per Ann. for ever, to Maintain Six Poor Perſons.

Mrs. Elizabeth Maſon, Widow, A. D. 1642, gave for ever part of Two Meſſuages, for the Maintenance of Two Maids or Widows during their Lives.

This Church is the largeſt Parochial one in the County, but its Church-Yard is too little.

The Town of Maidſtone is very handſome and large, with two long Streets interſecting each other in the Market-place; one of which is very broad, and hath in it a handſome Conduit of good Water, at the Top of which is a Clock and Dial: Two Courts to hold the Aſſizes and Quarter Seſſions in; and at the bottom of it, a fair Stone-bridge over the River Medway, which probably was firſt built by ſome of the Archbiſhops of Canterbury; and to which ſeveral of them have been very good Benefactors, and no doubt Courtney in particular; for I find he built much here. But Lambard ſaith he can't find, (nor indeed can I) the Time of its firſt Erection.

This is a very large and populous Place, is the Shire Town, and the Place where the Elections for Knights of the Shire are made; which commonly begin on a Place called Pickenden (anciently Pinnenden) Heath, about a Mile out of the Town; and then by Adjournment of the County Court are ended in this Place. This Pickenden Hoth or Heath is in Boxley Pariſh; where I have before obſerved of it, that it was anciently a Place made uſe of to hold publick Aſſemblies for the County. On it I obſerved ſeveral Tumuli Barrows or Lows, of nearly the ſame ſize, which cover the Bones of ſome Eminent Perſons.

This Town and Pariſh have a Conſtable of their own, and the Liberty of the Corporation of Maidſtone claims over it; but that of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims over the Manor of Maidſtone. The Government of this Place was anciently by an Officer called a Portreeve; but it was incorporated and made a Mayor Town by King Edward the VIth; and in the laſt Year of his Reign ſent Burgeſſes to Parliament: Tho' in the following one it loſt that Privilege, by adhering to Sir Thomas Wyat, in the Rebellion he raiſed againſt Queen Mary. But afterwards in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, it was not only reſtored to its former Honour of having a Mayor and Jurats, &c. but it was made alſo (as Lambard ſaith, then firſt) a Borough Town, and empowered to ſend Two Members to repreſent them in the Lower Houſe of Parliament; the Mayor was endowed with the Authority of a Juſtice of Peace; and the Townſmen exempted from all Foreign Seſſions.

In the Parliament held in the 11th Year of King Henry the VIIth, the Cuſtody of the Weights and Meaſures of this County, which were then renewed according to the King's Standard, was committed to this Town, ſaith Lambard.

The Arms of Maidſtone are, Or, a Fez wavy az. between 3 Torteauxes; on a cheife gules a Lyon paſſant guardant Or.

This

This Town had formerly in it four Eminent Buildings.

1. The College, which you will find an Account of in the Chapter of Religious Houſes.

2. The Archbiſhop's Palace; which was begun by Archbiſhop Ufford; though he died before he had either his Pall or his Conſecration, in the Time of the great Plague in the Year 1348; and though he lived but Six Months after his Nomination to the Archbiſhoprick, yet he went a good Way in this Building; but it was finiſhed by Simon Iſlip, his next Succeſſor ſave one: who in order hereunto pulled down a Houſe of the Archbiſhop's at Wrotham, and brought the Materials hither; and beſides charged his whole Province with the Tax of a Tenth to accompliſh it. Leland calls this Palace a Caſtle; and Philpot ſaith it was a Caput Baroniæ; of which the Archbiſhops had more than one: And he never found that Title given to any but Saltwood Caſtle. And therefore this bids fair for it alſo. Part of this is ſtill ſtanding; but is made a private Houſe, it ſtands by the Church-yard, and near the River.

3. A kind of Chantry here, founded by Archbiſhop Arundel, A. D. 1359. which probably is the ſame with that which was afterwards called the Houſe of the Brothers; and which was afterwards by the Town turned to a much better Uſe, viz. That of a Free-School: The Refectory, the Chapel, and three Cloiſters of this old Religious Houſe are ſtill ſtanding.

4. The Bridge, of which I have ſpoken above.

This Town hath a Market on Thurſdays; and Two Annual Fairs, May 1. and June 9.

Beyond the Bridge, in Weſtborough, is a Place which they call the New Work: What it was I can't find; but there is plainly the Remains of a Chapel, with Two Antick Figures in Stone after the Gothick Manner; one at each Corner of the Eaſt End of the Building without.

About 120 Years ago, or about the ſame Time that the Walloons ſet up the Silk Trade in Canterbury, ſome of thoſe Induſtrious People came with their Families and ſettled at Maidſtone, and began here the Trade of making Thread; which was very beneficial to, and grew to a great Height in this Town. But about 40 Years ago, ſome Perſons ſetting up the ſame Manufacture in the Weſt of England, where Labour and Proviſions are cheaper, they came to underſell them, and conſequently impair the Trade of the People of Maidſtone. However, 'tis in ſome Meaſure ſtill carried on here; and ſeveral of the Walloon Families are now remaining in the Town; as Callunt, Clooper, Ickſum, Biqueman, Loder, Clark, Bruings, &c.

The Thread which they make here is not of the fineſt Sort; nor do they make Cloth of it, but Baggs for Hops, which are made out of the Refuſe and courſeſt Part of the Flax.

But I hear now that this Manufacture begins to improve here.

There are Corn-Mills here which grind for the Dock and Navy at Chatham; and they furniſh likewiſe in a good Meaſure Rocheſter and Chatham with Meal and Flour. There are ſome Paper-Mills alſo near it, which make a great deal of ordinary Wrapping Paper for Tobacco, Grocery Ware, Glovers, and Milleners Goods, &c. And about Three Quarters of a Mile Eaſtward from the Town, there is one which makes very good white Paper. 'Tis ſituated on what they call the Little River, which coming from Leeds, Hollingbourn, &c. runs into the Medway at this Place: It drives a Fulling-Mill at Berſted, and two or three Corn-Mills before it comes to this Place. Here it turns three over-ſhot Wheels, of about 8 Feet in Diameter, which moves the whole Work; the Water-Boards are about two Feet and a half long, and the Trough delivers a Stream of Water of Six Inches deep. 'Tis a very large Work, and they could eaſily make much greater Quantities of Paper, if there were Demands accordingly. The Rags they uſe they have moſtly from ſtraggling Perſons, which bring them to the Mill: And ſome they have from London. The Brown and White Brown Paper which they make here is chiefly from old Ropes, Sails, &c. and this Matter doth not require above 12 Hours beating; but the fine Rags require 36 Hours beating, before they are fit to make White Paper. And Mr. Gill told me when I went to ſee his Mill, that he could not make his Paper fine and white, till he brought into his Work a Collection of fine clear Water from two or three Springs, which riſe in a Field adjoining to the Mill.

They make alſo very good white Paper upon the Darent River.

In the 2d Year of Queen Mary, at the Proſecution of Harpſfield, Thornton, and John Baker, Seven Men and Women were burnt here for adhering to the Proteſtant Religion, in a Place called the King's Meadow: And one John Day, who was then Curate of Maidſtone, preached a Sermon at their Execution; in which, he told the People that they were all Damned, and charged them with being guilty of Arianiſm, Anabaptiſm, &c. But it was proved upon him to be a falſe and injurious Charge.

A. D. 1566. A pretended Diſſenting Miniſter or Preacher (See Foxes and Firebrands, and Strype's Life of Archbiſhop Parker), came to this Town, to the Maidenhead Inn, with many Followers; where they beſpake a Dinner: And many others came after them, enquiring for the Preacher by the Name of Faithful Cummin; with theſe, as his Congregation, he prayed Extempore in the Room, for about 2 Hours with Floods of Tears, Groans, and Cant. But John Clarkſon Chaplain to Archbiſhop Parker, hearing of this Exerciſe, as it was then called, he acquainted his Grace with it; and he communicated it to the Queen and Council: Before whom, on April the 5th following, Cummin was made to appear. Here he owned, that he had been ordained by Archbiſhop Pool; but ſaid he was now fallen off from Rome, and become a Preacher of the Goſpel; but he had not any Licenſe from any Biſhop ſince the Reformation. When Archbiſhop Parker urged, on this, that it was therefore likely that he was ſtill of the Romiſh Faith; he anſwered, That the contrary appeared by his Prayers and Sermons; in the latter of which, he ſaid, he had ſpoken againſt the Pope as much as any of the Clergy: He ſaid alſo, That it was a ſufficient Licenſe to preach, that he had the Spirit. His Pretence was to make the Church purer than it was at preſent: And he called his Itinerant Congregation, Men of Tender Conſcience. With theſe he preached, prayed, and adminiſtred the Sacrament.

But when he preached publickly, it was obſerved, That he was always abſent till the Prayers of the Church were over; for he did not like the Engliſh Liturgy, and was in Reality a Dominican Friar; as was proved upon him.

One Bland his half Brother, was his Security that he ſhould appear before the Council again on April the 12th following. He did appear that Day; but other Buſineſs put off his Hearing till the Day following: Before which Cummin went to his Followers, and told them that he was warned of God to go beyond Sea, to inſtruct the Proteſtants there, but that he would return to them again: He told them alſo, That Spiritual Prayer was the chief Teſtimony of a True Proteſtant; and that the Liturgy of England was but the Maſs tranſlated. Then he told them he had no Money; ſo a Collection on being made for him of 30 l. he departed: Search was made for him in London and Kent amongſt his Followers, but he could not be found.

In September following one John Baker, Maſter of a Ship called the Swan of London, reported that he had ſeen Faithful Cummin in the Low Countries; on which he was ordered to attend before the Queen and Council; to whom he told as above; and added, that one Mr. Van Daval a Merchant in Amſterdam acquainted him, that this Cummin had been lately at Rome, and impriſoned there by Pope Pius the Vth: But that on his Writing to the Pope, that he had ſomething of Importance to communicate to him, the Pope ſent for him; to whom Cummin ſaid, That though with his Lips he had indeed ſpoke againſt the Pope and the Romiſh Church, yet that his Heart was right; and that his Holineſs little thought what real Service he had done the Church; for he had preached up the Engliſh Service to be the Maſs only tranſlated; That he had taught the People to pray Extempore, and to hate the Publick Service: And he ſaid, That the Church of England was become thereby to many People, as odious as the Maſs was to the Reformers; and that this would be a Stumbling-Block to that Church, as long as it ſhould be a Church. And the Merchant ſaid, on this the Pope commended him, and rewarded him with 2000 Ducats.

After this Information, the Queen ordered her Agents beyondSea to apprehend Cummin; but the Thing took Air, and ſome of his Friends giving him Advertiſement of his Danger, he left Holland, and went into the Romiſh Territories.

If this Relation be true, as it hath all the Appearances of Truth, being extracted from the Memorials of the Lord Cecil, and ſent to Archbiſhop Uſher, 'tis a full Proof of the Artifices of the Church of Rome to ſow early Seeds of Diviſion among the Proteſtants. And no doubt as they are effectually doing it now, ſo they have often done the ſame Thing in other Places, and on other Occaſions. Of which, give me leave to give this Inſtance from the Memorials of Cranmer's Life by Strype, p. 207, 208.

In King Edward the VIth's Reign, the Proteſtants Abroad were ſo pleaſed with the Engliſh Reformation, that Calvin, Bullinger, and others, by a Letter to him, offered to make the King their Defender, and to have Biſhops in their Churches, as we had in England: And tendred their Service alſo to aſſiſt and unite together with us. But this ſo alarmed the Council of Trent, that they conſulted about taking all Meaſures to prevent any ſuch Union among Proteſtants: And one Artifice they immediately put in Practice; which was, to ſend Two of their Emiſſaries from Roterdam hither, who were to pretend to be Anabaptiſts, and to preach up their Tenets; and thoſe of the Fifth Monarchy-Men, &c. and one D. G. authorized by ſome of the Council, diſpatched a Letter, dated May 1549, from Delf in Holland, to the Biſhop of Winton, and another Biſhop, that they ſhould receive and countenance theſe pretended Anabaptiſts. See more of this kind of Impoſture in the Caſe of Heth in Rocheſter.

Theſe Inſtances ſufficiently ſhew, that though the Romaniſts boaſt of the Infallibility, and Providential Perpetuity of their Church; yet they have recourſe to the meaneſt and vileſt Artifices to ſupport its Intereſt.

In the Year 1648. (See Ruſhworth, Vol. 8. 1145.) the Kentiſh Men grew numerous for the King's Cauſe, viz. 6000 Foot, and 1000 Horſe, having choſe Edward Hales, Eſq; for their General, and Sir Thomas Peyton their Lieutenant General: And demanded a Treaty with Fairfax, the Parliament's General; but he refuſed them: After which, ſome Skirmiſhes happened; in which our Country fought ſtoutly. Fairfax with four Regiments of Horſe, and three of Foot, and ſome other Troops, marched to Eltham, and lay in the Fields all Night; next Day they rendezvouzed at Crayford Heath, and then marched through Dartford againſt the Kentiſh Men, who had fortified and barricaded Northfleet-Bridge with about 600 Men. But here Huſbands charging them bravely, they were forced to fly for it; and Huſbands marched on three Miles beyond Graveſend, having Orders to go to Malling where the reſt of the Army was quartered. Fairfax advanced to this Town of Maidſtone, where were about 1000 Horſe and Foot, and gave Orders to ſtorm it; about 7 at Night his Soldiers attacked it with Vigor; but they met with ſuch reſolute Oppoſition from the Horſe, that though they got into the Town, yet they were forced to win every Street Inch by Inch; and the Engagement held till near 12 at Night; and ſcarce any Action in the whole War was performed, on both Sides, with more Bravery: For after the Rebels had broke into the Town, Sir William Brockman came into it with about 800 Men; and which made up their whole Body about 2000; and lined all the Streets and Houſes, and placed Caſe Shot in every Street, ſo that it was very deſperately fought by both Parties. About 200 of the Kentiſh Men were killed, 1400 taken Priſoners, with 400 Horſes, and 2000 Arms. The Defeat of this Place, broke the Heart of all their Endeavours for the King; for on this, the reſt quitted Rocheſter, and with Goring at the Head of them, marched towards London, hoping to be joined by a Party thence and from Eſſex; but it came to no great Matter, and ſo this Affair of Kent ended.

The principal Leaders in this Attempt were Sir Gamaliel Dudley, Sir George Liſle, Sir William Campion, Sir Robert Tracy, Colonel Leigh, Sir John Maney, Sir Thomas Peyton, Sir Thomas Palmer, Edward Hales, Eſq; Sir James Hales, Sir William Maney, Sir John Darell, Sir Thomas Godfrey, Sir Richard Hardreſs, Colonel Waſhington, Colonel Hammond, Colonel Le Strange, Colonel Culpeper, Colonel Hacker, Mr. James Darell, and Mr. George Newman.

Sir Richard Hardreſs had laid Siege to Dover Caſtle; but Major Gibbon being ſent after him, forced him to raiſe the Siege.

That Judicious Antiquary Mr. Camden takes this Town of Maidſtone to have been the Vagniacæ mentioned by Antoninus, in his ſecond Iter. But I can't think as the Author of the Additions to his Britannia doth, that he hath proved it; nor indeed can it be proved to be ſo, as he ſaith it is, from the Diſtances in the Itinerary; whoſe Numbers are ſo various, that the Modeſt Mr. Burton ſaith, This is a Station of a very uncertain Poſiture; and he cites Mr. Llyda, a knowing Antiquary, for ſaying of it, Quod nomen hoc tempore habet penitus ignoro. Dr. Gale alſo, though he inclines to Mr. Camden's Opinion, yet owns there is nothing of Certainty to be expected here. Mr. Somner thinks Mr. Camden miſtaken in making this to be the Vagniacæ, and in carrying the Old Roman Way ſo much round about; and he cites Twine de Reb. Albionicis, Lib. 2. p. 152. for ſaying of the Roman Ways, Hæ Viæ ſummâ rectitudine tanquam protenſa lineâ per quæcunque locorum incommoda tantâ latitudine ductæ ſunt. And 'tis ſtrange that ever Maidſtone ſhould be the Way from London to Rocheſter, when 'tis farther from London than that City is. But I think the Matter may be put out of Diſpute by the different Courſe of this Roman Watling-Street, which is ſo far from going over Woodcott Common, and ſo to Maidſtone, that (as I ſhall further ſhew in the Chapter of Roman Ways) it may be traced to this Day over Blackheath, up Shooters-Hill, over Bax-

Bexley Heath, and over the Brent towards Rochester; and it goes as ſtrait as can well be imagined, pointing all the way nearly East South East. And I am apt to think that the Occaſion of all this Miſtake hath been, the confounding this with another Roman Way, which probably was made from the Portus Lemanis to London directly, after the Romans had diſuſed the Portus Rutupenſis and Dubris; and made that the uſual Place of Landing: Such a Way would run by Lenham and Maidſtone, and perhaps over or near Woodcott; and 'tis highly probable that there was ſuch a Way; though it being made towards the End of the Romans being here, and when they were chiefly concerned in the more Northern Parts of Britain; perhaps it might not be made ſo firm and good as the Watling-ſtreet Way, and ſo fewer Remains of it may now be to be found. And as to the Similitude of the Names of Medwageſtane and Vagniacæ, it ſeems to me not to have Force enough to carry us againſt Reaſon and Experiment, and plain Matter of Fact.

Places of Note here:

1. Buckland: This ſtands on a Hill on the other ſide of the River, anciently belonging to the Family of the Bucklands, as another Place of this Name in Ludſdown alſo did: John de Buckland held it at his Death in the 3d Year of King Edward the IIId, whoſe Son and Heir Sir John Buckland, had Lands about Wouldham, Halling, Snodland Ludſdown, and Shoreham, as well as here; from the Bucklands it went to the Cobhams, where it continued ſeveral Ages, till in the Beginning of King James the Iſt, it was forfeited to the Crown by Henry Lord Cobham's being concerned with the unfortunate Sir Walter Raleigh; but becauſe it was jointured on his Lady before his Attaint, after his Death the Crown granted it to her for Life, and the Remainder to Robert Cecil Earl of Salisbury; who had married Elizabeth, the Siſter of that Lord Cobham; from the Cecils it went, about 1618, to the Horſepools, and thence to Mr. Engliſh of Suſſex, who was the Proprietor in Philpot's Time.

2. Maidſtone Manor and the Palace, anciently belonged to the Family of Cornhill; and in the 7th Year of King John, William de Cornhill gave it to Stephen Langton, Archbiſhop of Canterbury. It continued in the Poſſeſſion of the Archbiſhops of this Province, till Thomas Archbiſhop of Canterbury, in the 32d Year of King Henry the VIIIth, exchanged it for ſome other Lands with the Crown, and then the King granted it to Sir Thomas, Father of that Sir Thomas Wyat, who loſt it to the Crown again by being Attainted of High-Treaſon in the 2d Year of Queen Mary. It continued there till Queen Elizabeth granted it to John Aſtley, Eſq; Maſter of the Jewel Office; and he left two Daughters, one of which Married Knatchbull; and the other an Aſtley, a Cadet of Sir Jacob of Norfolk; and 'twas he that was afterwards made Lord Aſtley by King Charles the Iſt. But the Manor continued in the Tenure of the Crown, and was given to the Finches of the Winchelſea Family, in Fee Farm for ever. Whence the Title of Viſcount Maidſtone, and the Right of the Manor deſcended from Dame Elizabeth Finch, the Widow of Sir Moyle Finch of Eaſtwell, only Daughter and Heir of Sir Thomas Heneage of Copped-Hall in Eſſex, and Vice-Chamberlain to, and one of the Privy Council of Queen Elizabeth, who was created Viſcounteſs Maidſtone; to her Son Sir Thomas Finch Earl of Winchelſea; and thence to the Right Honourable Heneage Finch Earl of Winchelſea, and Viſcount Maidſtone; who was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

3. Goulds and Shepway, of old the Eſtate of Vinter of Vinters, a Place not far diſtant, (and where hath lately been diſcovered a Roman Burying Place) where it continued till Robert Vinter gave it to a Chantry in Maidſtone Church, called Gould's Chantry, about the 40th Year of King Edward the IIId, annexing both theſe Places thereunto. On the Suppreſſion they were granted to Sir Thomas Wyat; who forfeiting them to the Crown, Queen Mary in her 2d Year gave them to Sir Walter Henley, Eſq; from whom they came over to the Andrews; and in 1654, 1655, were ſold to Sir Humphrey Tufton, Sheriff of Kent; whoſe Deſcendant, Sir John Tufton, ſold them to Sir John Marſham, Uncle to Sir Robert the preſent Poſſeſſor, and lately created Lord Romney. In the Chancel South of the Tomb of the Founder of the Church, is a Monument for Humphrey Tufton, Eſq; 1641. and ſeveral others of that Noble Family.

Archbiſhop Morton gave Lands in this Pariſh to the See of Canterbury for ever, to find a Chanting Prieſt in St. Sepulchres Nunnery in Canterbury.

4. Bigons or Digons; the Seat of the Family of the Mapleſdens; for one Edward Mapleſden is written de Digons, in a Deed of the 25th of Edward the IIId, mentioned to be in the Cuſtody of Philpot. In this Name it long continued, till one of the Family being in Sir Thomas Wyat's Rebellion, it was forfeited thereby to the Crown, and thence was granted to Nicholas Barnham, Serjeant at Law; whoſe Heir ſold it to Hawle, and he to Sir Francis Barnham, who added much to the Splendor of the Seat; but his Son, Edward Barnham, Eſq; ſold it to Franklin, and he to Mr. Beale of London, who was in Poſſeſſion of it in Philpot's Time.

5. Jordan's Court; this gave Seat and Name formerly to the Family of the Jordans, but from them it went to the Roper's of St. Dunſtan's by Canterbury; and John Roper ſold it to Edward and William Brouch of Berſted, about the 36th Year of Henry the VIth. Hence it went by Sale to Atwood, and after that to Pierce, who ſold it to Cook, and he to Crooke; Crooke alienated it to Potkins of Sevenoke; whoſe Daughter and Coheir carried it to one Virgo; and he about the latter End of Queen Elizabeth, ſold it to Waſhington, who was a Juſtice of Peace, and often in the Commiſſion of Sewers. From him it went by Sale to Godwin; and from Godwin to Criſp, thence to Smith; and from him it paſſed by Sale to Beckman; the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

6. Sheals; this was once the Eſtate of the Fremingham's; for Ralph de Fremingham died ſeized of it in the 30th Year of King Edward the IIId; hence it went to the Pimps of Pimps-Court and Nettleſted; and they alienated it to the Iſleys of Sundridge, in which Family it continued till Sir Henry Iſley was Attainted of High-Treaſon under Queen Mary; and then ſhe in her ſecond Year granted it to Sir Walter Henley of Courſeborne, in whoſe Family it continued, A. D. 1659.

7. Chillington, this anciently belonged to the Cobham Family, as in the 17th Year of King Edward the IIId; thence it went to the Mapleſdens of Digons, and ſtaid amongſt them till it was forfeited to the Crown by George Mapleſden's Rebellion with Sir Thomas Wyat in Queen Mary's Reign. She granted it to Sir Walter Henley, who ſold it to Nicholas Barnham, Serjeant at Law to Queen Elizabeth; and his Succeſſor alienated it to Hawle of Wye, whoſe Grandſon Mr. George Hawle, had it in Philpot's Time.

8. The Moate, a good Caſtellated Houſe, which very anciently belonged to the Eminent Family of Leybourn; and Roger de Leybourn had a Grant of a Market and Fair here in the 51ſt Year of King Henry the IIId, which Name was almoſt extinct in this Place, before the Beginning of King Edward the IIId, and then it went to Bartholomew Lord Burghurſt or Burwaſh, Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, and one of the firſt Founders of the moſt Noble Order of the Garter, who lived here in the 29th Year of King Edward the IIId, and poſſeſs'd the Lordſhip called Shafford, on which the Caſtle ſtands; and which one John de Shafford held by Knights Service, (as appears by the Book of Aid) in the 20th Year of King Edward the IIId. After the Burghurſts, it came to the Woodviles; as appears by a fair Monument on the North ſide of Maidſtone Church. Richard Woodvile, in King Henry the VIth's Time was made Conſtable of the Iſle of Wight, a Baron, and Knight of the Garter; and his Style then was Lord Rivers, Grafton, and de la Moat. He married without the King's Licenſe, Jocquet Daughter of Peter Luxemburgh Earl of St. Paul, and Widow to John Plantaganet Duke of Bedford, for which he was Fined a 1000 l. and his Daughter Elizabeth was married to King Edward the Vth.

He was afterwards murdered by the Rebels in Northamptonſhire, headed by Robert Ridiſdale at Edgcot-Field; and tho' he left Seven Sons, they all died without Iſſue; and then this Place went to Sir Henry Wyat, Grandfather of Sir Thomas Wyat, who was Executed for Treaſon in Queen Mary's Days; on which ſhe granted it to Hugh Warham; and he ſold it to Sir William Rither Lord Mayor of London: He Repaired the Houſe; and left it to his Daughter and Co-heir the Lady Suſanna Cæſar, who joining with her eldeſt Son Thomas Cæſar Eſq; ſold it to Sir Humphrey Tufton, ſecond Son to Sir John Tufton, Baronet, and Brother to Nicholas Tufton Earl of Thanet, Father to John, another Earl of Thanet, A. D. 1659, whoſe Deſcendant ſold it to Sir John Marſham, Uncle to the Right Honourable Sir Robert Marſham, Baronet, lately created Lord Romney, who reſides here; and hath added much by Buildings, Canals, &c. to the Beauty of this fine Seat.

MALLING, Eaſt Mealling, Malinge, and Melinges, lies towards the Middle of Kent, by a ſmall Rivulet running into the Medway, about a Mile and a half Eaſtward from Town or Weſt Malling, in the Bailiwick of Hoo, Hundred of Larkfield, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and South one of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery of Shoreham, and ſo a Peculiar of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury's, but in the Dioceſe of Rocheſter. The Church is called St. Mary's, and was given by King John in his 5th Year to Weſt Malling Abbey. It is a Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 10 l. 18 s. 4 d. per Ann.

In the Church are, or were, Memorials of Robert Ereby, who died 1477, and of Thomas Ereby his Son, A. D. 1478.

The Liberty of Maidſtone claims over New Hithe in this Pariſh.

A Fair is kept at Larkfield in this Pariſh on St. James's Day, being the 25th of July.

Places of Note here:

1. The Manor of Eaſt-Malling, (as well as that of Town-Malling) belonged to the adjacent Nunnery; and after the Suppreſſion, ſtaid in the Crown till about the 4th Year of King Edward the VIth, and then was granted in Leaſe for Life to Sir Hugh Cartwright; and after his Death, it went the ſame way to Pierpoint; who conveyed it to William Brook, Lord Cobham, whoſe Son Henry Lord Cobham being attainted in the IId Year of King James the Iſt, the Crown granted it again, in Leaſe, to Sir Fitz-James, who ſold his Intereſt in it to Sir Robert Bret; by whoſe Widow it went to Humphrey Delind, a Man furniſhed with a good Stock both of Divine and Human Learning. But the Fee-Simple continued in the Crown till the 21ſt Year of King James the Iſt, and then was granted to John Rayney, Eſq; This Grant was afterwards confirmed in the next Reign; and in Philpot's Time it was in the Poſſeſſion of Sir John Reyney of Wrotham.

2. Burough-Court, is a Place here which anciently belonged to the Colepepers of Preſton in Ayleſford; for William Colepeper died poſſeſs'd of it in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the IIId; and in this Name it ſtaid till about the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth, and then was ſold to Shakerly; by a Daughter of which Name it went to the Beauleys of Beauley's-Court in Wouldham; and her only Daughter and Heir, Mary Beauley, carried this Eſtate in Marriage to Mr. —— Baſſe of Suffolk, in whoſe Poſſeſſion it was in Philpot's Time.

MALLING, Weſt or Town-Malling; I take the Name of this Place to be derived from Mal, which Wormius ſaith in old Daniſh ſignifies Diſcourſe or Debate; Windelinc alſo in his Gloſſary, ſaith Mallum ſignifies a Convention for the determination of Cauſes, (as the Houſe where the ſitting is, was called the Berg): And this appears alſo in the Laws of the Lombards, and in the Capitular. (See Brady of Burghs, p. 2.) This Town therefore I judge to have been the Place where ſuch Conventions have formerly been held; and ſince in the Textus Roffenſis the Name is uſually Plural Mealinges; I ſuppoſe both the Mallings were formerly joined together. The Termination, Ing, as Lambard obſerves, denotes its watry Situation.

Town-Malling lies towards the middle of Kent, by a ſmall Rivulet which runs into the Medway at Snodland, about three Miles and a half South-Eaſtward from Wrotebam, in the Bailiwick of Hoo, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and South one of Juſtices in that Lath.

The Town and all the Pariſh, except St. Leonard's Burgh (where formerly was a Chapel of Eaſe to Town-Malling) hath two Conſtables of its own; but that Burgh is in the Hundred of Larkfield. The Liberty of the Biſhop of Rocheſter claims here. 'Tis in the Deanery of Malling, and Dioceſe of Rocheſter.

A Vicarage; and valued in the King's Books at 10 l. per Ann.

The Church which is fair and large, and hath a handſome Spire, is dedicated to St. Mary: In it are Memorials of the Interment of William Millys in the Year 1486; of Chapman; of Fitz-James in 1594: The Arms of Nevil, and ſome other Ancient Families: And a fine Monument with Two Figures of Sir Robert Brett and his Lady, who was Daughter to Sir Thomas Fane and the Lady De la Spenſer.

A Market was granted to this Town on Saturdays, as long ago as by King Henry the IIId; it was obtained by the Abbeſs of the Nunnery here (of which you will find an Account in the Chapter of Religious Houſes); and it is ſtill continued: And it has 3 Fairs every Year; on Aug. 1. on Sept. 21. and on Nov. 6.

This Pariſh ought anciently to have contributed towards the Repair of the third Arch or Pere of Rocheſter-Bridge.

One Mr. Francis Treſſe of this Town about 76 Years ago gave 40 l. towards building a Free-School here, which was afterwards built; and he gave alſo 13 s. 4 d. for ever, towards its Repair.

The Tower of the Chapel of St. Leonard's here is ſtill ſtanding, and looks like a Caſtle.

Places

Places of Note here:

1. Town-Malling Manor: Which did anciently belong to the Church of Rocheſter, being given to it by King Edmund, who ſtiles himſelf in the Grant, Rex Anglorum & Merciorum, about 760 Years ago, when Burbricus was Biſhop of Rocheſter, and Odo Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and Wulfſtane Archbiſhop of York; both which laſt are Witneſſes to the Charter, which is preſerved in our Textus Roffenſis, f. 143. and was ſettled on the Nunnery founded here by Gundulf Biſhop of Rocheſter, about the Year 1078; and in the Book of Domeſday ſtands thus: Melinges ſe defendebat T. E. R. pro 3 Solinis, & nunc pro uno & dimidio, & eſt appretiatum 4 lib.

And in the Poſſeſſion of this Religious Houſe did this Manor continue till the general Suppreſſion in King Henry the VIIIth's Time; and then coming to the Crown, in the 4th Year of King Edward the VIth, it was granted in Leaſe for Life to Sir Hugh Cartwright, and afterwards had the ſame Proprietors as the Manor of Eaſt-Malling above-mentioned; which ſee.

2. Parrocks and Ewell are mentioned by Philpot as two Manors appendent to this of Weſt-Malling; the former of which hath been mentioned already in Brenchley where it lies; only Philpot adds here, that in his Time Fane's Leaſe being expired, it was come into the Poſſeſſion of Sir John Reyney. Where Ewell is, Philpot omits to mention.

A. D. 1190, Both the Town and the Nunnery were burnt down; ſaith Stow in his Annals, p. 159.

In the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, the Abbeſs was ſummoned before the Juſtices Itinerant for incloſing with a Wall a common watring Place; but ſhe proving it belonged to her Abbey, was diſmiſſed. There was then alſo a Complaint made againſt ſome Perſons, for ſtopping up a common Way here at a Place called Broadwater; for which they were caſt and fined.

MAPLEDERSCAMPE. This is the Name of a Pariſh, which I find by the Textus Roffenſis, to have been, when that Manuſcript was compoſed, in the Dioceſe of Rocheſter; for it is there charged with the uſual Chriſm Rent, to the Cathedral. But whereabouts it lay I can't diſcover, having never yet met with any Thing about it.

MARDEN, Mereden, i. e. the larger Denn, lies towards the South Part of Kent, by the Medway, about four Miles and a half Northward from Goudherſt, in the Weſt Diviſion of the County, and lower one of Juſtices in the Lath of Scray.

That Part of it which holds of the Manor of Hunton, is in the Burgh of Hunton, Bailiwick and Hundred of Twiford, and Lath of Aylesford. Another Part of it called Tilden, is in the Hundred of Maidſtone; and another ſmall Part of it is in the Hundred of Eyborn; and both theſe are in the Bailiwick of Eyborn, and Lath of Aylesford: But the reſt is in the Bailiwick of Twiford, Hundred of Marden, and Lath of Scray.

About the Hundred of Marden I find this Note, Quod eſt Hundredum Regis, & ſimul cum Hundredo de Middleton, valet per Ann. 22 l. 13 s. 8 d. Vid. Manuſcript Pleas of the Crown in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt.

The Church ſtands in the Hundred of Marden, and is dedicated to St. Michael. A Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 7 l. 18 s. 4 d. 'Tis all in the Deanery of Sutton, and Dioceſe of Canterbury, and the Liberties of St. Auſtin, and of the Dean of Canterbury claim here.

A Fair on Michaelmas Day. Here was alſo a Weekly Market, which was obtained by Queen Eleanor, Wife to King Edward the Iſt, in the 9th Year of that Prince.

Places of Note here:

1. The Manor of Marden, which Philpot ſaith, is but an Appendage to that of Milton or Middleton, as the Hundred of Marden is alſo of that of Milton, remained in the Crown (to whom it of old belonged) till the 2d Year of James the Iſt; and then was granted to Philip Earl of Montgomery; and by his Will went to his ſecond Son, Mr. James Herbert, in whoſe Poſſeſſion I ſuppoſe it continued in Philpot's Time.

2. Whitherſt, in old Deeds written Wogherſt, in the Reigns of King John and King Henry the IIId, was the Inheritance of the Corbies; whoſe ancient Seat was at Corbie's-Caſtle in Eltham, a Place now grown obſcure. By Joan Daughter of Robert Corbie it went in Marriage to Sir Nicholas Wotton, Lord Mayor of London; and from him deſcended to Thomas Lord Wotton, who gave it in Marriage with his Eldeſt Daughter Catherine to Henry Lord Stanhope.

3. Cheveney Manor, and Cheveney Houſe in Marden did once both belong to a Family of that Name: Henry de Cheveney died poſſeſs'd of it in the 2d Year of King Edward the IId. But in King Richard the IId's Reign it was got to be the Inheritance of William Atwelde, whoſe Family held it till King Henry the VIth's Time; and then it was ſold to Cowper, where it ſtaid till the beginning of Queen Mary, and then being divided between Two Brothers, one ſold the Houſe to Mapleſden; and the other the Manor to Lone, in whoſe Names both continued in Philpot's Time.

4. Sipherſt is another ſmall Manor in Marden, which once had Owners of that Name; but one of them, about the End of King Richard the IId, parted with it to Atweld; from which Name about the Beginning of King Henry the VIth it went with the Cheveneys above-mentioned to Cowper; from whence it was not long after ſold to John Field, who died poſſeſs'd of it in the 14th Year of King Edward the IVth. In this Family it continued till the 4th Year of Queen Elizabeth, and then Edward Field gave it to his Kinſman Thomas Gilbert, whoſe Succeſſor Thomas Gilbert ſettling it on his Wife Sibil Gilbert, ſhe carried it in Philpot's Time to Mr. Richard Knight, her ſecond Husband.

5. Tildens, 6. Stubbins, and 7. Brook, are three other very ſmall Manors here; but had all Owners of thoſe ſeveral Names. The Tildens were Men of Note in theſe Parts, and had likewiſe an Eſtate at Wye, at Cats-Place in Brenchley, and at Tilmanſton. And in theſe Three Families did theſe Manors continue till the End of King Henry the IVth; and then Stubbins was purchaſed by Tilden; and both continued in that Name till about the Beginning of Henry the VIth, and then were ſold to Thomas Stidolfe, Eſq;, who purchaſed Brook alſo: But by a Daughter of this Name they all went in Marriage to Richard Fane, Eſq; : And in Philpot's Time were in the Poſſeſſion of the Earl of Weſtmorland.

7. Monkton is a Manor in Marden, which formerly belonged to the Priory of Leeds; and on the Suppreſſion was granted to Thomas Colepeper of Bedgbury, Eſq; who not long after ſold it to Thomas Wilford, Eſq;, and he in the 7th Year of Queen Elizabeth ſold it to Thomas Stanley; from which Family in King James the Iſt's Time it was ſold to Mr. —— Board of Suſſex; and in that Name it appears to have continued in Philpot's Time.

8. Read is a Place here, which with Ewherſt in Speldhurſt was once the Eſtate of an Ancient Family of that Name: And continued ſo for many Deſcents. And when Sir Robert Read, Lord Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas, in King Henry the VIIth's Reign tranſplanted himſelf to Chiddingſtone, he was in Poſſeſſion of this Place; but by Catherine, one of his four Daughters it went in Marriage to Sir Thomas Willoughby; from which Family in King Charles the Iſt's Time it was ſold to Knight.

St. MARGARET's in Canterbury. The Right of Patronage of this Church of old belonged to St. Auſtin's Abbey: But in A. D. 1271. it was given to the Hoſpital of Poor Prieſts in this City. The Church-yard anciently belonged to the Convent of Chriſt-Church; but they parted with it for a Rent of 3 s. per Ann.

In this Pariſh at the Meeting of the four Streets, formerly there ſtood an Iron Croſs; which ſometimes in Old Deeds is called Yren Croſs, ſometimes Tierne Crouch or Croſs; that is, the Iern Croſs. This Croſs gave Name to the whole Quadrangle there, which was called Tierne Crouch. Thus we often ſay, T' Year, inſtead of this Year.

Here are Memorials of the Interment of John Winter, twice Mayor of this City, in the Year 1470; of Cotton in 1605; Fort, Hosbrand, in 1452; and Prat.

The Officials Court is held in this Church.

On the North Side of this Church, is the Fiſhmarket of the City.

As they were digging a Cellar in this Pariſh, the Workmen met with a ſtrong Stone Pavement at above 5 Feet deep; which is a Proof, in Concurrence with many others, that the preſent City ſtands much higher than it did formerly.

And in another Place a Roman Pavement of Moſaick Work was diſcovered here; ſome of the Teſſellæ of which were in the Cuſtody of Mr. Battely.

St. MARGARET's near Dover. This is the ſame Place with that before called Cliff by Dover, and deſcribed under Cliff in the Letter C. The uſual Name of this Place is St. Margaret's at Cliffe.

St. MARGARET's Hills, near Darent, uſually called Helles, was formerly a Pariſh by it ſelf, but now united to Darent, ever ſince the Year 1557. See an Account of it in Darent. T'is alſo a Manor which holdeth of that of Darent.

St. MARGARET's by Rocheſter, lies towards the North Part of Kent adjoining to Rocheſter, in the Bailiwick of Hoo, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices of the Corporation of Rocheſter: The Liberty of which City claims here from Horſtede Farm, acroſs the Woods to the High-Way leading from Rocheſter to Maidſtone: and from thence acroſs the Lands to Windmill-Hill near Naſſenden Farm, (where was anciently a Chapel, as appears by the Cuſtumale Roffenſe) down to another called Rings, and thence into the River Medway.

The Liberty of the Biſhop of Rocheſter claims alſo in this Pariſh. Which is a Vicarage, in the Deanery and Dioceſe of Rocheſter; and valued in the King's Books at 10 l. per Ann. The Church is dedicated to St. Margaret.

In which are Memorials of the Interment of Sac, Vicar here in the Year 1450: And in the Veſtry Place on the Wall is an old Figure of a Man, in a Scarlet Robe, and an Earl's Coronet on his Head; but I can't find whom it repreſents. But about 30 Years ago, in this Church-yard, a Crown or Coronet was dug up, ſet round the Edges with ſmall precious Stones; ſome Pieces of which a Perſon ſaw himſelf, who gave me this Account: But whether its Value made it be concealed I know not. This is all on the utmoſt Enquiry that I can learn about it.

A. D. 1239. This Church is called only a Chapel, as appears by old Deeds in the Archives of our Church of Rocheſter: And Biſhop Gilbert once gave it to Strode Hoſpital; but in the Year above-mentioned the Convent of Rocheſter got it reſtored to them again.

The Tithes of Naſſenden in this Pariſh and thoſe of Borſtall, were given to the Church of Rocheſter, by Robertus de Sancto Amando, and Ernulfus Godricus, as appears by a Charter now in our Church. And the Church of St. Margaret's was given or rather perhaps confirmed to the Convent by Gundulf Biſhop of Rocheſter; it then did belong to the Parochial Altar of St. Nicholas in Rocheſter Cathedral. Theſe are the Words of Gundulfus's Charter, now very fairly preſerved in our Archives:

Et Altare Sancti Nicholai quod eſt Parochiale in Eccleſia Beati Andreæ Apoſtoli, cum Eccleſia Sanctæ Margaritæ quæ appendet.

We have likewiſe a very ſhort Charter of Aſceline Biſhop of Rocheſter, aſſerting, that at Rome he had maintained his Church's Right to Boxle, Aylesford, Southflete, and to the Parochial Altar of St. Nicholas, with the Appendant Church of St. Margaret.

Places of Note here:

1. Borſtall. This, as the Title of the Copy of the Charter recorded in the Textus Roffenſis, ſhews, was given to the Priory of Rocheſter by Coenulf King of Mercia, in the Time of Bearnmodus Biſhop of Rocheſter, viz. A. D. 911. It is in the Grant mentioned as three Plow Lands; and its Bounds are there ſaid to be very well known: And are theſe; Ab Oriente via publica, a meridie Wuldham, ab Occidente Fluvius Meduweage, ab Aquilone Mearateag. To this Donation were added theſe Denberries in the Weald or common Wood; viz. Otauhyrſt, Frecingherſt, Sceorfeſtede, Crangabyras, Wihtherincfaladſto, & Haeſeldaen. And to this Deed Archbiſhop Wulfred was a Witneſs.

It appears alſo by the ſaid Textus, f. 185. that one Robert de Borſtall gave to the Convent the Tithe of all his Land in this Place: And that one Goldwine, ſirnamed Græcus, gave to it, Dimidiam Hagam terræ juxta Cœmiterium appendentem ad Borchſtellam: Sed iſtam Dimidiam hâc conventione dedit: Quod eam tenebit, donet Monachi alias Hagas hinc & inde habeant & Domos auferant ad ampliundum Cœmiterium ſuum. This Grant was in or near the Time of Gundulfus; becauſe Herviſus is a Witneſs to it, who was Archdeacon of Rocheſter about that Time.

Not long after this, viz. in Biſhop Ernulf's Time, there was one Geldewinus who is called Monetarius, i. e. the Maſter of the Mint at Rocheſter, who gave to the ſame Priory his dwelling-Houſe, which ſtood by the Monks Church-yard, together with three Acres of Land in Borſtall, and ſix in Delce for ever, on Condition to be made a Monk there, f. 193.

Likewiſe one Ælfwine, the Son of Dirgive, gave the Convent half a Haga of Land at Borſtall; for which the Monks let him be ſo happy as to die in one of their Habits, and performed an entire Service for him after he was dead. Sure both theſe were well worth half a little Croft of Land?

But ſome how or other theſe Monks loſt a good Part of theſe Gifts in Borſtall: For in the ſame Manuſcript I find this Note: Borgeſtealla defendebat ſe T. E. R. pro 2 Solinis; & nunc pro ſolino & dimidio, & eſt Appretiatum x. libras. Quatuor viginti domus ſubjacebunt ibi T. E. R. & una pars illarum eſt apud ſupra dictam Borgeſtellam, & alia pars in Frandsberia: Et ſunt Appretiatæ viij. libr. ſed tamen men ille qui tenet reddit II l. 12 s. 4 d. Hoc Manerium habet Epiſcopus in Hundredo de Hrouveceſtrâ. And in the Cuſtumale Roffenſe, which was compoſed about the Year 1325, I find that this Eſtate was ſunk down to one Plow-Land and a half. But ſuch as it was it ſtaid among them till the general Diſſolution of the Monaſteries in King Henry's Reign; and then was ſettled by that Prince upon his new Dean and Chapter of the Church of Rocheſter.

2. Much or Great Delce; the Church of St. Andrews in Rocheſter had here an Intereſt very early; as appears not only by the Six Acres here given to it by Geldevinus above-mentioned in Borſtalle; but alſo by ſeveral other Notes which I find in the Text. Roffenſis. v. gr. f. 190.

Gosfridus de Delfsâ cum Uxore & filiis acceperunt Societatem, (for in theſe Times the Priory of Rocheſter took in Men, Women, and Children, if any thing was to be got by them, as hath been before obſerved) & conceſſerunt totam Decimam de Delfsâ: I know not whether this implies the whole Tithes of both the Delces; but I find the Monks in Poſſeſſion of both by their Cuſtumale Roffenſe, f. 69.

Again, fol. 194. of the Textus, I find this Entry made.

Gausfridus de Deleſâ dedit nobis xxx acras Terræ juxtâ Preſtafeldam pro filio ſuo quem fecimus Monachum: Quod conceſſit Herbertus filius ejus. Similiter & Walterus Tirel Dominus Ipſorum conceſſit poſtea & confirmavit: quia pro ipſâ conceſſione accepit Societatem noſtram: & ita poſt acceptam Societatem poſuit Cultellum ſuum ſuper Altare St. Andreæ.

Once more, f. 197.

Anſgotus de Rouceſtra accepit Societatem Beneficiorum Eccleſiæ St. Andræ & Monachorum tempore Gundulfi Epiſcopi, & dedit eidem Eccleſiæ & Monachis Totam Decimam de Delcſa; & de Molendino ſimiliter quod poſtea fecit.

So much for the Church of Rocheſter's ancient Intereſt here.

As it appears by what is above-cited out of the Textus, that there were Perſons of the Name of Delce which had Eſtates here; ſo Philpot ſaith, that they were extinct before the middle of King Edward the Iſt's Reign, at this Place; for then it was got into the Name of Haſpal; and Geofrey de Haſpall died poſſeſs'd of it as ¼ of a Knight's Fee, in the 15th Year of King Edward the Iſt, as appears by Rot. Eſc. N. 25. Next Delce came into the Poſſeſſion of one Molineux, derived from a Family of that Name in Lancaſhire; but he could not enjoy it long; for in King Edward the IIId's Reign it was the Inheritance of Benedict de Fulſham; and Richard Fulſham died poſſeſs'd of it in the 5th Year of King Henry the Vth. Before Four Years after this, it came into the Poſſeſſion of Reginald Love; and in this Name remained till about the latter End of King Henry the VIth; and then it was ſold to William Venour, who died in Poſſeſſion of it in the Iſt Year of King Edward the IVth: But ſoon after it was ſold to Markham, a Gentleman deſcended from the Markhams of Nottinghamſhire; and as ſoon ſent the ſame way to Tate; who likewiſe in a ſhort time ſold it to Sir Richard Lea Lord Mayor of London; deſcended from an Ancient Family of that Name in Worceſterſhire: His Son was Sheriff of Kent in the 19th Year of King Edward the IVth, and held his Shrievalty at this his Manor of Great or Much Delce, and in this Family it continued in Philpot's Time, being then in the Poſſeſſion of Richard Lea, Eſq;

3. Horſted, is a Place which, very probably, is ſuppoſed to have taken its Name from the famous Horſa, Brother to Hengiſt the firſt Founder of the Kingdom of Kent. He was ſlain in the firſt Battel between the Britons and Saxons at Aylesford; Catigern, Vortimer's Brother, and he, killing one another Hand to Hand: And as there is a famous old Saxon Monument erected in Aylesford Pariſh in Memory of Catigern, which the Vulgar call Kitts Coty Houſe, and the Figure of which I have there given you: So by the great Stones which have formerly been found here of the ſame kind, 'tis judged and reported, and with a good ſhew Reaſon, that here was formerly ſome ſuch like Monument erected for Horſa. And indeed, all round about the Place where this Battel was fought, there are ſtill to be ſeen ſeveral large Stones, ſome ſtanding upright, and others lying down, which, becauſe they ſeem all to have been brought from the Quarrey on the other ſide of the Medway, one would think were all deſigned as Monuments in Memory of the Great Men that fell in this famous Battel. Or in that between K. Alfred and the Danes.

But as to the Manor of Horſted, Philpot ſaith, that anciently it was part of the Eſtate of the Eminent Family of Apuldrefeild: William de Apuldrefeild obtained a Charter of Freewarren for his Lands here, in the 38th Year of King Henry the IIId: But in proceſs of Time it came ſomehow into the Poſſeſſion of Warren; for John, Son of Edmund Warren, died poſſeſs'd of it in the 12th Year of King Edward the IIId; from this Name it went by Purchaſe into that of the Fulſhams, above-named, and went the ſame way in Conſort with Much Delce, firſt to Love, then to Venour, Markham, and Tate, and ſo to Lea; and in Philpot's Time was in the Poſſeſſion of Richard Lea, Eſq;

4. Snodhurſt is another Manor, which lies partly in Chatham, and partly in this Pariſh; and anciently was part of the Eſtate of the great Family of Badeleſmere: It was forfeited to the Crown by Bartholomew Lord Badeleſmere in King Edward the IId's Time; and reſtored to his Son by King Edward the IIId: But he died without Iſſue in the 12th Year of that Prince, and left it to his Brother Giles Badeleſmere; but he alſo deceaſing without Iſſue, by his Siſter Margery it went to her Husband Sir John Tiptoft. This Gentleman before the 20th Year of King Edward the IIId, ſold it to Benedict de Fulſham; from which Name it went, as Horſted and Much Delce, through ſeveral Proprietors Hands, till at laſt it came into the Name of Lea: And in Philpot's Time was in the Poſſeſſion of Richard Lea, Eſq; abovenamed.

5. Little Delce. This Place as long ago as King Henry the Iſt, was in the Poſſeſſion of a Family of the Name of Serington or Sherington; whoſe Original and Principal Seat was at Sherington-Hall in Norfolk. Odo de Sherington died poſſeſs'd of it in the 31ſt Year of King Henry the Iſt, and was buried in Rocheſter Cathedral: Some Remains of his Monument being to be ſeen in Queen Elizabeth's Time, when Robert Glover, Somerſet Herald, viſited Kent. But by the 9th Year of King Edward the Iſt, this great Family ſeems to have been extinct here; for then this Manor was in the Poſſeſſion of Richard Pugeis: for from this Name, before the End of King Edward the IIId, it went by Sale to Richard Charles, who died ſeized of it in the 5th of King Richard the IId.

But Robert, Son of Nicholas Charles dying without Iſſue, it went by Marriage of his Siſter (Joan) to Richard Ormeskirk: And this Gentleman in the 3d Year of King Henry the IVth, ſold it to Henry Percy, Earl of Northumberland; who not long after parted with it the ſame Way to Rickhall; in which Name it ſtaid till the 17th Year

Year of King Henry the VIth, and then William Rickhull, Esq; sold it to Thomas Glover and Henry Hunt, then Wardens of Rochester-Bridge, to the Maintenance and Repair of the said Bridge for ever; and it now continues among the other Bridge Lands appropriated for that Purpose.

6. Nashenden. This Place had anciently Owners of the Name of Aspall: For in the 20th Year of King Edward the IIId, John Aspall paid Aid for it at making the Black Prince Knight. But before the End of King Richard the IId, it was sold from this Name into that of Peckham; and in the Reign of King Henry the VIth, John Peckham, parted with it the same way to the Wardens of Rochester-Bridge: And therefore it is now become Part of those Lands which are settled for the perpetual Repair of the said Bridge; and which therefore we usually call the Bridge Lands.

St. MARY Breden or Bridne in Canterbury. This Church was built by William, Son of Hamo and Grandson of Vitalis, one of those that came in with William the Conqueror; as his Father Hamo built that of St. Edmund of Riding-Gate.

A Vicarage; and valued in the King's Books at 4 l. 1 s. 4 d.

In it are or were in Somner's Time Memorials of John Humphrey (who was second Baron of the Exchequer, A. D. 1532.) and James Hales, and others, of the Family of this Name, whose Seat was the Dungeon: But before they came to it, the Dungeon was the Manor of the Chiches, whose Arms (viz. Argent 3 Lions Rampant Azure) are or were in Stone in one Corner of the Chancel; and in the East Window of this Church.

This is one of those 16 Churches which Mr. Batteley saith have been excused all Taxations and Payments, by Reason of the Meanness of the Benefices.

St. MARY Breadman in Canterbury, is a Church there that took its Name from the Bread-Market, which was formerly kept near it; tho' more anciently it had the Name of Ecclesia St. Mariæ de Andresgate, because there was a Place near it called Andresgate at St. Andrew's Church, where four Ways meet. It was also once called Ecclesia St. Mariæ Piscatorum, St. Mary Fishman's Church, from a Fish-Market which was kept near it.

This also is one of those 16 Churches, which on the Account of the Meanness of their Benefices, was excused all Taxations, &c.

'Tis a Rectory: and valued in the King's Books at 9 l. per Ann. But Mr. Batteley saith it is valued at four Marks. In the Church are or were Memorials of the Interment of Thomas Alcock and Robert Richmond, Rectors of this Parish both since 1500, and in the Body of the Church of William Megg.

St. MARY Castle in Canterbury had this Name to distinguish it from the other Churches dedicated to St. Mary in this City; on the Account of its being situated near the Castle.

There is now only the Chancel of this Church standing: and St. John's, another Parish Church formerly near it, but now demolished, was united to it, by the Priory of Christ-Church, A. D. 1347. with the Consent of the Patron, the Abbot of St. Austin's, the See of Canterbury being then vacant. And both of them for a good while did tacitly devolve to St. Mildred's (saith Somner) till in his Time St. Mary-Castle became separated from them, and to have an Incumbent of its own peculiarly instituted and inducted.

A Rectory; and rated in the King's Books at 2 l. 18 s. 0 d. per Ann.

Mr. Batteley saith it is a Mistake in Somner to ground the Decay of St. Mary-Castle's Church on the ceasing of the Offerings and Oblations, &c. at the Reformation: And he saith it was always so poor, as not to be able to maintain a Priest.

Place of Note here:

Dodingdale or Dudingdale is a Manor in this Parish which anciently had Owners of this Name: Guido de Dodingdale gave Tithes here to the Abbey of St. Austin's: But perhaps it was only for a Term; for one Robert de Mercie did afterwards give them to the Hospital of St. Lawrence.

The Church of Rochester have also a Portion of Tithes here which is called Dodingdale Portion; and was given to Rochester Priory, by Guido de Dodingdale, and confirmed afterwards not only by Hamo his Son, but Theobald Archbishop of Canterbury; and who in a Charter we have in our Archives that seems to be genuine, and is dated 1260, is written Gedbald. This is an Instrument of Walter Bishop of Exon, and Hugo Bishop of Ely, who I judge were appointed by Boniface, then Archbishop of Canterbury, to enquire into and confirm the Titles of the Priory of Rochester to their Lands, Tithes, and Estates.

Philpot saith this Manor of Dodingdale came to have the Name of Morton, from one Elias de Morton, its Possessor; and that it kept that Appellation in his Time: But this Morton sold it to Hugh Fitz-Vinon; and his Daughter and Heir Eugenia, parted with it the same Way to Nicholas de Twitham, in the 20th Year of King Henry the IIId. This Gentleman sold it to Robert de Polre; and from that Name he thinks it went into that of Chiche; to Hardress, and after that to Isaack; from which Name in the 20th Year of King Henry the VIth it was alienated to William Say, for the Use of Robert Rigdon. From hence it passed the same Way to Barton and White; who in the 18th Year of King Edward the IVth, sold it to Edward Pargate; whose Descendant, Edward Pargate in the 25th Year of King Henry the VIIIth, alienated it to Peter Bruin; and in this Name it staid some Years, till Henry Bruin, deceasing without Issue, left it to his Sister Jane Bugg: And she in the 1st Year of King James the Ist, sold it to her Kinsman John Bruin; and he sent it the same Way to William Denne; by whose only Daughter and Heir, Margaret, it went in Marriage to Edward Hougham: But he also in Philpot's Time had only Two Daughters, viz. Elizabeth, married to Mr. Edward Rose of Chistlet; and Anne, to Mr. John Bettenham of Canterbury; who after his Decease, were to be Heirs to this Manor.

St. MARY MAGDALEN's in Canterbury. This Church was anciently in the Patronage of the Abbey of St. Austin, and paid a Pension to it of 12 d. per Ann. But this and all other such Pensions were remitted, when Robert was Abbot in A. D. 1242.

'Tis a Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 4 l. 10 s. 0 d. per Ann.

The Steeple of this Church was new built in the Year 1503; towards which one Sir Henry Ramsey of St. George's gave 6 Seams of Lime.

At a Visitation held in 1560, it was sworn by the Officers of this Church, that there did belong to the Parsonage House here a Piece of Ground called Maudlen Croft, which Mr. Hyde Auditor of this Church did wrongfully detain from it: Somner saith by other Records, he found this Ground to lie in St. Martin's Parish: And that the Parson of this Church paid for it 4 s. per Ann. to the Hospital of St. Jacob.

One Richard Wekys or Weeks A. D. 1471, by his last Will and Testament was a great Benefactor to this Parish. Mr. Batteley saith this Church was anciently taxed at 8 Marks a Year.

The House and Garden of Tho. Fuller M.D at Sevenoake

By the Will of one Edmund Brandon, 10 s. per Ann. was given for a weekly Maſs of Jeſus to be ſung in this Church; but the Gift was ſo ſmall I believe it would not procure it to be done alone.

St. MARY Northgate, is a Pariſh which lies partly in and partly adjoining to the City of Canterbury. The Burgh of Stable-Gate here, is in the County of Kent, Bailiwick of Bridge and Petham, Hundred of Weſtgate, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath: The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims here; but the reſt is in the County and City of Canterbury, in which alſo the Church ſtands. 'Tis dedicated to the Virgin; and often called Northgate St. Mary's. 'Tis a Vicarage; and valued in the King's Books at 11 l. 8 s. 8 d. And was ſo conſtituted by Archbiſhop Stratford in the Year 1346, with the Conſent of the Patrons, the Convent of St. Gregory's, and endowed as a perpetual Vicarage.

The Inſtrument of which you will find in Somner's Appendix, N. LXVIII.

In this Church are or were Memorials of the Interment of Galfrid Holman in 1478; Walter Garrarde 1498: And on a Plate in the North Wall, a Memorial of Ralph Brown, formerly Mayor and Alderman here.

Batteley ſaith this Church was anciently valued at five Marks.

St. MARY's Quening-Gate in Canterbury, was a Chapel which anciently, as Batteley ſaith, ſtood in Quening-Gate-Lane, within the City Wall; but it was long ſince united to St. Michael's Burgate; which it ſelf was afterwards diſſolved and united to St. Mary Magdalen. The Profits of both St. Michael and St. Mary Quening-Gate together, were ſo ſmall as to amount to no more than 4 l. per Ann.

St. MARY's in Dover. See before in Dover.

St. MARY's in Sandwich. This Church being deſtroy'd by the Danes was rebuilt by Queen Emma. But was afterwards demoliſhed by the French in King Richard the IId's Reign.

Near this Church ſtood anciently a Nunnery built by Domneva, A.D. 640. And dedicated to the Virgin Mary.

In King Henry the VIIIth's Reign, an Anchoreſs had a Cell here at the Eaſt End of this Church.

In this Church in King Edward the VIth's Reign was buried in the South Iſle, Sir Edward Ringley, who married a Daughter of Mr. William Langley of Knowlton; and was Knighted at Morles in France, for his good Service there; and was after made Lieutenant of the Ordnance, Mareſchal of Calais, and Captain of the Caſtle of Guines.

In the North Side under the Arches in the Wall, lies Sir William Leverick and Emma his Lady, Daughter of Sir Septvans of Aſh: who were the Rebuilders of this Church, after it had been burnt by the French. They died in the Reign of King Henry the IVth.

Under a gilded Arch alſo, in the South Wall, lies William Lord Clinton, Founder of the Friery here; of which I will give an Account in another Place. In King Edward the VIth's Reign this Arch was walled up, but might be ſeen in the Church-yard.

Near him lies Thomas Candis, the Founder of a Chantry of Monks here.

And in the Belfrey Thomas Manwood, who died in King Henry the VIIIth's Time.

Stephen Perot in 1570.

In the 35th Year of King Edward the IIId, this Living was valued at 8 l. per Ann. as St. Clements was at 8 Marks; and were both held by the Lord Andomar de Rupy, Arch-Deacon of Canterbury, in Right of his Archdeaconry.

Near this Church ſtood anciently another called St. Jacob's or St. James, whoſe Church-yard only is now in Being, and is, as my Manuſcript informs me, a Burying-Place for Strangers: This Church was always furniſhed with an Hermit: The laſt of which, in King Henry the VIIIth's Time, was one John Steward, who was made Miniſter of this Church of St. Mary's: And the former Church of St. James was not quite demoliſhed till the Reign of King Edward the VIth.

St. MARY's near Rocheſter in the Hundred of Hoo, lies at the North Side of Kent, about five Miles North Eaſtward from Rocheſter, in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Hoo, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and North Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. In the Deanery and Dioceſe of Rocheſter. And the Liberty of that Biſhop claims over it. The Church is called St. Mary's; is but of one Iſle, and much out of Repair. In it are Memorials of Thomas Luckin, in the Year 1412.

A Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 16 l. 12 s. 4 d.

Places of Note here:

1. St. Mary Hall. In King Edward the IVth's Reign, as Philpot found by Sir Thomas Wiſeman's Writings, this Place was poſſeſs'd by one William Halton, who ſold it to William Lemyng Citizen of London, in the 8th Year of that King. In King Henry the VIIth's Time it was come into the Poſſeſſion of Sir John Brook Lord Cobham, who ſold it to Sir Robert Read, afterwards Lord Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas. And Margaret, one of his three Daughters and Coheirs, marrying Sir John Harcourt of Elnal in Staffordſhire, brought this Eſtate of St. Mary Hall to him, and both himſelf and his Lady ſoon after agreed to exchange it with Mr. Wiſeman, for the Priory of Ronton in Staffordſhire: Which Exchange was made in the 30th Year of King Henry the VIIIth; and ſo it continued in that Name till Philpot's Time, being then in the Poſſeſſion of Sir Thomas Wiſeman of Riven Hall in Eſſex: After this it went to Captain Daniel; and now is in Mr. Thomas Faunce of St. Margaret's in Rocheſter, in Right of his Wife, who was Capt. Daniel's Daughter.

2. Newland is another Manor here which was very anciently the Inheritance of the Somers; and Richard le Somer died ſeized of it in the Year 1347.

From him it deſcended to John Somer, who was Chancellor of the Exchequer in King Henry the VIth's Reign; and was a great Benefactor to the Priory of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury; and whoſe Arms are carved in Stone in the Cloyſter.

Sir William Somer, his Succeſſor, in Queen Elizabeth's Time was three Times employed as a Foreign Ambaſſador by that Queen. But he left only two Daughters; one of which by Marriage with Sir Alexander Temple, (as the other married Sir James Cromer) carried this Eſtate into that Family; whoſe Heir in King Charles the I's Time, paſſed it away to the Treaſurers of the Cheſt for Sick and Wounded Seamen at Chatham.

Combe is an Eſtate here which pays a Portion of Tithes to the Dean and Chapter of Rocheſter; and which is called Comb Portion.

St. MARY's near New Romney (St. Mary Church) lies at the South Side of Kent, about two Miles North from New Romney, in the Bailiwick and Lath of Shipway, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices of the Corporation of Romney Marſh; the Liberty whereof claims over the ſame.

'Tis all in the Deanery of Limpne and Dioceſe of Canterbury. But one Part of it lies in the Hundred of New Church; and the reſt in that of St. Martin; in which latter Hundred the Church ſtands, and is called St. Mary's. 'Tis

'Tis a Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 23 l. 4 s. 0 d. per Ann.

This Place was anciently part of the large Estate of the Family of Criol or Keriel. John de Crioll, a younger Branch of the Family of Bertram, died possess'd of it in the 49th Year of King Edward the IIId; and in this Name it continued till Sir Thomas Crioll, Knight of the Garter being killed at the Battel of St. Alban's, in the Cause of the House of York, his Daughter and Heir carried it to John Fogge, Esq; whose Son Thomas Fogge gave this Estate to his Kinsman George Fogge, in whose Family it continued till about King James the Ist's Reign, and then was sold to Carkeredge. Thomas Fogge above-mentioned left only two Daughters and Coheirs; one of which, Alice, was married to William Scott; and the other, Anne, first was the Wife of Edward Scott; and next of Henry Isham.

St. MARTIN's near Canterbury was an Ancient Christian Church, even in the Roman's Time; and it was that in which Queen Bertha (who was a Christian before Austin's Arrival here, and Daughter to Chilperic King of France) used to celebrate her Devotions; it stood Eastward, a little Way without the Walls of Canterbury: This Church, King Ethelbert allowed to Austin, and his Fellow Monks at their first coming, to perform Divine Service in. And here, 'tis likely, the King himself was baptized. It is a Rectory; and rated in the King's Books at 6 l. 5 s. 8 d.

In the Ancient Taxation this Church was rated at 10 l. per Ann.

Its great Antiquity appears from its being built, especially the Chancel, in a good Measure of Roman Bricks. It was dedicated to St. Martin in all Probability by Luidhard a French Bishop that came over with Queen Bertha. For St. Martin was Bishop of Tours, and an Eminent Saint in France.

This Place was anciently the Seat of a Bishop who either resided at his House here, or somewhere hereabouts: And in the Archbishop's Absence, who usually attended the Court, he exercised Episcopal Jurisdiction. He was a Monk, and received under Obedience the Monks of Christ-Church, and celebrated in the Cathedral Divine Offices. But those being over, he went to his own Place of Residence. He, and the Prior of Christ-Church, who was then called Dean, sate together in Synods, and were both habited alike.

These Bishops continued from Theodorus till near Lanfranc's Time; but then Godwin, the last Bishop of that See, dying, (probably about the Year 1087.) Lanfranc would ordain no other; alledging, that there ought not to be two Bishops in one City: And to supply this Defect, he appointed Valerius, one of his Clerks or Chaplains to be Archdeacon there, saith Lambard.

Their Names, (or those at least which were preserved) are these:

Bishops of St. Martin's.

1. Wilfred, A. D. 805. Afterwards made Archbishop.
2. Beornoth, A.D. 844.
3. Ethelwald, A.D. 853.
4. Ealstan, A. D. 864.
5. Sigefreth, A. D. 866.
6. Liaving, A. D. ——
7. Wearbeald, A. D. 890.
8. Almar,
9. Haimo.
10. Eadsin, A. D. 1035. Afterwards Archbishop of Canterbury.
11. Anschitillus.
12. Godwin, made Bishop in 1052, and who died in 1061.

'Tis probable, that on this Godwin's Death this See continued vacant till Lanfranc's Time; which was about 9 Years; and he would ordain no one to so poor a Bishoprick: But appointed, as some say, the Bishop of Rochester to be his Vicar or Deputy in his Absence. And thus ended the little Bishoprick of St. Martin's; which was so mean and poor, that the Bishops had hardly Bread.

Somner (in his Canterbury, p. 35.) saith, there was a Contest A. D. 1321. between the Rector of St. Martin's, and the Master of the Free-School of the City; the former claiming the Liberty of setting up a Free-School, in Right of his Church, and by Custom; but the other would not allow of it, but under a Limitation not to exceed such a Number of Scholars.

Places of Note here:

1. The Moat, anciently called the Wyke (either so called from Fordwich adjacent, for it adjoins to it (saith Somner (a)) at a Place called Wyking Smerke; or rather perhaps because formerly a Place of some Strength,) is a House of Note here; and formerly had Owners of the Sirname of Wyke. Stephen de Wyke possessed it in the 20th Year of King Henry the IIId, paying Aid for it at the Marriage of Isabell that Prince's Sister. But in the Beginning of King Richard the IId, it came into the Hands of Sir Richard de Hoo, and Richard Skippe, who sold it to Simon Spencer, and he to John Sandford, Gent. from whom it went the same Way to Richard Smith; and thence to John Eastfield, Esq; Son of Sir William Eastfield, Knight of the Bath, and Lord Mayor of London in 1438; from him it went by Sale to William Rogers, who, by a Fine levied in the 33d Year of Henry the VIth, sold it to Philip Belknap, Esq; Mayor of Canterbury in 1458, and Sheriff of Kent the Year after; he married Elizabeth, Daughter of John Woodhouse, Esq; whose only Daughter and Heir Alice, carried it in Marriage to Henry Finch of Netherfield, Esq;, and hence it came down to John Lord Finch, who was created Baron of Fordwich by King Charles the Ist, when he was Keeper of the Great Seal: From him it came to be in the Possession of the Right Honourable the Earl of Winchelsea. It had anciently a Chapel belonged to it, in which Divine Service was celebrated by a License from Richard Oxenden, Prior of Christ-Church, A D. 1333. The Instrument you have in Somner's Canterb. Append. Numb. XI. And here or near this Place lay the Lands belonging to the Chaptery of,

(a) p. 3

Lukedale or Lokingdale, afterwards given to the Hospital of St. John's without Northgate in Canterbury. And here the Hospital of St. Lawrence, had, or still have, a Portion of Tithes. See Somner p. 36.

At this Place of the Moat or Wyke, was in the Year 1333, a Chapel, which was licensed by Richard then Prior of Christ-Church. See the Deed in Somner's Canterb. Appendix, Numb. XI.

Bede saith this Church of St. Martin was built in the Romans Time; others say by Lucius, or in his Time.

St. MARTIN's in Dover. See before in Dover; and in the Chapter of Religious Houses.

MEOPHAM, Mepham, Meapaham, lies towards the North Side of Kent, about four Miles Southward from Gravesend, in the Bailiwick of Hoo, Hundred of Toltringtow, Lath of Aylesford, West Division of the County, and North one of Justices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery of Shoreham; and so a Peculiar to the Archbishop of Canterbury; but in the Diocese of Rochester. The Church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is fair and large; two Side Isles, and a large Chan-Chancel, and a Rood Loft. A Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 16 l. 3 s. 4 d. per Ann.

Wever ſaith, that Archbiſhop Courtney annexed to this Church four new Houſes for the Uſe of the Poor, p. 331. In it are ſome ancient Memorials; as a Braſs Plate of John Foulkham, Vicar in the Year 1404. and two Stones over two other Vicars here much ancienter; the Letters being Ancient, but not legible.

And if not built, was at leaſt much repaired by Simon Mepham Archbiſhop of Canterbury, about 370 Years ſince. And A. D. 1385, it was again repaired by Archbiſhop Courtney, and appropriated by him to Chriſt-Church in Canterbury. Tho' ſome ſay it was before appropriated to the Almnery of that Convent, by Richard Archbiſhop of Canterbury, about 530 Years ago.

The Liberty of the Dean of Canterbury claims over the Manor of Meopham, which A. D. 940, was given to that Church by Duke Eadulph, or as ſome ſay, by Queen Ediva or Edgiva, Mother of King Edmund and King Edred, and Daughter and Heir to Earl Sigilline, Lord of Meopham, A. D. 960. But 'tis plain this Land here was given to that Church by Birtrick's Will cited by Lambard, p. 548.

This Pariſh ought anciently to have contributed towards the Repair of the 9th Peer or Arch of Rocheſter-Bridge.

A Fair is kept here Yearly on June 29.

Places of Note here:

1. The Manor of Meopham, which as is aboveſaid, was given to Chriſt-Church in Canterbury, and was after the general Suppreſſion by King Henry the VIIIth, in his 29th Year, given to that Church again, on its new Eſtabliſhment by a Dean and Chapter.

2. Dodmore is a Manor in Meopham, which of old belonged to the Eminent Family of Huntingfield: Sir Peter Huntingfield demiſed it by a Deed (without Date) to his Kinſman Walter Huntingfield; and he, by another old dateleſs Deed, conveys it to John Smith; who in the 47th Year of King Edward the IIId, ſold it to Richard Ideleigh; from whom the Ideleighs of Eaſture in Chilham, and of Rollington in Goodneſton in Eaſt Kent are derived; and this Family had much Land here, at Cobham, and at Higham. But ſomehow in the 9th Year of King Henry the VIIIth it was got into the Poſſeſſion of Thomas Cavendiſh, Eſq; and about the 2d Year of King Edward the VIth it went from that Name to Henry Taylor; and thence in about 30 Years to John Giffard; after this it went to Walter Bowre of Brenchley; and then to Henry Collins, who A. D. 1604, ſold it to Walter Kipping of Kippings Croſs in Tudley; by whoſe Daughter it went in Marriage to Edward Darell, Eſq;; and he was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

3. Dean-Court; This is a Place here which anciently was part of the great Eſtate of the Twithams: Allan de Twitham is in the Liſt of thoſe brave Kentiſh Gentlemen that aſſiſted King Richard the Iſt at the Siege of Acon in Paleſtine: And here it ſtaid till Maud de Twitham, Daughter of Theobald de Twitham, who died in the 4th Year of King Richard the IId, carried it in Marriage to Simon Septvans of Checquer in Aſh by Sandwich: From her came Sir William Septvans, who married Anne, Daughter and Heir of Sir Nicholas Sandwich: From which Match came John Septvans, Eſq; who married Conſtance Daughter and Heir of Thomas Ellys of Sandwich; and by her he had John Septvans, Eſq; who was, as Eldeſt Son and Heir, in Poſſeſſion of Hells, Twitham, Chilton, Molland's in Aſh, and other Lands in Kent. But his ſecond Son Thomas, had this Dean-Court; and Gilbert, his third Son had Checquer in Aſh; from whence he is ſometimes written At-Checquer; and afterwards Harfleet, from ſome eminent Service performed by him at a Town of that Name in Normandy, under the Conduct of King Henry the 5th; which Name they all bare that were derived from this Gilbert Septvans, either directly or collaterally: And in the Name of Harfleet, alias Septvans, did this Place continue, till King Charles the Iſt's Time, and then was ſold to Mr. Francis Twiſden, third Brother to Sir Roger Twiſden of Roydon Hall, Baronet.

Lambard very judiciouſly inſerts here the enſuing Saxon Will, of an Inhabitant of this Place; by which the old Form and Wording of Wills in thoſe Days will appear: As alſo how the Huſband and Wife joined in making the Teſtament: How, or by what Words, Lands were then deviſable this Way; How the Lords Conſent was thought neceſſary to a Tenant's Will; and procured by the Gift of an Heriot, &c. together with the Weapons, Jewels, and Ornaments of thoſe early Times.

This Eminent Will is recorded in our Textus Roffenſis, f. 144. (with which I have compared and rectified Lambard's Copy.) And I give it you juſt as it is there, with Lambard's Verſion interlined. And there being but few Letters in which the Saxon differs from the preſent Engliſh Character, I have thought it beſt to print it in the latter.

Obſervations on the Preceeding Will.

This Teſtament of Birbtrick hath been publiſhed, with ſome Notes and Remarks upon it, by the Learned Dr. Hicks in his Diſſertatio Epiſtolaris, p. 51. at the End of his Theſaurus Linguarum Vet. Septentrional.; together with ſome other Teſtaments in the Saxon Times; and by his, and what other Helps I could get, the following Obſervations have been formed.

1. Here is a Teſtament made concurrently by the Man and Wife together : This Dr. Hicks ſhews was agreeable to the Imperial Conſtitutions of Theodoſius and Valentinian; and that a ſolemn Form of ſuch a Will is extant in Marculfus, Cap. LXXI.

2. Tho' there be no Date to this Will, either of Year, Month, or Day, which the Ancient Roman Civil Law did not require; altho' it did that there ſhould be 7 Witneſſes; yet its Time may be nearly determined : More nearly indeed than Dr. Hicks ſeems to have obſerved; for it was not only during the Life-Time of his Lord Ælfrick, the Son of Ælfhere, but alſo when Ælfſtane was Biſhop of Rocheſter: And it appears by two Charters recorded in our Textus Roffenſis, That Ælfſtan was Biſhop of Rocheſter, A. D. 955. and that Godwine ſate in that Chair, A. D. 995. Taking then the Middle of the 40 Years, by which theſe Dates differ, we may probably conjecture the Time of the Execution of this Teſtament to have been about 970.

3. Since the Conſent of his Lord and Lady were neceſſary to the Validity of this Will, 'tis plain his Eſtate was not in Bocland, nor held in Allodio : But that he was a Feudal Tenant that held it by ſome kind of Service.

4. It doth not appear by this Will, nor by the others cited by Dr. Hicks, that our Saxon Anceſtors appointed or named any ſuch Truſtees as we now call Executors, to ſee their Teſtaments duly performed and executed. But this was afterwards done by the Proper Court into which the Will was carried; by the Witena Dome, as they called it, by the Judgment of the Wiſe Men: Though perhaps (as here) if the Teſtator were a Tenant, this Care was commited to the Lord under whom he held, and by whoſe Leave he made the Will.

5. It doth not appear, neither from this and the other Teſtaments above-mentioned, that there was any determinate Number of Witneſſes required: But it doth, that a Woman might be a Witneſs which was prohibited by the Roman Civil Law.

6. As to the Ornaments and Weapons here mentioned and bequeathed; you have firſt the Beah, or Beage from the Saxon bugan bygan, to bend, crook, or bring into the Form of an Arch or Bow : And therefore very properly is rendred a Bracelett, which may be either for the Head, Neck, or Arm: and probably, beſides having its Matter of Gold, might be ſet with Pearls or ſome precious Stones. For ſince 'tis ſaid that the Value of this Bracelet was Eighty Marks of Gold; that is, as I ſhall ſhew below, of about 300 l. of our Money; 'tis likely it had ſomething about it more valuable than Gold. Which ſeems to be confirmed by the Value of the Sweor Beah or the Necklace; here ſaid to be valued, one at 40 Marks of Gold, or 150 l. and another at 80 Marks, or 300 l.

The healſne Bænd gylden, Mr. Lambard renders a head Band covered with Gold, or rather of Gold; for I take it to have been a Kind of Golden Coronet or Diadem, bound upon the fore Part, or half of the Head; and did not go quite round but was only an Healſne Bænd.

The Handſecs here given to his Lord of 300 l. ſeems to have been a Battle Axe, whoſe Handle was plated with Gold, and probably beſet with Pearls or precious Stones beſide : Eſpecially if it were what Lambard makes it, a Dagger, and perhaps was born or worn on ſome ſolemn Occaſions, more for State than Uſe. For no doubt this Brihtric was a Thane or Nobleman; as his Lord Ælfric is ſtiled an Alderman or Earl in the Saxon Chronicle.

The Two Swords here bequeathed, which are plainly diſtinguiſhed as a different Weapon from the Handſecs; are ſaid to have been gefetelſode, trimmed, ſaith Lambard : But the Word ſignifies rather poliſhed; and is rendred by the Rocheſter Monks in the Textus Roffenſis optime adornatos.

He gives alſo to his Lord all his Heador Hundas, which Lambard renders his Hedge Hounds, a Word I think ſcarce intelligible : But doubtleſs he meant a Pack or Kennel of Hounds, which were kept within an Heder; an Encloſure or Kennel as we now call it.

He gives alſo to his Lady, ænne Stedan; which is by no means a Palfrey, or eaſy Saddle Horſe, as Lambard ſeems to think; but a Horſe to breed by, a Stallion as we now call it : And hence the Place where Horſes were bred came to be called the Studd.

7. As to the Legacies in Money; they are here called Pennies and Marks of Gold. The Penny, Penninga and Peninga, was a Coin of Silver, of the Value of our Threepence; and was the only one ſtruck in the Times of our Saxon Kings; and I believe for a good while afterwards: The moſt accurate and judicious Author of the Chronicon Pretioſum, the preſent Biſhop of Ely, ſaith, That there were Half-pence in the Reign of King Henry the Iſt : But that in the 9th Year of King Edward the IIId, there was no other Silver Coin, but Pence, Half-pence, and Farthings. 'Tis certain there never was any ſuch Coin as a Mark of Silver; but whether there may not have been ſuch a Piece as a Mark (Mearc ſignifies a Character, Note, or Mark) of Gold, I don't find the ſame Reaſon to be aſſured : Though on the other Hand, I am not certain that there was, tho' I incline to believe ſo. But the Mark of Silver was only, as it is now with us, a Denomination or Value, and not any Coined Piece.

Becauſe I ſhall have Reaſon hereafter in many Places of this Hiſtory to mention the Anglo-Saxon Money, I will take this Occaſion to give the following Table of its Value.

Two Sticæ, in Mercia, made a Farthing. } Note, Both theſe were of Two Farthings, an Helfling. } Braſs.

Two Helflings made a Penny, which was equal in Value to Three-Pence of our Money; was a Siver Coin, and for a great while the only one.

Four Saxon Pennies made a Thrymſa.

Ten Sticæ made the Sceata.

Five Sceatæ made ſix Pennies.

Five Pennies made what they called the Solidus Scylling, or Shilling; which was not a Coin, but a Denomination only, and was equal in lue to our Fifteen Pence: So alſo four Sceats made a Shilling.

Twenty Pennies made the Ora, which was not a Coin, but a Name of ſuch a Value of Money: It was the 8th Part of the Daniſh or Iſlandick Mark; or of the Weight of an Ounce of pure Silver.

Thirty Pennies, or 25 Sceatæ, or 6 Saxon Shillings, made the Value of the Marck, Mancus, Marcs, or Mancuſa; which therefore was in Value equal to Seven Shillings and Sixpence of our Money, or 90 Pence. But the Golden Mark or Mancuſa was ten times as much, or about 3 l. 15 s. 0 d. of our Money.

Ten Marks, or 60 Shillings, made the Saxon Pound; which was equal to Fifteen Ounces of Silver. Some think the Saxon Pound was but 48 Shil. as Camden, Spelman, and Lambard, and the Author of the Chronicon Pretioſum inclines to the ſame Opinion. But in this Computation I follow Dr. Hicks in Diſſertatio Epiſtolaris, p. 109, &c.

Siclus; This ſeems to have been a Saxon Coin, or at leaſt a Name of Money of ſuch a Value; but 'tis not certain what the Value of it was. By Egbert's Dialog. de Eccleſiæ Inſtitutione (printed at London, 1693.) p. 273; it ſeems to have been valued at 2 Silver Pennies. But Sir Edward Coke in his Preface to the 6th Book of his Inſtitutes, cites a Charter of Queen Ethelſwithes, which ſaith, That 1500 Sicli were valued at 1500 Shillings of Gold and Silver. Wherefore according to this Account a Sicle muſt be equal to a Shilling of Silver and Gold; which (ſaith Dr. Hicks Prefat. ad Theſaur. p. xxj.) is Eleven Shillings of Silver.

MEREWORTH, in the Textus Roffenſis, Mærewurtha, vulgarly called Merrard, lies towards the Middle of Kent, by a Rivulet, which runs into the Medway by Watringbury, and between Teſton and Nettleſtede. 'Tis about a Mile and a half Southward from Weſt-Malling, in the Bailiwick of Twiford, Hundred of Littlefield, Lath of Ayleſford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and South one of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery of Malling, and Dioceſe of Rocheſter: And the Church is dedicated to St. Lawrence. A Rectory; and valued in the King's Books at 14 l. 2 s. 6 d.

This Pariſh ought anciently to have contributed towards the Repair of the Fifth Pere or Arch of Rocheſter Bridge.

I find by the Textus Roffenſis, f. 190. That William, Son of William de Horſeburdenne gave to the Church of Rocheſter the Tithes of a Piece of Land in this Pariſh, which then was called Crankberga or Crankbury; for the Soul of his Wife: And accordingly the Monks appointed an Anniverſary Maſs for her.

Places of Note here:

1. Mereworth Manor, was anciently the Seat and Property of a Family of the Name of Mereworth: And Philpot ſaith they came out of another Family which was called St. Lawrence. William de Mereworth was one of thoſe Kentiſh Knights that attended King Richard the Iſt, in the famous Siege of Acon in Paleſtine. In the 15th Year of King John, Roger, Son of Euſtace de Mereworth brought a Quare impedit againſt the Prior of Leeds, for the Advowſon of the Church of Mereworth, in the 7th Year of King Edward the Iſt. It appears by a Copy of ſome Pleas of the Crown, held then before the Juſtices Itinerant for this County, that Gilbert de Clare Earl of Glouceſter and Hertford, claimed the uſual Privileges of a Manor for his Eſtate here, which no doubt the Mereworths held under him. And in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, I find that Roger de Mereworth had the Benefit of an Annual Fair here, on the Day before and on St. Lawrence's Day; and as Philpot ſaith, a Weekly Market alſo: And that his Son John was then a Minor, and under the Wardſhip of the ſaid Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Glouceſter, &c. And conſiderable Damages were recovered at that Time upon one John de Colambers, for his cutting down the Woods and ſpoiling the Gardens of this Young John de Mereworth. In the 20th Year of King Edward the IIId, another John de Mereworth paid Aid for this Manor at making the Black Prince Knight: This and his Eſtate at Crombery in Hadloe being then reckoned as an entire Knight's Fee, and he held it of the Earl of Glouceſter. Some how or other John de Malmains of Pluckly became this Man's Heir: For in the 46th Year of King Edward the IIId, he ſold this Eſtate to Humphrey Bohun, Earl of Eſſex and Hereford: And he about the Beginning of King Richard the IId, ſent it the ſame Way to Nicholas de Brembre, Son of Sir John de Brembre, mentioned by Mr. Selden in his Titles of Honour, p. 556. as being engaged in the Battel of Trent, A. D. 1350. But he had the Misfortune, for encouraging the Arbitrary Proceedings of King Richard the IId, to be attainted of High Treaſon in the 10th Year of that Prince; by which means that Eſtate became forfeited to the Crown, and Three Years after was granted to John Hermenſthorpe; and he ſoon after ſold it to Richard Fitz Allan, Earl of Arundel, then Lord Treaſurer, and Lord Admiral of England: But his Son Thomas Fitz Allan dying without Iſſue, Joan his Siſter carried it in Marriage to William Beauchampe, who was created Baron of Bergavenny in the 14th Year of King Richard the IId. So that it ſtaid in Fitz Allan's Family ſo ſhort a while, as ſcarcely to deſerve the ſolemn Mention Camden makes of it: And it went not, as he ſeems to ſay, to the Nevil Family directly, but as you ſee by a Female Heir, firſt into that of Beauchampe; and here it ſtaid till Richard de Beauchampe dying without Iſſue-Male in the 9th Year of King Henry the Vth, and leaving it to his only Daughter Elizabeth, it went by her in Marriage to Edward Nevil Baron of Bergavenny: And from him that Title, and alſo that of Baron of Mereworth, deſcended to her great Grandſon Henry Nevil, who dying in the 29th Year of Queen Elizabeth, left this Manor to Mary his only Daughter and Heir; and ſhe carried it to her Husband Sir Thomas Fane: And unto her King James the Iſt in his firſt Parliament, Reſtored, Gave, Granted, &c. the Name, Style, Title, Honour, and Dignity, of Baroneſs le Deſpencer; and that her Heirs ſhould be Barons le Deſpencer ſucceſſively for ever. By this Sir Thomas Fane of Badſek in this County, ſhe had Iſſue Sir Thomas Fane, Knight of the Bath, whom King James in his 22d Year created Earl of Weſtmorland, and Baron Burghurſt, for he was by his Mother deſcended from that old Barony: And in this Noble Family doth the Earldom of Weſtmorland, and thoſe two Baronies, and this Manor and Seat ſtill continue.

2. Jotes-Court. Thit Place had anciently Poſſeſſors of its own Name, though before the End of King Richard the IId they became extinct here; and then this Place came to have the ſame Owners as Mereworth, till Sir Thomas Nevil, third Son of George Baron of Bergavenny, one of the Privy Conncil to King Henry the VIIIth, and Speaker of the Houſe of Commons, did in the 38th Year of that Prince alienate it to Sir Robert Southwell; who within two Years after ſold it to Sir Edmund Walſingham of Scadbery in this County: And his great Grandſon ſon Sir Thomas Walſingham, Kt. ſent it the ſame Way to his Son-in-Law, Mr. James Maſters; and he was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

3. Swanton-Court is another Place in Mereworth, which had once alſo Poſſeſſors of its own Name, for in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, it was made appear before the Juſtices Itinerant, that Richard de Swanton, Father of Reyne, Wife of Lucas de Bercklynden died ſeized of a Meſſuage of 90 Acres of arable Land, three Acres of Meadow, and eight Acres of Wood Land in Mereworth. Philpot ſaith it was part of the Revenue of the Knights Hoſpitallers; tho' when it came firſt to be ſo, or by whoſe Donation, he doth not ſhew. But there he ſaith it ſtaid till the general Suppreſſion of the Religious Houſes, and then about the 32d Year of King Henry the VIIIth, was granted to Sir Robert Southwell, who about Three Years after ſold it to Sir Edmund Walſingham of Scadbury, from which Name it went with Totes-Court to Mr. James Maſters, who was in Poſſeſſion in Philpot's Time.

MERSHAM, Merſcham, lies towards the South-Eaſt Part of Kent, by the River Stour, about two Miles and an half South Weſtward from Aſhford in the Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in the Lath of Shipway. Part of it is in the Bailiwick and Lath of Shipway, and in the Hundred of Bircholt Franchiſe, and the reſt is in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Chart and Longbridge, and in the Lath of Scray.

The Liberty of Wye claims here; but that of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury claims over the Manor of Merſham.

'Tis in the Deanery of Limpne, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. A Rectory; and valued in the King's Books at 26 l. 16 s. 11 d. per Ann. The Church ſtands in the Hundred of Chart and Longbridge, and is dedicated to St. John the Baptiſt.

Places of Note here:

1. Merſham Manor. This was given to the Priory of Chriſt-Church, A. D. 1051. by one —— Siward and Matilda his Wife; which was confirmed afterwards by a Charter of King Edward the Confeſſor. 'Tis called in Domeſday Book Manerium S. Trinitatis (becauſe Chriſt-Church was then dedicated to the Holy Trinity) and in King Edward the Confeſſor's Time defended it ſelf for Six Sulings; but when the Archbiſhop received it, it made but five and a half Sulings; and in King William the Iſt's Reign it was but three Sulings. Hugo de Mundford was then the Church's Tenant for one half of it, which was then valued at 18 l.

Philpot makes a groſs Blunder here in ſaying it was given to St. Auſtin's; it continued in Chriſt-Church, till the general Diſſolution of the Abbeys, and then was by Henry the VIIIth in his 33d Year ſettled on his New-founded Dean and Chapter of Canterbury.

2. Quatherington vulgo Quarrington, is a Place here which was the ancient Reſidence of the Blechindens: But when William Blechingden married Agnes, Daughter and Coheir of Mr. —— Godfrey of Aldington, and became by that means Owner of Simnell in that Pariſh, he removed from hence thither about the Middle of King Richard the IId. From this Name it went into that of Cleggate of Canterbury; and thence it was ſold to Eaſtday of Saltwood; from whence it went the ſame Way to Knatchbull, of which Family was Sir Norton Knatchbull, eminent for his Learning and Knowledge of Antiquity.

MERSTON, lies at the North Side of Kent, about Three Miles North Weſtward from Rocheſter, in the Bailiwick of Hoo, Hundred of Shamell, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and North one of Juſtices in that Lath.

The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims here, for it is in the Deanery of Shoreham, and ſo a Peculiar of the Archbiſhops, tho' in the Dioceſe of Rocheſter. The Church was dedicated to St. Giles, but is now demoliſhed, and hath been ſo a long while, and is not rated in the King's Books.

Philpot ſaith nothing of this Place.

St. MICHAEL's in Canterbury near Burgate. This Church had formerly a Chapel belonging to it called St. Mary's of Quening-Gate: But they are now both demoliſhed, the Former is united to St. Mary Magdalen's; ſome of the old Walls are ſtill ſtanding; but 'tis now turned into a Dwelling Houſe.

MIDLEY, Middele, lies towards the South Side of Kent, about Two Miles North Weſtward from Lidd, in the Bailiwick and Lath of Shipway, Hundred of St. Martin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath.

The Liberty of the Dean of Canterbury claims here in Part of the Manor of Agbne (alias Agonbee) which was given to the Priory of Chriſt-Church, by Offa King of Mercia, in the Year 791, and by King Henry the VIIIth in his 33d Year, was ſettled on the new Dean and Chapter of Canterbury.

'Tis in the Deanery of Limpne, and Dioceſe of Canterbury: But the Church is demoliſhed.

This Place was once Part of the Eſtate of the Echinghams, of whom ſee more in Faeques-Court in Lidd; and by Margaret Daughter of Thomas Echingham, went thence to Walter Blunt, Eſq; whoſe Son Edward Lord Mountjoy deceaſing without Iſſue; by Elizabeth his Siſter and Heir it went in Marriage to Andrew Windſor, afterwards made Lord Windſor by King Henry the VIIIth. But he not long after ſold it to one Clache, by whoſe Daughter it went to Stringer; and thence by Sale to Scott, and thence the ſame Way to Godfrey; in which Family it continued in Philpot's Time, being in the Poſſeſſion of Sir Thomas Godfrey.

Midley is a Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 30 l. 0 s. 0 d. per Ann.

A. D. 1548, Archbiſhop Cranmer, with the Conſent of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury, had this Living in Exchange for one in Com. Bucks, from the Lord Windſor, for 99 Years. See Strype's Memorial of Cranmer's Life, p. 183.

In the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt. John de Grenefield and his Wife, and William Benervick of Old Romney and his Wife, recovered Land and Tenements here, and in Old Romney, againſt John Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and John Bendingges de Newland.

St. MILDRED's in Canterbury, is a Pariſh Church there, which was founded by the Abbot and Convent of St. Auſtin's in that City; and rated ſaith Batteley at 8 Marks per. Ann.

Somner ſaith, that in the Windows are Memorials of the Family of Atwood, in a very ancient Character: There was one of that Name who lived in King Henry the VIIIth's Time, that had been four Times Mayor of the City, and who dwelt in Stoure Street: He built the South Side Chancel for a Burying Place for him and his Family.

One John Stalp alſo was a Benefactor to this Church; for his Name is on ſeveral of the Pews.

Lambard is much miſtaken in ſaying, that there was formerly a Nunnery in Canterbury, dedicated to St. Mildred; which is grounded on Leofrune's (or Leſwine as ſome call her) Abbeſs of St. Mildred's in the Iſle of Thanet, being carried away Captive from this Town, in the Times when the Danes ſacked and burnt it. This Church (ſaith Stow) and a good Part of the City was burnt in the Year 1246.

to

MILSTED lies towards the North Side of Kent, about Three Miles Southward from Milton in the Bailiwick and Hundred of that Name, Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and upper one of Juſtices in that Lath.

'Tis in the Deanery of Sittingbourn, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. And the Church is called St. Mary, and Holy Croſs; is neat but ſmall; with a low Tower.

Places of Note here:

1. Hogſhaws is a Place here which once was for a great while the Seat of a Family of that Name. The laſt of which here was Edmund Hogſhaw, who in the 11th Year of King Richard the IId, ſold it to Sir Thomas Lovel. From this Family, it was ſold to the Greaves; and from thence in the 9th Year of King Henry the VIIIth it went the ſame Way to Roger Wake; and in Six Years after that to Richard Bernard, and thence ſoon to Adam Henman of Lenham; who in the 12th Year of Queen Elizabeth, ſold it to Amias Thompſon; by whoſe Daughter it went in Marriage to Mr. John Tooke, whoſe Son Captain Nicholas Tooke ſold it to Mr. Richard Tilden, the Owner in Philpot's Time.

2. Higham: formerly, and in ſome Deeds called Nottingham Court, as having been once the Reſidence of a Family called Nottingham, who had a good Eſtate in theſe Parts, and whoſe Arms are or were in the coloured Glaſs Windows of Milſted Church; viz. Palywavy of 4 Pieces Gules and Argent. John Nottingham was the laſt of this Name here; whoſe Daughter Eleanor married Simon, ſecond Son to Sir Richard Cheyney of Shurland, and ſo carried this Eſtate into that Family; and there it continued in Philpot's Time.

In the Church are Memorials of Tilden, Ermine between 4 Pheons, who married into the Whitfields of Bethersden.

A Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 8 l. 15 s. 0 d. per Ann.

In the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, I find this Church valued at xxiij. Shillings per An. then in the King's Donation, and in the Poſſeſſion of Gilbert, Nephew to Henry de Wingham, who had been Lord Chancellor in the 39th Year of King Henry the IIId.

MILTON near Canterbury, Miletune, lies towards the Eaſt Part of Kent, by the River Stoure, about one Mile and a half South Weſtward from Canterbury, in the Bailiwick of Bridge and Petham, Hundred of Weſtgate, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery and Dioceſe of Canterbury: A Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 4 l. 14 s. 4 d. per Ann. The Church is a poor ſmall Building, without either Tower or Steeple; only at the Weſt End is a little Pinacle of Stone. It ſtands ſo near to the River, that I fancy it took its Name from ſome eminent Water-Mill which formerly was here: Now there is but one Houſe in the Pariſh. In the Church are no Monuments, nor Remains of Antiquity: It was long ſince reckoned as a Chapel of Eaſe to Chartham.

Places of Note here:

1. Milton Manor was given to the Priory of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury, by one Lyfchild; and after, in A. D. 822. Cœnulf King of Mercia confirmed the Gift, and ſet it free from all Tribute and ſecular Payments. And in Proceſs of Time, by ſome Accident or other being taken from that Convent, it was again reſtored to it by the Gift of one Egelrick Bigge in the Year 1044.

Philpot calls this Place Milton Septvans, from the Eminent Family of that Name, who anciently had their Reſidence at this Place, and were the eldeſt Branch of the Septvans. William Son of William Septvans of this Place was Sheriff of Kent, in the 4th Year of King Richard the IId; but not many Years after this, by a Daughter of that Name, it went in Marriage to Sir Francis Fogge; and his Deſcendant Sir John Fogge of Repton, ſold it to Sir George Brown of Bechworth-Caſtle in Surrey; but his Grandſon partly ſold it and partly gave it in Dower with his Daughter Elizabeth, who married Mr. Robert Honeywood of Charing; and now in Right of his Lady, who was a Deſcendant of this Family of Honeywood, 'tis come by Marriage into the Poſſeſſion of Sir Iſaac Rebow.

MILTON by Graveſend, Meletun, Melton, lies at the North Side of Kent, on the Thames, about a Mile Eaſtward from Graveſend, in the Bailiwick of Hoo, Hundred of Totlingtrow, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and in the Diviſion of the Juſtices of the Corporation of Milton and Graveſend, the Liberty whereof claims here. 'Tis in the Biſhoprick of Rocheſter and Deanery of the ſame. And the Church is dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul. A Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 16 l. 5 s. 10 d.

A Fair is kept here on Jan. 25, and holds a Week.

Round the Walls of this Church are painted the Creſts of the Kings of England, from King Edward the IIId, to King James the Iſt.

This Pariſh ought anciently to have contributed towards the Repair of the 9th Pere or Arch of Rocheſter-Bridge.

King Henry the VIIIth raiſed here a Platform for the Defence of this Town and Graveſend, in order to command the River.

Places of Note here:

1. Milton was anciently Part of the Eſtate of the Montchenſeys, Lords and Barons of Swanſcombe: For Warren de Montchenſey obtained a Charter of Freewarren to his Manor of Milton, in the 37th Year of King Henry the IIId; his Son William died poſſeſs'd of it in the 52d Year of King Henry the IIId, and left it to his Daughter Dionis, who married Hugh de Vere, but died without Iſſue: Wherefore Joan Siſter to William de Montchenſey above-mentioned, brought this Eſtate to her Husband Aymer de Valence Earl of Pembroke; whoſe Son William dying without Iſſue, his Siſter Iſabell carried it to her Husband Lawrence de Haſtings Earl of Pembroke; whoſe Grandſon John de Haſtings about the Beginning of King Richard the IId, ſold it to Sir Simon de Burley, on whoſe Attainder in the 10th Year of this Reign it Eſcheated to the Crown; and four Years after the King gave it to John Holland Earl of Huntingdon; and he ſold it to Reginald Cobham; whoſe Widow Elizabeth carried it to a ſecond Husband William Clifford, Eſq; in the 9th Year of King Henry the IVth. After his Death it went to Braybrook, who had married Joan the Heir General of Cobham; thence by another

Heir

Heir General it went to Brook of Somerſetſhire; after this, in the Beginning of King Edward the IVth, it was in the Poſſeſſion of Robert Brent; whoſe Son William in the 8th Year of King Henry the VIIth, ſold it to Sir Henry Wyat; and his Grandſon Sir Thomas forfeited it by Attainder to the Crown in the 2d Year of Queen Mary: And then it was granted to George Brook Lord Cobham, whoſe Deſcendant Henry Lord Brook was alſo attainted of High-Treaſon, for being concerned with Sir Water Raleigh, in the Beginning of King James the Iſt; and then that Prince granted it to Mr. George Tucker of Graveſend; whoſe Grandſon George ſold it to Mr. —— Hamon of Queenhithe, London: And he was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

MILTON near Sittingbourne, Middleton: Philpot ſaith it was called ſo from lying in the Middle of the County: But Lambard, becauſe it lies between Newington and Marſtone: It lies at the North Part of Kent, near the Iſle of Sheppey, about ſix Miles North Weſtward from Feverſham, in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Milton, Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and upper one of Juſtices in that Lath: In the Deanery of Sittingbourn, and Dioceſe of Canterbury: A Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 13 l. 2 s. 3 d. The Church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity; is handſome and large, with a very good Tower; the Communion Table handſomely railed in, and wainſcoted behind.

In this Church were Memorials of the Interment of John Norwood, Eſq; in the Year 1400; of John Norwood, Eſq; in 1496, who was Conſtable of Queenborough-Caſtle, in the 1ſt Year of King Edward the IVth; of Thomas Aleſe in 1539; This ſtill remains on a Braſs Plate in the South Wall: Of Sir John Norton in 1534; this was in the South Chancel, but the Inſcription is now gone: Of Clement Finch, Eſq; in 1596. And in the Veſtry I ſaw a Braſs Plate, which had been on the Tomb-Stone of John Norwood, A. D. 1430.

A Market is kept here every Saturday.

This Town is governed by an Officer, who is ſtill called by the old Saxon Name of Port-Reeve; He is choſe annually on St. James's Day; and he ſuperviſes the Weights and Meaſures all over the Hundred of Milton.

Kilburn ſaith this Place was anciently called the King's-Town; and that the Kings had formerly a Houſe here; which was burnt down by Earl Godwin's Party in King Edward the Confeſſor's Reign. Philpot ſaith it was a Caſtellate Palace, and ſtood beneath the Church. And indeed when King Alfred divided Kent into Laths and Hundreds, this Town was in his own Hands, and called Regia Villa de Middleton, the King's Town of Middleton; and on this Account gave Name to the whole Hundred. Lambard thinks, that this Place anciently was not within the Charge of the Sheriff of Kent; becauſe he finds that in the 48th Year of King Henry the IIId, a Grant was made to Fulk Peyforer, of the Cuſtody of the County, and alſo of the Hundred of Milton. Some write that the old Town of Milton, which ſeems to have ſtood as the King's Houſe did, near the Church, was all burnt down, as well as that Palace, by Earl Godwin's Men.

In the Tower Records, Clauſ. An. 1. R. 2. N. 33. there is an Exemption granted to the Men of the Hundred of Middleton from all Watch and Ward on the Sea Coaſts, except in the Iſle of Sheppey; and in another Place I find that the Bailiffs of this Hundred had the Return of Writs. And in the 7th Year of King Edward the IIId, this Town and Hundred, with the Return of Writs, were granted by Patent to Queen Philippa for her Life.

And ſo lately as the 27th Year of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, in a Patent or Deputation granted to Brook Lord Cobham, Warden of the Cinque Ports, by Howard, then Lord High Admiral of England, &c. Ireland, &c. impowering him to claim ſuch Wreck of the Sea, as were not claimed by any particular Grant, there is an Exception to this Place of Milton, and the Sea adjoining to it. All which I think do ſhew this Place to have been even then accounted as a Royal Town, and to have ſome peculiar Privileges and Advantages.

In the 25th Year of King Edward the Iſt, I find it had a diſtinct Coroner of its own, from that of the County; and was farmed of the King by John de Northwood.

There are two very fine Springs of Water, which riſe within half a Mile of the Town, and which drive four Corn-Mills, which grind 80 Quarters of Corn per Week for the Uſe of Chatham Market, and for the King's Dock there. And yet they told me, that the Trade of this Town is much decayed, in Compariſon of what it was 40 Years ago.

The Oyſters taken in the Grounds here, are the moſt famous of any in Kent.

Milton Hundred is divided into five Bailiwicks, whereof one is called the Bailiwick of Sheppey, as including that Iſle. And in a Copy of the Pleas of the Crown, before the Juſtices Itinerant in Kent, in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, I find this Note: Hundredus de Mereden eſt Hundredus Domini Regis quod valet per Ann. ſimul cum Hundred de Middleton 22 l. 13 s. 8½ d. But how Marden Hundred, and this of Middleton came to be eſtimated together, I don't know; in the ſame Book I find alſo this Entry made: Johannes de Shorne & Daniel de Burgham, dum fuerunt Ballivi de Middleton tenuerunt placita quðlibet ſeptimanâ per quinque Dies ubicunque voluerunt per totum iſtud Hundredum, &c. I find alſo in the ſame Book mention made of one Lucas de Care, that was Camerarius de Milton.

Place of Note here:

1. Middleton Manor: This, together with the Manor of Marden, was in the 2d Year of King Edward the Iſt, granted to John de Burgo; I ſuppoſe the Son of the famous Hugo de Burgo: And in the 10th Year of King Edward the IId, another Grant was made of them to Queen Margaret: And again in King Edward the IIId's Reign, there was a Grant of it to Queen Philippa; for in the 19th Year of that Prince, it appears by the Tower Records, that ſhe leaſed it for a Term of Years to William de Clinton Earl of Huntigdon, with all the Liberties annexed to it, except ſome Royal Franchiſes; which Philpot ſaith, were ſo inherent in the Crown, that they could not be ſeparated: The Rent was 200 l. per Ann. When this Leaſe expired it ſeems to have continued in the Crown till King James the Iſt's Reign; and then that Prince granted both theſe Manors for ever, to Philip Earl of Pembroke: And I am informed that they are now in the Poſſeſſion of James Herbert, Eſq; Knight of the Shire for the County of Oxford.

2. Northwood Chaſteners: This is a Manor here, ſo called perhaps from lying North from Milton-Town, in a Wood formerly much abounding with Cheſnut-Trees. It was formerly the Reſidence of Stephen the Son of John de Sheppey, who came hither from the Iſland of that Name, and ſettled himſelf at this Place, where he built a good Houſe, moated round, and encloſed with a Park, well wooded and ſtored with Deer and wild Boars: He had alſo a Licenſe from the Archbiſhop of Canterbury to build a free Chapel here; which Philpot ſaith, ſome Perſons (who re-remembred it ſtanding) told his Father, was a curious Piece of Architecture. After this it ſeems to have given Name to the Family of Northwood, the next Proprietors after the Shepeys were extinct here. Roger de Northwood was one of thoſe brave Gentlemen of this County, that attended King Richard the Iſt at the Siege of Acon in Paleſtine: His Deſcendant Sir Roger de Northwood, changed the Tenure of his Land here, from Gavelkind into that of Knights Service: He died in the 13th Year of King Edward the Iſt, and was ſucceeded here, and in the Poſſeſſion of Shorne alſo, by Sir John Northwood his Eldeſt Son, who farmed, as is above-ſaid, the whole Hundred of Milton of the Crown: This Gentleman, and his Son of the ſame Name, was with King Edward the Iſt, at the famous Siege of Carlaverock in Scotland. The Manor of Shorne holding by Grand Serjeanty, to carry a white Banner for 40 Days together, at their own Charge, whenever the King ſhall make War in Scotland. Sir John Northwood was called to ſit in Parliament as a Baron in the 1ſt Year of King Edward IId. Several of this Family (Philpot ſaith) had their Effigies lying croſs-legged in Milton Church, repreſenting that thoſe whoſe Images they were, had taken upon them the Cruſado. But at laſt this great Family ended, as to the Name, in John Northwood, who left only Two Daughters; of whom one was married to Barley of Hertfordſhire; and Joan, the other, to Sir John Norton, whoſe Anceſtors had much Land about Norton and Feverſham, in King Stephen's Reign.

This Sir John Norton in the Beginning of King Henry the VIIIth's Reign, went with Sir Edward Poynings to aſſiſt Mary Dutcheſs of Savoy, and Siſter to the Emperor, againſt the Incurſions of the Duke of Gelders. And Fuller (in his Worthies) ſaith, he was Knighted by Charles the Young Prince of Caſtile, who was afterwards Emperor; he lies buried in this Church in the Year 1534. His Son John alſo for his good Services performed in Flanders was Knighted by Mary Queen of Hungary, then Lady Regent of the Low Countries under Charles the Vth; together with John Fogge, John Scott, and Thomas Lynde, all Gentlemen of this County. But this Sir John Norton's Grandſon Thomas, about 1621, ſold it to Manaſſer Northwood, Eſq; a collateral Deſcendant from the Northwoods above-mentioned; and his Son Richard ſent it the ſame Way to Sir William Tuſton, Third Brother to Nicholas Tuſton, Earl of Thanet, whoſe Second Son Sir Charles Tuſton, on the Deceaſe of Sir Benedict, his Eldeſt Brother, was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

3. Kemſley Down, is famous here for the Ruins of an old Caſtle, which Philpot ſaith were viſible in his Time: And ſome think the Name is Campsley; (i. e.) The Place of the Camp. But 'tis now all oregrown with Buſhes, and is called Caſtle Ruff. A. D. 893. Haſting the Daniſh Pyrate (who had before much infeſted the Coaſts of France) came to this Place in the Reign of King Alfred, and built a kind of Fort or Caſtle here, as he had before done at Appledre, pretending to fortify himſelf. But King Ælfred came hither againſt him, and entrenched himſelf alſo on the other Side of the Water: The Ditches of which Work, and ſome ſmall Part of the Stones do remain to this Day, and are called Bayford or Baford Caſtle near Sittingbourne. Vid. Ælfredi vitam, p. 44, 45, 46. And that Valiant King ſoon drove him from hence, forced him to ſue for Peace, and made him give his own Oath, and his Two Sons Hoſtages for the Obſervation of it. But he ſoon forgot all his Obligations, and broke all his Promiſes.

4. Orehouſe; this in the Iſt Year of King Richard the IId, was accounted a Manor, and was granted to Alice de Preſton, and her Heirs.

5. Helmes or Holmes is another Manor in Milton, but lies alſo Part of it in Iwade. Philpot ſaith it always had the ſame Proprietors as Bobbing-Court had, viz. the Savages, and then the Cliffords, &c. which ſee: Only he ſaith, about the latter End of Queen Elizabeth's Reign it was ſold off to one Thompſon, Anceſtor of that Thompſon which lived at Royton Chapel in Lenham. And in that Name the Poſſeſſion continued in Philpot's Time.

MINSTER in the Iſle of Shepey, lies at the North Side of Kent, adjoining to the Sea, about four Miles North Eaſtward from Queenborough; in the Bailiwick of Milton, Hundred of the Iſle of Shepey, Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and upper one of Juſtices in that Lath. In the Deanery of Sittingbourn, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Church is dedicated to St. Mary and St. Sexburgha. 'Tis eſteemed only as a Curacy, and ſo not valued in the King's Books in the Valor Beneficiorum; but Biſhop Williams in his Map of the Dioceſe of Canterbury, rates it at 4 l. 0 s. 0 d. About 500 Years ago this Church was appropriated to the Abbey of St. Auſtin's in Canterbury. The Liberty of St. Auſtin's claims alſo in this Pariſh. A Fair is kept here on the Monday before Eaſter-day.

An Account of the Nunnery here you will find in the Chapter of Religious Houſes.

In the Church, (which Wever ſaith is but a Part of the Monaſtery converted into a Pariſh Church, though it be very lofty and ſpacious, with a fine Communion Table railed in, &c.) are divers Funeral Monuments, which have been moved out of the adjoining Chapel, formerly belonging to the Nunnery; the Inſcriptions are moſt of them gone; ſome of which make a Shew of wondrous great Antiquity, as This, Hic jacent Rogerus Norwood & Boon Uxor ejus ſepulti ante Conqueſtum. But though 'tis not unlikely this Family might have been ſettled here before the Conqueſt, the Characters of this Inſcription, demonſtrate it to have a much later Date. And by the Figures having Spurs on, and lying croſs-leg'd, I judge it repreſents one that lived ſince the Holy War. Here are alſo ſome Monumental Remains of the Family of the Shurlands: And Sir Robert Shurland flouriſhed here in the Reign of King Edward the Iſt. A very fair Monument of Sir Thomas Cheyney Knight of the Garter, Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, Conſtable of Dover Caſtle, Treaſurer of the Houſhold to King Henry the VIIIth, and to King Edward the VIth, and Privy Counceller to Queen Mary and Queen Elizabeth, A. D. 1559. is ſtanding in the Parſonage Chancel. Here are alſo Memorials of the Interment of Soole and Ware above 180 Years ago.

The famous Monument of the Lord of Shurland, of which I told you the vulgar Legend in Eaſt Church, is a very fair one, and ſtands in the Wall of the South Iſle of the Church. The Walls of the Gate-Houſe, and part of the Nunnery are ſtill ſtanding.

I ſaw here in the Marſhes, and in many other Places of this Iſland, many large Tumuli or Barrows; which I judge to have been caſt up in Memory of the Interment, or over the Bodies of ſome Eminent Men among the Danes, when they had Poſſeſſion of this Iſland.

The People call ſome of theſe Mounts, The Coterells.

A. D. 831. Thirty Five Sail of Daniſh Pyrates landed here, robbing and deſtroying all that came in their Way. A. D. 851. They robbed it it a ſecond Time; the Daniſh Army Wintering here, and their Fleet lying in the Road. And An. 855, they came hither again, did the ſame, ſtaying here all the Winter. Earl Godwin alſo and his Sons, about 1052, during the time of their Baniſhment, Landed here, carrying away and deſtroying whatever they could find.

Places of Note here:

1. Minſter Manor: this ſtaid in the Nunnery till the general Diſſolution of the Religious Houſes; and then in the 29th Year of King Henry the VIIIth's Reign, was granted to Sir Thomas Cheney: But his Son Henry Lord Cheney, having in the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign exchanged it with that Queen for other Lands, ſhe Re-granted it to Sir Thomas Hobby, who had married her Kinſwoman Margaret, the Daughter of Henry Lord Hunſdon: And his Son, Sir Edward Hobby, about the middle of the next Reign, ſold it to Mr. Henry Richards; who, on his Deceaſe, bequeathed it to Mr. Gabriel Liveſay; and he, in the next Reign, ſold it to Sir John Heyward, who ſettled it upon his Two Feoffees, Sir Francis Buller of Cornwall, and Mr. Serjeant Clerk of Rocheſter, in Truſt for ſuch Charitable Uſes, as they ſhould think (ſaith Philpot) proportionate to the Conveyance.

2. Northwood Manor; this was once part of the Inheritance of Johannes de Scapeia or Shepey. And Philpot ſaith he had Iſſue Stephen de Northwood, the firſt, that he can find, who took the Name of Northwood. He was Father of that Sir Roger de Northwood, who lies buried in this Church with an Inſcription, pretending to a Date before the Conqueſt, as hath been above taken notice of. A Deſcendant of the Family, one John de Northwood feaſted King Henry the Vth at the Red Lion Inn in Sittingbourne; but the whole Wine amounted (ſaith Philpot) but to 9 s. 9 d. Wine being then at a Peny per Pint. Another of this Name and Family, William Northwood, did ſignal Service both at the Battel of Agincourt and Vernoulle, under the Command of John Duke of Bedford, then Regent of France. His Kinſman John Northwood was the laſt of this Name at this Place; and he about the latter End of King Edward the IVth, ſold it to William Warner, Eſq; whoſe Son and Heir about the Beginning of King Henry the VIIIth, ſent it the ſame Way to Sir Thomas Cheyney; and his Son Henry Lord Cheyney, exchanged it with Queen Elizabeth for other Lands; it continued in the Crown till the 2d Year of King James the Iſt, and then was granted to Philip Herbert, Earl of Montgomery and Pembroke.

3. Newhall. This is another little Manor in Minſter, which in the 9th Year of King Edward the IId, was in the Poſſeſſion of Fulk de Peyforer, by whoſe only Daughter Juliana it went in Marriage to Thomas St. Leger of Ottringden; and he left by her only Two Daughters Coheirs, who were married to Aucher and Ewias: About the Beginning of King Henry the Vth, theſe Two ſold it to Cromer, whoſe Deſcendant William Cromer, about the End of King Henry the VIIIth, forfeited it ſome-how to the Crown, from whence it was granted to Stephen Graine: And in this Name it ſtaid till the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth, and then was alienated to Small; and not many Years after it went the ſame Way to Luck, thence to Newton, and thence again the ſame Way to Mr. Joſiah Gering of London; the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

4. Riſhingdon. This Place in the 23d Year of King Edward the Iſt, was Part of the Eſtate of John de Savage, who then had a Charter of Freewarren for this and for ſeveral others of his Manors in Kent. In the Reign of King Edward the IIId, it was purchaſed by Queen Philippa, and by her ſettled on the Hoſpital of St. Katherine's near the Tower of London, where I ſuppoſe it ſtill continues.

October 22d, 1580. during Achbiſhop Grindal's Sequeſtration, a Licenſe was granted to ſuch as officiated for him to the Lord Henry Cheyney, to remove the Coffins and Bones of his Father, and other his Anceſtors, from a little Chapel near the Pariſh Church, (which Chapel, I ſuppoſe, belonged to the Nunnery) and place them in this Pariſh Church of Minſter. The former little Chapel, with other Lands he ſold to Sir Humphrey Gilbert. See Strype's Life of Grindale, p. 267.

As to the Coperas Works; that Mineral, the Gloſſopetræ, and other Marine Bodies, which have been frequently found on the Coaſt of the Sea here; I ſhall conſider them in the Natural Hiſtory Part of this Book. Only give me leave to anticipate one Thing for the ſake of ſuch as are troubled with that painful Diſtemper the Cramp in their Joints and Limbs; and who have withal Faith enough to believe it; which is, That Dr. Plot in his Letter to Dr. Fell, ſaith, That the Gloſſopetræ, the Sharks, and other Fiſhes Teeth found in the Earth in Shepey, and called by the People, Cramp-Stones, do as ſecretly and as certainly cure the Cramp, as the Loadſtone draws Iron.

'Tis uſually ſaid that there are neither Rats nor Moles in this Iſland, becauſe the Earth doth ſo abound with the Coperas Stones; but the Miniſter of this Pariſh, on my particular Enquiry, aſſured me, he had often ſeen both thoſe Sorts of Vermin here.

MINSTER in Thanet, lies towards the North East Side of Kent in the Iſle of Thanet, about Three Miles and an half Northward from Sandwich, in the Bailiwick of Bridge and Petham, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath.

The Liberty of St. Auſtin claims here, the Pariſh being in the Hundred of Ringſlow, which belonged to that Abbey.

'Tis in the Dioceſe of Canterbury and Deanery of Weſt-Bere; and the Church is called St. Mary's. A Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 33 l. 3 s. 4 d. It is large, with Three Iſles and a Croſs one, all covered with Lead, and a Spire Steeple.

In the School-Houſe, on the Ground, are three very large Tombſtones which are mentioned by Wever, and probably are over Abbeſſes or ſome Nuns of Quality among the Saxons.

Under the Wall alſo near theſe, is the Monument of Edila de Shorne, rather Thorne, mentioned by the ſame Writer; but the Inſcription is now gone; it hath all the Marks of great Antiquity.

In the Chancel of the Church are 18 Stalls or Seats remaining; which look like thoſe of a Collegiate Church.

In the Church alſo are Memorials of Saunders, Oxendens, and Paramours; and of John Cary, Eſq; of Stanwell in Middleſex, who gave 10 l. per Ann. to the Poor here: Of Dr. Richard Clerk Vicar here, who gave 100 l. to be lent to four Orphan Pariſhioners, that are not ſufficiently ſtock'd, for a Term not exceeding Three Years.

The Font in this Church is matted round at the Bottom, to accommodate the Miniſter and Sureties in Kneeling, as I have obſerved it in ſome other Churches hereabours; 'tis very neat and commodious; and I wiſh were done in all Churches.

This Church is the moſt ancient of any in the Iſland. Mr. Wharton the Author of the Anglia Sacra, who was Miniſter here, thought it to have been built above 1000 Years ago: But as the Reverend Mr. Lewes, Miniſter of Margate, obſerves, in an Account of this Iſland, kindly communicated to me; this will hardly agree with the Mitred Arches, which are to be found in the Windows of this Church; though the Arches in the Nave are Circular, and ſo bid fair for greater Antiquity. But 'tis probable the Body of the Church may be more ancient than the Roof, Windows, or ſome other Parts of the Building; which as they are more ſubject to Decay, may have had Alterations made in the Form of them. Mr. Wharton ſaid alſo, that this Church was anciently ſo much the Mother, as they call it, of the reſt in the Iſland, as to have them depending upon her: And at firſt paying the whole, and then two thirds of the Tithes to it; but at length a Compoſition was made between the ſeveral Patrons and Incumbents, and confirmed by the Biſhop; That the Incumbents of the New Churches ſhould pay only the 10th Part of all their real Profits to the Mother Church. This Compoſition Mr. Wharton ſaid was found to be duly obſerved as long as till the Year 1370. But now there are no ſuch Payments, nor Marks of ſuch a Superiority in Minſter over the other Churches in the Iſland. Though ſome ſuch Inſtances ſtill remain in the Neighbourhood: For the Churches of St. Nicholas and Hern do now pay a Penſion to the Vicar of Reculver, as the Incumbent of the Mother Church.

A Market was granted to this Place by King Henry the Iſt, Ann. 1116. at the Requeſt of Hugh Abbot of St. Auſtin's in Canterbury, to help their Town of Minſter, which was then much fallen into decay, as Lambard ſaith. Philpot calls it a Weekly Market, and ſaith it was long diſuſed.

As to the Nunnery here founded by Domneva: See the Chapter of Religious Houſes.

Places of Note here:

1. The Manor of Minſter on the Diſſolution of the Abbeys continued in the Crown till the 9th Year of King James the Iſt, and then with the adjoining ones of St. John, St. Peter, and St. Lawrence, were granted to Sir Philip Cary and John Williams, Eſq; between whoſe Two Families the Inheritance continued divided in Philpot's Time.

2. Ebbes Fleet, formerly called Ippeds Fleet, or Ippers Fleet; and by ſome Writers Ippines Fleet, and by others, Heopines Fleet; and by ſome Wippeds-Fleet, as they ſay, ſo named from one Wipped a Noble Saxon, who was the only conſiderable Commander ſlain of the Saxons, when Aurelius Ambroſius, Leader of the Britons, loſt here Twelve of his Principal Officers: But Lambard ſeems to think this great Battel rather was fought at a Place to this Day called Wapfleet in Eſſex: Since Ralph Higden ſaith the Britons never invaded Kent, but ſuffered the Saxons to have quiet Poſſeſſion of it, after the Battel of Craford.

But this Ebbesfleet is certainly famous for being the Place where the Two Saxon Princes and Brothers Hengiſt and Horſa firſt Landed, when they were called in by King Vortiger and the Britons, to defend them againſt the Invaſions and Devaſtations of the Picts and Scots, about the Year A.D. 449. But not as Kilburn unaccountably ſaith, to aid that King againſt the Forces of Valentinian the Roman Emperor.

3. Sheriffs-Court, in old Records called Sheriffshope. This was long ago the Eſtate, and perhaps the Seat of Reginald de Cornhill, who was Sheriff of Kent, for ſeveral Years, both in King Richard the Iſt and in King John's Reign; ſo that he was uſually called Le Sheriff; and hence this Place undoubtedly took its Name. But about the Beginning of King Edward the IIId, this Manor went into the Poſſeſſion of the Corbies; Robert de Corbie had it at his Death, in the 39th Year of King Edward the IIId, whoſe Son Robert left only a Daughter Joan; and ſhe married Sir Nicholas Wotton, that was twice Lord Mayor of London: And in this Family it deſcended till it came to Thomas Lord Wotton; who ſettled it in Marriage on his Daughter the Lady Katherine, with the Lord Henry Stanhope; after this it was ſold to Mr. Henry Paramour, in whoſe Family it remained in Philpot's Time.

On the Tomb of the Woman under the Wall above-mentioned, Wever ſaith, was this Inſcription:

Ici giſt Edile de Shorne repuſt Dame del eſpire.

And he thinks it ſhould be Edila de Thorne becauſe there is a Place in this Pariſh ſo called.

Ethelinga Prioreſs of this Convent next after St. Mildred, finding the Church erected by Domneva not large enough to hold the People that crowded hither, built a new one very large and ſumptuous, which Archbiſhop Cuthbert conſecrated and dedicated to St. Peter and Paul. She died Ann. 751, and was buried in her own Church.

Sexburga Daughter of Anna, who was Wife to Ercombert, King of the Eaſt Angles, Mother of Egbert and Lothaire Kings of Kent, after her Huſband's Death turn'd Nun, and was admitted Abbeſs of this Nunnery by Archbiſhop Cuthbert, and was buried in this Church.

Seberitha was another Abbeſs here, who was conſecrated by Archbiſhop Ethelard: But in her Time the Danes Landed in Thanet, plunder'd the whole Iſland, burnt and totally deſtroyed this Houſe, and burnt her and all the Nuns (whom they found hid in Caves to avoid their Luſt and Cruelty) to Aſhes. Wever, p. 260.

John Capgrave in his Life of Domneva, ſaith, That Thunnor who murdered the Young Princes, and perſuaded Egbert againſt this Gift to Domneva, had his Neck broken immediately by his Horſe's Unrulineſs, and was buried under a great Heap of Stones in this Iſland, at a Place called from him Thunniclan; but I could hear of no ſuch Place. And this contradicts the Story of the Earth's opening and ſwallowing him up: Which yet William Thorn, who made the Appendix, tells, and with this Circumſtance, That the Place where he ſunk into the Earth, was called Thunnor's Leap, even in his Time. 'Tis highly probable, that theſe are both mere Figments and Lies invented by the Monks.

The old Portus Ritupenſis, as I ſhall fully ſhew hereafter, having one of its Mouths or Entrances at Reculver, as the other was the ancient Mouth of Sandwich Haven, lay under this Pariſh to the Southward, making Thanet then a compleat Iſland. But the Sea leaving it by Degrees, it is now come to be nothing but a poor Brook, ſcarcely worth taking Notice of. Over it at Sarre is a ſmall Wooden Bridge; and at Sandwich Town is a Ferry-Boat to paſs it, though 'tis often fordable there at low Water. But in the Year 1242, The River Wantſume, which makes Thanet an Iſland, was then in ſome Meaſure Navigable: For in a Compoſition made between the Priory of Chriſt-Church, and the Abbey of St. Auſtin's at that Time, are theſe Words.

Item pro Bono pacis conceſſum eſt à Priore & Capitulo antedicti, quod de cætero ad Fletum de Menſtre per flumen de Sandwico fit acceſſus per Navigium, & receſſus: Hoc adjecto, quod ſi in ipſo Flumine, antedictum Fletum aliqua Navis Anchoram fixerit, vel levandæ Navis vel negotiandi cauſâ, ſe ibidem exonera- ravit; dicti Prior & Capitalam Conſuetudines maritimas habeant, &c.

And afterwards, in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the IIId, I find the Abbot of St. Auſtin indicted before the Juſtices Itinerant, for obſtructing this Flete of Minſter, Per quod quidam Fletum Naves cum pluribus Mercimoniis & Merchandiſis tranſire ſolebant ad eandem Villam de Menſtre, as the Words are.

The Abbot only ſaid that the Obſtruction had been made ſome Years before by one of his Predeceſſors, in his own Land, &c. But the Jury gave it againſt him; and determined that the Navigation here ought to be open and free, excepting the Cuſtom to the Priory of Chriſt-Church above-mentioned; which uſed to be paid before the Veſſels entred into this Flete (from Sandwich); and this Cuſtom was then called Selynge.

Though the Manor of Minſter was claimed by the Abbot of St. Auſtin's, and all Privileges thereunto belonging; yet I find by the Copies of the Pleas of the Crown in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, held before the Juſtices Itinerant for this County, That the King brought 5 Writs of Right againſt the Abbot for this Manor, and 4 others in this Neighbourhood: And accordingly four Knights and others were appointed to enquire into the Claim: The Knights were Sir Robert de Hougham, Sir Simon de Shurſtede, Sir Hubert de Bikenore, and Sir Stephen de Coſington. But on Examination the Abbot continued in Poſſeſſion.

MOLDASH, Molaſh, lies towards the Middle of Kent, about three Miles and an half to the North Weſtward of Wye, in the Bailiwick and Lath of Scray, Hundred of Felborow, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in the Lath of Shipway, in the Deanery of Bridge, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; The Church which is very ſmall, and of one Iſle only, is dedicated to St. Peter. 'Tis a Chapel of Eaſe only to Chilham, and ſo not rated in the King's Books. And Philpot ſaith, that Moldaſh is only a Branch of the Manor of Chilham.

The Liberty of Wye claims over it.

Places of Note in this Pariſh.

1. Flemmings, alias Bowers, as 'tis written in the Court Rolls, is a Manor which as long ago as A. D. 1019, was in the Poſſeſſion of John de Flemming; and very likely remained in that Name a good while. But in the 24th Year of King Henry the VIth, it was become Part of the Eſtate of John Treſwenall, and in this Family it continued till the Reign of King Henry the VIIIth, and then was alienated to Sir Thomas Moyle; but about the Beginning of King James the Iſt, it was ſold out of that Family to Mr. Henry Chapman; and in that Name I believe it ſtill continues.

In the Church are Memorials of ſeveral of this Family of Chapman; and in the Middle of it is a Vault, on the Stone Cover of which is carved, Pulvis Chapmannorum.

2. Witherling: This is alſo another Manor here which ſeems anciently to have had Owners of that Name; and in the 38th Year of King Henry the VIth, Joan Witherling was found Heir at Law to it, and ſold it to Sir William Keneworth; whoſe Son William Keneworth, ſent it the ſame Way to John Moyle of Buckwell, Eſq; extracted from the Moyles of Bodmin in Cornwall; and he in the 4th Year of King Henry the VIIIth ſold it to Hamo Vidian a Name of good Antiquity in this Pariſh; as appears by an old Farm here called Vidian's Foreſtall: And a great Grandſon of this Purchaſer, Mr. William Vidian, was the Poſſeſſor of this Manor in Philpot's Time.

Great MONGEHAM, Muningham, lies at the Eaſt Side of Kent, about three Miles and a half South Eaſtward from Sandwich, in the Bailiwick of Eaſtry, Hundred of Cornilo, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. In the Deanery of Sandwich, and Dioceſe of Canterbury: The Church is dedicated to St. Martin.

The Liberty of the Dean of Canterbury claims here.

Here is an Annual Fair on October the 18th, being St. Luke's Day. And here was a Market on Thurſdays.

Places of Note here:

1. Mongeham Manor was given to St. Auſtin's in Canterbury by Eadbert King of Kent. And I find the Abbot claiming the Privileges of a Manor here in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt; but on the Diſſolution of the Abbeys, was by King Henry the VIIIth, in his 33d Year, granted to the Dean and Chapter of Chriſt-Church, who leaſed it out to John Fropehunt; after which it went to Gibbs, and in Philpot's Time was in the Poſſeſſion of the Crayfords: Of which Family are Memorials in the Church, over the Porch of which are theſe Arms, a Feſs between 3 Lions Paſſant.

2. Foggs-Court, is a Manor here which anciently was a Seat of the famous Family of Fogg, and the only Place in the County which bears their Name, though now there be hardly any Signs of that Houſe left. Thomas Fogg, Serjeant Porter of Calais, was the laſt Poſſeſſor of this Name; but by Alice his Daughter and Coheir, it went in Marriage to Mr. William Scott, in which Name it continued for ſome Time, but at length was ſold to Mr. Philip Pownall of Sibbertſwould, or Shepperdſwell, as 'tis uſually called, who was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

3. Great Barville is a Place here, which very anciently belonged to the Family of Crayford, and continued in their Poſſeſſion for many Ages; William Crayford was made a Banneret by King Edward the IVth, and his Arms were, on a Chevron 3 Eagles Heads Eraſed: And in this Name it continued in Philpot's Time, being then in the Poſſeſſion of Mr. William Crayford. Part of this Manor is in Tilmanſton Pariſh.

4. Little Barville, lies as the former, partly in Mongeham, and partly in Tilmanſton: And for ſome Centuries was the Eſtate of the Family of the Picks or Pix; but about the End of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, it went thence by Sale to that of Crayford, and there was fixed in Philpot's Time, in the Poſſeſſion of Mr. William Crayford above-mentioned.

The Market here was obtained by Bertram de Criol, who had a Grant of it from King Henry the IIId, and allowed in the 7th Year of King Edward the Iſt.

Little MONGEHAM, Moningham, lies at the Eaſt Side of Kent, about Three Miles and a half South from Sandwich, in the Bailiwick of Eaſtry, Hundred of Cornilo, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. In the Deanery of Sandwich, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; but the Church, which was reckoned but as a Chapel, and annexed to Northbourn, is demoliſhed.

A Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 5 l. 15 s. 0 d.

The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims here. Philpot ſaith it was given to the Abbey of St. Auſtin's, as 6 Plough Lands, by King Eadbert.

In the 17th Year of Edward the Iſt, John de Lovetot and Henry de Apuldreſield were appointed Commiſſioners for viewing the Banks and Ditches in Eaſt Kent, broken by the Sea. They met ſomewhere in this Neighbourhood, at a Place then called Erchesto, and appointed the Hundreds of Eaſtry and Cornilo to chuſe one Bailiff, and 12 Jurats, 6 out of each Hundred; who being choſen, were, by the Commiſſioners, appointed upon Oath juſtly to meaſure all the Lands, as well of the Lords as Tenants, that lay within Danger of the Sea, within thoſe Hundreds: and to cauſe Sewers, Walls, &c. to be made at the common Charge of ſuch as had Lands ſo ſituated; and to over-ſee them for the future, and keep them in Repair. Theſe made a Return to the Commiſſioners, that in the Hundred of Cornilo the Total of all the Acres ſubject to this Danger and Charge, was,

Acres, 1600.
Aſſeſſment, 35 l. 8 s. 4 d.

In the Hundred of Eaſtry it was thus;

Acres, 1156.

See Dugdale's Imbanking, p. 40.

MONKETON in Thanet, Muncheton, Munketune, lies at the North ſide of Kent, in the Iſle of Thanet, about Four Miles and a half North Weſtward from Sandwich; in the Bailiwick of Bridge and Petham, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath.

The Pariſh is in the Deanery of Weſt-Bere, and Dioceſe of Canterbury, and the Church is called St. Mary Magdalens; which was by Archbiſhop Richard appropriated to the Almnery of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury, but being afterwards taken away by Baldwin his Succeſſor, did continue ſo, till Simon Iſlip, in the 39th Year of King Edward the IIId, reſtored it again. In it are Memorials of the Interment of Bleebenden and Criſpe, and of Terry, Ayling, Orchard, and Parker.

The Church is now but of one Iſle, but ſeems formerly to have been larger: 'Tis now a fair Building, and hath a good Tower.

In the Windows are Remains of good painted Glaſs; and the Heads of ſeveral Biſhops well enough done.

In the Chancel are Stalls, as in a Collegiate Church, for Twelve Brothers; and 'tis likely there hath been formerly ſome Fraternity here; unleſs the Monks of Chriſt-Church built theſe Stalls to ſit in themſelves, when they came hither to ſee their Eſtate, or to divert themſelves.

'Tis a Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 13. 00. 04. per Ann.

The Liberty of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury claims over the Manor of Monkton, being given thereunto by King Henry the VIIIth, in the 33d Year of his Reign. But the Liberty of St. Auſtin claims over the Pariſh, as being in the Hundred of Ringſlow, which belonged to that Abbey.

A Fair is kept here on July 23; and John Salisbury, Prior of Chriſt-Church, obtained a Weekly Market for it of King Henry the VIth.

The Manor of Monkton was given to Chriſt-Church in Canterbury, 961. by Edgiva or Ediva, Queen Dowager of King Edward the Elder, and Mother of Edmond and Eadred; and coming to the Crown at the general Diſſolution of the Monaſteries, it was by King Henry the VIIIth given to the Dean and Chapter of Chriſt-Church.

The Inhabitants of this Place were obliged to pay annually to the Convent of St. Auſtin's in Canterbury, who had their Church appropriated to them, a yearly Service called Avercorn, by uncertain Meaſure; but A. D. 1263, it was determined, that the Quantity ſhould be Two Buſhels and a half. Theſe Payments of Corn were uſually made on All-Saints day; and the Cuſtom ſeems to ariſe from what the Saxons uſed to call, Cyric Sceat, or Church Scot, which was a Quantity of Corn paid to the Pariſh Church on St. Martin's Day, (Nov. 11.) as the Firſt Fruits of the Corn. King Ina, in his Laws, ordained this Annual Payment under ſevere Penalties: When the Norman Terms came into uſe here, 'tis like it took this Name of Avercorne.

In Domeſday Book is this Account of this Place.

Monkton eſt Manerium Monachorum St. Trinitatis, & eſt de Cibo eorum, & in T. E. R. ſe defendebat pro 20 Sulingis & nunc pro 18. & eſt appretiatum 40 l.

So that the whole Pariſh ſeems to have belonged to the Convent, for I ſuppoſe there are not more than 20 Plow-lands in it.

The Church of Monkton was appropriated to the Priory of Chriſt-Church by Archbiſhop Richard, Becket's next Succeſſor; but upon the Quarrel between him and his Monks, Archbiſhop Baldwin took it away again from the Convent. But Simon Iſlip, Archbiſhop here about 1349, with the King's Special Licenſe, reſtored it again; and ſometime after a perpetual Vicarage was founded here. The Appropriation of Archbiſhop Iſlip, was in the 39th Year of King Edward the 3d.

In the 21ſt Year of King Edward the 1ſt, the King brought a Writ of Right againſt the Prior of Chriſt-Church, for this Manor of Monketon, but the Jury gave it againſt him for the Convent.

MURSTON, Moryſton, Morſton, lies towards the North ſide of Kent, about one Mile Eaſtward from Milton, and in that Bailiwick and Hundred. In the Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and upper one of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery of Sittingbourn, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; and the Church is called All-Saints: In which is a Braſs Plate with the Figures of John Eveas and his Wife, 1488.

The Church is pretty large: Remains of ſome very old Letters on a Stone in the Chancel.

A Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 10 l. 14 s. 7 d. per Ann.

Places of Note here.

1. Murſton Manor, this Place had once Owners of this Name; for it appears by the Book of Aid, that John de Morſton, whoſe Anceſtor, Bartholomew, was at the Siege of Acon with King Richard the Iſt, had it in the 20th Year of King Edward the IIId at making the Black Prince Knight. But this Name was extinct here before the End of King Richard the IId; for then it was in the Poſſeſſion of Walter Fitzwalter of Eſſex; who had frequently been called to Parliament as a Baron. But his Deſcendant John Fitzwalter, about the End of King Henry the VIth, ſold it to Cromer; in which Name it ſtaid till King James the Iſt, and then Chriſtian, Daughter and Co-heir of Sir James Cromer, carried it to Sir

Sir John Hales, in whoſe Family it was in Philpot's Time.

2. Eaſt-hall, is another Manor here, which anciently was the Eſtate of an old Family of the Name of De la Pine; (Arms Sable 3 Pine Apples Or). James de la Pine was Sheriff of Kent in the 26th Year of Edward the IIId, and kept his Shrievalty here: But his Son Thomas de la Pine, about the Beginning of King Edward the IId's Reign, ſold it to Thomas St. Leger, who was alſo Sheriff of Kent in the 20th Year of that Prince: But he dying without Iſſue Male, Joan, one of his Daughters, carried it in Marriage to John Ewias; and after ſtaying here for three or four Deſcents, by Alice, Daughter to William Ewias, it went to Thomas Hales; who in the 6th Year of King Edward the VIth, ſold it to Sir Anthony Aucher, whoſe Son of the ſame Name parted with it to Gardiner in the 9th Year of Queen Elizabeth's Reign; and he, in a Year after, ſold it to John Norden; who, in King James the Iſt's Time, ſent it the ſame way to Pordage, Predeceſſor to Mr. Pordage of Rodmerſham, the Owner of it in Philpot's Time.

3. Mere-Court, is a Place here ſituated near the Sea; and which, in King Edward the IIId's Reign, was in the Poſſeſſion of Arnold de Savage, whoſe Grand-daughter Eleanor carried this Eſtate, and that at Bobbing, to her Husband William Clifford, in whoſe Family it ſtaid till King Henry the VIIth's Time; what came of it in the next Reign doth not appear; but in King Edward the VIth's Reign it came to be, tho' I find not which way, the Inheritance of Crofts: But in the 22d Year of Queen Elizabeth, David Croft left three Daughters Co-heirs, who all joined in the 42d Year of that Queen's Reign, in a Sale to Stephen Hulks; whence it went to his Son Mr. John Hulks; and he, at his Deceaſe, left it to his ſecond Son Mr. Charles Hulks, the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

In the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, Henry de Apuldrefeld, without the King's leave, married Iſolda, Widow of Thomas Abeſyn, who held 20 Librates of Land in this Pariſh of the King in Capite; for this he was Fined 20 l. and then had quiet Poſſeſſion of his Wife's Eſtate.

NAKINTON, perhaps from the Saxon Nacenned, the newly built Town; tho' 'tis often written Natinden in the old Records, as alſo Natindon; it lies towards the Eaſt part of Kent, about a Mile and a half South Eaſtward from Canterbury, in the Bailiwick of Bridge and Petham, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. Part of it is in the Hundred of Bridge and Petham, and the reſt in that of Whitſtaple.

The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims here; and that of St. Auſtin over the Manor of Nakinton.

'Tis in the Deanery and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Church ſtands in the Hundred of Bridge and Petham, and is Dedicated to St. Mary. Having been eſteemed a Curacy, it is not rated in the Valor Beneficiorum; but Biſhop Williams, in his Eccleſiaſtical Map of Canterbury, values it at 8 l. 4 s.

Places of Note here:

1. Nakinton Manor; this ſeems to have anciently belonged to the Abbey of St. Auſtin's; tho' Philpot ſays nothing of it: For I find that in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, the Abbot was allowed to be in Poſſeſſion of 100 Acres of Land here; tho' he was complained of for not letting his Tenements be geldable to Scot and Lot, and to attend the Hundred Court; which the Abbot gave up, and acknowledged them to be taxable, &c. There was alſo one William de Natindon at this Time, who had 100 Acres of Land in this Pariſh.

I find alſo that in the 7th Year of King Edward the Iſt, the Earl of Glouceſter and Hertford claimed the Privileges of a Manor for his Land here, as holding under the Archbiſhop of Canterbury; and no doubt the Archbiſhop had once Land here, becauſe of his Liberty claiming in the Pariſh; but of neither of theſe three Eſtates doth Philpot take any Notice.

It appears alſo that one Chiche had Lands here about this Time, in a Place called Havyfield.

2. Staplegate; this Place was once the Seat of a Family of this Name; who had alſo a good Eſtate in Romney Marſh: And Philpot thinks they had this Name from Collecting for the King the Profits of the Staple for Wool, which was fix'd at Staple-Gate in Canterbury. One of theſe was Edmond Staplegate, who paid Aid for the Manor of Bilſington in the 20th Year of King Edward the IIId. And it was his Son of the ſame Name, who at the Coronation of King Richard the IId, contended with Richard Earl of Arundel for the Office of chief Butler then, before the Lord High Steward John of Gaunt Duke of Lancaſter; as I have before taken notice of in Bilſington; and he died Thirteen Years afterwards poſſeſſed of this Manor. But afterwards, in the Reigns of King Henry the Vth and VIth, this Eſtate was got out of this Name into that of Leichfield; a Family which had much Land about Tilmanſton, Betſhanger, &c. But in the 22d Year of King Edward the IVth, Roger Leichfield ſold it to William Haut, Eſq; and his Son, Sir William Haut, dying without Iſſue Male, by his Daughter and Co-heir Elizabeth, it went in Marriage to Sir Thomas Colepeper of Bedgbury; who about the 1ſt Year of King Edward the VIth, ſold it to Philip Cowſe, Eſq; and from him it went the ſame way to Sir Anthony Aucher; and thence in a few Years it paſſed the ſame way to Sir James Hales of the Dungeon; whoſe Deſcendant Sir James Hales, ſold it to Mr. Smith of Highgate by London; who was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

NETTLSTED, Netherleſtede, lies towards the Middle of Kent, by the Medway, about Three Miles Southward from Weſt-Malling, in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Twiford, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and South one of Juſtices in that Lath. In the Deanery of Malling, and Dioceſe of Rocheſter. The Church is called St. Mary's; which is a Rectory, and with the annexed Chapel of Berminget, alias Weſt-Berling, is valued in the King's Books at 15 l. 0 s. 8 d.

This Pariſh ought anciently to have contributed towards the Repair of the Fifth Pere or Arch of Rocheſter-Bridge.

Places of Note here:

1. Nettleſted: This Place was the Ancient Seat of the great Family of the Pimpes: William de Pimpe paid Aid for his Lands here, and for others in this Neighbourhood, at making the Black Prince Knight: And his Son and Heir Reginald Pimpe was Sheriff of Kent in the 49th Year of King Edward the IIId, and died that Year. 'Tis probable that the Father was a Knight; and that this Inſcription which is, or was, on a Tomb in Nettleſted Church belonged to his Lady:

Hic jacet Domina Margareta de Cobham, quondam Uxor Willielmi Pimpe, Militis, quæ obiit 4. Sept. A. D. 1337.

But about the End of King Henry the VIIth, Anne Pimpe, by marrying John Scott of Scott's Hall, Hall, carried this Eſtate into that Family; and there it continued in Philpot's Time.

Perhaps before the Pimpes ſettled here, the Earls of Glouceſter and Hertford were Lords of this Place; for I find mention made of their Court of Nettleſtede in our old Records: And they claimed here the uſual Privileges of a Manor in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the IIId; and they would not let their Tenants attend the Sheriffs Turns, &c. becauſe within the Privileges of Tunbridge Lowy.

2. Lomewood is a Place here which once belonged to a Cloiſter of Black Canons in Oxford, which was dedicated to St. Friſwith, and being ſuppreſs'd by Cardinal Woolſey, A. D. 1525. when he deſign'd to erect his College of Chriſt-Church; the Crown granted this Eſtate to Sir Edward Nevill, whoſe Daughter Katherine carried it in Marriage to John Roydon, Eſq; of Roydon-Hall in Great Peckham; and by Elizabeth Roydon his ſole Heir, it went again in Marriage to Roger Twiſden, Eſq; in whoſe Family it continued in Philpot's Time; being in the Poſſeſſion of Sir Roger Twiſden of Roydon-Hall, Knt. and Baronet.

In the 21ſt Year of King Edward the IIId, Magiſter John de Plauche, brought his Plea againſt the Prior of Tunbridge for a Meſſuage and 100 Acres of Land, 6 Acres of Meadow, 6 of Woodland, and Rent in Money of Three Shillings, lying in Nettleſted; as having no Right in the Premiſes, till after Date of ſuch a Demiſe, &c. But the Jury gave it for the Priory; and ſo they continued in Poſſeſſion. I am apt to believe this was the Eſtate called by Philpot, Lomewood: And that 'tis a Miſtake of the Printer, or of the Author, in putting Oxford inſtead of Tunbridge; for the Brethren of this Priory were black Canons: And I can't find there were any other hereabouts.

NEWCHURCH, lies towards the South-Eaſt Side of Kent, about Three Miles and a half Northward from New Romney, in the Bailiwick and Lath of Shipway, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices of the Corporation of Romney Marſh, in which Liberty it lies. One Part of it is in the Hundred of Aloes-Bridge, and the other in that of Newchurch; another in the Hundred of St. Martin, and the reſt in that of Worth. 'Tis all in the Deanery of Limpne, and Dioceſe of Canterbury: The Church ſtands in the Hundred of Newchurch, and is dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul. 'Tis a Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 10 l. 16 s. 0 d.

Places of Note here:

1. Peckmanſton is a Place here which anciently belonged to the great Family of Leybourn: But Juliana, ſole Daughter and Heir to Sir Roger de Leybourn, though married twice, dying without Iſſue, this, with other Parts of a mighty Eſtate, Eſcheated to the Crown: And was in the 11th Year of King Richard the IId, granted to the Abbey of Childrens Langley, where it ſtaid till the general Diſſolution. After which, King Henry the VIIIth, in his 35th Year, granted it to Sir Thomas Moyle, one of his Privy Council; by whoſe Daughter and Coheir Amy, it went to Sir Thomas Kempe; and he in Queen Elizabeth's Reign, ſold it to Thomas Smith, Farmer of the Queen's Cuſtoms; who bequeathed it to his third Son Richard Smith, by whoſe Daughter it went to Mr. Barrow of Suffolk, the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

2. Eaſtbridge is another Place here, which with Honychild in St. Mary's adjacent, was anciently part of the Revenue of the Abbey of Bradſole alias St. Radigunds by Dover: And partly alſo it belonged to the Knights of St. John of Jeruſalem. But on the General Diſſolution of all thoſe Neſts of Idleneſs, coming to the Crown, they were by King Edward the VIth granted to Cuthbert Vaughan, Eſq; in Leaſe; who in the next Reign purchaſed the Fee-Simple; and at his Death gave Honychild (by Will) to his Son-in-Law Roger Twiſden, Eſq; and Eaſtbridge to his Wife's Son Richard Dering, Eſq;: And this Place continued in the Family of Dering of Pluckley in Philpot's Time, being in the Poſſeſſion of Sir Edward Dering, of Pluckley, Baronet, the Grandſon of the ſaid Richard.

3. Silwell is a Manor here, which anciently belonged to the Abbey of Boxley, and after the Diſſolution, was granted to Sir Walter Henley, Privy Counſellor to King Henry the VIIIth, and Edward the VIth, by one of whoſe Three Daughters (Anne) this Place went to Richard Covert of Slaugham in Suſſex; and he was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

I find by the Pleas of the Crown held before the Juſtices Itinerant in Kent, in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, That one Thomas de Sutheries held half a Knight's Fee, in this Place, of the King in Capite.

NEWENDEN. The Name of this Place hath been very differently derived. Lambard thinks it comes from the Saxon, Niweldene, the low, hollow, or deep Valley: But Leland calls it Noviodunum, as derived from the Saxon, Niwandune, the New Hill. And as the former of theſe Authors obſerves, its Situation is ſuch, as to anſwer to both theſe Names, as ſtanding partly in a Valley, and part on an Hill. Indeed Den is a very uſual Termination here abouts; and John Bale, who ſaith he hath ſeen an Ancient Hiſtory of the Place, calls it Newendene. On the other Hand, if you ſuppoſe the Old Anderida to have been hereabouts, nothing is more natural than to ſuppoſe that after the Deſtruction of that, a new Town was built in its Room, or near it, that this Place might take its Name of Newenden from thence.

It lies at the South Side of Kent, by the River Rother (the ancient Limen) adjoining to Suſſex, about four Miles Southward from Cranebrook, in the Bailiwick of the Seven Hundreds, Lath of Scray, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and lower one of Juſtices in this Lath.

Part of it is in the Hundred of Selbrittenden: And Philpot ſaith very confidently, that the Engliſh Saxons called this Town Brittenden; i. e. the Britons Vale; and that this Hundred of Selbrittenden was ſo called from hence, and ſignifies the Britiſh Valley grown over with Willows.

The reſt of Newenden is in what they call the Townſhip of Newenden; which Townſhip hath an Officer of its own, called the Bailiff, who is in this Place a Conſtable, as in other Parts of the County: And this Bailiff hath alſo another Officer under him called the Under Bailiff, who is here as a Borſholder is in other Parts of the County.

The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims over the Manor of Newenden. 'Tis all in the Deanery of Charing, and Dioceſe of Canterbury: The Church ſtands in the Townſhip of Newenden, and is dedicated to St. Peter. 'Tis a Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 7 l. 13 s. 4 d.

As for the Houſe of Friars Carmelites here, you will find an Account of them in the Chapter of Religious Houſes.

Places of Note here:

1. Newenden Manor did anciently belong to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, being given to him by King Offa, A. D. 791. ad Paſcua Porcorum: And afterward thus 'tis expreſſed in Domeſday Book:

In Limwarlæd & Hundred de Sele Brichtindæne habet Archiepiſcopus de Terrâ Monachorum unum Manerium Niwendene in Dominio quod in T. E. R. tenuit Leofric de preterito Archiepiſcopo; & pro uno Sulling. ſe defendebat & ſubjacebat Saltwude. Nunc eſt appretiatum viij. l. x s.

By which it appears, that it was then an appendant Manor to that of Saltwood. But in the 32d Year of King Henry the VIIIth Thomas Cranmer Archbiſhop of Canterbury, by Deed, enrolled in the Augmentation Office (ſaith Kilburn) conveyed this Manor to that Prince.

2. Loſenham: This Place was the ancient Seat of the Family of the Auchers, of eminent Note both in this County, Suſſex, Nottingham, and Eſſex; in which laſt Place, they had Copt-Hall, (now the Seat of my worthy good Friend Sir Thomas Webſter, Baronet) for their Reſidence: And as Philpot expreſſes it, for the Head of their Barony. He thinks alſo, and with Probability enough, that this Family derive themſelves from one Aucherus, who was Earl or Alderman of Kent; and who with the Poſſe Comitatus routed the Danes at Richborough and Sandwich, as Alfred of Beverly writes.

'Tis mentioned, ſaith Philpot, in the Book called Nova Feoffamenta, that King Henry the IId gave to William Fitz Aucher the fourth Part of a Knight's Fee in Eſſex. Richard Fitz Aucher his Grandſon, was one of thoſe Kentiſh Gentlemen that attended King Henry the IIId in the Expedition he made into Wales, in the 2d Year of his Reign. William Fitz Aucher another of this Family held the Manor of Boſeham in Suſſex, by Grant from King William the Iſt. Henry Fitz Aucher was made Knight Banneret by King Edward the Iſt, for attending him in his Famous Expedition into Scotland, and at the Siege of Carlaverock, in his 28th Year. Peter Aucher or Auger, was Valet to King Edward the IId; a Place, ſaith Philpot, equivalent to what we now call a Gentleman of the Bed-Chamber. This Gentleman, it ſeems, had a fancy to wear a very great Beard; by which means he was taken for a Knight Templar, and had like to have come into trouble when that Order was aboliſhed: But the King rectified the Miſtake himſelf. After this Manor had continued for many Deſcents in this Ancient Family, at laſt by Anne only Daughter of John Aucher, Eſq; of this Place, it went in Marriage to Walter Colepeper, ſecond Son of Sir John Colepeper, of Bay-Hall in Pembury: And in Philpot's Time this was in the Poſſeſſion of Sir John Colepeper, who was created a Baron at Oxford by King Charles the Iſt.

3. Caſtle-Toll. This is a raiſed Piece of Land, containing, I gueſs about 18, or 20 Acres, and ſituated on a Point of Land, between the River Rother and Haydon Sewer; it lies about one Mile and a quarter nearly Eaſt-North-Eaſt from Newenden-ſtreet, and about two Miles South-Weſt from Rolvenden: On the Eaſt Side it hath the Remains of a deep Ditch and Bank, which ſeems to have gone quite round it.

Near this Toll towards the North-North-Eaſt, lies a Piece of Ground raiſed much higher than the Toll is; this was encompaſſed with a double Ditch, the Tracks of which are ſtill to be ſeen in ſome Places; and within the Line, is, I believe, about five or ſix Acres of Land: On the South and North Sides of the uppermoſt Vallum, very eminent ſtill. When Dr. Plot viſited this Place in the Year 1693. he ſaith in ſome Manuſcript Papers of his, which I have the Favour to peruſe, That they were then very lofty; and he was informed by an ancient and ſober Countryman, who had often plowed upon this Hill, that both the Mounts or Tumuli, and the Valla were then at leaſt four Foot lower, than when he firſt knew the Place: And therefore no wonder if I found them much lower yet, when I viſited this Place. And the Plow, and the uſual Deterrations will in Time reduce them to a Level.

I cannot but think, with Dr. Plott, Mr. Cambden, Selden, Lambard, &c. that the Ancient Anderida is to be placed here: And that the City of Andred ſtood on the Caſtle Toll: and the Caſtle, or Andred's Cheſter, on the higher Ground abovementioned, where the double Trench and the Tumuli appear: Here are very plain Remains of ſome very Eminent Intrenchments, and thoſe appearing with a very ancient Face. No Hiſtory, that I can find, gives us any Account when theſe were formed; nor is there the Scene of any Action laid here, ſince that which will make it probable, that it was the Old Anderida. Certainty indeed is not to be expected here, and therefore I am far from being poſitive that I am in the right: But the Reaſons which ſeem to have carried two ſuch great Men as Archbiſhop Uſher, and Mr. Somner, to ſeek for Anderida at Pevenſey or elſewhere, don't appear to me be throughly concluſive. The principal one ſeems to be the diſtance of Newenden from the Sea; whereas Gildas places Andreds Cheſter in Littore Oceani ad Meridiem. To which I think may be ſaid, that we have very good Reaſon to believe the Sea did once flow up to this Place. Twine, de Rebus Albionicis, p. 31. ſaith that Romney Marſh was once Pelagus & Mare Velivolum; and Somner himſelf owns, that the Sea might formerly flow up as far as Red-hill, or Riding-hill, which is not above Six or Seven Miles from hence. And the Ground between Ridinghill and Anderdown (for ſo it is ſtill called, a Word retaining ſomething of the ancient Name,) is raiſed 12 or 14 Foot; as appears from Planks and Poſts having been dug up here at that depth, as I was informed upon the Place. And when to this you add on the other hand, that Tradition hath always fixed Anderida here; that Henry of Huntingdon ſaith, this Place uſed to be ſhewed, as ſuch, to Paſſengers: That it is ſituate in the Wood Andred, or the Wild: That the whole Hundred bears the Name of Selbrittenden: That probably this Town had the Name of Newenden from its being built anew near the Place of the old one: And laſtly, when I think it appears plainly by the Charter of King Offa, mentioned by Twine, p. 102. That Andred was in Kent, as neither Haſting nor Pevenſey are; and that here are remains of ſome ancient Works and Intrenchments viſible to this Day; I think we ſhall have probable Reaſons enough to keep this ancient Place within our County, and to eſtabliſh it at the preſent Newenden, or ſo near it as is above deſcribed.

If it be objected, that 'tis a wonder no more Stones or Foundations of the Buildings of ſo Eminent a Place now remain: I can anſwer, that I am not very ſure the Britiſh Cities were built with Stone, perhaps one may be more ſure of the contrary; but if they were, there is ſo very little of that in the Parts hereabout, that all the Remains would have been long ſince fetched away from Anderida. Which is now the Caſe of the Priory; a Building of a much later Date; and yet ſuch is the general want of Stone here, that ſcarcely any Foundations of it remain unremoved. 'Tis agreed alſo, that when in the Year 490, Ælla and Ciſſa did Beſiege and Take

Andreds Cheſter, as they ſlew all the Britons which inhabited it to a Man, ſo they razed the City to the Ground; and if afterwards the Caſtle might have been repaired, or newly built here; it was probably deſtroyed by the Danes in the Year 893, when they ravaged the Country all hereabouts.

At this Caer Andred, as the Britons called it, the Romans, after they came hither, placed a Band of the Abulci, with their Captain, to defend this part of the Coaſt of Kent and Suſſex againſt the Piratical Inſults of the Saxons.

There is a handſome Stone Bridge over the Rother at this Town, which divides the two Counties of Kent and Suſſex.

In the 21ſt Year of King Edward the 1ſt, it appeared that Boniface, late Archbiſhop of Canterbury, had pretended to exempt his Tenants of this Town of Newenden from Service in the Hundred Court, and from ſuch Taxations as were there uſually made; but upon a Trial his Tenants were caſt.

NEWINGTON near Hithe, or Newington Bellhouſe, lies at the South-Eaſt Part of Kent, about two Miles North Eaſtward from Hithe, in the Bailiwick of Stowting, Hundred of Folkſtone, Lath of Shipway, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath.

'Tis in the Deanery of Dover, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; and the Church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. A Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 7 l. 12 s. 6 d.

Places of Note here:

1. In the Reigns of King John, and King Henry the IIId, this Place was in the Poſſeſſion of Hubert de Burgo, Lord Chief Juſtice of England; and he, in the 55th Year of King Henry the IIId, ſold it to Thomas de Bellhouſe; and to perpetuate the Memory of him he bought it of, he took his Arms ſomething like thoſe of Hubert de Burgo, viz. Or, on a Bend Gules 3 Lozenges argent & gules. From this Family this Place came to be called Newington Bellhouſe. Sir Thomas de Bellhouſe, Great Grandſon of the firſt Purchaſer, paid Aid for it at making the Black Prince Knight; John de Bellhouſe died poſſeſs'd of it in the 48th Year of King Edward the IIId, and left only a Daughter, who the Year after carried this Eſtate in Marriage to Robert Knevit, a younger Son of Sir John Knevit, Lord Chancellor of England; and either he or his Son had a Charter of Freewarren for his Land here, in the 7th Year of King Henry the IVth. But about the Beginning of King Henry the VIIIth, this Name gave place to that of Clopton, by the Marriage of an Heireſs. The Cloptons, in the 27th Year of King Henry the VIIIth, ſold it to Thomas Lord Cromwell; on whoſe Attainder it came to, and ſtaid in the Crown till the 1ſt Year of Queen Mary, and then was granted to Edward Lord Clinton; who in three Years more ſold it to Henry Herdſon; and his Grandſon, Francis Herdſon, in King James the 1ſt's Reign, paſſed it the ſame way to Mr. Henry Brockman, Grandfather to Mr. James Brockman the Proprietary in Philpot's Time.

2. Sene. 3. Bithborough, are two ancient Seats in this Pariſh, which of old belonged to the Family of Valoigns; and by a Daughter and Coheir of that Name, it went to Sir Francis Fogg, about the End of King Edward the IIId, which Gentleman lies buried in Cheriton Church, with the Arms of Fogg and Valoigns empaled on his Tomb; and in this Family it ſtaid till about the End of Queen Elizabeth's Reign; and then George Fogg, Eſq; ſold Sene to Honyword, and Bithborough to Mr. Henry Brockman above-named, in whoſe Family it now continues; and he added much to the old Building.

4. Bertram's is another Manor here, which is ſo called becauſe it was once part of the Eſtate of Bertram de Crioll, who died poſſeſs'd of it in the 23d Year of King Edward the Iſt; and by his Daughter it went to Sir Richard Rokeſley; and from that Name, by a Daughter, to Sir Thomas Poynings, from whom it deſcended to Sir Edward Poynings in King Henry the VIIIth's Time; and for want of Iſſue by him, Eſcheated, with all his other Lands to the Crown; and then was by that Prince granted to Thomas Lord Cromwell; and coming to the Crown again on his Attainder, it was by Queen Mary granted to Edward Lord Clinton, who in three Years after ſold it to Henry Herdſon; and his Grandſon of the ſame Name alienated it to Mr. Henry Brockman abovementioned, in whoſe Family it continued in Philpot's Time; being in the Poſſeſſion of his Grandſon James Brockman, Eſq;.

5. Blackoſe, alias Canon-Court, is a ſmall Manor in Newington, which appears (by Petit's Inqueſt of Kent in MS.) to have been in King Henry the IIId's Reign poſſeſs'd by Nicholas de Moreball, where it continued till about the End of King Richard the IId, and then was ſold to Edwy; from whence, in King Edward the IVth's Time, it went to Wreake; and one Thomas Wreake exchanged it with William Warham Archbiſhop of Canterbury; and in that See it continued till Cranmer afterwards exchanged it with the Crown; whence after a ſhort ſtay, it was granted to John Honywood, Eſq.

Dr. Gale, in his Antonini Iter. IV. p. 86. ſaith, that Roman Money hath been dug up here; as alſo at Stowting and Chilham.

In the 25th Year of Edward the IIId, a Commiſſion of Sewers was granted to John de Cobham, Otto de Grandiſon, and others, to enquire into the State of, and ſecure the Banks againſt the Sea, betwixt this Place and Dover; which I ſuppoſe was at the Mouth of the two Brooks, Sea Brook here, and Enswater by Folkſtone.

Here was formerly a Chapel Dedicated to St. Nicholas, and very famous for being frequented by Sea-faring Men; and great Numbers of Offerings were continually made at it; for St. Nicholas was thought by the Vulgar to be the Giver of all good luck at Sea, either in Sailing, Fiſhing, &c.

NEWINGTON near Sittingburn, ſometimes called Newington Lucies, lies towards the North Side of Kent, about two Miles and a half Weſtward from Milton, in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Milton, Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and upper one of the Juſtices in that Lath. The Liberty of St. Auſtin claims over the Manor of Newington. It is in the Deanery of Sittingbourn, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; and the Church is dedicated to St. Mary. A Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 14 l. 0 s. 0 d. per Ann.

The Church is large, and in good Repair, with a lofty well built Tower of Stone and Flint. In it are Memorials of the Interment of Brian Diggs, and his Wife, in the Year 1490; of Thomas Holbrook, Gent. 1587; of ſeveral of the Brooks; of the Cobham Family; of the Lady Norton, Wife of John Cobham, in 1580; and of William Monde, in 1487. Here is a good Font of Stone, and a pair of Stone Stairs, up to a Place where formerly was a Rood Loft.

Kilburn ſaith, that all the Cuſtoms of this Church belonging to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, were confirmed to Lanfranc by King William the Iſt, in the Year 1073.

Places of Note here:

1. Lucies: This Pariſh was called Newington Lucies, becauſe it anciently was the Eſtate of the Noble Family of Lucy, who came Originally from Normandy, where there is a Place of this Name. George de Lucy came into this Kingdom with King William the Iſt, as appears by the Battle-Abbey Roll. Fulbert de Lucy, in ſome old Regiſters written Sir Fulbert, changed his Sirname for that of Dover, on the account of his being made by King William the 1ſt, one of the Aſſiſtants to John de Fiennes in the Guard of Dover Caſtle, having Fifteen Knights Fees aſſigned to him in that part of Kent for the Support of that great Truſt. William de Dover was (a) one of thoſe Peers which atteſted the Charter of Maud the Empreſs, by which ſhe created Miles of Glouceſter Earl of Hereford. Hugh de Dover was Sheriff of Kent from the 7th to the 15th Year of the Reign of King Henry the IId. Sir Richard de Lucy was Lord Chief Juſtice, and Protector of England in the ſame Reign. Aymer de Lucy attended on King Richard the Iſt at the Siege of Acon in Paleſtine, and for ſome Services there had an Addition of Croſs Croſſlets to his Paternal Coat Armour, which was three Pikes, or Piſces Lucii. Geofrey de Lucy ſat often as a Baron in Parliament in King Edward the Iſt's Reign; and himſelf and his two Brothers, Aymer and Thomas, were with that Prince in his 28th Year at the Siege of Carlaverock in Scotland, and Knighted there. And their Father Geofrey de Lucy was made High Admiral of England in the Reign of King Henry the IIId. In the Reign of King Edward the IIId, William and Anthony Lucy, both of this Noble Family, ſat in Parliament as Barons; and in the 6th Year of that King, Geofrey de Lucy (who died poſſeſs'd of Lucies in the 20th Year of that Prince) had a Charter of Freewarren to his Manor here; which was afterwards confirmed to Sir Walter Lucy in the 27th Year of King Henry the VIth; in which Year he deceaſed, and left this Eſtate to his Son Sir Jeffery Lucy; whoſe only Daughter and Heir Maud, carried it in Marriage to Sir William Vaux of Northamptonſhire; and his Son, Thomas Vaux, ſold it in the 27th Year of King Henry the VIIIth, to Sir Roger Cholmley, of a younger Branch of the Cholmleys of Cholmley in Cheſhire; from which Family it was ſold to Sead, and thence to Osborne; and thence again to one Mr. Pagitt of London, who appears to have been the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

(a) Seld. Titl. of Honour.

2. Tracies: This Place alſo had once Poſſeſſors of its own Name, as long ago as the Reign of King Henry the IIId. Philpot ſaith, he knows not whether theſe Tracies were related to thoſe in Devonſhire, becauſe their Arms were different, being Argent Two Bends, between Nine Eſcallops Gules.

After the Tracies, the Colepeper's of Bedgbury were Owners of this Manor; and in King Henry the VIth's Reign it was in the Poſſeſſion of the Clifford's of Bobbing-Court, from whom, in King Henry the VIIIth's Time, it was ſold to Thomas Linacre, Prieſt.

3. Frogenhall, is another Place in this Pariſh, which anciently had Owners of that Name, and who were a Branch of the Family of the Frogenhalls of Frogenhall in Tenham: And in this Name it continued till Thomas Frogenhall leaving only Three Daughters, by one of them, Elizabeth, it went in Marriage to John Northwood of Milton; and not long after, by another Daughter of this Name, it went the ſame way to Sir John Norton; and here it ſtaid not long, before it was ſold to Thomas Lynacre, Prieſt, above-mentioned, who ſettled both this Place and Tracies on the College of All-Souls in Oxon.

4. Newington Manor belonged anciently to a Nunnery which was erected here, and of which you will find an Account in its proper Place: But in King Henry the IIId's Reign the King ſeized it into his Hands, and ſettled here Seven Secular Canons, but ſome of them being guilty of Crimes, the King ſeized it into his Hands again: And Two Parts of this Eſtate which lay within the Hamlet of Thetham, Two of the guiltleſs Brethren, with the King's conſent, gave to the Abbey of St. Auſtin's; and the other Five Parts the Crown granted to Sir Richard Lucy, then Lord Chief Juſtice of England; and his Son Almericus de Lucy (as Philpot ſaith, appears by an old Manuſcript) exchanging them with the Monks of St. Auſtin's in Canterbury, that Convent got Poſſeſſion of all this Manor; for in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, I find them claiming Freewarren for this Eſtate; and here it continued till King Henry the VIIIth's Reign, when in the General Diſſolution coming to the Crown it there lay, and was in its Poſſeſſion till the Civil Wars in King Charles the Iſt's Reign.

5. Levenoke is another Manor in this Pariſh, which in King Edward the IIId's Reign was in the Poſſeſſion of John de Beaufitts, and probably by an Heir-general of that Name it went to Arnold of Rocheſter. And Philpot was informed in the Neighbourhood, for he could not ſee the Deeds of Conveyances, that Arnold ſold it to Knight; and in this Name it continued till the Time of King James the Iſt, and then was alienated to Goldſmith; from whom it went the ſame way to Barrows; and a Deſcendant of his Mortgaged it to Mr. Alſton of London; and from thence it went in Philpot's Time by Sale to Mr. Liſle of Middleſex, who was newly dead when his Book was publiſhed.

6. Caicol-Hill is a Place in this Neighbourhood over which the Roman Way ſeems to run; and which ſome will have to take its Name from Caij Collis; as if made eminent by ſome great Action here performed by Caius J. Cæſar. And Dr. Plot in a Manuſcript kindly communicated to me, ſeems to think it probable, that here it was, that the Seventh Legion, being ſent out to forrage by Cæſar in his firſt Expedition into Britain, were ſo boldly attacked by the Britons, that if Cæſar had not in Perſon gone to their Aſſiſtance, they might have been entirely deſtroyed; but on a careful Peruſal of the Account which Cæſar gives of that Action, I can by no means think that the Scene of it lay ſo far from his Camp as this Place is. His Camp was certainly near the Sea Side and the Place where he landed: From this Camp, (b) Ii qui pro Portis caſtrorum in Statione erant Cæſari renunciaverunt, pulverem majorem quam conſuetudo ferret in ea parte videri quam in partem Legio iter feciſſet; as his own Words are. Now Caicol-Hill lies both too far from Cæſar's Landing-Place, to ſuppoſe a Legion ſhould go to it to forrage; and it is utterly impoſſible that the Stationary Cohorts who ſtood Centuries in the Entrance into his Camp, could ſee the Duſt made by the Acceſſion of the Britiſh Troops, or by their Engaging the Romans. I conclude therefore, that if this Place took its Name from any Action of Cæſar's, it muſt be ſome one performed by him the next Summer after this, when he came a ſecond Time into this Iſland, and with a much greater Force. And perhaps hereabouts might be the laſt Engagement of any Note between the Kentiſh Britons and the Romans, under the Conduct of Caius Trebonius, whom Cæſar ſent out to forage with three Legions and all his Cavalry; for immediately after this he marched his Army to the Thames, and paſſed over in Queſt of Caſſivelaunus.

(b) De Bell. Belgico, Lib. 4.

St. Standard-Hill is a Place here lying on an elevated Situation to the Southward, juſt above the Town; and the Tradition is that the Roman Eagle, was once diſplayed upon it in the Time of Julius Cæſar's being here: Which is not at all improbable, though there be now no Signs of any Works or Fortifications upon it; and I judge the Time to have been that above-mentioned; when our Countrymen engaged Cæſar's Army the laſt Time in Kent, juſt before his March to the Thames, and before their Auxiliaries left them; as they did after the Defeat here. De Bell. Belgico, Lib. 5.

I think it is pretty plain that near this Town muſt have been that Roman Station which in Antonini Itinerary is called Durolevum; and of this Opinion are Biſhop Stillingfleet, Burton, Dr. Batteley, and the Judicious Mr. Somner, who very happily conjectures, that the Name Durolevum came from the Dur, or the River's running on the left Hand of this Place (and as Tradition hath it formerly, juſt by it): For as it doth keep the River on the Left, ſo the Account in the Itinerary begins from London and runs on to Dover, and not from Dover to London.

The Diſtances alſo in the Itinerary agree very well with this Conjecture; and the Name of the preſent Town likewiſe confirms it; for as Dr. Batteley very well obſerves, in his Antiquit. Rutupin. 'tis probable and natural to ſuppoſe that when the old Durolevum was gone to decay, and a new Town built in its Room, whoſe Name is Newington, they had a Regard to the Memory of the Old Town in calling this the New One. And that it ſtands on the old Roman Watling-ſtreet Way is plain and apparent to this Day: For that Street having croſſed the Medway at Chatham is ſtill very viſible on the Top of Chatham-Hill, the left-hand Hedge of the Road to Rainham ſtanding upon it: From Rainham to Newington it runs, I think, moſtly on the Right Hand of the preſent Road; a little before you come to the preſent Town of Newington it ſeems to coincide with it. But the very many Roman Urns, Coins, and other Remains, which have been digg'd up here, on the Hill a little beyond the Town towards Canterbury; and in and near a Field there called (from the Roman Urns and other Veſſels found in it) Crockfield; are a yet ſtronger Proof that here was anciently a Roman Station or Settlement, and therefore it will be ſtill more probable that this was the Durolevum mentioned in the Itinerary. Though I muſt own that I incline alſo to the Opinion of Dr. Batteley; that there was alſo a Roman Pottery ſomewhere near this Place: Becauſe as he obſerves, Pots have been found here lying in all manner of Poſitions, ſideways and inverted, and oftentimes quite empty without any Aſhes or Bones in them. And ſome of them lye in a moiſt ſlimy Soil, as well as others in a dry and ſandy one.

These Urns and Roman Veſſels were firſt, I think, taken publick Notice of by Dr. Merick Cauſabon in his Tranſlation of Marcus Antoninus de ſeipſo, in his Notes upon it, p. 30. where he ſaith that about a Quarter of a Mile before you come to Newington (from Canterbury) and not much above a Stones Throw from the common Road on the right Hand there is a Field, out of which many Hundreds of Roman Pots, Urns, and ſuch like Veſſels have been dug. He gives you the Figure of three of them, one very large, the ſecond with a Handle to it, and a narrow Neck; and the third, a kind of Patera: And the * Figure annexed expreſſes another very large one, holding near a Buſhel, which was found hard by at Caycoll-Hill above-mentioned, and now in the Hands of my very good Friend John Godfrey, Eſq; of Norton-Court, a ſtudious and ingenious Gentlemen, and a great Lover of Antiquities, of which he hath a good Collection of all Kinds. Thoſe Urns mentioned by Cauſabon had ſeveral Inſcriptions upon them. On one was Severianus Pater, on another Coccili M. that is, Coccili Manibus: on the Cover of another was Priſcian; and on a fourth Ful. Linus, &c. Wherever one great Urn was found, it was obſerved that divers leſſer Veſſels were found about it, and ſome in it; and they were generally covered with a proper Cover of the ſame Earth with the Body of the Pot. I know no other Uſe (ſaith Cauſabon) of theſe Veſſels that was ordinary among the Romans, but either to contain ſome Fragment of odoriferous Liquor, and durable Confection (a): Or that Libatio of Wine and Milk which they uſed about their Dead: Or, laſtly, to receive and preſerve the Tears ſhed by the Friends of the Deceaſed at their Death.

(a) Look back to p. 89, 90.

As for the Difference of the greater and leſſer Urns, Fabricius in his Roma, and Marlianus, are of Opinion, that when Urns of a different Bigneſs are found in the ſame Place, the greater ones were for the greater and richer Perſons, as for Maſters and Patrons; and let me add perhaps Fathers of Families, &c. and the leſſer, for the poorer and inferior Sort, ſuch as Clients, Servants, &c. And he thinks from further Obſervation on theſe Urns, that one great one was appointed to contain the Bones and Aſhes of all either Houſhold or Kindred: And that as often as any of them died, they had recourſe to the Common Urn, which therefore ſo often was uncovered: And becauſe there was ſome Inconvenience in this; the Faſhion was in ſome Places, to let in the new Aſhes through Holes fitted for that Purpoſe. (See Gruterus, fol. 804.) And beſides theſe greater and common Urns, 'tis likely, that particular Perſons had Veſſels of their own, whereby both the Number of the Deceaſed might be known, and the Perſons themſelves the better be diſtinguiſhed and remembred.

There might be alſo another Uſe of theſe leſſer Pots, in my Judgment, very neceſſary; and that is, that by them the common great Urns might the better be known and diſtinguiſhed one from another: For of the many Hundreds which have been taken up of the leſſer Sort, ſcarce any Two have been obſerved to be alike. The Contents in theſe Urns were uſually Bones and Aſhes, and ſometimes clear Water, about which latter, ſee Gruterus, fol. 927.

Perhaps of theſe larger Veſſels, of which Dr. Batteley had one dug up here that held 24 Pints, ſome might be uſed to hold the Wine, with with which the Romans uſed ſometimes to quench the Funeral Fire; to waſh the Bones, and to ſprinkle the Spectators with; and ſometimes to offer up or pour out in Libations.

I ſhall offer no Reaſons now to refute the Opinion of Mr. Camden; that not this Place of Newington but Lenebam was the ancient Durolevum; becauſe I have hinted it two or three times already, and ſhall have Occaſion hereafter, more particularly to ſhew, that That great Antiquary, being led into a fundamental Miſtake, about the Courſe of the Roman Military Way, was forced to confound the Stations, and alter the Diſtances in the Itinerary, to make out what I think can never be accounted for; viz. That the Roman Way went firſt to Maidſtone, then to Rocheſter, and then to Lenebam, in its Courſe to Canterbury: And the contrary to which appears to the Eye at this very Day; for the old Watling-ſtreet Way may be eaſily traced from London to Canterbury and Dover; and running in as ſtrait a Line as can well be drawn.

NEWNHAM, Newenham, lies towards the North Side of Kent, about four Miles and a half South Weſtward from Feverſham, in the Bailiwick and Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and upper one of Juſtices in that Lath. The Liberty of St. Auſtin claims over it, as being in the Hundred of Feverſham, which formerly belonged to that Abbey.

'Tis in the Deanery of Oſpringe, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; and the Church is dedicated to St. Peter and Paul.

A Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 5 l. 12 s. 6 d.

Places of Note here:

1. Champions Court, this was very early the Seat and Eſtate of a Family who wrote themſelves de Campanid: Robert de Campania was one of thoſe Kentiſh Gentlemen that attended King Richard the firſt at the Siege of Acon in Paleſtine; and his Grandſon John de Campania had a Grant of a Weekly Market on Thurſday, and a Fair for three Days, the Day before St. Peter's, That, and the Day after: And he was one of thoſe Knights that was with King Edward the Iſt at the Siege of Carlaverock in Scotland: In proceſs of Time they came to be called Champion; and at laſt the Name expired in two Daughters, one of which, Katherine, had this Eſtate, and carried it to her Husband Robert Corbet, deſcended from the Corbets of Salop; and by Joan and Elizabeth, two Female Heirs of the Name of Corbet, it went again into another; Joan married Samuel Slap, and Elizabeth, Ralph Hart: Slap left only a Daughter Joan, who died without Iſſue; by which means all this Manor came into the Poſſeſſion of Richard the Son of Ralph Hart; but a Deſcendant of his ſold it to Sir Henry Spiller, and he ſent it the ſame way to Mr. Weckerlin, deſcended from the Eminent Family of Weckerlins in upper Germany; and he was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

2. Sholand: This Place in the Reign of King Henry the IIId, was the Eſtate of Adam de Stomynton; and when this Name became extinct here, it went next into that of Bourn, which was of Sharſted in Dodington; and this was about the 20th Year of King Edward the IIId: From this Family it went by Sale to Chevin, deſcended from the Chevins of Chevin's-Court in Marden; and Thomas Chevin of this Place, married Thomaſin, one of the Co-heirs of Champion, of Champion's-Court above-named. From Chevin this Place went by ſale to Maycot; and from that Name the ſame way to Adye, a Family of Antiquity and Eminence hereabouts; but hence it was alſo alienated to Steere, and thence to Sager, deſcended from the Sagers of Yorkſhire; and he ſold it to Mr. Hugeſſen of Dover, in whoſe Poſſeſſion it remained in Philpot's Time.

St. NICHOLAS near Harbledown Hoſpital, is a pretty fair Church, having a Church-yard about it, and a Font in it; which ſhews it anciently to have been a Parochial Church; and ſo it was ſaid to be by the Commiſſioners, in the 37th Year of King Henry the VIIIth. And when Archbiſhop Stratford appropriated it to Eaſtbridge Hoſpital, which was A. D. 1342, he calls it the Pariſh of St. Nicholas. It was indeed a Rectory, A. D. 1292. was valued in the King's Books at 9 l. per Ann. paid 12 s. per Ann. Tenths, and it paid alſo Procurations.

Dr. Jackſon, then Maſter of the adjacent Hoſpital, (as Mr. Somner tells us) did very much Adorn and Beautify it.

Archbiſhop Theobald annexed to it the Tithes of his Manor of Weſtgate; and when Archbiſhop Stratford appropriated it to Eaſtbridge, he appointed a Chaplain to perform Divine Service here. But Archbiſhop Winchelſy finding ſome Inconvenience in this, erected here a perpetual Chantry, the Prieſt whereof, to avoid Infection, was lodged apart out of the Hoſpital; was charged with the Cure of Souls, and enjoined perpetual Reſidence.

And thus it ſtood till the general Diſſolution of the Abbey, and then the Chantry Prieſt being laid aſide, the Church was continued to the Hoſpital, and the Poor ſerved in Divine Offices, by a Miniſter who is a Member of the Hoſpital. See Somner's Cant. p. 45.

St. NICHOLAS in Rocheſter is now, properly ſpeaking, the Pariſh Church for that City, ſtands juſt by the Cathedral, and is a good handſome Edifice; probably this Saint had the Patronage of this Church, as well as of ſeveral others in the County; becauſe he had, as was ſuppoſed by the Superſtitious of thoſe Times, a peculiar Dominion over the Sea, and could ſave from Storms and Wrecks, ſuch as were well devoted to his Service.

'Tis a Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 13 l. 15 s. 4 d.

Before the preſent Church was built, there was an Altar in the Nave of Rocheſter Cathedral, which was Dedicated to St. Nicholas; and is in many old Deeds and Charters which I have ſeen, called the Parochial Altar of St. Nicholas; and this Altar was ſo Eminent, as that the preſent Church of St. Margaret's near Rocheſter, was eſteemed only as an Apendage to it. The Words of a very fair Charter of Privileges and Donations to his Church of Rocheſter, now lying before me, are theſe.

Notum ſit omnibus vobis me Conceſſiſſe & confirmaſſe, &c. Altare St. Nicholai quod eſt Parochiale in Eccleſiâ St. Andreæ Apoſtoli; cum Eccleſiâ St. Margaritæ quæ appendet, &c.

And thus Parochial did this Altar in the Cathedral continue, till after the Year 1327. For then, as appears by another Deed now in my Hands, there having been a Diſpute and Difference between the Pariſhioners of this Altar in the Nave of the Cathedral, and the Monks, about keeping the Key of the Nave of the ſaid Church, it was by Writing Indented and Sealed, agreed as followeth:

"That the Monks ſhould build for the ſaid Pa-
"riſhoners, in that Corner of the Nave of the "Church as was next to the North Door, a Place
"with a Door and Window out into the Church-
"yard, where the Hoſt ſhould be kept, and

" where they might have acceſs to it in the " Night: And while this Oratory was building, " they were to have leave to come into the Ca- " thedral in the Night; but never after, except " on Chriſtmas Night, All-Souls, and St. Nicho- " las's Nights. But as to the Sacraments and all " other Divine Offices, they were to have the " Uſe of them in the Cathedral before this " Agreement.

But I ſuppoſe in ſome ſhort time after this, the preſent Pariſh Church of St. Nicholas began to be Built; but whether it were done at the common Charge of the Town, or by the Benefactions and Contributions of particular Perſons, I can't find. The Sermon is always here on Sundays in the Afternoon, and they begin ſo early, as to have done before the Cathedral Prayers begin.

St. NICHOLAS in the Iſle of Thanet, lies at the North ſide of Kent, in the Weſt Part of that Iſle, about 5 Miles and a half North Weſtward from Sandwich, in the Bailiwick of Bridge and Petham, Lath of St. Auſtin, and Eaſt Diviſion of the County. Part of this Pariſh is within the Diviſion of the Juſtices in the Lath of St. Auſtin, and the Liberty of St. Auſtin claims over it, becauſe it lies in the Hundred of Ringſlow, which belonged formerly to that Abbey.

'Tis all in the Deanery of Weſtbere, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; the Church ſtands in the Hundred of Ringſlow, and is Dedicated to St. Nicholas.

'Tis a Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 15 l. 19 s. 7 d. and anciently was only as a Chapel of Eaſe to Reculver.

The Vicarage was made and endowed by Robert Winchelſey Archbiſhop of Canterbury, about 400 Years ago.

The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims in this Pariſh alſo, as well as that of St. Auſtin.

The Church is a very handſome Building, lofty and large; in it are Memorials of the Interment of Valentine Edwards, 1560; of Valentine Everard, 1624; on the Wall a Monument of Thomas Paramour, 1593, who married a Daughter of Sir William Willoughby; as alſo of the Napletons and Houghams in the middle Chancel: Which Chancel is maintained out of a Farm called Froſt's, by the Will of Mr. Thomas Paramour above-mentioned.

Places of Note here:

1. Shoart; here, as I was informed by Mr. Gillow, was formerly a Chapel, but I can find nothing about it; 'tis now the Reſidence of Mr. Pampbleet.

2. St. Giles or Sarre (ſee Thanet Iſle) is a Place which formerly was a Pariſh by it ſelf, the Church Dedicated to St. Giles; but hath been Demoliſhed a great while, and the Pariſh annexed to St. Nicholas. In King Henry the VIIIth's Reign a Diſpute ariſing about the Aſſeſſment of Sarre, the King ended it, by uniting Sarre to Sandwich by his Letters Patents; and ever ſince it hath been eſteemed as a Member of that Port, and is accounted within the Diviſion of the Town and Port of Sandwich; and the Liberty of the Cinque Ports claim over it.

The Impropriation of this Pariſh belongs to the Church of Rocheſter.

3. Sarre Manor; this was once an ancient Seat of the Family of Crioll: Bertram de Crioll was one of thoſe Kentiſh Gentlemen who accompanied King Richard the Iſt to the Holy Land, and was at the Siege of Acon in Paleſtine: Bartholomew de Crioll was Lieutenant of Dover Caſtle under that King. Simon de Crioll was with King Edward the Iſt at the famous Siege of Carlaverock in Scotland, and was there Knighted; and his Deſcendants Sir William the Father, and Sir John the Son, continued it down, till at length the Poſſeſſion came into Sir Thomas Keriell, (for ſo now they had corrupted their Name) who was Knight of the Garter, and a very Eminent Man in the Reign of King Henry the VIth. In the 9th Year of that Prince, he was made Governor of Gourney in Normandy, in which Poſt he behaved himſelf very gallantly, Defeating and Routing the Earl of Britain, who came to oppoſe him: In the 15th Year of that King, he ſeized on the Duke of Burgundy's Canon and Carriages; and tho' in the 27th Year of this Prince, being ſent into France again with 1500 Men to Recruit the Engliſh Army, he had the Misfortune to be over-powered with Numbers and Defeated, yet he did as much as could poſſibly be expected, with ſo few Men. But before the End of this Reign, this Manor was gotten ſomehow into the Poſſeſſion of John White, Eſq; for he died poſſeſſed of it in the 9th Year of King Edward the IVth. In King Henry the VIIth's, and King Henry the VIIIth's Reigns, it belonged to the Family of Bere; but about the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth, it was thence ſold to Ruſh, Anceſtor of Sir Francis Ruſh; one of whoſe two Daughters and Co-heirs, carried it in Marriage to Sir George Wentworth of Wentworth Woodhouſe in Yorkſhire; who was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

4. Down-Barton, is another Place in St. Nicholas Pariſh, which 'tis probable did anciently belong to a Family of the Name of Exeter, who had large Poſſeſſions hereabouts for many Years; but as to this Eſtate, they muſt then be Tenants to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, for it belonged anciently to that Church, and ſtaid there till Archbiſhop Cranmer made a kind of Exchange for it with the Crown. After which, that Prince granted it to Henry Criſpe, Eſq; and in this Name it continued till King James the Iſt's Reign, and then was ſold to Paramour; from whence it went the ſame way to Daniel Harvey, Eſq; of Combe Nevil, near Kingſton upon Thames.

NOCKHOLT lies towards the middle of the Weſt ſide of Kent, about four Miles and a half North Weſtward from Sevenoke, in the Bailiwick of Sutton-Bromley, Hundred of Ruxley, Lath of Sutton-at-Hone, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and upper one of Juſtices in that Lath. In the Deanery of Shoreham, (and ſo a Peculiar to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury.) But in the Dioceſe of Rrcheſter. I ſuppoſe it is eſteemed only as a Chapel, for I can't find it valued at all in the King's Books.

Places of Note here:

1. Nockholt Manor, this Place was formerly a Branch of the Eſtate of the Lord Says: William de Say died poſſeſſed of it in the 23d Year of King Edward the IIId; and Elizabeth, Daughter to his Grandſon Geofrey Say, carried it by Marriage to William Fiennes, Eſq; whoſe Deſcendant Richard Fiennes, married Joan, ſole Heir of Thomas Lord Dacre of Horſmonceaux in Suſſex; and ſo gained that Title in right of his Wife, and was ſummon'd to Parliament as Lord Dacres in King Henry the VIth's Reign. In this Noble Family Nockholt continued till the 36th Year of Queen Elizabeth; and then Margaret, Siſter to Gregory Fiennes Lord Dacres deceaſed, becoming his Heir, carried it to her Husband Sampſon Lennard, Eſq; who was alſo created Lord Dacres in the 2d Year of King James the Iſt; whoſe Grandſon, Fran- cis

cis Lord Dacres, was in Poſſeſſion of it in Philpot's Time, and Baron of Horſmonceaux.

There are two other ſmall Manors in this Pariſh called Brampton and Shellies-Court.

2. Brampton had once Owners of that Name in King Edward the Iſt's Reign; but by a Female Heir, the Inheritance went to the Petleys; and one of that Name, about the End of King Henry the VIth, conveyed it to Oliver alias Quintin; where it ſtaid till Philpot's Time, being then in the Poſſeſſion of Mr. Richard Oliver of the Grange in Leybourn Pariſh, and in this Name had been near 200 Years.

3. Shellies-Court, alias Ockholt, in the Reign of King Edward the IIId, was in the Poſſeſſion of Shelly; and remained in that Name till Queen Mary's Time, and then was ſold by William Shelly, to Sir John Champneys, Lord Mayor of London, whoſe Son, Sir Juſtinian Champneys, left it to his Son Richard; but he ſold it to Mr. Gooday of Suffolk; who was the Owner of it in Philpot's Time.

NONINGTON lies about the middle of the Eaſt part of Kent, about Five Miles Southward from Sandwich, in the Bailiwick of Eaſtry, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath: In the Deanery of Bridge, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. Part of it is in the Hundred of Eaſtry, and part in that of Wingham.

The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and of St. Auſtin, claims here; and that of the Dean of Canterbury over that part of it which is within the Manor of Eaſtry.

The Church ſtands in the Hundred of Wingham, and is called St. Mary's, and was anciently a Chapel of Eaſe to Wingham, and therefore not valued in the King's Books. But in A. D. 1282, when Wingham was divided into Four Pariſhes, this was made one.

'Tis now a fair large Church, and in good order. In it are Memorials of Boys, Bode, Simpſon, and Hammond.

Places of Note here:

1. Fredville, in old Writings called Froidville, from its bleak and high Situation. It was anciently belonging to the Family of Colkin, or, as commonly called, Cokin; who probably built the Seat here: The Colkins came originally from Canterbury, where they had a Lane called Colkin's Lane; and were alſo Proprietors of Worth-gate in that City. William Colkin, who lived in King John's Reign, founded an Hoſpital near Eaſtbridge there, which bore his Name; and he was alſo a great Benefactor to thoſe Hoſpitals of St. Nicholas, St. Katherine, and St. Thomas of Eaſtbridge. John Colkin died Poſſeſſed of Fredville in the 10th Year of King Edward the IIId, and his Family held it till about the End of King Richard the IId, and then it was ſold to Thomas Charleton; and from him it went the ſame way to John Quadring; but by a Daughter of that Name it went in Marriage to Richard Dryland; who about the End of King Edward the IVth's Reign, alienated it to John Netherſole; and he, by a Fine levied in the 2d Year of King Richard the IIId, ſold it to William Bois, Eſq; in which Family it continued in Philpot's Time.

Theſe Bois deſcended from John de Boſco or de Bois, who came into England with King William the Iſt; and his Deſcendant Thomas Bois, in King Henry the VIIth's Reign, left two Sons, Thomas who had this Eſtate of Fredville; and William, who had Bonnington: The Bois of Hode are a Branch of the Fredville Family; and alſo thoſe of Betſhanger; and from theſe came the Bois of Sandwich: But the Bois of Willsborow, Offington, and Hawkherſt, are all derived from the Bonnington Family.

2. St. Albans is a place here, ſo called from its being once part of the Revenue of the Abbey of St. Albans; tho' anciently it was called Eſole, and was the Eſtate of one Edmund de Akebolt, or Oakwood, whoſe Arms were in this Church, viz. quarterly Arg. Az. over all a Bend Componee. But on the Diſſolution it was granted to Sir Chriſtopher Hales, whoſe Son Sir James, about the Beginning of King Edward the VIth's Reign, ſold it to John Sticker; and he, in the 5th Year of that Prince, alienated it to Sir Thomas Colepeper of Bedgebury; who not long after ſent it the ſame way to Sir Thomas Moile; as he did to Thomas Hammond, Anceſtor to Anthony Hammond, Eſq; the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time, whoſe Grandſon William is the preſent Poſſeſſor.

At the Burgh of Woolwich in this Pariſh, is a Place called Oxenden, from whence the Ancient Family of that Name in this County take their Riſe Originally.

At a Place called Beacham, near this St. Albans, the Tradition goes, that there was a Nunnery, which perhaps the Name of the Pariſh, and the Land belonging to the Abbey of St. Albans, may have occaſioned.

3. Ratling or Retling-Court is another Eminent Place in Nonington, which anciently belonged to a Family of this Name. The laſt of which was Sayer de Ratling, Son of Sir Robert, who died poſſeſs'd of it in the 10th Year of King Richard the IId; whoſe only Daughter and Heir Joan, carried it in Marriage to John Spicer; from whom the Spicers, Owners of the Manor of Shorford in Monks-Horton in this County, are derived: But it ſtaid not long in this Name, before by Cicely, a Daughter, it went in Marriage to John Iſaack of Blackmanbury in Bridge; and his Grandſon Edward Iſaack, in King Henry the VIIth's Reign, ſold it to Sir John Phineux, whoſe Succeſſor alienated it to Nevinſon; and from thence it went the ſame way to Sir William Cowper, Great Grandfather of the Right Honourable William Lord Cowper, Baron of Wingham, now the ſecond time Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain; in whom the Poſſeſſion of Ratling-Court ſtill continues.

This Sir William Cowper above-mentioned, was the Gentleman that erected the Monument for the Learned and Judicious Mr. Hooker, Author of the Eccleſiaſtical Polity; in Biſhopsbourn Church, which I have taken notice of there. This Family of the Cowpers were firſt Baronets of Scotland, and then of England.

5. Old-Court, was anciently part of the Eſtate of the Family of Goodneſton, vulgarly called Gunſton, and who took their Name from the Pariſh of Goodneſton hard by; they lived in the Reigns of King Henry the IIId, and King Edward the Iſt, and were Poſſeſſors of this Place till King Edward the IVth's Time; but then by Edith, Daughter of Edward Goodneſton, it went in Marriage to Vincent Engham, deſcended from the Enghams or Edinghams of Woodchurch; and hence by Sale it went to John Sidley, Eſq; Auditor to King Henry the VIIth; and from this Family it paſſed the ſame way to that of Wild of Canterbury: But Sir John Wild, in King James's Reign, alienated it to Marſh, who was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

NORBOURN, Northbourne, lies near the Eaſt End of Kent, about two Miles and a half Southward from Sandwich, in the Bailiwick of Eaſtry, Hundred of Cornilo, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. In the Deanery of Sandwich, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; the Church is Dedicated to St. Auſtin. In the South Croſs Iſle of which, is a noble noble Monument of Sir Richard Sandys, Baronet, of Norbourn-Court here.

The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims here; and that of St. Auſtin over the Manor of Norbourn; which was given to the Abbey of that Name by Eadbald King of Kent, about 1050 Years ago, on his return to the Chriſtian Faith, from which he had Apoſtatized. 'Tis a Vicarage, and with the Chapel of Shelden is valued in the King's Books at 12 l. 11 s. 8 d.

Places of Note here:

1. Norborn-Court, or the Manor of Northbourn; this ſtaid in St. Auſtin's till the general Suppreſſion; and after ſome time, being in the Crown, it was by Queen Elizabeth granted for Life to her Foſter Brother, Mr. Saunders, whoſe Mother had been her Nurſe; after his Death returning to the Crown again, it was by King James the Iſt granted to Sir Edwin Sandys, whoſe Grandſon was in Poſſeſſion of it in Philpot's Time. But the Manor, A. D. 1630, was ſold to Mr. Edward Bois, Father to John Bois, Eſq; of Betſhanger. The Houſe is ſtill called Norborn-Court, and is a large old Building.

When Leland made his Survey of Kent in King Henry the VIIIth's Time, there was the Ruins of an old Stone-Houſe here; which by Tradition is made to have been the Palace of King Eadbald; and on breaking down a Wall, a dark Cell or Room was diſcovered; where were found the Skeleton or Bones of two Children, and in the Skull of one a ſtiff Pin was found ſticking.

2. Tikenhurſt in this Pariſh, (now called Tickneſs) was anciently the Eſtate of a Family of that Name; and which continued here till about King Henry the VIth's Reign; and then came into the Poſſeſſion of the Stoddard's, from whom the Stoddards of Modingham near Eltham were deriv'd: In this Name it continued for many Generations; but at laſt was ſold to the Peytons of Knowlton, and in Philpot's Time was in Poſſeſſion of Sir Thomas Peyton, Baronet.

A. D. 1588. a Camp was formed here; and Forces lay encamped in it to oppoſe the Landing of the Spaniards, Commanded by one Captain Peake.

In the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, the Abbot of St. Auſtin claimed and was allowed all the uſual Privileges of a Manor, for the above-mention'd one of Northbourn; and the ſame Year one Ada, the Relict of Walter de Stourenne, applied to the Juſtices Itinerant for the Recovery of ſeveral Pieces of Land here, againſt Peter Burne, John Bowes, and Valentine Bere; they pretended ſhe had run away from her Husband, and had liv'd in Adultery, and ſo had no Right to Dower; but the Jury found that her Husband had uſed her ill, and dipp'd her Eſtate ſo that ſhe was forced to go home to her Parents for Subſiſtence; and ſo gave a Verdict for her; and ſhe got her Land.

NORTON, Northtune, lies towards the North Side of Kent, about three Miles Southward from Feverſham, in the Bailiwick and Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and upper one of Juſtices in that Lath. The Liberty of St. Auſtin's claims over this Place, becauſe it is in the Hundred of Feverſham, which formerly belonged to that Abbey. 'Tis in the Deanery of Oſpringe, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; and the Church is dedicated to St. Mary. The Pariſh is a Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 10 l. 18 s. 4 d.

Archbiſhop Laud was once Rector of this Place. In the Chancel of the Church is a very fair Monument of Benjamin Godfrey, Eſq; Father of the preſent Mr. Godfrey of Norton-Court.

In the 29th Year of King Henry the IId, There was a Finalis Concordantia made between the Prior and Monks of Rocheſter, and Juliana Daughter of Fulk de Newenham, together with Roger her Son, whereby the Advowſon of this Church, the Gift of her Father, was confirmed to that Convent; which ſaid Fulk, together with his Father and Mother, were admitted into the Society of Rocheſter Cathedral; as the Induſtrious Mr. Madox hath obſerved in his accurate Hiſtory of the Exchequer, p. 86. And in our ancient Textus Roffenſis, f. 190. b. in Confirmation of this Account, I find this Entry:

Hugo de Niwenham pro ſocietate quam accepit cum uxore & filio Fulcone; & pro anima Patris & Matris, & Fratrum dedit Monachis Sancti Andreæ Eccleſiam de Northtuna cum omni Terrâ, quæ ad illam pertinebat, & dimidiam decimam de omni Re, quæ ad Villam pertinebat, unde habent Monachi per Ann. unam marcam Argenti.

And Mr. Godfrey ſhewed me what follows.

Ipſe Archiepiſcopus tenet Nortone in Dominico: pro xviij ſolinis ſe defendebat. Terra eſt xxvj. Carrucat. in Dominio ſunt xj. & dimid. Ibi Eccleſia & x. Acr. Prati, Sylva, l. Porci. T. E. Places of Note here:

1. Norton-Court. This Manor was anciently the Eſtate of a Family who wrote themſelves de Campania, and whoſe principal Seat was at Champions-Court in Newenham. In this Neighbourhood John de Campania had a Charter of Freewarren for this Manor in the 31ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt. When it went out of this Name, it came next into that of Boteler, and was in King Henry the IVth's Reign in the Poſſeſſion of John Boteler of Graveney; but by his only Daughter it went in Marriage to John Martin, Eſq; afterwards one of the Lords Juſtices of the Common Pleas: And in this Family it continued till King Henry the VIIth's Reign, and then was ſold to Finch, a Deſcendant of the Finches of Groveherſt in Milton; and from this Name it went by another Daughter and Heir to Sondes of Sondes Place in Darking Pariſh in Surrey; but hence about the latter End of Queen Elizabeth it went by Sale to Thomas Mills, Eſq; who at his Deceaſe, which was in the Beginning of King Charles the Iſt's Reign deviſed it to Mr. Mills of Suſſex, his Couſin, who was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time. But this Mills ſold it to Mr. Baptiſt Pigot; and by his only Daughter and Heir it went in Marriage to Benjamin Godfrey, Eſq; above-mentioned; and is now in the Poſſeſſion of her, and her only Son the worthy John Godfrey, Eſq;, who reſide here, and have much added to and improved the Seat.

2. Provenders. This is an ancient Seat here, which had formerly Owners of the Name of Provender; and John de Provender was Poſſeſſor of it in the Reign of King Henry the IIId. Next to this Name it came into that of Quadring, and then into the Family of the Goldwells of Goldwell; after a good Stay in this Name it went by Sale into that of Dryland: One of which eminent Family ſold it to Robert Atwater, Eſq; and he parted with it the ſame Way to Sir James Hales Son of Sir John: Hence in Queen Elizabeth's Reign it was alienated to Sayer; and thence to Mr.

Mr. Hugeſſen of Dover; and one of his Deſcendants is now in Poſſeſſion of it, and reſides here.

NORTHFLEET, Nordflita, lies at the North Side of Kent, near the Thames, about a Mile Weſtward from Graveſend, in the Bailiwick of Hoo, Hundred of Toltingtrow, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and North one of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery of Shoreham, and ſo a Peculiar to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, but in the Dioceſe of Rocheſter: The Church is dedicated to St. Botolph. In it are and were ſeveral ancient Memorials; as of the Interment of Richard Davey, Maſter of the Jewel Office to King Henry the VIth, in the Year 1491; of Alice Wife of Wangdeford in 1421; of William Rikhill, Eſq; eldeſt Son of Sir William Rikhill in 1457; of Peter Lucy Rector, in 1375; William Lye Rector, in 1391; Thomas Bredon in 1311; William Hunt, Servant to Archbiſhop Warham in 1518; of William Heſilt, one of the Barons of the Exchequer, in 1425. Tho' formerly a Rectory, this Pariſh is now a Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 21 l. 0 s. 0 d. per Ann.

In Doomſday Book this Place ſtands thus Regiſter'd:

Nordflita eſt manerium Archiepiſcopi & in T. E. R. ſe defendebat pro vj. Sull. & nunc pro v. & eſt appretiatum 27 l. Sed tamen ille qui tenet reddit inde de Firma 36 l. Et infra Leugam de Tonebrigg eſt, inde tantum quod eſt appretiatum, 30 s.

How the Lowy of Tunbridge came to extend its Liberties ſo far as this and to ſome other Places hereabouts, ſhall be conſidered when I come to ſpeak of Tunbridge.

A. D. 1411. Part of the Tithes of Northfleete were given to maintain two Chaplains in Arundell Chantry in Canterbury Cathedral; and they had a Houſe appointed for them on the South Side of the Church.

This Church, as appears by an ancient Charter now in our Archives, was given to Rocheſter Cathedral, by Archbiſhop Anſelm. And Archbiſhop Ralph gave an Acre of Land here called Guddesfeld, to the Convent of St. Andrew's to build a Houſe for their Uſe, and for the Uſe of their Chaplain; as appears by the ſame Deed which bears date 1260, as a kind of Exemplification of ſeveral Grants to the Church of Rocheſter.

The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims here; and that of the Biſhop of Rocheſter in the Church-yard.

In the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, one Galfrid Palmer plowing in his Field here, met with a Copper Veſſel, in which it was ſuppoſed a good deal of Treaſure was contained; but though the Archbiſhop's Officers ſued the Man, they could not make any Proof of it; and the Copper Pot was valued at only Three Pence. Placit. Coron. coram Juſt. Itinerant' &c.

This Pariſh ought anciently to have contributed towards the Repair of the Ninth Arch or Pere of Rocheſter Bridge.

Places of Note here:

1. Derndale is a Place in Northfleet, which anciently belonged to a Family called Derendale; and who reſided here. But about the End of King Edward the IIId it was become the Inheritance of William Wangford; whoſe Son of the ſame Name was a Serjeant at Law, and a great Benefactor to Rocheſter-Bridge: This Gentleman in the 15th Year of King Henry the VIth, ſold it to John and William Flucke; who ſoon after parted with it the ſame Way to John Rouſe, who deſcended from the Rouſes of Birling: And he alienated it to Thomas Wornbuck and John Cliſton, Eſq; the latter of whom dying without Iſſue, A. D. 1471. bequeathed his Intereſt to his Co-purchaſer Thomas Wombwell: And this Gentleman having now got the whole, built a Seat here, and called it Wombwell-Hall: And this and Derndale continued in his Family (which came originally from a Place called Wombwell in Yorkſhire) till about 60 Years ago it was ſold to Edward Ady, Eſq; Counſellor at Law, and Heir to Mr. Ady of Dodington, and to Mrs. Leah Fortrye; and ſhe ſoon after ſettled her Moiety on her Son and Heir Mr. James Fortrye of Spittle Comb in Greenwich, ſaith Philpot: And about 1648 it came by Sale to the Grandmother of James Fortrye, Eſq;; and his Father 1663. built that neat and well ſituated Houſe which is now there, and in which the ſaid James Fortrye, Eſq; now reſides. Womb-well-Hall.

Note, In ſome of our Maps, this Seat is called Wimble.

2. Shinglewell is another Place here, which is famous for being the Original Birth-Place of the Family of Hever, whoſe Principal Seat was at Hever-Caſtle; and the Place where they lived in this Manor, Philpot ſaith was called Hever. William de Hever, was a Man of Eminence in King Richard the Iſt's Reign, and accompanied that Prince to the Siege of Acon in Paleſtine. In the 7th Year of King John, William and Hugh de Hever were Recognitores Magnæ Aſſiſæ for this County, which was then an Office of great Truſt, for they had Power to judge of all Kinds of Cauſes Civil or Criminal; and Philpot thinks our Grand Juries took their Inſtitution from them. Richard de Hever attended King Edward the Iſt in his 19th Year to New-Caſtle, where that great King ſummoned the ſeveral Pretenders to the Kingdom of Scotland to come before him, and to make out their Claims. Thomas de Hever had the Grant of a Market for Shinglewell, and two Fairs one of Five Days at Michaelmas, and another of Three, at the Feaſt of St. Laurence, Vid. Chart. 2. Ed. 3. N. 9. At length by Joan Daughter and Co-heir of William de Hever, this Eſtate went in Marriage to Reginald de Cobham: But about the Beginning of King Henry the VIth it went by Sale from this Family into that of Rykeld; ſome of whom lie buried in the Church: But it ſtaid here but a little while, before by Roſe, only Daughter and Heir of John Rykeld, it went in Marriage to Edmund Limſey; in which Name it ſtaid till King Henry the VIIIth's Reign, and then was ſold to Rainsford; and from thence it paſſed the ſame Way to Garth; who ſold it alſo to —— Child, and he alienated it to Mr. —— Fortrye of Spittle Comb in Greenwich.

4. Ifeild, 5. Well, and 6. Coſington, are Three other Manors in this Pariſh, which formerly were Parts of the Eſtate of the Hevers of Hever in this Place. William de Hever had a Charter of Freewarren for his Lands at this Place, in the 9th Year of King Edward the Iſt, which was renewed afterwards to Thomas Hever in the 4th Year of King Edward the IIId. But by Joan above-mentioned Daughter of William de Hever one of his Deſcendants, theſe Manors went in Marriage to Reginald de Cobham, who was ſummoned to Parliament by a Writ as Baron of Sterborough, in the 22d Year of King Edward the IIId. And hence alſo it went with Shinglewell into the Poſſeſſion of John Rykeld by Sale; and by his Grand-Daughter Roſe Rykeld in Marriage to Limſey. But in the 1ſt Year of King Richard the IIId, theſe Three Manors were ſold by John Limſey to John Young; and thence about the Middle of King Henry the VIIIth, they went the ſame Way to Limſey again: But before the End

End of that Reign they were ſold to Rainsford; and thence in the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth to Alderman Garret of London; and thence about the Beginning of King Charles the Iſt, they were alienated to Child.

A little Weſt of Northfleet is a good Stone Bridge over a Fleet of Water running into the Thames, called Stone-Bridge; and 'tis the common Report and Belief that formerly the Danes went with their Ships up this Water as far as to a Place called Springhead near Southfleet; which by a careful View of the Site of the Place, and by the Accounts I have met with in Hiſtories, I don't think at all improbable: For I find that Veſſels, about 400 Years ago, came as frequently to Northfleet, as now they do Graveſend or Greenhithe.

NUTSTEDE vulgo Nuſted. In the Textus Roffenſis Hnutſtede (thus Hlyd inſtead of Lyd,) lies towards the North Side of Kent, about Three Miles Southward from Graveſend, in the Bailiwick of Hoo, Hundred of Toltingtrow, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and North one of Juſtices in that Lath.

'Tis in the Deanery and Dioceſe of Rocheſter; and the Church is dedicated to St. Mildred; an Account of which She-Saint you will find in the Monaſtery of Minſter in Thanet. A Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 4 l. 15 s. 0 d. 'Tis a poor little Church, but the Tower is of Stone, and handſome: In it are Monuments of John Ady, Eſq; of Dodington; and another of Suſannah Daughter of —— Ady, and Wife of Ruiſhey Wentworth, Eſq;. The Way from Northfleet hither is very narrow and ſtoney; but juſt about this Place of Nutſtede, it begins to open very pleaſantly.

Places of Note here:

1. Nutſtede Manor. This anciently belonged to a Family of the Name of Graveſend: Sir Stephen de Graveſend was one of thoſe Kentiſh Gentlemen that attended King Edward the Iſt, in his 28th Year into Scotland; and was knighted by him at the famous Siege of Carlaverock. Richard de Graveſend was conſecrated Biſhop of London in 1280, and had before been Archdeacon of Northampton; This Prelate obtained a Charter of Freewarren for his Lands here. In the 49th Year of King Edward the IIId, Thomas de Graveſend died poſſeſſed of ſome Eſtate here: but probably part of the Manor was ſold a good while before; for Sir John de Beaumont paid Aid for ſome Lands here at making the Black Prince Knight. About the End of King Henry the IVth this Manor was got ſome how into the Poſſeſſion of Middleton; from which Name, in King Henry the VIth's Time, it went into that of Frowick; and Thomas Frowick, Eſq; ſold it to Hugh Brent, where it ſtaid till the Beginning of King Henry the VIIth, and then was ſold to Martin: But William, Great Grandſon of John Martin the Judge, dying without Iſſue-Male, by Margaret his only Daughter and Heir it went in Marriage to Mr. John Rogers; but hence in King James the Iſt's Time it was ſold to Sidley: And Sir John Sidley of St. Cleres Knight and Baronet, ſold it to John Adye of Dodington, Eſq; who lies buried in the Church; and in whoſe Poſſeſſion it was in Philpot's Time.

OFHAM, Offeham, lies about the middle of Kent, one Mile and a half Weſtward from Weſt-Malling, in the Bailiwick of Hoo, Hundred of Larkfield, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and South one of Juſtices in that Lath. In the Deanery of Malling, and Dioceſe of Rocheſter. The Church is Dedicated to St. Michael, and hath nothing remarkable in it; a little Tower Steeple.

This Pariſh ought anciently to have contributed towards the Repair of the 5th Arch or Peer of Rocheſter Bridge.

'Tis a Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 6 l. per Ann.

Places of Note here:

1. Offham. 2. Goldwell. 3. Pepingſtraw. This Place was anciently parted between the Families of Corton and Ditton; as appears by the Book of Aid in the 20th Year of King Edward the IIId, and each Moiety was valued at half a Knight's Fee. But Richard de Corton ſold Goldwell, which was part of the Manor of Offham, to Thomas de Godchepe, who died poſſeſs'd of it in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the IIId. After this, about the beginning of King Henry the IVth, John Melford was in the Poſſeſſion not only of Goldwell, but alſo of Snodbean and Pepingſtraw, which he purchaſed of the Heirs of Ditton. In King Henry the VIth's Reign this Eſtate was ſhared again between Browne and Colepeper: About the End of King Henry the VIIth's Reign, Colepeper ſells his part to John Leigh, who, with Sir Matthew Brown, a Deſcendant of Brown above mentioned, exchanged the whole Manor with King Henry the VIIIth; and he granted it to William Wilford, John Bennet, and George Briggs; and they, in the 37th Year of that King, parted with one half of Offham, viz. Snodbean and Pepingſtraw, to John Tuſton, Eſq; Anceſtor to the Earls of Thanet; and the other, in which Goldwell was included, to Richard Nortop, alias Clerk, a Name taken from his Office, as being Clerk of the Foreſt of Sherwood in Nottinghamſhire: But in time it ſo prevail'd, that they wrote themſelves Clerk alias Nortop, and at laſt Clerk alone; one of which Name, in King Charles the Iſt's Time leaving only Seven Daughters, Mr. Thomas Dowell married one of them, and purchaſed the Parts of the other Six; and in his Family it continued in Philpot's Time. Snodbean.

But I find by ſome ancient Manuſcripts now in my Cuſtody, that long before any Partition of this Manor, it was all in the Poſſeſſion of William de Offeham, before the Reign of King Edward the Iſt; for in his Time Matilda de Offeham claimed againſt Corton a third Part of this Manor, as Siſter to the ſaid William de Offeham; and the other Parts went to Corton by Demiſe from Stephen de Pencheſter, who had married Chriſtina, another Siſter of William de Offeham.

'Tis ſaid Jack Straw, the famous Ring-Leader of the Kentiſh Rebels in King Richard the IId's Time, was born at Pepingſtraw in this Pariſh, and was called Jack Straw from thence.

Goldwell above-mentioned is an old Manor and Seat in this Pariſh, which is now in the Poſſeſſion of the worthy Henry Streatfeild of Chidingſtone, Eſq; being purchaſed by his Father of the ſame Name, of one Mr. Thomas Dowle.

ORDMERES Circe de Hou, is a Church mentioned in that Liſt of the Pariſh Churches and Chapels within the Dioceſe of Rocheſter, which is Recorded in the Textus Roffenſis. But whereabouts it ſtood I can't find; but by its Name I gueſs it was placed near ſome Point or Neſſe running out into the Sea or River in the Hundred of Hou. Ord-mere ſignifying ſuch a Situation in the Saxon Language.

ORE, Heure, lies towards the North ſide of Kent, about a Mile and a half Northward from Feverſham, in the Bailiwick and Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and upper one of Juſtices Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Hundred of Feverſham, and ſo within the Liberty of St. Auſtin. In the Deanery of Oſpringe, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Church is called St. Peter's; in which I found nothing remarkable. 'Tis accounted as a Chapel or Curacy only, and ſo not valued in the King's Books.

Places of Note here.

1. Ore Manor; this place, in the 38th Year of King Henry the IIId, was the Inheritance of Reginald de Cornhill; and in King Edward the Iſt's Time, of the Savages of Bobbing-Court, when it was a Manor, and John de Savage had a Charter of Free-warren for it; from this Family one half of it paſſed by Sale to that of Northwood of Northwood in Milton; and the other Moiety to the Alephs of Colſhall in Iwade; Northwood ſold his Part to Tomlin, in which Name it continued in Philpot's Time; and the other Part, by Margaret, Daughter and Heir of Thomas Aleph went to John Monins, Eſq; who ſold it to Short of Tenterden, in whoſe Poſſeſſion it was in Philpot's Time.

ORGARSWICK, lies towards the South Eaſt part of Kent, about three Miles and a half North Eaſtward from New Romney, in the Bailiwick and Lath of Shipway, Hundred of Worth, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in the Corporation of Romney-Marſh; the Liberty whrreof claims over it. But the Liberty of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury claimeth here alſo; as being part of the Revenue of that College, ſettled by King Henry the VIIIth in his 33d Year. 'Tis in the Deanery of Limpne and Dioceſe of Canterbury: A Rectory, and rated in the King's Books at 3 l. per Ann. but the Church is long ſince Demoliſhed, viz. An. 1530.

In the 7th Year of King Edward the Iſt, the Prior of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury claimed Free-warren for his Manor of Orgarſwick: (of which Philpot ſaith nothing.) The Jury gave in, that he had not made any uſe of it, but that by virtue of his Charters, he had a Right to that Privilege.

ORLESTONE, Orlanſton, Orlaweſton, lies towards the South Eaſt part of Kent, about Four Miles and a half to the Southward from Aſhford; in the Bailiwick and Lath of Shipway, Hundred of Ham, and Eaſt Diviſion of the County. Part of it is in the Diviſion of the Juſtices of the Corporation of Romney-Marſh, whoſe Liberty claims over it; and the reſt is in the Diviſion of Juſtices of the Lath of Shipway.

'Tis in the Deanery of Limpne, and Dioceſe of Canterbury: A Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 4*l.* 15*s.* 9*d.* The Church is called St. Maries, and ſtands out of the Liberty of the Marſh.

Places of Note here:

1. Orlanſtone Manor, was anciently the Inheritance of a Family of the Name of Orlanſton. William de Orlanſton attended King Richard the Iſt to the Siege of Acon, in Paleſtine; and his Son of the ſame Name had a Charter of Free-warren for his Eſtate here, in the 51ſt Year of King Henry the IIId; as alſo the Grant of a Weekly Market, and of a Three Days Fair at the Feaſt of Holy Rood, vid. Patent 51 H. 3. Membr. 10. And the Grant of this Market was claimed by John de Orlanſton before the Juſtices Itinerant, in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, and renewed to John Kemp, firſt Archbiſhop of York, and then of Canterbury, in the 25th Year of King Henry the VIth. William de Orlanſton, Grandſon to him laſt above-mentioned, was Sheriff of Kent in the 2d and 3d Years of King Edward the IIId, and dying in his 38th Year, left behind him Sir John Orlanſton, who was divers times Member of Parliament for Romney in this King's Reign, and that of King Richard the IId: He married the Daughter and Heir of Sir William at Capell; and by her had Richard Orlanſton, Eſq; who died poſſeſs'd of this Manor in the 7th Year of King Henry the Vth. But he leaving only Two Siſters, they divided his Inheritance. Margaret married William Parker of Parkers in Wereborne, and Joan carried Orlanſton to her Husband William Scott of Scotts-Hall; and in Philpot's Time it was in the Poſſeſſion of his Deſcendant Edward Scott of Scott's-Hall, Eſq.

The Burgh of Orlanſton, in King Edward the Iſt's Reign, was claimed by the Prior of St. John's of Jeruſalem as their Demeſne: But how it came to that Fraternity I can't find, any more than how it came to the Orlanſtons again. I find alſo that that King brought a Claim to this Manor againſt John de Orlanſton, before the Juſtices Itinerant; but the Juſtices gave it againſt him.

2. Weſtbury, this Place probably, ſaith Philpot, before, but undoubtedly as high as the Time of King Henry the IVth's Reign, was the Inheritance of a Family of the Name of Priſott; of this Family was Sir John Priſott the Judge; and in this Name did this Manor continue till the 8th Year of King Henry the VIIIth's Reign, and then Thomas Priſott ſold it to George Hount; from whence it went the ſame way to Reginald Strogle, a Juſtice of the Peace in King Edward the VIth's Reign; and who was, ſaith Philpot, deſcended from a Family of ancient Date in Romney Marſh, where there are yet ſome Lands which bear his Name. From the Strogles it went by Purchaſe to Mr. Bennet Guildford, a Branch of the Guildfords of Hempſted: But he, with his Relations, refuſing the Supremacy Oath in Queen Elizabeth's Reign, and flying beyond the Seas to avoid the Penalty of it, that Princeſs granted this Eſtate of Weſtbury to Walter Moile of Buckwell; and from that Name it went by Sale to Mr. Francis Bourn, Grandfather to that Mr. Bourn who was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

ORPINGTON, Orpintone, both Corruptions from Dorpendum; which ſignifies the Head of the Spring or Water which runs from the Hill or Down; or where the Water is pent up in the Hill: And indeed at Newell in this Pariſh is the Head of the River Cray.

It lies towards the Weſt End of Kent, about a Mile Southward from St. Mary Cray, in the Bailiwick of Sutton Bromley, Hundred of Rokeſley, Lath of Sutton-at-Hone, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and upper one of Juſtices in that Lath.

'Tis in the Deanery of Shoreham, and therefore a Peculiar to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, but in the Dioceſe of Rocheſter. The Rectory of Orpington, with the Chapel of St. Mary Cray annexed, is valued in the King's Books at 30 l. 14 s. 4 d. In the Church are Memorials of Richard, 4th Son of the Honourable Richard Spencer, Son of Robert Lord Spencer, Baron of Wormleiton; of Venables, that married into the Spencer's Family; and of one Galby, 1439. The North Chancel belongs to Percival Hart of Lullingſtone, Eſq;.

Nockholt and Downe are, in ſome meaſure, Chapels of Eaſe to Orpinton, as well as St. Mary Cray: The Rector of Orpington preſenting to them all three.

The Liberty of the Dutchy of Lancaſter claims here; as alſo doth that of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury over the Manor of Orpington; which was given to the Church of Canterbury by Eadſin, Archdeacon of that Place in the Reign of King Cnute, A. D. 1032.

Places of Note here:

1. Orpington Manor, was, as is before hinted, anciently part of the Revenue of the Priory of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury; and thus ſtands in the Regiſter of Domeſday.

Et in hoc eodem Manerio tenet Malgerus ab Archiepiſcopo iij. Juga Terræ quæ quidam Liber tenuit in T. E. R. & hæc tria Juga non Scottabant cum hoc Manerio & ſunt de explacitatione quam fecit Archiepiſcopus (ſc. Lanfrancus) contra Epiſcopum Baiocenſem per conceſſum Regis. Et illa tria Juga ſunt appretiatum 50 ſolid. & ex iis eiſdem Sull. habet Dirmanus dimid. Sull. ad Keſtune.

From this Entry in Domeſday, Philpot takes occaſion to ſhew how willing the Conqueror was to oblige the Clergy, by not taxing their Eſtates ſo high as they were before in the Time of King Edward the Confeſſor, in order to engage them more firmly in his Intereſt.

In the 7th Year of King John, the Monks of Chriſt-Church obtained a Charter for a Wedneſdays Market here, which Privilege it enjoyed till the General Diſſolution; but in the 29th Year of K. Henry 8th, being ſurrender'd to the Crown, it ſtaid there till his 32d Year, and then was granted to Percival Hart of Lullingſton, Eſq; who founded and endowed the Alms-houſes in this Place; and in his Deſcendant Percival Hart, Eſq; is the Poſſeſſion remaining at this Time.

2. Croſton is a Place in Orpington, which once was a Pariſh by it ſelf, but was deſtroyed by Fire; and afterwards was reckoned in to Orpington. The Manor of Croſton was anciently part of the Eſtate of Wibourn: Ralph de Wibourn having Land here and in other Places of Kent, in the Time of King Edward the Iſt; and John de Wibourn paid Aid for it at making the Black Prince Knight. About the End of King Edward the IIId, it went from this Name by Sale to Sir Robert Belknap, who forfeited it to the Crown in the 10th Year of King Richard the IId: But it was afterwards reſtored by that Prince, to Hamon Belknap Lord of Oſton, in Warwickſhire; from hence it continued in this Family till about the End of King Henry the VIth; and then Sir Henry Belknap left only Three Daughters; Alice, the Eldeſt of which, marrying Sir William Shelly, carried this Eſtate with her: But her Husband ſold it to Sir Robert Read, Lord Chief Juſtice of the King's Bench; and he, in the Reign of King Henry the VIIth, ſettled it by Grant on the Hoſpital of the Savoy in London. Of the other Siſters, Anne Married Sir Robert Wotton; and Elizabeth firſt was the Wife of Sir Philip Cook of Eſſex, and after of Leonard Dannet of Worceſterſhire.

3. Barkbart, is a Houſe in this Pariſh that was built by Percival Hart, Eſq; probably in King Henry the VIIIth's Time: But it received this Name from an Entertainment which Queen Elizabeth had herein; which, among other Things very Magnificent, was a kind of Mask; wherein firſt a Nymph, repreſenting the Genius of the Place, made a Speech to her, and then the Scene opened, and repreſented a Ship or Bark toſſed on the Sea; which ſo pleaſed that Princeſs, that ſhe called it Bark-Hart.

4. Tubbenden is a place which is partly in this and partly in Farnborow Pariſh; and is vulgarly miſtaken for the Place of Thomas Becket's Birth; but he was born in London, as Philpot ſhews from an Authentick Record.

This Place anciently belonged to a Family of the ſame Name; and it appears by old Deeds, that John de Tubbenden flouriſhed here in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt. From this Family it went to that of Belknap; and together with Croſton above-mentioned, it went by Alice his Daughter and Coheir, to Sir William Shelley of Michelgrove in Suſſex: From this Name, in King Henry the VIIIth's Time, it went to Poſter, and he ſold it to Dalton of Yorkſhire; whoſe Daughter Anne carried it in Marriage to Aunſel Becket, whoſe Son Sir Matthew Becket, bequeathed it at his Death to Mr. John Winterborn of London; and he ſold it to Mr. Gee of Yorkſhire; and in his Deſcendant Richard Gee, Eſq; the Poſſeſſion ſtill continues.

William de Chelsfield had once ſome conſiderable Eſtate in this Pariſh; for in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the firſt, I find that he claimed the Privilege of Freewarren for his Manor of Little Orpington. Placit. Coron. coram Juſt. Itiner.

OSPRINGE; perhaps ſo called from the ſmall Spring or Brook which ouzes out of the Vicarage Glebe, and runs from South to North through the Pariſh: 'Though on the Communion Chalice the Name of this Pariſh is written Auſtralis Fons; quaſi Auſtſpring.

It lies towards the North Side of Kent about Two Miles South Weſt from Feverſham, in the Bailiwick and Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and upper one of Juſtices in that Lath.

The Town hath a Conſtable and Borſholder of its own, being a Liberty or Franchiſe of it ſelf.

But the Liberty of St. Auſtin claims over the reſt of the Pariſh; as being in the Hundred of Feverſham, which belonged to that Abbey.

'Tis all in the Deanery of Oſpringe and Dioceſe of Canterbury: The Church ſtands in the Town of Oſpringe, and is dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul. The Pariſh is a Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 10 l. 00 s. 00 d. The Parſonage was given to St. John's College in Cambridge by King Henry the VIIIth, in Exchange for other Lands; and the Leaſe came firſt to Robert Streynſham, who built the Parſonage Houſe and Out-Houſes; and whoſe Female Heir conveyed it to Sir Edward Maſter, Son of James Maſter, Eſq; of Eaſt Langdon by Dover: And from this Name it went to Buller of Cornwall, whoſe Son ſold it to Markham, and he to Sir Henry Lydale's Brother, where it now remains.

The Church ſeems an old Gothick Structure; and the round Tower of Flint on which the Steeple ſtood, Dr. Plot fancied to have been a Daniſh Building; but down it fell to the Ground on October the 11th, 1695. as they were ringing the Bells, and yet by a ſtrange Providence no one was killed or hurt.

In the great Chancel there are Monuments and Remains of R. Streynſham and James Maſter above-mentioned.

There is a good deal of painted Glaſs ſtill remaining; ſome Heads very well done: In the Windows of the South Chancel is the Picture of a Man kneeling and armed Cap-a-pee; which is ſuppoſed to be for Sir Thomas Hart, Knight; and indeed the Harts of Greenſtreet in Sellinge do claim this Chancel.

There are alſo Memorials of Mr. William Drayton, who gave 5 l. per Ann. to ſuch Poor of this Pariſh as are conſtant Communicants: He died 1685. In the North Iſle of the Church, in a Window, is the Figure of a Mitred Biſhop on the Rack, and a Knife on a Table; and in the ſame Window, of another Perſon tied to a Tree, and wounded with Arrows. In another Window dow is a Memorial of Robert Seton, and of a Woman Kneeling with her Head-Attire tapering to a Point like a Cone or Sugar-Loaf.

In the Church-yard to the Eaſt, is the Ruins of a Chapel belonging to Sir John de Denton, who is ſuppoſed to have had a Seat at Denton in this Pariſh: And indeed at that Place there are Remains of Buildings ſtill to be ſeen.

It appears by an old Manuſcript formerly belonging to the Priory of St. Mary Overy in Southwark, that A. D. 1283. a Compoſition for Tithe for the Vicarage of Graveney, in this Neighbourhood was determined before the Dean of Oſpringe; which I ſuppoſe was the Rural Dean then reſiding here.

Theſe Rural Deans were an ancient Inſtitution and very uſeful: And 'tis great Pity that their Office and Authority is not continued. The accurate Author of the Parochial Antiquities, p. 632, 633, &c. hath given a large Account of theſe Deans: From whence what follows is principally taken. Theſe Deans were ſometimes called Archipresbyteri, Vicani, and Decani Temporarij, to diſtinguiſh them from the Cathedral Deans, who were Decani perpetui; and they were called alſo Decani Chriſtianitatis, which Brown the Author of the Appendix ad Faſciculum, &c. miſtakes for Cathedral Deans; and alſo Decani Urbani.

The Rural Dean had under his Juriſdiction 10 Pariſh Churches in the City or Country, over whom he exerciſed an Eccleſiaſtical Diſcipline, which was very advantageous to the Church. He was at firſt elected by the Clergy, and diſplaced again by their Votes: But in Proceſs of Time, he came to be appointed and removed at the Diſcretion of the Biſhop. He was often, as in the Manuſcript above-mentioned, called Decanus ſimply, without any other Epithet or Adjunct; which hath ſometimes occaſioned his being miſtaken for the Cathedral or Collegiate Dean. One of his Offices was to collect the Taxes which were aſſeſſed on the Clergy; and another was, that which occaſions his Mention in this Place, viz. to determine the Right of Tithes; which he did by the Advice and Aſſiſtance of the Presbyters within his Diſtrict; who were his Chapter; and they with him made a Court Chriſtian: And the Parochial Clergy were obliged by Oath to attend the Duty of theſe Courts. Another Part of his Office was to induct Clerks into Benefices; and ſometimes to execute the Sentences of Superior Eccleſiaſtical Judges.

This Office was in Uſe here in the Saxon Times, as Dr. Kennet ſhews from the Laws of Edward the Confeſſor; and I agree with him that their Riſe and Original was this.

They did very early conſtitute ſeveral Eccleſiaſtical Offices of Dignity and Power in the Church, after the Manner of thoſe in the State: The Titles of Patriarchs, Primates, Metropolitans, and ſome other Dignitaries aroſe from the different Exerciſe of Government in Cities and Countries: And thus in the Northern Parts of Germany, England, and France: where for the more eaſy Adminiſtration of Juſtice, the ſeveral Hundreds were divided into Ten Diſtricts or Tithings, as thoſe Tithings were into Ten Friborgs, and every Friborg into Ten Families: And as in every ſuch Tithing it appears by the Laws of Edward the Confeſſor (a), they appointed an Officer over every 10 Friborgs, quem Decanum poſſumus appellare, anglicè vero Tienhefod; i. e. Caput de Decem: Which Officers were to determine leſſer Cauſes between Neighbours, to levy Fines, &c. ſet by higher Courts, and to refer all greater and more criminal Matters to them, &c.

(a) 32 De Centurionibus.

So in Compliance with this Secular Method, the Spiritual Governors, the Biſhops, divided their Dioceſes into Deaneries or Tithings, each of which was the Diſtrict of Ten Pariſhes; and over every ſuch Diſtrict they appointed a Dean, who ſhould in like manner receive Complaints of, enquire into and determine leſſer Grievances, and impoſe ſmaller Cenſures; and for this Purpoſe hold Courts and Chapters; but to refer all greater Cauſes to higher Courts and Juriſdictions: And as in Proceſs of Time, Hundreds and Tithings ſtill retained their Names, though the Number of Villages, Friborgs, and Families was uncertain, ſometimes leſs, but uſually more than Ten; ſo the rural Deaneries continued their Names, though their Diſtricts were contracted and enlarged at the Pleaſure of the Biſhop, or other occaſional Determinations.

There were alſo in the greater Monaſteries, eſpecially in thoſe of the Benedictine Order, ſuch Officers as theſe, called Deans, as there are in ſeveral of the preſent Colleges in our Univerſities, who took care of the Studies and Exerciſes, and were a Check upon the Manners and Morals of ſuch as were under their Care: But here by Degrees the Superior or Principal Dean had not only the Inſpection over the reſt, but ſwallowed up all his Authority and Power.

Before and at the Conqueſt, when the Convents were filled with Secular Canons, the Preſident had alſo this Title of Dean uſually given to him.

This Office of Rural Deans, or Deans of Chriſtianity, was more ancient (ſaith our Author) than that of Archdeacon, and as much Superior to it, as their Order of Prieſt was to that of Deacon. But the Archdeacons by their perſonal Attendance on the Biſhops, and by their being frequently commiſſioned by them to exerciſe ſome Eccleſiaſtical and Judicial Powers, encroached by degrees on the Rights and Juriſdiction of the Deans, and at laſt got by Cuſtom and Preſcription a Superiority of Office over them.

Their Chapters were at firſt held every Three Weeks in Imitation probably of the Courts Baron; afterwards they came to be Monthly, and then were called Kalendæ; but their more ſolemn Chapters were Quarterly, where the greateſt Matters within their Power were tranſacted. At firſt they had the Probate of Wills, and the Deciſion of Teſtamentary Cauſes, as well as Matrimonial ones; but the Archdeacons deprived them of both, and got their own Authority confirmed by the Archbiſhops and Biſhops.

Theſe Deans were alſo in the Epiſcopal Synods the ſtanding Repreſentatives of the reſt of the Clergy; and on this Account they were called Teſtes Synodales, becauſe they were in thoſe Synods to inform againſt, and to atteſt the Diſorders of the Clergy and People within their reſpective Deaneries; which Part is now diſcharged in ſome Meaſure by the Preſentments of our Church-Wardens at the Viſitations of either Biſhop or Archdeacon; as the Dignity of their ſitting in Provincial or Epiſcopal Synods, is by the Two Proctors for the Parochial Clergy of every Dioceſe to repreſent them in Convocation.

They had an Authentick and Publick Seal belonging to their Office; but becauſe it was only Temporary, their own Name was not engraved on it, but only the Name of their Office: And they reſigned it up into the Hands of their Succeſſor when they left their Office.

At the Reformation, thoſe Perſons who were commiſſioned to review the Eccleſiaſtical Laws, agreed in reſtoring theſe full Power and Authority of theſe Rural Deans; but their Inſtitution not being confirmed by the Legiſlative Power, it came to nothing.

Places of Note here:

1. Queen-Court; this is a Place of which farther mention will be made below: The Manor House is supposed to have taken its Name from Maud, Wife to King Stephen; whom Tradition will have to reside here, while King Stephen lay at Feversham Abbey. The present Inheritance of this Manor is in Sir John Stonehouse of Berkshire, who married the Daughter and Heir of Mr. Mellish a Turkey Merchant, who purchased it (I believe) of Mr. Richard Thornhill.

2. The Manor of Ospringe was anciently belonging to the Crown, till King Edward the IIId, in the 10th Year of his Reign, granted it to John de Pulteney, afterwards Lord Mayor of London, to hold it in Fee of the Crown, by the Service of a Rose annually to be presented to the King. And with this Manor he granted him also all the Advowsons of Churches, which formerly belonged to it, to hold in Soccage only, by the former Acknowledgment. In the 19th Year of his Reign, the said Prince grants to this John de Pulteney, that Thomas Son of William de Dene should be accountable to him for all those Knights Fees which lay in Throuley, Boughton Malherbe, and Wormesell, and which held of Queen-Court and Ospringe; and he died possess'd of both those Places in the 25th Year of King Edward the IIId. and left them to his Kinsman Sir Nicholas Loveine: (Though some Part of the Demesne did belong to Pulteney till the 9th Year of King Edward the IVth,) and Sir Nicholas obtained an Exemplification by Patent in the 38th Year of King Edward the IIId, how many Knights Fees did really belong to this Manor of Ospringe. He left a Son who died without Issue, and a Daughter Margaret, who married Philip St. Clere of Aldham St. Clere, and carried this Estate into that Family (together with Queen-Court, which was leased out by her Brother to Nicholas Potin, who was Sheriff of Kent, in the 21st Year of King Richard the IId, and held his Shrievalty there.) For Thomas St. Clere held it in Possession at his Death, which was in the 12th Year of King Edward the IVth. About the Beginning of King Henry the VIIth, this Estate was got into the Possession of William Cheyney of Shurland, Esq; from whom both Queen-Court and Ospringe descended to his Grandson Henry Lord Cheyney, who in the 13th Year of Queen Elizabeth passed them away by Sale to Mr. Richard Thornhill, whose Great Grandson Mr. Richard Thornhill, was in Possession of them in Philpot's Time.

3. Plumford and Bavell, are two little Manors in Ospringe, which Philpot saith, belonged partly to the Nunnery of Minster in Shepey, and partly to the Abbey of Feversham. On the general Suppression of the Monasteries they were granted by King Henry the VIIIth to Thomas Colepeper, Esq; who not long after sold them to Sir Thomas Cheyney; and his Son Henry Lord Cheyney parted with them the same Way to Greenstreet of Clackfield in Borden; in whose Family it continued in Philpot's Time. But Mr. Peter Greenstreet sold Plumford to Sir Henry Furnese, whose Son and Heir Sir Robert Furnese, Baronet, is the present Possessor.

And as I was informed by the Reverend Mr. Barnet, late Minister of this Parish, Bavill was a good while the Estate of the Pordages; and from that Family went by Sale to —— Whatman, Citizen of London; whose Heir sold it to Knowler, and he to Dewy of Surrey.

4. Elverland. This Manor hath for many Generations been Part of the Revenue of St. John's College in Cambridge: The Lease is in the Heirs of Wraytle, who by Will hath ordered it to be sold.

5. Sellgrove is a Manor which Mr. Philpot hath misplaced; for 'tis not in this Parish, but a Burgh and Royalty in Preston and Sheldwitch.

6. Juddsfolly is a fine House standing on a Hill in this Parish, which was built about the Year 1652, by one Daniel Judde a Committee-Man and Sequestrator in the late Rebellious Times. It was formerly called King Stephen's Castle: The Tract of the Moat round the Castle being still visible, as I am informed. 'Tis now in the Possession of —— Millman, Esq; who hath very much improved both the House and Gardens. He holds it by Lease from the Dean and Chapter of Rochester.

7. Syndall was formerly the Estate of the Uptons of Feversham, and from thence went by Marriage into the Name of Wood; thence by a Female Heir it went to Oare; and he about 1660. sold it to Mr. Rood, whose Son is the present Possessor.

8. Westbrook is a Place here taken notice of by Mr. Southhouse, in his Account of Feversham Abbey, p. 74. It staid a long Time in the Family of Drayton; but not long since it was bequeathed to Roberts; and he sold it to Mr. Lawrence Ruck, in whose Possession it now remains.

9. Brogdale or Brookdale, gave Name to a Family here formerly, and mentioned by Southhouse, p. 86. About the Beginning of King James the Ist's Reign it was sold by Head and Clive to John Knowler, who had been thrice Mayor of Feversham, whose Great Grandson now enjoys it.

10. Puttwood is a Manor here which Philpot hath misplaced in Otteringden: Anciently he saith it was the Estate of a Family of the Name of Vienne, who came from Vienne in Normandy. About the Beginning of King Richard the IId, it came into the Name of Quadringe; but from this Name it passed by Sale about the End of King Henry the IVth, to the ancient Family of Goldwell of Great Chart; and thence the same Way to the Drylonds of Cokes Ditch in Feversham: And hence after some Descents it was sold to Atwater, in which Name it continued till the End of King Henry the VIIIth's Reign; and then was purchased by Sir James Hales: And not many Years after this it was sold to Sayer, and thence to Mr. James Hugessen of Dover, who left it to a Second Son; and his Daughter Jane carried it in Marriage to John Roberts, Esq; of Canterbury; but it is now in the Possession of the Hugessens of Provender in Norton Parish.

11. The Maison Dieu: of which you will find an Account in the Chapter of Religious Houses. This though standing in Ospringestreet is yet in Feversham Parish.

12. Hansletts is a Place here which formerly was part of the Estate of the Greenstreets; whence it went by Sale to Whatman, who gave it by Will to Ward and Sitfill; and they joined in a Sale to Pierce of Challock, in whose Descendants it now remains.

On the Right Hand above Ospringestreet was formerly a Chapel of St. Nicholas, where a Priest stood to offer Mass to Passengers; and so fertile was Superstition then, that another was at Bocton Blean, and another such an one at Bapchild.

The Spring here riseth in the Vicarage Glebe about two Miles South from the Road: It hath its Eylebourns like many other Springs in this County. Of the Nature and Reason of which I shall attempt something in the Natural History Part of this Book.

In February 167¼ one began here, but dried up before Michaelmas following; and another arose in February 1712, about a Hundred Yards above the Spring-Head, and ran with so great a Stream as that it was troublesome to the Road; and the Surveyors of the High-Ways were forced to cut through several Pieces of Land to convey the the Water away. But this Eylebourn alſo was gone by Michaelmas.

The Spring or Brook it ſelf never overflows, though it riſe between Two Hills, and hath ſeveral additional Springs in its Courſe beſides the great one or Fountain Head: But it hath ſometimes fail'd of its Water; and as Mr. Barnet informed me, hath been quite dried up within this laſt 30 Years for a Mile and a half upwards.

This Stream drives Three Miles before it falls into Feverſham Creek, whence it takes its Courſe into the Sea.

I find by the Placit. de Libertat. Coronæ, &c. held before the Juſtices Itinerant, that Elizabeth Daughter of William Nowell, held Lands here of the King, in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, by the Serjeancy of paying every Year a Pair of gilt Spurs.

And the ſame Year Nicholas de Cryel claimed, and was allowed to have Freewarren for his Land in Oſſpringe; but whereabouts it lay, or by what it was called, doth not appear.

OTFORD, Ottanford, Otteford, i. e. the Place at the Ford, or Paſſage over the River, lies towards the middle of the Weſt part of Kent, by the River Darent, about three Miles towards the North diſtant from Sevenoke, in the Bailiwick of Sutton Bromley, Hundred of Codſheath, Lath of Sutton-at-Hone, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and ſower one of Juſtices in that Lath.

The Liberty of the Dutchy of Lancaſter claims there; and that of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury over the Manor of Otford.

'Tis in the Deanery of Shoreham, and therefore a Peculiar to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury; but 'tis in the Dioceſe of Rocheſter. The Church is a Chapel only to Shoreham, and ſo is rated in the King's Books together with that. It is dedicated to St. Bartholomew, which Saint was of great Credit and peculiar Eſteem here; for he was believed to have the Gift of curing Barrenneſs; and accordingly he had a fine Image and Shrine here, and a Fair appointed on the Day of his Anniverſary, whereon was great Feaſting and Joy; and the manner was, that if any Woman had a mind to conceive and bring forth, ſhe ſhould offer a Pullet to St. Bartholomew of Ottford; if ſhe deſired a Boy, then a Cock, but if a Girl, then ſhe muſt preſent a Hen. And thus, as Lambard and Wever obſerve, the Parſon of Ottford, for a good while, never wanted Poultry. But it happened, that when King Henry the VIIIth had gotten Ottford, by exchange with Archbiſhop Cranmer for ſome other Lands, and had come hither to ſee the Magnificent Palace, and to conſider about enlarging the Park, one Robert Multon, a good honeſt Man that hated ſuch Holy Cheats and Frauds, told Harry the Story of this Kinderen-Kriiging Saint; and prevailed with the King to get the Image of the Saint demoliſhed; which I ſuppoſe by Degrees ſunk the Impoſture: And as Lambard perpetuates his Name in his Perambulation of Kent, on Account of this honeſt and zealous Effort againſt Idolatry and Knavery, ſo I muſt add to his Honour, that I find him, or ſome of his Family of good Note, formerly to have been poſſeſs'd of Part of the Eſtate now enjoyed by the Petleys, as well as that of St. Clere: And in a Window of Mr. Petley's Houſe, now of Otford, I found the Arms of King Henry the VIIIth, and a Tun with the Word Mull on it, to expreſs Multon by way of Rebus.

The Church is a pretty fair Building, and hath a Veſtry; in it is a Tomb of one William Sidney, who died A. D. 1625. his Anceſtors were Lords of Kingſton by Chicheſter in Suſſex, and married into the St. Johns Family.

Places of Note here:

1. Otford Manor: This was given to the Priory of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury, by Offa King of Mercia, A. D. 791. as Philpot ſaith, to make ſome Expiation for the Chriſtian Blood ſhed here in the Battel between him and Alerick, or as Dr. Gibſon calls him Ealhmund King of Kent; of which more below: It was given ad Paſcua Porcorum, ſaith he, i. e. to the Pannage of thoſe Hogs which fed in the Archbiſhop's Chaſe. In Domeſday Book is this Entry:

Otteford eſt manerium Archiep. & T. E. R. ſe defendebat pro viij. Sul. & nunc pro totidem; & eſt Appretiatum lx l. & hoc quod Haimo inde tenet eſt Appretiatum lx s. & x s. pro hoc quod Robertus Interpres: & Goſfridus Ros inde tenet viij. l. & x s. & hoc quod Richardus de Tonebrigg inde tenet. x. lib. & xxiij. Porcos.

One Werhard, a Potent Prelate, having once (ſaith Kilburn) taken this Place from the Church, was made to reſtore it by Feolgild Archbiſhop of Canterbury, An. Dom. 830.

And in the Poſſeſſion of this Convent did it continue till about the Beginning of King Henry the VIIIth's Reign, and then to avoid the Envy with which ſome Courtiers looked on the Palace here built by Archbiſhop Warham, Cranmer was forced to exchange the Manor and Houſe with the Crown for other Lands. And doubtleſs about this Time it muſt have been a very noble and magnificent Palace; for though before his Time it ſeems to have been only a ſmall Manor-Houſe, yet Archbiſhop Warham quarrelling with the Citizens of Canterbury, where he had deſigned to have built ſuch a ſtately Palace as ſhould have been, ſaith Lambard, a laſting Monument of his great Wealth and Glory, laid out on this Houſe Thirty three thouſand Pounds, which was a vaſt Sum in thoſe Days: And yet Archbiſhop Morton, his immediate Predeceſſor, and Archbiſhop Bourchier before him, and alſo Warham himſelf, had laid out liberal Sums in building the Houſe at Knoll, now the Seat of the Earl of Dorſet, not Three Miles from this Palace. But we ſee every Day, that Men will ſacrifice much more to Reſentment, than they will beſtow out of Kindneſs and Benevolence. Eraſmus in his Preface to St. Mark's Goſpel, ſaith, that before Warham's building here, the Houſe was mean, and that he left nothing of the old Fabrick ſtanding but the Walls of a Hall and the Chapel: But Lambard ſhews that he was miſtaken in making this Houſe the Occaſion of the Quarrel between King Henry the IId and Becket: For indeed the Truth was, That after the Difference aroſe between them about the Statutes of Clarendon, of which I ſhall give a full Account in Archbiſhop Becket's Life; the Biſhops of London and Chicheſter ſeeing the King's Rage againſt him, perſwaded Becket to offer the King this Manor, and that of Wingham in Eaſt Kent to appeaſe him. But bold Becket was ſo far from that, that he maligned the King for the Loſs of the Manor of the Hithe, which he had heard was unjuſtly raviſhed from the See; and would by no Means make any Conceſſions at all; but ſaid, That though his Knowledge of the Church's Right to Hithe came to him only by Hear-ſay, he would run the Hazard of his Head, before he would give up even that to gain the King's Favour.

The current Tradition anciently here was, that while that Inſolent Prelate lay, or reſided here, at this old Houſe of Ottford, he wrought a great many Miracles, ſome of which are very ſilly and ridiculous; for they did not only ſay of him, that that Spring here which is now called Thomas Becket's Well, and which is indeed ſtill a good Spring, being a ſhallow Well built of Stone, and and about Twenty Foot Square; was at firſt raiſed only by Becket's ſtriking his Staff into the Place, which before was dry Ground: But they ſay alſo, that becauſe the Nightingales here did one Night diſturb his Prayers as he walked in the old Park, (I'm afraid his Soul was out of Tune, and that he rather was curſing and contriving Miſchief and Revenge) he order'd thoſe melodious Birds to remove farther off, and never dare for the future to ſing near this Place. And becauſe a poor Smith here did once prick his Horſes Foot, he curſed the Trade ſo (for that was his Talent, and not Bleſſing) that no Smith could ever thrive in Ottford after it. But enough of theſe Fooleries. There is ſtill remaining an Aqueduct of Stone, which carries the Water of this Well to the Archbiſhop's Houſe; of which, Part of the Portal, and one Tower of Brick is ſtill remaining; as alſo a large Oven; and by the Ruins, it appears to have been a very large Building.

2. Ryehouſe; this is a Place in Ottford, where formerly there was a Chantry founded by Henry de Apuldrefeild, in the 46th Year of King Edward the IIId. And on the Diſſolution of the Religious Houſes, the Revenues belonging to it were granted to the Palmers; a Family of great Antiquity in this Pariſh; and from whence the Palmers of Snodland, and thoſe of Howletts in Eaſt Kent, were derived. But Philpot ſaith this Eſtate was ſold by one of this Name to Boſvile, in one of whoſe Deſcendants the Poſſeſſion continued in his Time. He ſaith nothing elſe about any Eſtates or Manors in this Pariſh, except what is above-mentioned of the Manor of Otteford.

3. The greater Park here doth now belong to one Mr. Smith; the leſſer one to Sir Charles Farnaby of Sevenoke.

4. The Worthy David Polhill, Eſq; is now building a fine Houſe at Otteford, on the Site of that which hath a long time belonged to the Family, where he deſigns to Reſide, tho' he has a very noble Seat at Cheapſtede in this Neighbourhood, in the Pariſh of Chevening; he hath been a good Benefactor to this Place, and particularly by augmenting the Income of the Curate, and by Educating the Poor Children of the Pariſh in the firſt Principles of Religion, and in the Doctrine of the Church of England.

This Place of Ottford hath been famous for two Eminent Battels. The firſt was fought between Offa King of Mercia, (A. D. 773, or ſome ſay the Year following) and Alrick, Aldrick, Aldwick, then King of Kent. Some Authors place this Action in the Time of Ealhmund, or Almund; who had Uſurped ſome part of the Kingdom of Kent at this time. This was a very hard-fought Battel, ſome ſay Aldrick was ſlain on the Spot; and tho' Offa got the Victory, it coſt him very dear: But after this Succeſs, he took divers Lands from the Archbiſhoprick, and alſo tranſferred the Metropolitical Chair it ſelf into its own Kingdom, and ſet it up at Litchfield; but, as I ſhall ſhew in its proper place, it continued not long there, tho' he had gotten a Pall for it, and a Bull of Pope Adrian to exempt it from the Juriſdiction of Canterbury; ſo ready hath the Papal Authority been at all Times to break us and divide us, and ſet up a Juriſdiction of their own, to cramp that of Sovereign Princes.

The other great Battel here was between Canutus the Dane and King Edmond, for his Valour and Hardineſs called Ironſide; in which the latter obtained a moſt ſignal Victory; and had it not been for the Treachery of Edrick, he had very probably deſtroyed the whole Daniſh Army, of which he ſlew near 5000 upon the Place, driving the reſt as far as Aylesford, &c. The Place of this famous Action is called Daneſield to this Day.

Lambard, after what he ſaith of Ottford, mentions the Valley of Homeſdale, part of which lies between this and Sevenoke, and runs out hence Weſterly into Surry as far as Ryegate, where there is a Caſtle called anciently Holme, as Alfred of Beverley tells us; and the People call it the Caſtle of Holmeſdale, or one in a Valley, running along between Hills cover'd with Woods. The Inhabitants of this Vale have a courſe Rhime about it thus.

The Vale of Holmeſdale
Never won, nor never ſhall.

Which ſeems to have taken its riſe from this laſt Battel of Ottford againſt the Danes; and from another fought hereabouts, A. D. 904, againſt the ſame People by King Edward, the Elder Son of King Ælfred; for in this Vale the Engliſh aſſembled themſelves together, to relieve themſelves from the grievous Oppreſſions of the Danes, and after a very long and obſtinate Fight, did at laſt obtain a ſignal Victory.

OTHAM, Oteham, lies towards the middle of Kent, about two Miles South Eaſtward from Maidſtone, in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Eyehorne, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Eaſt one of Juſtices in that Lath.

The Liberty of St. Auſtin's claims here, as doth alſo that of Maidſtone over ſome parts of the Pariſh. 'Tis in the Deanery of Sutton, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. A Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 9*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.* The Church is dedicated to St. Nicholas, in which are Memorials of the Interment of John Conſtenton, 1426; his Wife was a Congherſt: And in a Chapel here dedicated to the Bleſſed Virgin, lies Richard Sackville, Eſq; 1524. Wever ſaith alſo, that ſeveral others of that noble Family are buried here, and many in the Church of Withiam in Suſſex. In this Church alſo is a Monument with two Figures of —— Bufkin and his Lady; and a Braſs Inſcription in Memory of Mr. Thomas Henley, who died in Queen Mary's Reign, and left 5*l. per Ann.* to the Poor of the Pariſh. Another Monument of Mr. John Henley, (his Wife a Fludd) Father to the preſent Mr. Bowyer Henley of this Place.

As to the Abbey anciently here, and by a Lady of the Sackville Family tranſplanted to Begham, and whoſe Site was at Stone-Acre, at a Place where now only is a Farm-Houſe, an Account will be given in its proper Place.

I can't but think that this is the Place which is written Ocham in the great Roll of the 8th Year of King John; and of which one James Savage is ſaid to have been Patron. See Madox's Hiſtory of the Exchequer, p. 287. Becauſe 'tis an eaſy Miſtake to put a (c) for a (t). And I can find no mention any where elſe of any ſuch place as Ocham in this County.

Places of Note here:

1. Otham Manor, this was anciently a Branch of the Eſtate of the great Family of the Valoigns. William de Valoigns, as appears by Teſta de Nevill in the Exchequer, paid Aid for his Lands here, in the 20th Year of King Edward the IIId, at the Marriage of Iſabella the King's Siſter. His Deſcendant, Stephen de Valoigns, was one of the Conſervators of the Peace for this County, in King Edward the IIId's Reign, a Place then of great Note and Truſt. But about the End of King Richard the Second, this Eſtate, and that of 2. Gore-Court, went by Purchaſe into the Name of Pimpe, where, after a pretty long ſtay, they went the ſame way into that of Iſley of Sandwich; and here they ſtaid till the 2d Year of Queen Mary, and then were forfeited to the Crown by Sir Henry Iſley's being unhappily concerned in Wiat's Rebellion; by which means being come into that Queen's Hands, ſhe granted them to Sir Walter Henley, Serjeant at Law; who, as well as his Brother Sir Thomas Henley, had purchaſed ſome Lands in this Pariſh of Sir Thomas Wyat, before his Attainder, as alſo at Gore-Court; the former deſcended to Sir Thomas Henley's Heirs at Law, but that at Gore-Court went by the Marriage of a Daughter of Sir Walter Henley, into the Colepeper's Family; whence, with Gore-Court, it went by Sale to Bufkin; and from him the ſame way to Nathanael Powel, Eſq; and thence to Thomas Lloyd, or Flud, whoſe Grandſon is the preſent Poſſeſſor. But Otham continued in the Family of Henley in Philpot's Time, as it doth to this Day.

3. Stoneacre is an ancient Seat, which for many Generations continued in the Name of Ellys; which Family were Owners alſo of Burton in Kennington; and theſe Ellys's were in Poſſeſſion of this Place in Philpot's Time, which was 1656, and had been ſo ever ſince King Edward the IId's Time: But about Eight or Nine Years ago Mr. Edmond Ellys parted with it by Sale to Mr. George Waterman.

By a Manuſcript kindly communicated to me by Peter le Neve, Eſq; Norroy King at Arms, de Placitis Jur' & Aſſiſis held before J. de Berewick, and other Juſtices Itenerant, in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, it appears, that this Manor of Otteham did before that time belong to a Family of the Name of Otteham; for Loretta de Valoigns, Daughter of Peter de Otteham, came into Court and produced a Deed, by which ſhe gave to her two Sons, Walter and Robert Valoigns, their Heirs, &c. the Manor of Otteham, the Advowſon of the Church, and all other Benefits and Profits, &c. belonging to this Manor. This Deed is there recorded at length, and is witneſſed by Thomas de Normanville, Roger de Tilemanſtone, Nicholas de Sandwich, and Ralph St. Leger, Knights; and ſeveral other Men of Note in that Neighbourhood.

OTTERDEN, Otteringden, lies towards the middle of Kent, about three Miles North Eaſtward from Lenham, in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Eyborne, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Eaſtern one of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery of Oſpringe, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. In the Printed Valor. Beneficiorum 'tis called a Vicarage, and valued at 6*l.* 14*s.* But in Biſhop Williams's Map of the Dioceſe of Canterbury, 'tis marked as a Rectory. The Church is dedicated to St. Lawrence. 'Tis ſmall, only two Iſles, and no Steeple. In it is a fair Monument of Sir Juſtinian Lewin and his Lady, 1598, and of his Son, who was Gentleman of the Bedchamber to King James the Iſt, 1520. Another of Sir George Curtis, Knt. his Lady a Banks. A fair Monument of Simon Bunce, Eſq;, and his Wife, 1611. And Memorials of James Bunce, 1606. Of Matthew Bunce of Throwley, 1624. One Alderman Bunce of this Family gave 8*l. per Ann.* to the Miniſter, one Pound per Ann. to the Poor, and as much towards the Repair of the Church. In this Church is alſo a Memorial of Elizabeth Wife of John Clynche of Eſling, 1488, and of Thomas St. Leger, Eſq; who married the Heir of Peyforer, 1408.

Places of Note here:

1. Boresfeild, or Boardfeild, this was anciently a Pariſh, but is now included within this; of which you will find an Account before under the Letter B. The Eſtate here is now come by Sale into the Poſſeſſion of the Family of Curtis of this Pariſh.

2, Otterden Place; this Manor had anciently Poſſeſſors of its own Name; for Ralph de Otteringden died poſſeſs'd of it in the 15th Year of King Edward the Iſt. But his Son Lawrence de Otteringden, whoſe Name is ſtill in the Glaſs Window of the North Chancel of this Church, leaving only one Daughter and Heir; by her it went into the Family of Peyforer, which likewiſe about the End of King Edward the IIId, extinguiſhed in a Daughter, Juliana, who married Sir Thomas St. Leger; and by that Gentleman's Siſter Joan, this Eſtate paſſed the ſame way to Henry Aucher, Eſq; deſcended from the Aucher's of Loſenham; and one John Aucher was buried in this Church, A. D. 1502. In this Name it ſtaid till Queen Elizabeth's Reign, and then was ſold to Lewin; by a Daughter of which Family it went to Rogers, and from him the ſame way to Charles Lord Mansfield, eldeſt Son to William Cavendiſh Duke of Newcaſtle, whoſe Widow carried it in Marriage to the Duke of Richmond and Lenox; and thence by Sale it went to Sir George Curtis, in which Name it ſtill continues.

3. Putwood, as Philpot wrongly places it; for 'tis in reality in Oſpringe Pariſh, where I have before given an Account of it.

4. Herſt, is a Place in Otterden, which was once the Seat, as well as the Eſtate, of the Family of Filmer; or, as Philpot ſaith, they were anciently written Filmour, till by marrying the Heir of Argall, they were Tranſplanted to Eaſt Sutton; where I ſhall give a further Account of this Eminent Family.

5. Hall's Place, this was anciently reputed as a Manor, and had for its Poſſeſſor one Robert Rey, as appears by ſome old dateleſs Deeds which Philpot had ſeen. In King Henry the VIIth's Reign it belonged to one Eugenius Cook, and he, in the 19th Year of that Prince, ſold it to John Bunce of this Pariſh; in which Name and Family it continued till Charles the Iſt's Reign, and then was ſold to Paine; in which Family it ſtill continues, being now the Seat of —— Pain, Eſq; Son of Roger Pain Deceaſed.

6. Monkton, is a Place here which before the Suppreſſion of the Monaſteries belonged to the Nunnery of Davington; being given to that Cloyſter by Matthew, Son of Hamon Attfrith, upon its firſt Erection in the 39th Year of King Henry the IIId. But on the general Diſſolution of the Religious Houſes, King Henry the VIIIth granted it to Sir Thomas Cheyney; whoſe Son Henry Lord Cheyney, ſold it to Godden, and he ſoon parted with it the ſame way to Lewin; whoſe Son Sir Juſtinian Lewin, leaving only a Daughter, by her it went to Rogers of Somerſetſhire; and by his Daughter it went in Marriage to Charles Cavendiſh Lord Mansfield, eldeſt Son to the Duke of Newcaſtle; from whence it went with Otterden Place to the Duke of Richmond and Lenox; and thence by Sale to Sir George Curtis, in which Family it ſtill continues.

7. Bunce's Court, is a Seat here which formerly belonged to a Family of the Name of Bunce; many of whom, as is above taken notice of, lie in the South Chancel of the Church, which from them is called Bunce's Chapel; as the North Chancel which belongs to Otterden Place is called Otterden Chapel.

From theſe Bunces thoſe of Throwley were deſcended.

OXNEY Iſland lies at the South Weſtern Edge of Kent, on the South Bank of the Rother, between Rye and Newenden.

It is an Hundred within it ſelf, and is about Ten Miles in compaſs, containing within it only theſe three Pariſhes, whoſe Survey you will find under their ſeveral Names, Witreſham, Stone, and part of Ebeney.

The Level here was once very low, and in continual Danger of being overflowed by the River Rother; but about 75 Years ago, (a) ſaith the Famous Dr. Wallis, the Sea being let in, raiſed it conſiderably, by letting in and lodging a great Quantity of Slub and Earth every Tide; and ſo fretting the Chanel by which it paſſed in and out, that the Channel of Rye, which he ſaith, in his Memory, was ſo ſhallow, near (what was called) Kent-Bridge, that Men and Women were wont to ride through it; but now by the Tides entring and returning, that Bridge is long ſince ſwallowed up, and the Channel become ſo broad and deep, that a Veſſel of a good Burden might ride there at Anchor.

(a) Phil. Tranſ. N. 275.

Lambard fancies this Iſland had its Name from Hox, which he ſaith ſignifies foul; but as I have never met with it written Hoxeney, ſo I think it much more natural, to ſuppoſe it might derive its Name from being a proper Place to feed or fatten Oxen in, as it certainly is, having a great deal of very rich Lands in it: As the Iſland of Sheppey very probably took its Name from the Sheep which were perhaps firſt put to feed there when they were brought over hither by the Romans: For Cæſar mentions no Sheep in Britain when he was here, though he enumerates the other Animals particularly.

One would think alſo that the Learned Poet Drayton, in his Polyalbion, Song 18. took his Image of Oxney from Lambard's Etymology, for he calls the Iſle groſs, black, and homely: But at laſt he makes her ſay of her ſelf, when ſhe feared Romney Marſh would get the Love of her Spouſe the Rother from her;

With Romney though for Dower I ſtand in no [Degree
In this to be belov'd, yet liker far than ſhe:
Tho' I be brown, in me there doth no Favour lack.

PADLESWORTH near Elham, lies towards the South Eaſt Part of Kent, about three Miles South Eaſtward from Elham, in the Bailiwick of Stowting, Hundred of Loningborow, Lath of Shipway, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery of Elham, and Dioceſe of Canterbury: And the Church is dedicated to St. Oſwald. 'Tis reckoned only as a Chapel, and ſo not rated in the King's Books.

The Liberty of Elham claims over that Part of it which is in the upper half Hundred of Loningborow; but that of Liminge over that Part which lies in the lower half Hundred of Loningborow: The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims alſo here.

Places of Note here:

1. Padleſworth Manor: This Place was of old Part of the great Eſtate of the Criolls: Bertram de Crioll died about the Middle of King Edward the Iſt, and left Joan his ſole Heir, who married to Sir Richard Rokeſley de Rokeſley, or of Rokeſley Court in North Grey, by which Match Padleſworth went into that Family; but it ſtaid not long there, before by a Daughter it went to Thomas de Poynings, whoſe Deſcendant Robert Poynings ſold it to Fogg of Sene in Newington; where it continued for many Deſcents; but about King James the Iſt's Reign it was alienated to Dynley, who was the Proprietor in Philpot's Time.

'Tis but a poor obſcure Village; and only, as Philpot obſerves, hath been eminent by the Dignity of its Poſſeſſors.

PADLESWORTH, Peadleſworth, near Snodland, vulgarly called Paulsford, lies towards the North ſide of Kent, by the River Medway, about three Miles Northward from Weſt-Malling, in the Bailiwick of Hoo, Hundred of Larkfeild, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and South one of Juſtices in that Lath.

The Liberty of the Biſhop of Rocheſter claims over it. It is in the Deanery of Malling, and Dioceſe of Rocheſter; a Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 3*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* But there is now only a little ruinated Chapel ſtanding, which ſeems to have been the Chancel of the old Church, and is now uſed only as a Barn: This Place is now become a Sinecure, and not annexed to any other Chuch; tho' by its mention and place in the Liſt of Livings within this Dioceſe, which I find in our Textus Roffenſis, it appears anciently to have belonged to Birling.

This Pariſh ought anciently to have contributed towards the Repair of the 9th Arch or Peer of Rocheſter Bridge.

Places of Note in this Pariſh.

1. Padleſworth Manor, this was as early as King Henry the IIId's Reign, in the Poſſeſſion of a Family of the Name of Chetwind; who in a ſmall time after, exchanged it with Hamon de Gatton for the Manor of Hocklin in Bedfordſhire; but it ſtaid but a little with its new Owner, before it went by Purchaſe into the Eminent Family of Huntingfeild: Thence it paſſed, I believe the ſame way, to Beale; and then again was ſold to Bullock; whence it was conveyed to Peckham; and thence went by Sale to Vineley, and from thence the ſame way to William Clifford of Bobbing-Court: And this Gentleman, about the beginning of King Henry the VIth, alienated it to Robert Bambergh; and all this round of ſhifting Poſſeſſors was within the compaſs of Fifty Years, as Philpot tells us. By Bambergh's Daughter and Heir it went in Marriage to Nicholas Wotton, Eſq; and thence deſcended in a Right Line to Thomas Lord Wotton, who ſettled it in Marriage on his Daughter and Co-heir Katherine Wotton, with Henry Lord Stanhope, eldeſt Son to Philip Earl of Cheſterfield; from whence it went by Purchaſe to John Marſham, Eſq; of Whornes Place in Cuckſtone, who was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time; and from whoſe Writings he had this Account. And it continues ſtill, with the Patronage of the Sinecure, in the Poſſeſſion of the Right Honourable the Lord Romney, Grandſon of the aforeſaid John Marſham, Eſq;

St. PANCRACE, is an old Chapel ſituated between Canterbury City and St. Martin's Church, and by Thorn the Chroniſler, is ſaid to have been anciently an Idol Temple, and uſed as ſuch by Ethelbert King of Kent for his Idolatrous Worſhip, before Auſtin the Monk came hither and converted him to the Chriſtian Religion. And they tell you likewiſe, that it was the firſt Place that ever Auſtin ſaid Maſs in; who Conſecrated it, and Dedicated it to St. Pancratius. The King alſo endowed it with ſome Lands, and afterwards built there, by the Advice of Auſtin, a new Church, which was Dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul; which new Church was very well endowed, and was deſigned as a Burying-Place for the Kings of Kent, and the Archbiſhops of Canterbury. In Proceſs of Time, they ſay alſo, that a Monaſtery was added to it; which ſoon deprived it of the Names of its former Saints, and occaoccaſioned it to be called St. Auſtins: And thus aroſe the Famous Abbey of that Name.

Thorn alſo tells a good round Story of the Rage the Devil was in at loſing this Chapel, by Auſtin's Conſecration of it; and he would have blown it down if he could, but St. Auſtin being too many for him there, the poor Devil contented himſelf with fixing his Claws only on the South Porch of the Wall of the Chapel; and ſeemingly the Prints of this foul Fiends Talons were remaining in Somner's Time; but he ſaith he hath ſeen the ſame made by Ivy, when it grows and eats into a Wall; and he is contented that it be only a Tale.

That there was ſuch a Chapel dedicated to St. Pancrace in this Place, appears plain by the Will of one Hamond Beale; who Ann. 1492, gave 3 l. 6 s. 8 d. towards the Repair of it. And a very ancient Fabrick Mr. Somner owns it to be; the Building being principally of Roman Bricks or Tiles: But becauſe neither Bede nor his Intelligencer Albinus, who gave him an Account of this Abbey, do mention any thing of this Chapel, much leſs of its being the firſt that was honoured with Auſtin's Officiating in it; he is inclined to think it a Miſtake; and the more alſo, becauſe the following Monkiſh Writers take no Notice of it. See Somner's Canterbury.

Some will have it that in this Chapel lye the Bodies of Ethelbert, Eadbald his Son, and Emma his Queen; of Ercombert, Lothair, and Wightred, Kings of Kent; and of Auſtin, Laurence, Mellitus, Juſtus, Honorius, Deodatus, Brithwald, Tatwin, Nothelm, and Lambert, Archbiſhops of Canterbury; and all others own that they were buried ſomewhere near this place, within the Verge of this Abbey of St. Auſtin's.

PATRICKSBORN, lies towards the Eaſt part of Kent, by the River Stoure, about two Miles and a half to the South Eaſt from Canterbury, in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Bridge and Petham, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath.

The Liberty of St. Auſtin claims here.

'Tis in the Deanery of Bridge, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. A Vicarage, and with the Chapel of Bridge, is valued in the King's Books at 5 l. 7 s. 4 d. The Church is dedicated to St. Mary. It ſeems to be a Building of ſome Antiquity; the South Door of it being arched after the Gothick manner, with Images about it carved in Stone, like the Weſt Door of Rocheſter Cathedral; it ſeems to me to be of the ſame Age with that Work.

In the 7th Year of King Edward the Iſt, this Church belonged to the Priory of Merton in Surrey, (now called Merton Abbey) which then claimed it before the Juſtices Itinerant; and to hold Courts here, &c. And in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, they had 36 Acres of Land alſo in this Pariſh.

Places of Note here:

1. Patricksbourn Manor; this, ſaith Kilburn, did in the 6th Year of King Edward the IIId, belong to the Abbey of Bello Loco, or Beau Lieu in Normandy, being given to it by the Gift of one John Pratellis in King John's Reign, and confirmed by that Prince. As alſo did the

2. Priory, ſometimes ſtanding here, but which was ſuppreſſed by King Henry the Vth in his 2d Year. Of which I ſhall ſay more in its proper Place.

3. Patricksbourn Cheyney, muſt have been alſo another Eminent Manor here, which was anciently the Inheritance, and where was the Reſidence of the Family of the Cheyneys, before they removed to Shurland in the Iſland of Sheppy, and married the Heir of the Shurland's Family; and from them this Place was called Patricksborn Cheyney. And this Name of Cheyney, or de Caſineto hath been very Eminent. Alexander de Cheyney was one of thoſe brave Kentiſh Gentlemen who accompanied King Richard the Iſt into the Holy Land, and aſſiſted him at the Siege of Acon in Paleſtine; and it appears by Teſta de Nevill, that William de Cheyney paid Aid for his Lands here in the 20th Year of King Henry the IIId, at the Marriage of that Prince's Siſter. Alexander de Cheyney, in the 42d Year of King Henry the IIId, attended that King in his Expedition into Wales; and Sir Alexander, his Son, was with King Edward the Iſt at his famous Siege of Carlaverock in Scotland; and in this illuſtrious Family did this Eſtate continue, till it came into the Hands of the Extravagant Henry Lord Cheyney, who in the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign ſold it to William Partrick, Eſq; and his Grandſon, Sir Edward Partrick, alienated it to Mr. Arnold, as Philpot calls him; but it was Sir Arnold Brame of Dover; and his Son Mr. Walter Brame parted with it the ſame way to John Taylor of Biſrons, Eſq: the preſent Poſſeſſor.

4. Howletts, is a Manor which Philpot hath wrongly placed, it being in reality in the Pariſh of Bekesbourn, and conſequently ſhould have been mentioned there; it anciently was the Eſtate of the Iſaacks, but by a Daughter of that Family it went firſt to Sydley, and then to Sir Henry Palmer, and thence it went by Sale to Sir Robert Hales, Knight and Baronet, whoſe worthy Deſcendant Sir Thomas Hales, Baronet, and Member of Parliament for the City of Canterbury, is the preſent Poſſeſſor, and writes himſelf of Howletts.

5. Hode, this Place, with Howletts above-mentioned, were anciently part of the Eſtate of the Family of Iſaack, who have been ſo Eminent in this Pariſh, that there is a Chancel in the Church, which formerly bore their Name, and was called Iſaack's Chancel. John Iſaack in the 20th Year of King Edward the IIId, paid Aid for his Lands at Patricksborne, when the Black Prince was Knighted; and his Son John Iſaack was buried in this Church A. D. 1443. Thomas Iſaack had a Command in France under the Duke of Bedford, and did ſignal Service againſt the Enemies of his Countrey, in the beginning of King Henry the VIth's Reign. The laſt of this Name here was Edward Iſaack, Eſq;, who left behind him only two Daughters; Mary who married Thomas Apylton of Suffolk; and another, who was firſt married to ——— Sydley; and after that to Sir Henry Palmer; from which Family it went ſomehow to Adrian, and thence by Sale to John Taylour of Biſrons, Eſq;, who is the preſent Poſſeſſor.

6. Biſrons, is a very pleaſant Seat here, which is the Reſidence of John Taylour, Eſq; abovementioned, and hath its Name from its double Front; it hath a Viſto thro' it from the Road down thro' the Gardens to the Canal; and tho' the Fronts be old, and built after the Gothick manner, yet they are Elegant and Regular. It was built by Robert Bargrave, Eſq;, or one would rather think by his Lady, if one may judge by this Motto which is placed upon it, viz.

Diruta ædificat Uxor bona, Ædificata diruit mala.

The Houſe is convenient and finely ſeated, and the Diſpoſition of all things is very Exact and Elegant. I ſaw here ſome very large and fine Hollies, and two long Brick Walls covered on each ſide with ſtriped Holly; which is planted on one ſide of the Wall, and made to bend down over the Top, and cover the other ſide to the bottom. The Green Walks are here alſo fine, and covered with the cleaneſt Turff I ever ſaw. About 500 Yards below the Houſe is a Canal, at one End of which are two Iſlands, and a little Houſe built, which they call Trout-hall; in it are Bathing Places, ſome Beds, and Rooms for Company. The Rivulet which makes the Canal, abounds with Trouts of two Sorts, white and ſpeckled, and in it are many Loaches, ſome of which are often found in the Trouts Bellies.

St. PAULS in Canterbury, the Burgh of Longport in this Pariſh, is in the County of Kent, Bailiwick of Bridge and Petham, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. And it hath a Conſtable by it ſelf; and the Liberty of St. Auſtin claims over it.

But the Church and the reſt of the Pariſh is in the County and City of Canterbury.

'Tis all in the Deanery and Dioceſe of Canterbury.

In the bottom of the Chancel Windows, in a very old Letter, is written Magiſter Hamo Doge; he was Parſon of this Church in King Henry the IIId's Reign, and the laſt: and Official to the Archdeacon of Canterbury about 1268. He had alſo the Aldermanry of Weſtgate for 15 Years, and then paſſed it over to the Abbey of St. Auſtin's; who infeoffed one Nicholas Doge with it. He founded alſo a Chantry in this Pariſh.

Richard Bern buried here, by Will 1461, gave 10 l. towards the Repairs of this Church. Here are Memorials alſo of the Interment of Edmund Howynden, 1497, and of Wavere, Stace, Gale, Windbourn, Pollard and Twine.

A. D. 1268. A Vicarage was conſtituted here by Hugh Mortimer, Official to Boniface Archbiſhop of Canterbury, by the conſent of the Abbot of St. Auſtin's, and Mr. Hamon Doge above-named, the laſt Rector here. The Vicar had all Obventions, Profits, &c. and was to pay the Arch-deacons Procurations, and all other uſual Onera.

PECKHAM Eaſt, or Great Peckham; Pecham, the Place on the Peek or Hill; lies towards the middle of Kent, about two Miles and a half Southward from Weſt Malling, in the Bailiwick of Twiford, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and South one of Juſtices in that Lath. Part of it is in the Hundred of Twiford, and the reſt in that of Littlefeild.

'Tis all in the Deanery of Shoreham, and ſo a Peculiar to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, but in the Dioceſe of Rocheſter; A Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 14 l. per Ann. This Pariſh ought anciently to have contributed towards the Repair of the Fifth Arch or Peer of Rocheſter Bridge. The Church which is fair and large ſtands in the Hundred of Twiford, and is dedicated to St. Michael. In it is a fair Monument in white Marble of Sir William Twiſden, Baronet; and another of that Learned and Judicious Gentleman Sir Roger Twiſden, Baronet. Here are alſo ſeveral Memorials of the Whetenhalls: An Iron Plate over William Banſon with a Croſs on it; it appears ancient. There is alſo a Braſs Plate over Richard Etcleſſy, in his Sacerdotal Habit Conſecrating the Chalice; and ſtiling him Rector of this Church, 1426. But when the Particular Time of the Conſtitution of the Vicarage was, I can't find.

Places of Note here:

1. Peckham Manor, this was given to the Priory of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury, with many other great Gifts by Queen Edgiva, the Mother of the Kings Edmund and Eadred, A. D. 961. And thus it ſtands recorded in Domeſday Book.

Pecham eſt Manerium St. Trinitatis de Cibo Monachorum & in T. E. R. ſimiliter fuit & ſe defendebat pro vi. Sull. & ex iſtis nunc habet Ricardus de Tunebrige ij. Sull. & i. jugum. Et ex iſtis ij. Sull. & Foco iſto nunquam ſcottavit Richardus poſtquam habuit ea. Et in T. E. R. fuit hoc Manerium appretiatum xij. l. & nunc viij. & præfata pars Ricardi valet iv. l. Et in Stotingeberga quod tenuit Edricus de E. R. eſt dimidium Sull. unde ipſe Edricus dabat Scottum ad Pecham ſpontaneè, non quod pertineret ad Sanctam Trinitatem nec ad Monachos. Hoc Manerium eſt de Hundred de Littlefeld.

And here this Manor continued till the General Diſſolution of the Abbeys, and then was by King Henry the VIIIth granted to Sir Thomas Wiat; who not long after ſold it to George Moulton, Eſq; but there being no Fine levied, in Queen Mary's Reign, it was ſeized on by the Crown as part of the Eſtate of Sir Thomas Wiat, who was then Attainted for High Treaſon; and it continued here till the 2d Year of Queen Elizabeth, and then that Princeſs granted it to Anthony Welden, Eſq; and in this Name, tho' not without ſome Law-Suits about the Title, it ſtaid till the Reign of King Charles the Iſt, and then was ſold to George Whetenhall, Eſq; in which Family it was in Philpot's Time: But he ſaith the Manor of Eaſt Pecham continued in the Crown till the Rebellion, and then the Powers that were, gave it to Colonel Robert Gibbons.

2. There was anciently another Manor here, which was called Peckham Manor, which had Owners formerly of that Name: For it appears by the Placita Corona, &c. held before John de Reygate and his Brother Itinerant Judges, in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, that one Johannes de Peckham tenuit Manerium de Peckam in Com. Cantiæ in Capite de Dno Rege per Servitium Mutandi unum Oſturcum per Ann. that is, of Mewing for the King a Goſhawk every Year; which Bird hath a great many Names in old Records; as beſides this of Oſturcum, Hoſtricum, Eſtricium, Aſturcum, Auſturcum; all which ſeem to come from the French word Auſtour; as the Author of the Ancient Tenures hath obſerved. But the Record goes on thus —— De quâ quidem Serjantia Gilbertus de Clare Comes Gloceſtr. tenet. C. C. acras terræ quæ valent per Ann. C. s. & 67 Sol. de Reddit. aſſiſ. de eâdem Serjanciâ de membrata; but the Earl not being able to produce any Inſtrument of his Tenure, the Sheriff was ordered to ſeize the Lands to the King's uſe; and what came of this Eſtate afterward, non conſtat.

3. Roydon-Hall, is an Eminent Seat in this Pariſh, which formerly was call'd Fortune, and was, ſaith Philpot, of no great Account till about the Beginning of King Henry the VIth's Reign; but then Roydon of Suffolk ſeating himſelf here, erected the Hall or Seat, and called it by his own Name; and by Elizabeth Daughter of Thomas Roydon, Eſq; it went in Marriage to William Twiſden, Eſq; Great Grandfather to Sir Roger Twiſden Knight and Baronet, who obtained a Charter of Freewarren from King Charles the Iſt, to make a Park here, and in this Eminent Family it ſtill continues. Philpot ſaith, Roger Twiſden, Eſq; and Sir William Twiſden, Knight and Baronet, added very much to the Magnitude and Splendor of this Houſe.

4. Auburne, as the Vulgar call it, but more rightly Alban, is another Place of Note here, and which (together with Black Pits in this Pariſh) was anciently the Inheritance of the Pollards: For John Son of John Pollard demiſed it to Alban de Wandeſworth, in the 34th Year of King Edward the Iſt, who probably built a Houſe here; and from him it ſeems was called Albans, now corrupted into Auburn. His Grandſon William liam des Wandeſworth, dying without Iſſue, gave to his Widow Mabell; by whom it went in Marriage to Richard Reyner; and he and his Wife joined in a Sale of it, together with Black Pitts, to John Mew. Though Philpot ſaith, he finds that a Family called Only, had ſome Intereſt in theſe Two Manors, having purchaſed it of William de Wandeſworth, in King Henry the IIId's Reign: But in King Richard the IId's Reign Joan Only, the only Heir of the Family, alienated her Title to the above-named John Mew. In the ſame Reign alſo, Richard Goldſmith had ſome Part of this Eſtate; for in the 9th Year of King Richard the IId, he ſold it to the ſaid Mew. But though he had thus got all of it clear to himſelf, Mew's Family held it not long; for about the End of King Henry the IVth, both theſe Manors, with their Appendages, were ſold to John Tutſham and Nicholas Remkin of Eaſtmere. Remkin's Daughter Alice carried the Intereſt belonging to that Name in Marriage to Thomas Rolfe of Tunbridge; and about the Beginning of King Henry the VIth, both Rolfe and Tutſham alienated the whole to Thomas Stidulfe of Badſell, Eſq;, who by Deed dated 1463. ſettled thoſe Manors on his Two Sons Robert and Henry Stidulfe. Thomas, Son of Robert, became Heir both to his Father and Uncle; whoſe Daughter and Heir, about the latter End of King Henry the VIIIth, was married to Richard Vane, Anceſtor to the preſent Earl of Weſtmorland. But Henry Vane, one of the Succeſſors of the ſaid Richard, ſold off Albans, in the Year 1589, to Roger Twiſden of Roydon-Hall: And in that Family it continued in Philpot's Time. And I ſuppoſe doth ſtill.

5. Eaſtmere is another Manor here, which had anciently the Remkins above-mentioned for its Owners: And this went with Alice the Daughter of Nicholas Remkin above-named, to Rolfe of Tunbridge. But in the 6th Year of King Henry the VIth, John Rolfe ſold this Eſtate to Richard Ruyton; and he ſoon after paſſed it the ſame Way to William Hextall: By whoſe only Daughter it went in Marriage to William Whetenhall, deſcended from the Whetenhalls of Cheſhire: And in Philpot's Time was in the Poſſeſſion of Thomas Whetenhall of Hextall Court, Eſq;.

6. Spilſtede is a Place in Eaſt Peckham, which was for divers Succeſſions the Inheritance of an ancient Family of the Name of Cayſer: The laſt of whom, John Cayſer, left only Two Daughters; by one of whom this Place went in Marriage to Chetwind (Matthew); and he in the 41ſt Year of Queen Elizabeth ſold it to Roger Twiſden, Eſq;, in whoſe Family it remained in Philpot's Time.

7. Hextall Court is a Seat here of great Antiquity, and which had long ago Owners of the Name of Hextall, who had a good Eſtate at Hougham as well as here; the laſt of which, William Hextall dying without Iſſue-Male, his Daughter Margaret carried this Place in Marriage to William Whetenhall, Eſq;, in the Reign of King Henry the VIIth: And in that Family it continued in Philpot's Time.

PECKHAM Weſt, or Little Peckham, lies towards the Middle of Kent, about Three Miles South Weſtward from Weſt Malling in the Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and South one of Juſtices in that Lath. That Part of it which is in the Burgh of Oxenboth, is in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Hoo; the reſt is in the Bailiwick of Twyford, and Hundred of Littlefield. 'Tis in the Deanery of Malling, and Dioceſe of Rocheſter: The Church ſtands in the Hundred of Littlefield, and is dedicated to St. Dunſtan. The Liberty of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury claim here.

A Vicarage and valued in the King's Books at 7 l. 6 s. 0 d. per Ann.

A. D. 960. Queen Edgiva, Dowager of King Edward the Elder, gave this Place to Chriſt-Church in Canterbury.

This Pariſh ought anciently to have contributed to the Repair of the 5th Arch or Peer of Rocheſter-Bridge.

At this Place lived that great Maſter of Hiſtory and Law Sir Roger Twiſden, Baronet, who aſſiſted Mr. Somner with Notes and Corrections, when he put forth the Laws of King Henry the Iſt. He furniſhed him alſo with the Chartulary of St. Auſtin's Abbey in Canterbury, and other valuable Curioſities; and it was Sir Roger that prevailed with Mr. Somner to add his incomparable Gloſſary, to the X. Scriptores.

The Advowſon of the Church of Weſt Peckham was given to the Priory of Leeds by King Edward the Iſt, where it continued till the Diſſolution, and then was ſettled by King Henry the VIIIth, on his new Cathedral Church of Rocheſter.

Places of Note here:

1. John Colepeper, one of the Juſtices of the Common Pleas, in King Henry the IVth's Reign, founded here a Preceptory, A. D. 1408. endowing it with 63 l. and a Noble per Ann. This Place being then Part of the Revenue of the Knights Templers: On the Extirpation of which Order, in the 2d Year of King Edward the IId, it was granted to the Knights Hoſpitallers; and was ſometimes called a Preceptory, and ſometimes a Commandery.

Between which two Words Philpot thus diſtinguiſhes: A Preceptory, he ſaith, was a Benefice in Kind, and was ſo called, becauſe it was poſſeſs'd by the more eminent Sort of Templers, whom the chief Maſter of the Order created and called Præceptores Templi. But a Commandery was ſome Principal Manor of the Knights Hoſpitallers; wherein was placed ſome Brother of the Order, who could not diſpoſe of the Profits of it, but was to manage it for the Uſe of the Fraternity; deducting only out his own Allowance.

On the Suppreſſion, this Place was granted to Sir Robert Southwell, who ſold it to Sir William Walſingham of Scadbery, Lieutenant of the Tower, whoſe Great Grandſon Sir Thomas Walſingham, in King Charles the Iſt's Time, ſold it to Mr. James Maſters; the Poſſeſſor, when Philpot wrote his Villare Cantianum.

2. Oxenheath is a Manor here, which was long ago the Eſtate of the Colepepers; but about the End of King Henry the VIIth's Reign, this Branch of that noble Family ended in Three Daughters: The Eldeſt of whom, Margaret, carried this to her Husband William Cotton of Cambridgeſhire, Eſq;; Joyce, the ſecond Daughter, married Edmund Howard, a Younger Son of Thomas, Duke of Norfolk, who was Father to Queen Katherine Howard; and the third married Barham of Barham-Court in Teſton. Cotton's Succeſſor ſold this Place to Choune of Fair-Lane, and Sir George Choune, to Nicholas Miller, Eſq;; in whoſe Family it continued in Philpot's Time.

PEMBURY, Pepenbury, Pipingbury: Very likely from the Quantity of Pepins which anciently grew here; and for which formerly this Place hath been famous. Pembury lies near the South Side of Kent, about Three Miles South Eaſtward from Tunbridge, in the Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and South one of Juſtices in that Lath: Part of it is in the Bailiwick of the Lowy of Tunbridge, and Hundred of Wachelingſtone; and the reſt is in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Twiford. 'Tis all in the Deanery of Malling and Dioceſe of Rocheſter. A Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 6 l. 8 s. 8 d. The Church, which hath a Spire-Steeple, ſtands in the Hundred of Wachelingſtone, pretty high, and in a Kind of a Wood; the Soil about all Stony, Rocky, and Woody. On one of the South Buttreſſes are the Arms of Colepeper in Stone; and on another Burtreſs, a Chevron between 3 Martlets; and on a Third, is St. George's Croſs. In the South Part of the Chancel is a Memorial of Richard Amberſt, Eſq; of Bayhall in this Pariſh, in the Year 1664; another of William Amberſt, in 1663. A Braſs Figure with an Inſcription on a Stone over Elizabeth Daughter of Richard Rowe, Eſq; of Hawkwell in this Pariſh, in 1607: Another very old Stone with a plain Croſs on it, and round it old Letters almoſt obliterated, but there remains ſtill legible Margaret la Rildſird. A Tomb-Stone in the Chancel over George Bolney, Eſq; of Hawkwell, married a Wybourn: In the Porch is a very ancient Stone with a Croſs on it; and another ſuch an one, with an handſome Moulding round it; which I take to have lain over ſome of the Religious of Begham Abbey.

There is a fine quick Spring on the left Hand as you go the Church-yard from the Green: The People ſay it is Medicinal, and will cure ſore Eyes; but to me it ſeems only common Water: It mingles it ſelf with a little Brook below, and helps to turn a Mill. Sir H. Selby acquainted me that this little Rivulet parts the Two Counties of Kent and Suſſex here, and running to Begham or Bayham Abbey, and from thence to Lamberhurſt, diſcharges it ſelf into the Medway: The Courſe of this Stream all our Maps omit to deſcribe.

Places of Note here:

1. Bayhall, from the Saxon Beag, heg, or Beah, a Garland or Crown; is a very ancient and pleaſant Seat, wreathed round like a Garland with fine Meadows, Gardens, and Fiſh-Ponds. it was anciently the Seat of the eminent Family of the Colepepers: The firſt noted Man of which, who is upon Record, Philpot ſaith, was Thomas de Colepeper, who was one of the Recognitores Magnæ Aſſiſæ, in the Reign of King John; he was the Father of that unfortunate Thomas Colepeper, who was hanged by King Edward the IId, for denying his Queen Entrance into Leeds Caſtle; and for which rude Act he loſt his Eſtate as well as his Life. (See Leeds Caſtle.) But by the Indulgence of the King, Part of it was reſtored to his Son, who had Licenſe to incloſe 50 Acres towards making a Park here at Pepenbury; but the Seat and Manor continued in the Crown, till they were by King Henry the VIth, in his 25th Year granted to Humphrey Stafford Duke of Buckingham; whoſe Grandſon was ſo unlucky as to forfeit them to the Crown again, with his Life, in the 13th Year of King Henry the VIIIth, who granted them to Edward Guldford, Eſq;. By Joan, a Daughter of his, they went in Marriage to John Dudley, Duke of Northumberland; who in the 30th Year of King Henry the VIIIth, ſold them to Thomas Cromwell, Earl of Eſſex; and he in two Years forfeited them to the Crown again, from whence once more this King grants them to William Wybourn, and Authony Brown, Eſq;, Brown ſold his Part to Wybourn; and he, or one of his Deſcendants, alienated them both to Thomas Sackville Lord Buckhurſt; whoſe Grandſon Richard Sackville Earl of Dorſet ſold them to Richard Amberſt, Eſq; Serjeant at Law: And his Son of the ſame Name, re-edified and raiſed the preſent beautiful Houſe: He died poſſeſs'd of it in the Year 1664, leaving Two Sons, Charles and Henry; and Two Daughters, Dorothy and Elizabeth: Of theſe Henry and Dorothy died without Iſſue; but Elizabeth married Sir Henry Selby, Knight, and Serjeant at Law, ſecond Son of George Selby of the Moat in Eightham, or Ightham in this County, Eſq;, by whom ſhe had Iſſue Charles and Dorothy. And Charles Amberſt, Eſq;, the ſurviving Son of the above-named Richard Amberſt, Eſq;, deviſed the Inheritance of this Manor and Seat, as well as all other his Eſtate in Lands, to his Nephew and Heir Charles Selby; and enjoining him by his Will to take upon him the Sirname of Amberſt; and died Nov. 9. 1705. And the ſaid Charles Selby Amberſt is now the ſole Proprietor of the ſaid Eſtate, and of the Seat and Manor.

There was a Family of ſome Note in Pepenbury of the Name of Bayhall, in the Reign of King Edward the Iſt; for a Diſpute ariſing between the Daughters, the Sheriff was ordered to divide the Eſtate Share and Share alike amongſt them, by the Determination of the Juſtices Itinerant: And 'tis probable their Father lived at this Place of Bayhall.

2. Hawkwell or Halkwell, is an eminent Manor here, and was formerly Part of the Eſtate belonging to the adjoining Abbey of Begham; but at the Diſſolution of all the Religious Houſes it was by King Henry the VIIIth granted to John Wybourn, who was Tenant to the Abbey at the Time of the Suppreſſion; but had before dwelt at an ancient Seat called,

3. Culverdens; to which Place his Anceſtors came from about Croſton in Orpington, where they were originally planted about the End of King Henry the IIId's Reign: And in Philpot's Time this Manor of Hawkwell was in the Poſſeſſion of Blanch, the Widow of Benjamin Wybourn, who was eldeſt Daughter of Sir John Philipot of Hantſhire.

4. Bencrouch, 5. Highlands, and 6. Prigles. Theſe are Three Manors in Pembury, which anciently were Part of the Revenue of the Neighbouring Abbey of Robertsbridge in Suſſex: But in the Year 1525, they were by Cardinal Woolſey, taken from thence, and given towards the Endowment of his College of Chriſt-Church in Oxford, the Foundation of which he began, but was diſgraced, and died before he could bring it to any Degree of Perfection: And after his Deceaſe theſe Manors being found to have been in his Hands, they were ſeized by the Crown; and in the 24th Year of King Henry the VIIIth granted to George Guldford, Eſq; who not long after ſold them to Sir Alexander Colepeper; and he in the 35th Year of King Henry the VIIIth, got a Confirmation of them from the Crown; and in this Family they continued a good while, till at length they were ſold to Nicholas Miller, Eſq; who deceaſed without Iſſue, and left them to his Nephew Sir Nicholas Miller; and he demiſed them to his Son and Heir Humphrey Miller, Eſq; who was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time: And I ſuppoſe they are ſtill in this Family.

In the Church there was formerly a Chapel or Chancel dedicated to the Bleſſed Virgin, in which was a Chantry endowed; and below the Church-yard there was another in King Edward the IIId's Reign.

PENSHERST, in the Textus Roffenſis, Penneſherſt; in ſome old Records in King Edward the Iſt's Reign, Pencheſſet; lies towards the South Weſt Side of Kent, by the River Medway, about Three Miles South Weſtward from Tunbridge, in the Weſt Diviſion of the County, and lower one of Juſtices in the Lath of Sutton-at-Hone.

Part of it, viz. Hall-borough is in the Bailiwick of the Lowy of Tunbridge, Hundred of * lingſtone, and Lath of Aylesford; and the reſt is in the Bailiwick of Sutton Bromley, Hundred of Somerden, and Lath of Sutton-at-Hone.

The Liberty of the Dutchy of Lancaſter claims at Chaford in this Pariſh. It is in the Deanery of Shoreham, and ſo a Peculiar to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, but in the Dioceſe of Rocheſter: A Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 30 l. 6 s. 0 d.

The Church ſtands in the Hundred of Somerden. In it was a Marble Monument, and now remains a Buſt of Stephen Penſhurſt or Penchеſter, who was Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports in the Reigns of King Henry the IIId, and of King Edward the Iſt. And here alſo are Memorials of many of the Ancient Family of the Sidneys, who are extracted, ſaith Wever, from William de Sidney, Chamberlain to King Henry the IId; and from whom, ſaith Camden, deſcended Sir Henry Sidney, that Famous Lord Deputy of Ireland, who married the Daughter of John Dudley, Duke of Northumberland, and by her had Philip and Robert: Robert was, by King James the Iſt, created Baron Sidney of Penſherſt, Viſcount Liſle, and Earl of Leiceſter, and made Knight of the Garter, A. D. 1616. The Eldeſt Brother Sir Philip Sidney, was, ſaith Camden, the great Glory of this Family, the great Hopes of Mankind, the moſt lively Patern of Virtue, and the Darling of the Learned World; but while he was warmly engaging the Enemy at Zutphen in Gelderland, he was unfortunately killed: This is that Sidney, ſaith Camden, whom, as Providence ſeems to have ſent into the World, to give the preſent Age a Specimen of the Ancient, ſo did it on a ſudden recall him, and ſnatch him from us, as more worthy of Heaven than Earth. Thus where Vertue comes to Perfection, 'tis gone in a Trice; and the beſt Things are never laſting. Reſt then in Peace O! Sidney, If I may be allowed this Addreſs, we will not celebrate your Memory with Tears, but Admiration. Whatever we loved in you, ((a) as the beſt of Authors ſpeaks of the beſt Governor of Britain); whatever we admired in you ſtill remains, and will continue in the Memories of Men, the Revolutions of Ages, and the Annals of Time: Many as inglorious and ignoble are buried in Oblivion, but Sidney ſhall live to all Poſterity(b). This Polite and Learned Gentleman was the great Patron of Spencer, and every Way a great Encourager and Promoter of Arts and Sciences. King James the Iſt did him the Honour to write an Epitaph upon his Death in Latin; which you may ſee in Wever's Funeral Monuments, p. 321.

In the Church are ſtill remaining Monuments of ſome of this great Family: As a Marble Tomb over Sir William Sydney, Knight and Baronet, Chamberlain and Steward to King Edward the VIth, and the firſt of that Name who was Lord of Penſherſt, in the Year 1515. A fine Monument in white Marble of Robert Sidney Earl of Leiceſter, and of his Lady, an Egerton, Daughter to the Earl of Bridgewater; the Father and Mother of the Preſent Worthy Earl. Here is a Monument alſo of William, Eldeſt Son of Thomas Lord Coventry of Aylesbury.

Places of Note here:

1. Penſherſt Place and Manor. This ſaith Philpot was anciently the Seat of a Family of the Name of Penchеſter; of whom there is a mention made in the Book of Domeſday: I find that Stephen de Penchеſter claimed a Freewarren here in the 20th Year of King Edward the Iſt; and in this Name did this Place continue till the Two Daughters of one Sir Stephen de Penchеſter (who died poſſeſs'd of it, ſaith Philpot, in King Edward the IId's Reign) dividing his Eſtate between them; Joan the Elder was married to Henry Lord Cobham of Roundall in Shorne, and Allington Caſtle, &c. But Alice the Younger carried Penſherſt to her Husband John Lord Columbers: By him ſhe had Iſſue Thomas de Columbers, who in the 11th Year of King Edward the IIId, ſold Penſherſt to Sir John de Poultney, who the next Year obtained a Charter of Freewarren for this Manor, and Eight Years after paid Aid for it at making the Black Prince Knight. His Son William Poultney alienated it to Guy Lovain, and his Son Sir Nicholas Lovain was poſſeſs'd of it in the 44th Year of King Edward the IIId, and married Margaret Eldeſt Daughter of John de Vere Earl of Oxford: She was afterwards married to Henry Lord Beaumont; and a third Time to Sir John Devereux Knight of the Garter, Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, and Conſtable of Dover Caſtle, and Steward alſo of the Houſhold in the 11th Year of King Richard the IId; and having this Eſtate by his Lady, he obtained a Licenſe to build and embattle here, in the 16th Year of that King: His Daughter and Heir was married to Walter Lord Fitzwater; from whom the Earls of Suſſex deſcended: And from his Brother Sir Walter Devereux did the Earls of Eſſex derive their Riſe. The Arms of this Sir John Devereux were in a Window on the North Side of Penſherſt Church. But he only enjoyed this Eſtate in Right of his Lady; for after her Death it went to Philip St. Clere of Aldham St. Clere in Ightham, who married Margaret the Daughter of Sir Nicholas Lovain above-named, and who was Siſter and Heir to her Brother Nicholas Lovain, who died without Iſſue. This Gentleman's Son John St. Clere, ſold this Place to John Duke of Bedford third Son to King Henry the IVth: and he died poſſeſs'd of it in the 14th Year of King Henry the VIth: But leaving no Iſſue, it deſcended to Humphrey Duke of Glouceſter, fourth Son to King Henry the IVth. This Prince was ſtrangled in the Abbey of Bury, by the wicked Artifices of the Duke of Suffolk, and upon his leaving no Iſſue, it eſcheated to the Crown. And was in the 25th Year of King Henry the VIth, granted to Humphrey Stafford, Duke of Buckingham; whoſe unfortunate Grandſon Edward Duke of Buckingham forfeited it to the Crown, with his Life, in the 12th Year of King Henry the VIIIth. After which that Prince granted it to Sir Ralph Vane; but he likewiſe forfeited it to the Crown in the 4th Year of King Edward the VIth; it was Two Years after by that King granted to Sir William Sydney, who had been his Tutor; and was made one of his Privy Council, and Lord Chamberlain of the Houſhold: And from him it deſcended to his great Grandſon, Robert Earl of Leiceſter, who was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time; and it ſtill continues in that Noble Family, being the Seat of the Right Honourable the Preſent Earl of Leiceſter: And a very fine and noble one it is, placed in a very large Park, which is adorned with very long Rows of Oaks and Cheſnut-Trees, with fine Fiſh-Ponds: And a handſome Bowling Green lately made.

2. Chaford: This Place, which Philpot led me into an Error to mention in Aſherſt, is really in this Pariſh: And therefore what is ſaid of it ought to have come in here. See Aſherſt.

3. Ford-Place, this I am informed was the Ancient Seat of the Sidneys, before King Edward the VIth's Reign.

4. Salmons, alias Salamis, is alſo an ancient Seat here; which formerly was the Habitation of the Seyliards; and is now in the Poſſeſſion of John Seyliard, Eſq; of Penhall in Blechingley in Surrey.

5. Penſ-

5. Penſherſt-Halymote, alias Otfordwild, is a ſmall Manor in this Pariſh which was anciently held by Leaſe by the Owners of Penſhurſt, from the Archbiſhops of Canterbury, as being part of their Manor of Otford. And when that Manor was exchanged with the Crown, this, as a Relative to it, went alſo into the Crown Revenues, where it continued till the Times of the Civil War; and then, ſaith Philpot, was by the State given to Colonel Robert Gibbons. But 'tis now in the Poſſeſſion of the Earl of Leiceſter.

6. About a Mile from the Farm called Well-Place, towards the Well called Kidder's Well, which contains a good Chalybeat Water, in the River againſt the Meadows below to the Weſtward, is a Place called by the Vulgar Tapſels-Hole; from an old Woman of the Name of Tapſel, and whom they will have to have been a Witch, and to have done much miſchief, till ſhe was, as they ſtupidly call it, laid by a Conjurer. In this Hole of the River, they tell you (and I had a Letter written to me about it by a Gentleman in the Neighbourhood) the Water will bubble or boil up, whenever you call on the Witches Name; but you muſt do it very loud, or elſe they ſay the Old Woman can't hear you; being as deaf belike now ſhe is dead, as ſhe was when alive. I went to view this celebrated Place, but could obſerve no ſuch appearance in the River, tho' four of us together called upon Mother Tapſel as loud as we could bawl. However, 'tis not improbable that ſome ſuch Phænomenon may ſometimes be ſeen there; for the Banks of the River are hollow, and the Turns of the Water pretty ſhort there, which may occaſion it at ſome times to ſhoot downwards in one Place, and to riſe again like a Boiling Pot in others; and all this without being either actually bewitched, or frighted with the Old Woman's Name.

In the Year 1648, the Duke of Glouceſter and his Siſter Elizabeth, were, for ſome time, at Penſherſt, under the Care of the Counteſs of Leiceſter.

St. PETER's in Canterbury, is a Pariſh Church in Canterbury City, which was anciently rated at 4 l. per Ann. and is one of thoſe Sixteen which have been excuſed from all Taxations, ſaith Battely, on account of the Meanneſs of their Benefices. In it are, or were, Memorials of the Interment of Thomas Jokham, the Inſcription in French. Of William Jokham, 1424. Of one of the Septvans. Of John Bigg, Alderman of Canterbury, 1473, and of William Bigg, 1468; who with John Coppin of Whitſtaple, built the Market-Croſs at the Bullſtake, and gave alſo 10 l. to the building of St. George's Gate.

St. PETER's in Dover, is a Church in that Town, which formerly was of ſome Note, but is now deſolate, and the Pariſh annexed to St. Maries.

'Tis a Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 4 l. Impropriated to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

St. PETER's in Sandwich is a Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 8 l. At the Eaſt end of the Church was formerly a Chantry of three Prieſts; one of which was obliged to teach the Youth of the Town to read. It was founded by Thomas Ellis and Margaret his Wife. The Place where he Taught ſeems to have been called St. Peter's School. That worthy Gentleman and his Lady lie buried in this Church, under a fair Tomb in the North Iſle: They were alſo the Founders of the Hoſpitals of St. Thomas and St. John Baptiſt in this Town.

In the North Iſle of this Church lies alſo Sir Simon Sandwich, who was Lord-Warden of the Cinque Ports in King Edward the IId's Reign; and who was a great Benefactor towards building the Steeple of this Church.

When St. Peter's School above-mentioned was down, which probably happened about the Time of the Reformation; a new Grammar School was erected much fairer and finer than the former, a little within Canterbury Gate; chiefly at the Expence of Sir Roger Manwood; the Town alſo, and ſeveral Perſons in the Foreign, as they call it, i. e. ſuch as lived without the Liberties of the Town, contributing thereunto; and in the 7th Year of Queen Elizabeth, Roger Manwood gave 20 l. and his younger Brother Thomas 10 l. per Ann. towards its Endowment.

This Church hath hardly any thing more remarkable in it, but the Remains of two old Monuments behind the Pulpit; on one of which is an Eſcotcheon with Fretty and a Cheife; which I ſuppoſe is in Memory of ſome of the St. Leger Family. And a Memorial of one Gilbert, A. D. 1597.

St. PETER's in the Iſle of Thanet, lies at the North Eaſt ſide of Kent, in the Iſland of Thanet, adjoining to the Sea, about ſix Miles North Eaſtward from Sandwich, in the Bailiwick of Bridge and Petham, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices of the Town and Port of Dover (of which it is a Member); and the Liberties thereof, and of the Cinque Ports claim over it.

'Tis in the Deanery of Weſtbere, and Dioceſe of Canterbury, and the Church is dedicated to St. Peter: A Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 9 l. per Ann. Two Fairs are here kept Annually; one upon March the 25th, and the other on June the 29th, being St. Peter's Day.

A Queſtion ariſing in King Henry the VIIIth's Time between the Juſtices of the County and this Pariſh, about aſſeſſing the ſame to the King's Taxes; that King did, by his Letters Patents, put an End to it, and united this place to Dover.

In the Church are Remains of good painted Glaſs; 'tis a large handſome Building, conſiſting of three Iſles, and hath a very good Tower. The Font which is an old one, and of Stone, is neatly matted round at the Bottom for the Miniſter and Sureties to kneel upon, when the Office of Baptiſm is celebrated: And the ſame laudable Care I have met with in ſeveral other Churches hereabouts; I wiſh the Example were every where followed.

The Chancel is very handſome, being well Wainſcotted, and adorned at the Charge of Mrs. Elizabeth Lovejoy, Widow of George Lovejoy, late Schoolmaſter of Canterbury.

This Pious Woman gave likewiſe 40 l. per Ann. to the Vicar, and 20 l. more per Ann. to a School here for the teaching of 20 poor Children.

There is a fair Monument in this Church of both her and her Husband; he died 1685, and and ſhe 1694.

In this Church are alſo Memorials of the Interment of Manaſſes Norwood, 1623. Of Nicholas Smith, 1451. Of Richard Colmer, 1485. Of Michael Weblie, 1587. Of John Spracklin, 1595. And of Elizabeth Elſtowe, 1503.

Places of Note here:

1. Fleet, this lies partly in this Pariſh, and partly in St. Johns, where I have already given an Account of it.

2. Dane-

2. Dane-Court is a Seat of good Antiquity in this Pariſh, and had once Owners of the Name of Dane; but before the End of King Henry the IVth, this Eſtate went in part by a Daughter and Heir called Margaret in Marriage to John Exeter; and partly by another Daughter of John Dane's, about the latter End of K. Henry the VIth to Denne of Denn-hill. And ſomehow about the End of King Edward the IVth, this Manor was come into the Poſſeſſion of the Norwoods, whoſe Deſcendants held it till Philpot's Time; and then Mr. Alexander Northwood ſold it to Mr. Smith.

Mr. Kilburn, in his Survey of Kent, p. 215. makes a ſtrange Story of a Whale, which in July 1574, was caſt aſhore here; and indeed it was a pretty large one, and ſuch as do but rarely appear in our Seas. His noiſe could be heard above a Mile, his length was 66 Feet, and his under Jaw opened 12 Foot; one of his Eyes was more than a Cart with Six Horſes could draw; and when it was taken out of his Head, a Man could ſtand upright in its place: His thickneſs from his Back to his Belly was Fourteen Foot, and his Tail of the ſame Breadth; the diſtance between his Eyes was Twelve Foot; three Men ſtood upright in his Mouth; and his Tongue was Fifteen Foot long, as ſome of his Ribs were Sixteen; his Liver was two Cart Loads; and his Noſtrils were ſo wide as to receive the Body of a Man into them.

PETHAM, Peteham, lies towards the middle of the Eaſt part of Kent, about three Miles and a half South Weſtward from Canterbury, in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Bridge and Petham, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims over the Manor of Petham. 'Tis in the Deanery of Bridge, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. A Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 8 l. 0. 1 d. per Ann. It was not long ſince in the late Archbiſhop of Canterbury's Time, united to the Church of Waltham, and both Churches made one Cure; and this by Agreement of the Patron Sir William Honywood; and the Preſentation for the future is to be alternate; the firſt Turn after the Death of the preſent Incumbent being the Archbiſhop's, the next Sir William Honywood's: The Fees for Inſtitution and Induction, &c. are continued ſeparate in each Pariſh.

The Church dedicated to All Saints, is large, as is alſo the Chancel, and with a low flat Tower. In it are Memorials of the Family of Thompſon for ſeveral Deſcents.

Places of Note here:

1. Petham Manor; this, as appears by Domeſday, did anciently belong to the Archbiſhops of Canterbury; for thus it ſtands in that Regiſter.

Peteham eſt Manerium Archiepiſcopi & in T. E. R. ſe defendebat pro vij. Sull. & nunc ſimiliter & eſt appretiatum xx l.

Eadmerus makes a miſtake about this Manor, by calling it Peckham; for indeed it was this of Petham that Anſelm Mortgaged to the Monks of Chriſt-Church, which was never redeemed, but it continued among the Revenues of that Priory till the General Diſſolution of all the Monaſteries in King Henry the VIIIth's Reign; and then coming to the Crown, it ſtaid there till King James the Iſt's Reign, and then was granted to Thomas Thompſon, Eſq; Anceſtor to that Thompſon who was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time, and whoſe Deſcendant, Henry Thompſon, Eſq; now enjoys it.

2. Kenfield, anciently Kynefeld, is a Manor here, which hath been a good while a Seat of the Thompſons above-mentioned, and which is now in the Poſſeſſion of Henry Thompſon, Eſq;.

3. Swerdling, this is a Manor which anciently was eſteemed only as a part of that of Petham; and in King William the Iſt's Reign was held, as appears by Domeſday Book, by Godfridus Dapifer; it was formerly very famous for being the Capital Seat of the ancient Family of Valoigns. Ruallo de Valoigns was Sheriff of Kent in the 1ſt Year of King Henry the IId. Waretius de Valoigns aſſiſted King Richard the Iſt at the Siege of Acon in Paleſtine. Robert de Valoigns was a Baron in the 13th Year of King Henry the IIId. Allan de Valoigns was Sheriff of Kent the 31ſt and the three following Years of that Prince, and kept his Shrievalty here at Swerdling. His Son Sir William de Valoigns, was with King Edward the Iſt at the Siege of Carlaverock Caſtle in Scotland, and Knighted there. Henry de Valoigns was Sheriff of Kent in the 14th Year of King Edward the IIId; whoſe Son Waretius de Valoigns, left only two Daughters and Co-heirs, one of which, by marrying Sir Thomas Fogge, Grandſon of Otho Fogge, who came into this County out of Lancaſhire, in the beginning of King Edward the Iſt's Reign, carried this Eſtate into that Name; the other Siſter married Thomas Aldon. After ſeveral Deſcents in the Family of Fogge, Swerdling was ſold to Spelman; from which Name, by a Daughter, it went in Marriage to Hadd; and in that Name continued in Philpot's Time.

In the Year 1190, there was a Chapel here at Swerdling, which was called the Chapel of William the Son of Wegellus; it was ſerved by the Brethren of St. John of Jeruſalem, with a Salvo to the Right of the Church of Petham. The Original Charter of which, is in the Hands of my good Friend Peter le Neve, Eſq; Norroy King at Arms, to whom I have been much obliged for many Helps to this Work.

This Nigellus Germain, had a Deſcendant who was living here in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, as appears by the Tower Records.

3. Sapington, is a place here, which in the 42d Year of King Edward the IIId, was in the Poſſeſſion of one John Bregge; he ſold it to Richard At-Leeze, who dying without Iſſue, left it to his Brother Marcellus At-Leeze; and his Daughter and Co-heir Lucy was firſt married to John Norton, and then to William Langley of Knowlton, to whom ſhe brought this Manor. But about the End of King Richard the IId's Reign, the Deſcendants of Langley alienated it to George Ballard, Eſq; whoſe Deſcendant Nicholas Ballard, about the End of Philip and Mary, alienated it to Strenſham; from which Name, about the 40th Year of Queen Elizabeth, it was ſold to Appleford; and from thence it went the ſame way to Longford; of which Name four Brothers joined in another Sale of it to Cranmer of Canterbury, whoſe Son Mr. —— Cranmer, was in Poſſeſſion of it in Philpot's Time.

4. Hauts-Place, this Manor was the Original Seat of the great Family of the Hauts, which have ſpread into many Parts of this County.

Ivo de Haut, as appears by the Book in the Exchequer, called, Liber de Terris Templariorum, which contains a Survey of the Lands belonging to the Knights Templars, A. D. 1180, held this Eſtate of Temple Waltham; and in this Name did this Manor continue, till it came to Sir William Haut, who was Sheriff of Kent in the 16th and 20th Years of King Henry the VIIIth: But after ſo long a ſtay in the Name of Haut, it went then by one of his Daughters, Elizabeth, in Marriage to Thomas Colepeper of Bedgebury, Eſq;. From this Name it went in proceſs of Time by Sale to Salkeld; and then the ſame way again to Bateman; in which Family it continued in Philpot's Time.

5. Depden,

5. Depden in this Pariſh, is a Place where, in King Henry the IVth's Reign, was a Chantry founded by one William Gratian a Prieſt; and on the general Suppreſſion, the Land belonging to it, came to the Crown; and was in the 2d Year of King Edward the VIth, granted to John Come and Richard Almott; who not long after ſold it to William Forbraſſe, anciently Fortbraſſe, Yeoman; hence, in King James the Iſt's Reign, it went by Sale to Gregory, and he alienated it to Sladden of Liminge; and by the ſame way of Purchaſe it is now come into the Poſſeſſion of Thomas Morris of Horton, Eſq;

There is a famous Eylebourn which riſes in this Pariſh, and ſometimes runs but a little way before it falls into the Ground; whence perhaps came the Pariſh's Name of Petham, the Place of the Pit or Hole: But now and then it goes with a very ſtrong Stream, quite down into the greater Stoure, at Shanford Bridge. Of which more in the Natural Hiſtory Part of this Work.

The Hundred of Petham was anciently eſteemed as the Hundred of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury; and here he claimed to have Return of Writs, View of Frank Pledge, &c. in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt.

PLAXTOOLE, Pleckſton, lies towards the Middle of Kent, about Three Miles South Weſtward from Wrotham, in the Bailiwick of Hoo, Hundred of Wrotham, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and South one of Juſtices in that Lath. The Liberty of Wrotham claims over it. 'Tis in the Deanery of Shoreham; and ſo a Peculiar to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury; but in the Dioceſe of Rocheſter. 'Tis not valued in the King's Books; becauſe it was anciently reckoned as a Part of the Pariſh of Wrotham: But in the Year 1647, it was made a Pariſh by it ſelf, a Collection being made throughout the whole County, for erecting the Church here.

This Place is omitted in Symondſon's Map of Kent.

Places of Note here:

1. Sore. This is a ſmall Manor, which formerly belonged to the Colepepers of Preſton in Aylesford: And Walter Colepeper died poſſeſſed of it in the 1ſt Year of King Edward the IIId. Hit Deſcendant Sir Thomas Colepeper of Preſton alienated it to Nicholas Miller, Eſq; of Horſnells Crouch in Wrotham, who bequeathed it to his Nephew Sir Nicholas Miller of Oxenhoath; who left it to his Son Sir Humphrey Miller; and 'tis now in the Poſſeſſion of an Heireſs of that Name.

PLUCKLEY, Pluckele, Plokele, lies towards the Middle of Kent, about 4 Miles and a half Weſtward from Aſhford, in the Bailiwick of Chart and Longbridge, Hundred of Colebill, Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in the Lath of Shipway.

The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims over the Manor of Pluckley and Sherland; and the Liberty of Wye claims over the Borough of Weſt Kingſnoth. 'Tis in the Deanery of Charing, and the Dioceſe of Canterbury. A Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 20*l.* 1*s.* 5*d.* The Church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. In which, ſaith Wever, and in our Lady's Chapel or Chancel there, belonging to the Derings of Surenden Dering, and founded by Richard Dering, Eſq; in the Reign of King Henry the VIth, as appears by his Arms carved at the Bottom of the Arches; are ſeveral Stones, with Figures in Armour at their full Length. One of John Dering of Surenden, Eſq; who lived in King Richard the IId's Reign, Henry the IVth, and Henry the Vth. Another of Richard Dering between his Two Wives: And he ſaith that one Richard Dering of Surenden, Eſq; (I know not whether this or no) gave the Hangings of rich Cloath of Arras, to adorn the Quire of Canterbury Cathedral; and this he did at the Requeſt of a Son of his, who was a Monk there; and who inſtead of his Paternal Coat of Arms, would needs, according to the Punning Humour of thoſe Times, have a Rebus, viz. a Deer and a Ring to expreſs his Name: This Monk was one of the Accomplices of Elizabeth Barton, the Nun of Kent. Another Memorial of John Dering, great Grandſon of Richard; he died in the Year 1550, and had married a Brent. At the Foot of this, in the Church, are Memorials of John Dering, in 1517; his Wife Julian, Daughter of Sir John Darell: Of Nicholas their Eldeſt Son, whoſe Wife Alice, was a Betenham; of Richard Dering, Eſq; Lieutenant of Dover Caſtle, under Five Lord-Wardens of the Cinque Ports: He married a Brookhall, and died in 1546. In the Body of the Church are alſo two Grave-Stones, and one Figure remaining in Braſs, over Henry and John Malmaines, Eſqs; the latter died in 1440.

An Annual Fair on December the 6th.

Places of Note here:

1. Pluckley Manor, did anciently belong to the Archbiſhops of Canterbury; as appears by the Book of Domeſday, where 'tis ſaid to have defended it ſelf, in Edward the Confeſſor's Reign, for one Plow-Land; and then for the like, and to be worth 15*l.* but to pay a Rent of 20*l.* But Lanfranc gave it to his Man (Miles Archiepiſcopi he is called) or Knight, John de Cobeham: Some ſay to his Brother William, to hold of him and his Succeſſors, ſaith Philpot, in Knight Service: Which was a Cuſtom very uſual among the great Prelates, till King Edward the Iſt growing jealous of their Power and Grandeur, reſtrained them by the Statute called, Quia Emptores Terrarum, which prohibits for the Future all Creations of Manors. This William de Cobeham, ſaith Philpot, in Gratitude to the Donation, altered his Name from Cobeham to Pluckley: And Wever ſaith, his Family continued here 200 Years. His Grandſon Sir Richard de Pluckley, flouriſhed here in the Reigns of King Stephen and King Henry the IId, and founded the Pariſh Church here: But his Deſcendant William de Pluckley, leaving only a Daughter Agnes, ſhe carried this Manor to her Husband John Surenden, Eſq; and by a Daughter of this Name, viz. Agnes, Daughter of John Surenden, it went in Marriage again to James Haut; and he alſo left Two Daughters Coheirs; one of which married a Goldwell; and Chriſtian the other was the Wife of John Dering, Eſq; and ſo brought Pluckley into that Family.

Philpot thinks, that the Ancient Eſtate of the Derings lay at Stamford near Hithe; becauſe he finds that Normanus de Morinis married Kyneburga, Daughter and Heir of Deringius; whoſe Son called himſelf Deringus de Morinis, and married Elveva, Siſter and Heir of Alanus de Heyton, by which Match came to him the Manor of Heyton in Stamford aforeſaid; and from him it regularly deſcended to Richard Fitzdering; and he was the firſt who left the Name de Morinis, and wrote himſelf Dering; and died poſſeſſed of this Manor of Heyton in the 42d Year of King Henry the IIId. And hence are the Derings above-named all derived; and in particular that Sir Edward Dering, Knight and Baronet, who built the finely ſituated and elegant Seat at Surenden; where is a very good good Library, the Uſe of which I do hereby, with all Reſpect and Gratitude, acknowledge was kindly afforded me, and from whence I had ſome good Helps towards the Compiling of this Hiſtory. But

But I have before alſo taken notice, that this Eminent Family had anciently an Eſtate at Lydd, there being ſeveral Lands there which bear their Name, and are called Derings Lands.

2. Pevington. This Place was formerly a Pariſh, and had a Church dedicated to St. Mary, but it hath been long down, and the Pariſh adjoined to Pluckley; it was a Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 5*l.* 13*s.* 4*d. per Ann.* And it had very anciently Owners of its own Name. Sir Ralph de Pevington flouriſhed here in the Time of King John and King Henry the IIId, whoſe Son Sir William de Pevington died poſſeſs'd of it in the Cloſe of that latter King's Reign, but at length by a Daughter Amabilia it went in Marriage to John Gobion: This Lady lies buried in the Church of the Auſtin Friars in Canterbury; and is ſaid to have been a great Benefactreſs to that Houſe; ſhe died about the Year 1405; and left by Gobion an only Daughter, Julian, who about the 27th Year of King Henry the VIIth, carried this Eſtate in Marriage to William Brent, whoſe Son Thomas Brent's Daughter Margaret, was married to John Dering, and poſſeſſed him of this Eſtate, and from him it deſcended down to Sir Edward Dering, who gave it after his Mother's Death, who was the Widow of Sir Anthony Dering, to Mr. Henry Dering, the Eldeſt Son by his laſt Lady, where it was in Philpot's Time.

Darel in his Manuſcript de Caſtellis Cantiæ in the Heralds Office, ſaith, that this Pevington was given by King Henry the IIId to Godfride de Say, for the Repair of Arſicks or Say's Tower in Dover Caſtle; which how to reconcile with Philpot's Account above-given, I don't know.

3. Malmains is alſo a Manor here, which had very anciently Poſſeſſors of its own Name: Eleanor, Wife of John de Malmains, died poſſeſs'd of it in the 14th Year of King Edward the IIId, hence it deſcended to Henry, and thence to John Malmains; both buried in Pluckley Church: The latter of theſe had a Son of his own Name; and two Coheirs there were of this Name, who married to Goldwell and Monins: Another former Female Heir of the Malmains was married to William de Grandiſon. But Philpot ſaith this Manor came into the Dering Family by Purchaſe; where it continued in his Time.

4. Shurland or Sherland in this Pariſh. did anciently belong to the Bettenhams of Bettenham in Cranbroke; one of which Name Stephen de Bettenham was one of the Recognitores Magnæ Aſſiſæ in King John's Reign; and in this Family, by an uninterrupted Deſcent, did it continue in Philpot's Time.

PLUMSTEDE lies at the North Weſt Side of Kent, adjoining to the River Thames, about a Mile North Eaſtward from Woolwich, in the Bailiwick of Sutton Dartford, Hundred of Little and Leſnes, Lath of Sutton-at-Hone, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and upper one of Juſtices in that Lath.

'Tis in the Deanery of Dartford, and Dioceſe of Rocheſter. A Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 6*l.* 18*s.* 4*d. per Ann.* The Church is dedicated to St. Nicholas; is built of Stone, the Tower of Brick, and is without any Thing remarkable in it.

Places of Note here:

1. Plumſtede Manor. The Liberty of St. Auſtin claims over the Manor of Plumſtede; which A. D. 960. was given to the Abbey of St. Auſtin's in Canterbury by King Edgar, as Thorn ſaith: And as the Quantity of 4 Plow-Lands. But Godwine Earl of Kent did afterwards take it from the Abbey, and ſettled it upon his Son Toſtus: However on the Conqueſt it was reſtored to it again by King William the Iſt, and continued in the Poſſeſſion of the Convent, till the general Diſſolution in King Henry the VIIIth's Time, when it was granted by that King to Sir Edward Boughton of Burwaſh Court below mentioned; and in Philpot's Time was in the Poſſeſſion of his Deſcendant Mr. Boughton.

The Abbot of St. Auſtin in the 36th Year of King Henry the IIId obtained a Charter of Freewarren for this Manor: As alſo a Tueſdays Market, and a Three Days Fair, to begin annually on the Eve of St. Nicholas; and in the 7th Year of King Edward the Iſt theſe were allowed to him before the Juſtices Itinerant for this County.

Plumſtede had anciently Laws and Ordinances for the better ſecuring the Merſh Land againſt the Irruptions and Inundations of the Thames, which were like thoſe of Romney Merſh: An Account of which you have in Raſtalls Abridgement; and they were made for the Inning and preſerving of Plumſted Level. The firſt of theſe was made in the 22d Year of King Henry the VIIIth, C. 3. and is printed: The ſecond in the 14th Year of Queen Elizabeth, and was not printed; The third in the 13th Year of that Queen, and was printed C. 13. And the Laſt was in the 27th Year of that Princeſs, and printed alſo, C. 27.

2. Burwaſh-Court is an eminent Seat in this Pariſh, and did belong to the Noble Family of Burgherſt or Burwaſh. Bartholomew de Burgherſt died poſſeſs'd of it in the 28th Year of King Edward the IIId; whoſe Son of the ſame Name and Lord Burwaſh, ſold it with much other Land to Walter de Pavely, Knight of the Garter, in which Name this Eſtate continued till King, Richard the IId's Reign; and then it was alienated to William Chichley, Alderman of London, by whoſe Grand-Daughter and Heir, Agnes, it went to John Tatterſhall of Well-Hall in Eltham; and he, about the Beginning of King Henry the VIth, conveyed it to Boughton, where it ſtaid till King Charles the Iſt, and then was ſold to Mr. Rowland Wiſeman of London: whoſe Daughter carried it firſt to Dr. —— Criſp; and then by a ſecond Marriage to Colonel —— Row of Hackney, where the Poſſeſſion was in Philpot's Time.

A. D. 1279. The Convent of Leſnes began to encloſe their Marſh in Plumſtede Level, and in the 12th Year Inned it compleatly, and made it turn to very good Account: And thus it continued till A. D. 1527. but then the Thames made an Irruption both here and at Earith; and this being neglected at firſt, was not remedied till many Years after: And if King Henry the VIIIth with his Treaſure, and Sir Edward Boughton with his Induſtry, had not interpoſed, the whole Level of that rich Land had been loſt: And tho' ſome Parts were recovered, yet 2000 Acres lay ſtill under Water, and brought no Profit to the Owners, but a little Fiſhing and cutting of Reed. In Queen Elizabeth's Reign ſeveral Merchants and Gentlemen, and particularly one Acontius an Italian, undertook to drain it, and inn it a-new; for which they were to have half the Land ſo recovered: And ſeveral Acts of Parliament paſſed in 14, 23, and 27th Years of that Queen; whereby the leſſer Breach was firſt ſtopp'd, and thereby about Six Hundred Acres gained: And afterwards in the Year 1587, they recovered 1000 Acres more; of which the Inners had one half, and an eighth Part of the Remainder. But the great Breach was not made up in Lambard's Time; though by its ſwarving up, it gave Hopes of being cured in Proceſs of Time.

In the 8th Year of Queen Elizabeth the Commiſſioners of Sewers certified that 600 Acres was inned; and that Jacobus Acontius did alſo get ſome more drained, but the Tides broke in upon it, and flowed it again: So that he not being able to recover it, he deputed John Baptiſta Caſtilion, and others to do it; who alſo recovered about 600 Acres: On which a Diviſion was made of the Lands into Eaſt and Weſt Merſh; and Eaſt Merſh was allotted to the ſaid Acontius; and Weſt Merſh to the Owners, &c. And Acontius aſſigned over Eaſt-Merſh to Caſtilion, and his Partners, in Conſideration of their Charge, which came to 5000 l. And they had Power given them for 8 Years to come, to go on to inn the Reſt of the drowned Land; and to have a Moiety of it to their own Uſe: And in the 14th Year of Queen Elizabeth they had eight Years more added to their Term. After this in the 23d Year of Queen Elizabeth, another Act paſſed reciting the former, and allowing yet two Years more to the Undertakers, with ſeveral other good Encouragements, which as I ſuppoſe made the Thing ſucceed.

But yet in the 4th Year of King James the Iſt, a Petition was brought into Parliament for inning and draining ſome Lands, ſaid to lye in the drowned Marſhes of Leſnes and Fants: And one Mr. William Burrell of Redcliff was the Undertaker; but how he ſucceeded I don't know. See Dugdale's Hiſtory of Imbanking and Draining, p. 65.

3. Fulhams-Place here, was given to Leſnes Abbey in Exchange for Lands in Chiſelhurſt, Orpington, and Bromley, in the 11th Year of King Henry the VIth. Tower Records. Patent. Part. 1. M. 13.

POSTLING, lies towards the South Eaſt Part of Kent, about two Miles and an half Northward from Hithe, in the Bailiwick of Stouting, Hundred of Heane, Lath of Shipway, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath.

'Tis in the Deanery of Eleham, and Dioceſe of Canterbury: And the Church is dedicated to St. Mary: A Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 6 l. 8 s. 2 d.

In the Church-yard riſeth one of the Spring-Heads of the River called the greater Stoure.

Places of Note here.

1. Poſtling Manor. This Place was very anciently Part of the Eſtate of the great Family of the Columbers: And Philip de Columbers died poſſeſs'd of it in the 5th Year of King Edward the Iſt. And in the 21ſt Year of that Prince I find by the Tower Records, Johannes de Columbers claiming this Manor, as holding it in Capite of the King, (in Quantity 2 Knights Fees) which Philpot it ſeems look'd over, when he ſaith he could find no more but Philip of this Family, who had reſided here. From hence ſomehow it went into the Poſſeſſion of Audley; for Hugh de Audley held it in King Edward the IId, and IIId's Reigns; and alienated it to Delves of Delves Court in Cheſhire: But here it ſtaid not long, for in the 43d Year of King Edward the IIId, John de Delves ſold it to Richard Earl of Arundel, in whoſe Family it continued for many Deſcents; but in the 38th Year of King Henry the VIIIth it was ſold to Sir Anthony Aucher; and about the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth it went the ſame Way to Thomas Smith, Cuſtomer to that Princeſs; and thence deſcended to his great Grandſon Philip, Lord Viſcount Strangford, the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

Darell in his Manuſcript Hiſtory of Dover Caſtle, ſaith, that ſome Lands in this Pariſh were by the Crown given to maintain and repair Penchefter Tower in Dover Caſtle.

2. Henewood, is a Manor in Poſtling, from whence Philpot ſaith the Honywoods of Elmſtede, and thoſe of Pett in Charing do derive their Sirname; and ſo the Honywoods of Elmeſtede do themſelves ſay. Edmund de Honywood, who in the Reign of King Henry the IIId, was ſo great a Benefactor to the Priory of Horton, in this County, was then reſident here at Henewood: And in this Ancient and Eminent Family doth this Place ſtill continue.

Dr. White Kennet Dean of Peterborough, in his Parochial Antiquities, p. 609. ſaith, he remembers to have ſeen in the Chancel of this Church a ſmall Square Tablet of Braſs, with an old Latin Inſcription on it, expreſſing the Time when the Church was dedicated to the Bleſſed Virgin. And he ſhews that either ſuch an Inſcription, or more often a Picture or Image of the Saint to which any Church was dedicated, was uſually preſerved in the Chancel in former Times.

At a Synod held at Celcyth, under Wulfred Archbiſhop of Canterbury, A. D. 816. in which Synod the firſt Form of Conſecrating Churches in England was eſtabliſhed; here, I ſay, it was ordained, that when any Church is built it ſhall be conſecrated by the proper Dioceſan; and he ſhall provide that the Saint to whom the Church is dedicated, be pictured, engraved, or ſome how expreſſed, either on the Wall, the Altar, or in ſome proper Tablet.

And Archbiſhop Winchelſea made a Decree, which was confirmed by his Succeſſor Walter Reynolds, that the Pariſhioners in all Pariſh Churches in this Province ſhould do the like, and preſerve an Image or Picture of the Saint, in the Chancel of that Church which was dedicated to him.

Dr. William Sandcroft, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, about the Year 1688, the Leaſe of the Appropriation of the great Tithes and Glebe of this Pariſh being expired, fixed them at a Reſerved Rent to the Uſe and Benefit of the Vicar; by which generous Act of Charity he doubled the Value of the poor Living. Idem, p. 444.

PRESTON near Feverſham, Preſtetune, lies towards the North ſide of Kent, about a Mile Southward from Feverſham, in the Bailiwick and Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and upper one of Juſtices in that Lath.

The Liberty of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury claims over the Manor of Preſton, and ſo much of the Pariſh as is within the Manors of Copton Hammarſh, or Selgrave; and that of St. Auſtin claims over the reſt of the Pariſh, as being within the Hundred of Feverſham, which belonged to that Abbey. 'Tis in the Deanery of Oſpringe, and Dioceſe of Canterbury: A Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 8 l. 12 s. 6 d. per Ann. The Church is dedicated to St. Catherine. It is ſmall, but neat, and hath a Spire Steeple; the Eaſt End of the Chancel is handſomely Wainſcotted; with a fair Communion-Table. On the North ſide of it is a very fair and large Monument in white Marble of Roger Boyle, Eſq; deſcended from the Boyles in Hertfordſhire; 'tis without Date, but expreſſes that he was of this Pariſh; and that he married Joan, Daughter of Mr. John Nayler of Canterbury. Here alſo lie buried three Sons and two Daughters of his, viz. Sir Richard Boyle, Baron of Youghall, Viſcount Dungaran, and Earl of Cork, who married a Fenton. Another Son who was a Biſhop, for his Figure ſtands about the Monument in that Habit, but no Account where. And Hugh Boyle who was killed in the Wars, and died without Iſſue.

The Daughters were Elizabeth, who was married to Peirce Power, Eſq;, and Mary, Wife of Sir Richard Smith.

Here

Here is alſo interred the Honourable Richard Boyle, Grandſon of Richard Earl of Burlington and Cork; as alſo the Lady Elizabeth Clifford, Daughter to the Earl of Cumberland.

In the Church are alſo Memorials of William Manys; 1463. Of Valentine Barret, 1440. Of Eleanora Lee, 1440. Of John Bourne, 1473. Of Thomas Finch, 1615. With ſeveral Stones over the Hulſes.

Places of Note here:

1. Preſton Manor. This was give to the Monks of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury, by King Edmund, Son of Queen Ediva; and in Domeſday ſtands thus, Preſtetune eſt Manerium Monachorum, & eſt de Victu eorum; & T. E. R. ſe defendebat pro i. Sull. & nunc ſimiliter, & eſt appretiatum xv l.

To the ſame Priory did anciently belong the Manors of

2. Copton. 3. Ham-marſh. 4. Selgrave, which were Originally of the ſame Donation; and together with that of Preſton, ſtaid here till the General Diſſolution of the Monaſteries in King Henry the VIIIth's Reign, and then were in his 31ſt Year ſettled on the new Cathedral Church of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury.

5. Makenade; this anciently, and for a long time, had Poſſeſſors of its own Name: William Makenade was Sheriff of Kent in the 33d Year of King Edward the IIId, and kept his Shrievalty here: His Grandſon William Makenade, in the 8th Year of King Henry the IVth, died without Iſſue Male; but by Conſtance his only Daughter, it went in Marriage to John Waterſhip, and by him ſhe had a Daughter Margaret, who was married to Henry London; and another, Joan, Wedded to Thomas Matthew; which latter, on the Diviſion of the Eſtate, had this Seat; and in his Name it ſtaid a good while, but at length was ſold to Maycott; and thence, about the beginning of Queen Elizabeth, went the ſame way to Martin James, Eſq;, one of the Regiſters in the Court of Chancery; whoſe great Grandſon was in Poſſeſſion of it in Philpot's Time.

6. Perry-Court, this was once the Seat and Inheritance of a Family of the Name of Barret, which began here about the Reign of King Edward the IId, for before it was in the Poſſeſſion of John de Perry, to whom it afforded a Sirname.

Valentine Barret, Philpot ſaith, was the laſt of this Name that held this Eſtate: He married Cicely Daughter of Marcellus At-Leeze, and Niece to Sir Richard At-Leeze, and left a Daughter Ciceley, who marrying John Darell of Calehill, Eſq; carried this Eſtate into that Eminent Family; where it ſtaid till King Henry the VIIIth's Reign, and then was divided between two Brothers, Sir James Darel, and John Darel. The latter of which alienated his part to Stephen Jennins; who ſold it to Thomas Mitchel; and he ſent it the ſame way to Robert Dokket; as he did to Alan Percy; and this Alan Percy, in the 14th Year of King Henry the VIIIth, ſold it to John Park; who purchaſed the other Moiety of Sir James Darel, and ſo became entire Owner of Perry Court: But by his only Daughter Elizabeth, it went again by Marriage to John Roper of Lingſtede, Eſq; who in the 20th Year of Queen Elizabeth, ſold it to William Finch; by whoſe Daughter and Co-heir it went in Marriage to Sir Drew Drury of Norfolk, and he in the beginning of King James the Iſt, alienated it to Thomas Bennet, Eſq;, in whoſe Deſcendant the Poſſeſſion continued in Philpot's Time.

7. Weſtwood is another Place in Preſton, which anciently was part of the Eſtate of the great Family of the Poynings. Michael, who was Son of Thomas Lord Poynings, died poſſeſſed of it in the 43d Year of King Edward the IIId, as appears by Rot. Eſc. N. 14; and hence it deſcended in an uninterrupted Succeſſion down to Sir Edward Poynings; who dying in the 14th Year of King Henry the VIIIth, left behind him no lawful Iſſue, nor any collateral Kindred who could claim his Eſtate as Heirs at Law; and conſequently this, amongſt the reſt of it, eſcheated to the Crown, where it ſtaid till King Henry the VIIIth, in his 36th Year, granted it to John Limſey; and he not many Years after, ſold it to Alderman Garret of London, Anceſtor to Sir John Garret of Hertfordſhire, Baronet, and in him the Poſſeſſion continued in Philpot's Time.

8. Selgrave, vulgarly Selgrove, is a Manor here, which Philpot hath wrongly placed in Oſpringe; and which I have mentioned above as belonging to the Church of Canterbury: But if Philpot's Account be true, it came not into the Poſſeſſion of the Priory ſo early as I have there ſuppoſed; for he ſaith, that in King Edward the Iſt's Time it was in the Poſſeſſion of the Norwood Family; where it ſtaid not long before it came into the Name of Spigurnel; thence it was ſold to John Winchelſea, and to the Convent of Chriſt-Church, in the 16th Year of King Richard the IId, and here it continued till the general Diſſolution of the Monaſteries; and then he ſaith King Henry the VIIIth granted it to George Barley, who ſold it to Sondes of Throwley, and thence it went the ſame way to Cleve, and there the Poſſeſſion ſeems to have been in Philpot's Time, if his Account be right.

I believe I have been informed that part of this Manor of Selgrave is in Sheldwick Pariſh.

PRESTON near Fordwich, lies towards the Eaſt End of Kent, by the Stoure, about two Miles and a half to the Eaſt from Fordwich, in the Bailiwick of Bridge and Petham, Hundred of Preſton, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. In the Deanery of Bridge, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Church is dedicated to St. Mildred. A Vicarage, and rated in the King's Books at 9 l. 15 s. per Ann.

The Liberty of St. Auſtin claims here, and that of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims over the Manor of Preſton; which anciently belonged to that Church, and having been taken away, was reſtored to it by King Edmund, A. D. 941. Afterwards, in the Time of King William the Iſt, this Manor was again alſo detained from the Church by Odo Earl of Kent, and Brother to the King. But by Archbiſhop Lanfrank's means was recovered alſo again.

Preſton was once the Inheritance of Roger de Leybourn, and came to him in Right of his Wife Juliana, and he claimed all Privileges of a Manor and Freewarren here in the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt; and afterwards being made Lord Leybourn, he had a Grant of a Market on Mondays, and a Fair for three Days at the Feaſt of St. Croſs for his Manor of Preſton, in the 35th Year of King Edward the Iſt.

His Daughter and Heir Juliana, who firſt married John de Haſtings, Kinſman (a) of Laurence de Haſtings Earl of Pembroke, carried it firſt to him, and then to a ſecond Husband William de Clinton Earl of Huntington, and Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports in the 12th Year of King Edward the IIId, but for want of Iſſue by either Husband, it Eſcheated to the Crown, and was given by King Richard the IId to Sir Simon de Burleigh; on whoſe Attainder, coming again to the Crown, it was in part granted to the Abbey of St. Mary's on Tower-Hill, and ſome part of it to the Priory of Canons Langley, ſometimes called Childrens Langley. On the Suppreſſion it was, in the 35th Year of King Henry the VIIIth, granted to Sir Thomas Moile, whoſe Daughter and Co-heir Anne Moile, carried it by Marriage to Sir Thomas Kempe, who left four Daughters; one of which, Anne, carried this Eſtate to her Huſband Sir Thomas Chichley of Cambridgeſhire; whoſe Son Thomas Chichley, ſold it to Mr. Spence of Baukham in Suſſex.

(a) That he was Kinſman only, and not his Son; See proved by Philpot in his Villare Cantian. p. 273.

Sir Simon de Burleigh obtained a Grant for a Market at Preſton on Fridays; and a Fair for three Days at the Feaſt of St. Mildred, in the 10th Year of King Richard the IId.

In a Gravel-Pit in this Pariſh near Golder's Bridge, ſome Silver Coins were found by one Henry Tiddiman a Quaker.

PROMEHILL, alias Bromehill, which ſee; a Pariſh formerly, but now deſolate; it lies between Kent and Suſſex, in Romney Marſh.

QUEENBOROUGH, lies at the North ſide of Kent, in the Iſle of Shepey, about four Miles Northward from Milton, in the Bailiwick of Milton, Lath of Scray, and Eaſt Diviſion of the County.

It is a Corporation, and within the Diviſion of its own Juſtices, and the Liberty of the ſaid Corporation claims over it.

It was made a Borough (and now ſends two Burgeſſes to Parliament) by King Edward the IIId, in Honour of Queen Philippa his Lady.

That Prince alſo Rebuilt the Caſtle here, which had formerly been of Ancient Date, Enlarged and Fortified it; and in King Henry the IVth's Time the Fortifications were Surveyed and improved by William of Wickham, afterwards Biſhop of Wincheſter. The Works were again alſo repaired by King Henry the VIIIth, but now they are all Demoliſhed; and there is ſcarce any remainder or footſteps of the Place where the Caſtle ſtood to be ſeen.

'Tis in the Deanery of Sittingbourn, and Dioceſe of Canterbury, and the Church is dedicated to the Holy or St. Trinity: But 'tis reckoned as a Chapel, and ſo is not valued in the King's Books.

Of the Caſtle here, a more particular Account will be given in the Chapter of Caſtles.

This Place had, by virtue of their Charter, which bears Date A. D. 1366, the Privilege of being a Free Borough, and of electing a Mayor and two Bailiffs yearly, and of holding two Markets Weekly on Mondays and Thurſdays; and two Annual Fairs, one March 24, and the other at St. James's-Tide.

The Liberties of the Corporation extend by Water from the Point of Land joining to the River Medway, to King's Ferry. The chief Trade of the Town is now Oyſter-Fiſhing; tho' I ſaw a good Coperas Work here, which belongs to ſeveral Perſons; and of which a full Account ſhall be given in its proper Place.

This Town was formerly unhealthful, and ſubjected the Inhabitants to Agues and Intermitting Fevers; but it hath been lately almoſt all new Built, and is very well paved, with well-made Drains to carry away the Water, which before ſtagnated and putrifyed in the Town. But now their Cellars are all clear and dry; and the Slab and Filth is all carried away from their Streets; and conſequently the People enjoy here a much better ſtate of Health than they uſed formerly to do.

Lambard ſaith, that in his Time there was a noted Place in Shepey called Kingsborow, which was diſtinct and different from this, and ſeated in the middle of the Iſle; of which more when I ſpeak of Shepey.

RAINHAM, Renham, lies towards the North ſide of Kent, about four Miles Eaſtward from Rocheſter, in the Bailiwick and Hundred of Milton, Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and upper Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath.

'Tis in the Deanery of Sittingbourn, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; the Church is called St. Margarets, in the Chancel of which are or were Memorials of the Interment of Bloor, Founder of that Chapel about 180 Years ago; of Donet near 300 Years ſince; and of Painter about 160 Years ago. The Church is large, and hath a very fine Tower, with a Clock. A Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 14 l. 4 s. 8 d. per Ann. In it is a fine Marble Statue of Nicholas Tuſton Earl of Thanet, whoſe Father married a Daughter of Richard Sackvile Earl of Dorſet, and of the Earl himſelf; and of a Daughter of the Earl of Burlington; another of George Tuſton, Son of John Earl of Thanet, and Brother of Nicholas Earl of Thanet.

In the Chancel a Tomb and Monument of Thomas Norris, Eſq;, one of the Maſters of the Trinity Houſe, 1624. William Aucher, Eſq; 1513. John Norden, Eſq; 1580.

Places of Note here:

1. Rainham, with Merecourt, in the Reign of King Henry the Iſt, was the Eſtate of the Noble Family of Camville. Robert de Camville was one of thoſe Kentiſh Gentlemen that aſſiſted King Richard the Iſt at the Siege of Acon in Paleſtine; and his Son accompanied King Henry the IIId in his Expedition againſt the Welſh, in the 42d Year of his Reign. Geoffry de Camville was ſummon'd to Parliament as a Baron in King Edward the Iſt's Time But at length this Family gave way to another very conſiderable one; for it appears that Henry de Leybourn, or of Leybourn Caſtle, was poſſeſſed of this Eſtate in the 28th Year of King Edward the Iſt, as was Thomas de Leybourn in the 35th Year of the ſame King. His Brother William de Leybourn was his Heir, and died poſſeſs'd of the greateſt part of theſe Lands in the 3d Year of King Edward the IId; from him it went to his Kinſman Roger de Leybourn, whoſe only Daughter Juliana, (for her great Eſtate called the Infanta of Kent) carried it to both her Husbands, but had Iſſue by neither, and ſurviving them, died poſſeſſed of it in the 43d Year of King Edward the IIId; and for want of Heirs, it Eſcheated to the Crown, and was by that Prince, in the 50th Year of his Reign, granted to the Abbey of St. Mary Grace on Tower-Hill; and there it continued till the General Suppreſſion of the Monaſteries; when coming again to the Crown, it was in the 2d Year of King Edward the VIth, granted to Sir Thomas Cheyney, Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports; whoſe Son Henry Lord Cheyney, in the 13th Year of Queen Elizabeth, ſold it to Richard Thornhill, Eſq; who left it by Will to his ſecond Son Sir John Thornhill; and his Eldeſt Son, Charles Thornhill, Eſq; was in Poſſeſſion here in Philpot's Time.

2. Silham is a Place in Rainham which once was the Poſſeſſion of a Family called Donett, ſome of which lie in the Chancel of the Church. John Donett died poſſeſs'd of this Eſtate and part of the Manor of Rainham, in the 30th Year of King Edward the IIId; and in his Grandſon John Donett the Male-Line failed, and Sillam was carried by Margery his only Daughter, to her Husband John St. Leger, Eſq;, who was Sheriff of Kent in the 9th Year of King Henry the IVth, and was deſcended from Hugh St. Leger, one of the Recognitores Magnæ Aſſiſæ in the 2d and 7th of King John. But this Eſtate continued not very long in this Name, any more than their other Eſtate in this Pariſh, for Silham was ſold to Bloor, who was Founder of the Chapel in this Church, and lies buried there. And the reſt went the ſame way to Cheney, who ſold it to Thornhill.

Olympia, ſole Daughter of Chriſtopher Bloor, married Sir John Tufton in King Henry the VIIIth's Reign, from which Match this Manor of Silham is come into the Family and Poſſeſſion of the preſent Earl of Thanet.

This was the Ancient Seat of the Donets and the Bloors; but that of the Right Honourable the Earl of Thanet is now at Hothfield, (vulgò Hot-feild) near Aſhford.

RECULVER, in Latin Regulbium, or as Twine will have it Reculſum, in Saxon Raculf-Minſter, which Lambard fancies to be derived from the Britiſh Word Racor, which ſignifies forward; becauſe this Place ſtands out towards the Sea. Harriſon will have its Name to be taken from one Raculfus, who built, he ſaith, a Monaſtery here. But 'tis certain that the Monaſtery was built by one Baſſas, (a) and that this Place was called Raculf before that time. The Learned Dr. Batteley, in his Antiqu. Rutupinæ, thinks rather that it takes its Name from the Britiſh Word Rhag, which ſignifies before; and Gwylfa a Watch; or perhaps from Golen a Light; and hence he thinks the Latin word Regulbium may be derived; it having very early a Watch Tower, where no doubt Lights were kept to direct Ships in the Night; and 'tis the firſt Light that can be ſeen after you come out of the Thames Mouth. The Inhabitants pronounce it Raculvey, and in the 27th Year of King Edward the IIId I find it written Recolvre.

(a) Vid. Sax. Chro. in A. 669.

The Learned Mr. Burton, in his Antoninus, obſerves, that all Places ending in Cheſter, take their Names from the Ruins of the old Roman Caſtra; the Ancient Stations about the Wall, being by our Northern People called Cheſters to this Day; and Mr. Somner ſaith he hath obſerved, that in a Charter of King Edmund, A. D. 784, this Place is called Raculf Cheſter.

Reculver lies at the North ſide of Kent, near the Iſle of Thanet, adjoining to the Sea, about Seven Miles North Eaſtward from Canterbury, in the Baliwick of Bridge and Petham, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of the Juſtices in that Lath. In the Dioceſe of Canterbury, and Deanery of Weſt-Bere. The Church is called St. Maries. A Vicarage, and valued with Hoth Chapel at 9 l. 12 s. 3 d. in the King's Books.

The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims over the Manor of Reculver; and the Liberty of St. Auſtin over the reſt of the Pariſh, as being in the Hundred of Blengate, which belongs to that Abbey: But anciently Reculver was an Hundred of it ſelf.

The Church hath been long, and ſtill is Famous for its two Spire Steeples at the Weſt End, which make a very good and uſeful Sea Mark; and in our Sea Charts are called the Reculvers; of which I have here given you a Draught taken upon the Place (b).

(b) See the Plate.

Kilburn ſaith, this was once a Collegiate Church, but that I don't find; and perhaps he may have miſ-led himſelf into that Aſſertion, by what he ſaith of the Governor of the Monaſtery here, who he ſaith was not called an Abbot, but a Dean. And 'tis certain from a Charter dated before the Conqueſt, that one Givellard, Governor here, had the Title of Dean, Vid. Somner, R. Forts, p. 82. But that, as I have ſhewed in Oſpringe, was a common thing in thoſe Monaſteries which had Secular Canons.

Leland calls the Chancel here by the Name of Cheir, and ſaith, that at the entring into it, there was one of the faireſt and moſt ſtately Croſſes that ever he ſaw; it was Nine Foot in height, and ſtood up like a fair Column: The Baſis was a great unwrought Stone: The ſecond Stone was round, and had curiouſly wrought upon it the Images of Chriſt, and ſome of his Apoſtles, with Sayings coming out of their Mouths painted in great Roman Letters: The next Stone contained the Story of the Paſſion of Jeſus: The next above that had the 12 Apoſtles on it: The Fifth Stone had our Saviour nailed to the Croſs, with a Suſtentaculum under his Feet; and the uppermoſt Stone of all was in the Figure of a Croſs.

Philpot ſaith there was a very ancient Manuſcript Book of the Goſpels in the Church, in great Roman Capitals, and in the Borders thereof a Cryſtal Stone thus Inſcribed, Claudia Atepicus, which what to make of I can't tell. On the North ſide of the Church under an Arch, he ſaith, was the Painted Figure of a Biſhop.

At the upper End of the South Iſle, Wever ſaith he ſaw a Monument of an Antick Form mounted with two Spires; wherein, as the Inhabitants have it by Tradition, lies the Body of Ethelbert, one of the Saxon Kings of Kent, who had his Palace Royal in Reculver, and was buried in this Church under an Arch. Kilburn ſaith this was Ethelbert the Thirteenth King of Kent, and the ſecond of that Name; or Ethelbert Surnamed Pren; or rather (as I ſhould think, if he be not known to be buried elſewhere) King Ethelbert the firſt Chriſtian King of Kent: But this is ſo uncertain, that nothing can be determined about it.

There are now no Remains left of either the Croſs above-mentioned, or of this Monument of King Ethelbert; only an ordinary Inſcription, that once there was ſuch a Tomb.

The Parſonage, ſaith Kilburn, about 320 Years ago, was appropriated by Robert Kilwarby Archbiſhop of Canterbury, to the Hoſpitals of Harbledown and Northgate without Canterbury; and afterwards John Stratford Archbiſhop, got the ſame Appropriated by King Edward the IIId to the Archbiſhoprick, which you may ſuppoſe now wanted the great Tithes more than the Hoſpitals, becauſe Archbiſhop Winchelſea had made a perpetual Vicarage at Reculver.

The Parſon or Rector here had once the ſame Juriſdiction within his own Pariſh, and the Chapelries annexed, as the Commiſſary of Canterbury now hath: Somner, R. Forts, p. 84. The Church was an Exempt and Mother Church, having Hoth and Hearn, and in the Iſle of Thanet, St. Nicholas and All-Saints, anciently Chapels of Eaſe to it. The Vicars of St. Nicholas and All-Saints paid each a Stipend of 3 l. 3 s. 4 d. he of Hearn 2 l. per Ann. to this Rector. And the Inhabitants of theſe Chapelries paid to the Repairs of Reculver Church, till Archbiſhop Warham's Time; when a Decree was made, that the People of each Place ſhould redeem the future Burden of Repairs by an Annual Stipend in Money; for the neglect of Payment of which, on a certain Day, they were to be liable as before.

In the Chancel of this Church are Memorials of the Interment of Sir Cavaleiro Maycoe, of John Sandway, and of Ralph Brook, who was York Herald, A. D. 1625. This Gentleman married Cobb of this County; and ſeems to have been the Man, who made the Remarks on Cambden's Britannia, and which poſſibly he did out of Spite and Revenge, becauſe he miſſed the Place of Clarencieux. The Author of Cambden's Life ſaith, that this Man's Name was in reality Brookſmouth, but that he contracted it to Brook, becauſe he thought it ſounded better.

Places

Places of Note here:

1. Reculver Manor; this Philpot ſaith was, with all its Paſture, Glebe, and Merſh Land, with the Benefit of the Adjacent Sea-ſhore, A. D. 949, given to the Monaſtery of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury, by King Eadred, in the Preſence of his Queen Edgiva, and of Archbiſhop Odo, and there were then in it 25 Manſions or Dwelling-Houſes.

And in the Domeſday Survey is this Entry:

Raculf, T. E. R. ſe defendebat pro viij. Sull. & eſt appretiatum XL l. & II l. & V s. tres minutes minus.

A. D. 1130, William Archbiſhop of Canterbury gave 8 l. of Annual Rent out of his Manor of Reculver to the Monks of Chriſt-Church for ever; which Gift was afterwards confirmed by St. Edmund Archbiſhop of Canterbury in King Henry the Iſt's Reign. See Somner's Cant. Append. N. xxxvi.

Leland ſaith there was once here a neglected deſolate Chapel, out of the Church-yard; this ſome will have to be the Remains of another Pariſh Church, before the Abbey was Suppreſſed, and the Manor given to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, as above.

An Account of the Monaſtery here will be given in its proper Place.

2. Helburgh is an ancient Seat in this Pariſh, which formerly was in the Poſſeſſion of Nicholas Tingewick, originally deſcended from a Family and Place of that Name in Buckinghamſhire; he had a large Eſtate about Dartford, and died ſeized of this in the 14th Year of King Edward the IId. Next to this Family, that of Pine were Owners of this Place; James de la Pine was Sheriff of Kent in the 26th and 27th Years of King Edward the IIId, and died poſſeſs'd of it in the 33d Year of that King's Reign; a Deſcendant of his, another James Pine, about the beginning of King Henry the IVth, ſold this Eſtate to Cheyney, in which Family it ſtaid till Queen Elizabeth's Reign, and then Henry Lord Cheyney alienated this to Maycott, whoſe Son Sir Cavaleiro Maycott, was an Eminent Courtier in the latter End of Queen Elizabeth, and the beginning of King James the Iſt's Reigns: But he ſold this Manor to Sir Chriſtopher Clive, who ſent it the ſame way to Mr. Coutry; and thence it went again by Sale to Sir Edward Maſters of Canterbury; whoſe Son Richard Maſters, Eſq; was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

A Fair is kept here annually on Sept. 1. and a Market on Tueſdays was formerly granted to it, viz. in the 7th Year of King Edward the Iſt.

This Place of Reculver hath been very Eminent in ancient Story. The old Town, or City, as ſome call it, was placed on a ſlope of the Hill down towards the Sea, and no doubt was very large and populous in ancient Times; but the Soil being a kind of Earth and Sand looſely mixed together, the Sea hath by degrees waſhed it almoſt all away, and deſtroyed it; and by that means hath diſcovered many glorious old Roman Remains and Antiquities, of which more below. Dr. Batteley, in his Antiquitates Rutupinæ, mentions a little Houſe here by the Sea-ſide, which was all built with Roman Bricks, and he thinks was the Work of the Romans themſelves: But I rather judge it might be erected long after out of thoſe Roman Bricks which might be taken from the Ruins of the Town, or rather of the Tower or Caſtle; which ſeems to have been much like that at Richborough, for Extent, Figure and Manner of Work.

It appears by the Notitia of the Weſtern Empire, ſaith Cambden, that the Tribune of the firſt Cohort of the Vetaſii lay here in Gariſon, under the Command of the Comes Litoris Saxonici, for ſo was this Coaſt then called.

This Count of the Saxon Shore had the Care of Nine Ports; as now our preſent Lord Warden, an Officer that ſeems to have been conſtituted in Imitation of him, hath of Five.

Pancirollus his Correction of the Word Vetaſii, into Veteraſii or Vetuſii, ſeems needleſs; for both Tacitus, Pliny, and Oroſius, all agree, that there were Inhabitants of a City in Gallia Belgica, which were called Betaſii; and the change of B into V is very eaſy and natural.

Reculver by the Name of Regulbium is not, I think, mentioned expreſly in any Writer more ancient than the Author of the Notitia Provinciarum above-mentioned; which is commented on by Pancirollus: And this Notitia doth not appear to have been written before the Reign of the Younger Theodoſius; and therefore 'tis highly probable, that this Place went before that, under the Name of one of the Rutupiæ, which are always ſpoken of in the Plural Number; and indeed was one of thoſe Caſtles or Forts which defended one Mouth of the old Portus Rutupinus, as Richborough Caſtle did the other. For as I ſhall ſhew more largely when I come to ſpeak of Sandwich and Richborough Caſtle, that ancient Haven had two Mouths; one here which went out into the Sea at Reculver; and another near Sandwich Haven; and the River or Road of the Sea, which run in at the latter and out at the former, made Thanet an Iſland.

Bede mentions a Water running by Reculver, which he ſaith was called Genlade: And in another Place he mentions the North Eaſt Mouth of the Water of Genlade; this Water was afterwards called Ynlade or Inlett: And when Henry Huntingdon ſaith, that King Edward, Son of King Alfred, builded at Gladmouth, no doubt it is a Contraction and a Miſtake in the Copy for Ynlade-Mouth, or Genlade-Mouth, as Lambard hath obſerved. Bede (a) ſaith alſo, that the Water Wantſume did divide the Iſle of Thanet from the Continent on both Sides; and that Reculver ſtands at the North Mouth of the Water Genlade: It ſeems very plain, that by Wantſume and Genlade he means one and the ſame Water; of which as Genlade was the Name of one End, ſo perhaps Wantſume was of the other.

(a) Bede Hiſtor. l. 5. c. 9.

And in Birchington's Hiſtory of the Archbiſhops of Canterbury, this Place of Reculver is called Genlade. Perhaps alſo the Romans called this Water by the Name of Sarra, becauſe the Anonymous Ravennas, reckons Sarra among the Britiſh Rivers, which I know not where elſe to find. This will give a good Account of the Name of Sarre, which was formerly a Pariſh lying towards the North Weſt End of this Water. In an old Manuſcript, which was communicated to me at Sandwich, it is ſaid that the Emperor Severus built Reculver Caſtle in the Iſland of Genlade.

'Tis probable that towards the Declenſion of the Roman Empire, they called both the Caſtles or Watch-Towers, one at each End of the Portus Rutupenſis, as well Regulbia as Rutupiæ; and if ſo, it will account well enough for our Sailors calling this Place always in the Plural Number, The Reculvers; unleſs you will chuſe to think that Way of Speaking comes rather from the two Steeples and Spires which are ſtill ſtanding at the Weſt End of Reculver Church.

The great Antiquity of this Place is apparent from the vaſt Number of Roman Coins, Medals, Vaſa, &c. which have been found here: Of which more preſently. And therefore no doubt at Reculver was one of the Five Roman Watch Towers or Forts, as Richborough Caſtle was another, and as at Dubris, near the Portus Lemanis, and and at Anderida there were three more. The Place of the Situation of this Watch-Tower, and alſo the Place where was the Roman Station of the Vetaſij, was certainly on the Hill where now the Church ſtands, and where alſo the Monaſtery ſtood; though between the Time of the Romans and its Monaſtick State, it certainly was alſo the Site of a Royal Palace; not only for King Ethelred the Iſt, who withdrew hither from Canterbury, when he gave Auſtin the Monk his Palace; (and the Self-Denial of the Saint was ſo Eminent, that he made no Scruple to accept it) but alſo a good while after, and as a good Author ſaith, for all his Succeſſors, the Kings of Kent. Rex Ethelbertus Reculver ſe ceſſit, &c. (b).

(b) Antiqu. Britan. p. 34.

But to come to the Demonſtrations of its flouriſhing State in the Time of the Romans; it is certain that prodigious Numbers of Roman Coins, and other Antiquities, have been found here: The Denarij Conſulares, and the Coins of all the Roman Emperors from Julius to Honorius (c); and ſharp, fine, new-coined Medals of Nero and Tiberius; which proves not only the early Settlements of the Romans here, but their Conſtancy and Continuance to.

(c) Antiqu. Rutupin.

'Tis really a ſtrange Thing that ſuch vaſt Numbers of Coins ſhould be thus buried in the Earth by the Romans; and at this Diſtance of Time 'tis much eaſier to gueſs at it, than to account juſtly and truly for it. But however ſome Things may be ſaid: As,

I. What the Saxon Chronicle hints to us in the Year 418. viz.

Her Romane geſomnodon eal the Gold hord the on Brytene wæron, & ſume on eorthan ahydon; the this hÿ nænig mon ſidthan findan ne meahte & ſume mid him on Gallia lædd on (d).

(d) Gibſ. Chr. Saxon p. 10.

That is, This Year the Romans got together all their Hords of Gold which were in Britain; and ſome they hid in the Earth, that no one might ever find them, and ſome they carried along with them into Gaul.

But this will account chiefly, if not only, for the Coins of that Time, and not for thoſe of other Emperors before that; for ſuch were not current (e).

(e) See Walker's Gr. and Rom. Hiſt. illuſtrat. by Medals, p. 15.

II. Ælias Spartianus in his Life of Peſcennius Niger ſaith, That he ordered the Soldiers, when they went into an Engagement, never to carry with them any Gold or Silver Money, leſt it ſhould prove a Prey to the Enemy, and excite them to fight the more heartily.

This ſeems to have been an old Order, and revived only by Peſcennius; but 'tis probable it did not continue long in Uſe after his Time; for the Soldiers afterwards ſeem to have been left to their Liberty, either to carry their Money with them, or to hide it ſomewhere againſt their Return. The latter of which, 'tis probable, they often choſe to do here in Britain, when they were ordered to march againſt an Enemy at any conſiderable Diſtance, or on ſome ſpeedy Expedition. And conſequently ſuch as died before their Return, muſt leave their Money in the Earth. 'Tis natural alſo enough to ſuppoſe that they buried their Money, whenever they were beſieged or attacked in a City, Station, or Camp; which may be one Reaſon why ſo much of it hath been generally found in ſuch Places.

Vaſt Numbers alſo of very ſmall Braſs Coins have been found here, beſides Gold and Silver ones in great Plenty: Theſe are either dug up at Land, or waſhed down out of the Cliffs by the Sea and Rains.

Theſe are certainly Roman; but are in Weight not above $\frac{1}{30}$ of their Drachma. They plainly appear to have been coined towards the Declenſion of the Empire; and to have been firſt caſt like our Shot into ſmall Balls or Globules, and then ſtruck to form the Impreſſion. For many ſuch Globules as theſe have been found unſtruck, with their ſpherical Forms entire, and lying together with ſuch as have been ſtruck or coined; and ſome few have been found made of Lead; and that of both Sorts, ſtruck and unſtruck.

Now this, as the Judicious Author of the Antiq. Rutupin. obſerves, bids fair for a Suppoſition, that this Place was then ſo conſiderable as to have had a Mint here. And this Conjecture receives a further Confirmation, from ſome Coins mentioned by Carolus Fraxinus (a), which have been found with theſe Words or Letters ſtruck upon them, R. RB. RT. RVPS. for 'tis much more eaſy and natural to interpret this by the Word Rutupiæ than by Roma or Ravenna. Several Medals have alſo been found here, with P. LOND. ſtamp'd upon them; which ſhews that they were coined at London.

(a) De Nummis Inferioris Ævi, p. 37.

A Gold Coin of Magnentius was found here, with a Loop to hang it about the Neck; and ſuch another I ſaw found in Wodenſburgh, an adjacent Pariſh.

The wicked Art of falſifying or coining falſe Money ſeems alſo to have been practiſed at this Mint, or at leaſt to have been in Uſe at this Time; for many Roman Coins have been found here mix'd with Tin, and that in ſuch Quantities that Dr. Batteley ſaith they would run when put into the Flame of a Candle.

The ſmall rough Braſs Pieces have uſually an Head laureated with a Diadem upon it: And on their Reverſes, Military Enſigns, Horſemen bearing down Enemies; and often the Wolf with Romulus and Remus.

Here alſo have been found the Coins called Nummi Britannici, of the Metal which they call Electrum, which contains about $\frac{1}{4}$ Part Gold, and and the reſt Braſs: And ſome have been found of Silver, with ſuch odd Characters upon them, as are neither Britiſh nor Gothick; but one would think were rather ſtruck by ſome of the Ancient Gauliſh Princes: A few of theſe are expreſſed in Tab. 2. of Camden's Britannia, laſt Edition Engliſh.

Many Pieces alſo have been found with Croſſes upon them, to ſhew they were coined by Chriſtians.

Many Quarter Pieces of the old Engliſh Silver Penny: (N. B. Stow ſaith that King Henry the Iſt, An. Reg. 8. ordered the Peny to be broken into Half-Pence and Farthings); and many Coins of King Henry the IIId, and the Three following Kings; which ſhews that it was a Place of Note even in thoſe Reigns.

The Sea-Shore here is often covered as it were with Fragments of Roman Urns, Pateræ, &c. which by the Fallings of the Cliffs have been broken; and on ſeveral of them have been found the fine Imagery of Boys, Cupids, Horſes, Lions, &c. And even in the adjacent Fields I ſaw with Pleaſure the Surface of their Plow-Lands, ſhining with Pieces of Urns and Vaſa of all Kinds of colour'd Earth; many of which I brought away with me.

Great Numbers of Wells, Cellars, or Ciſterns have alſo been diſcovered here by the ſame Means; and about half a Mile from Reculver Weſterly towards Hearn, the Fall of the Cliff laid open divers Cavities, one within another, having Partitions between them; and in and about them a great Quantity of their Opus Muſivum, or Teſſellatum; a certain Indication that they were belonging once to ſome eminent Build-

Building, which muſt have been either there, near it, or over it.

There were found alſo here Earthen Tubes of about 18 Inches in Length, which were deſigned to convey Heat out of one Room into another; to obtain thereby to any particular Room any proper or proportionable Degree of it; and to keep it up equally to it as Seneca, (Epiſt. 90.) tells us the Romans uſed to do in their Baths.

The Ciſterns diſcovered by the Fall of the Cliffs, were almoſt all of them of the ſame quadrilateral Figure, but not all of the ſame Dimenſions; though generally they were about 8 or 10 Foot every Way. The Bottoms were built on Piles driven down deep into the Ground, and ſtanding very thick or cloſe one to another; and on their Tops were fix'd Oaken Planks, about 2, 3, or 4 Inches thick: On this was laid a Flour of good ſtiff Clay, well freed from Sand. In Figure they were not much unlike our Tan-Pitts. And when Mr. Somner ſpeaks of ſome ſuch as theſe, which were diſcovered in the City of Canterbury, he thinks they were originally deſigned for the ſame Uſe. But 'tis much more ptobable that they were deſigned, as theſe at Reculver certainly were, (the common Spring-Well-Water being here very brackiſh or ſaltiſh,) to hold Rain Water. And though Canterbruy don't want freſh Water now, 'tis poſſible, and likely, it might do ſo when the Salt Water came more up to it, as it certainly did formerly. But however, all the Roman Writers de re Ruſtica, as Columella, Vitruvius, Palladius, &c. do prefer the Uſe of Rain Water to all other.

Many of theſe Piles and Planks above-mentioned, were very ſound and good, though probably they may have lain there 1500 or 1600 Years: And the Ciſterns themſelves are ſo numerous, as to ſhew the Place to have been very well inhabited.

In one of theſe Apartments was found a fair Braſs Roman Strigil, and the only that ever was found in Britain, that I have heard of: And our Author Dr. Batteley, which was the Poſſeſſor of it, and deſcribes it in his Antiq. Rutup. p. 66. ſaith it was diſcovered in one of the Ruins of theſe Ciſterns: Though its Mettal was Braſs, it look'd like Gold, having contracted very little Ruſt; whereas thoſe of Iron are apt to be very ruſty. See Plautus in Sticho. Annexed in the Plate is the Figure of this Rare Roman Antiquity, from Dr. Batteley's Book above-mentioned.

Theſe Strigils had two different Kinds of Uſes among the Romans: The Firſt was to wipe off the Sweat, to rub and to clean the Skin of ſuch as were Bathing.

I, puer, & Strigiles Criſpini ad Balnea defer.
Perſ. Sat. V. Verſ. 126.

And thus alſo Juvenal,

Sat. III. V. 263.

And Secondly to drop Ointments, or ſuch other Medicaments as were proper, into the Ears, as Celſus, Pliny, and Scribonius Largus acquaint us. For which medicinal Uſe perhaps it might have a Cavity or Grove along Part of its outer Edge, as ſome of our Surgeons Catheters have, which they uſe in Cutting for the Stone.

In ſome of theſe Cavities was alſo found the Roman Ligula, (See the Figure annexed) whoſe Uſe hath not been very well deſcribed, any more than its Figure given, before our Author did it in his Antiquit. Rutupinæ. But as he obſerves, the Ligula among the Romans was of three kinds. Beſides the common Ligulæ Crurales, or Calceorum i. e. Garters and Shoe-ſtrings.

I. There was the Ligula which was uſed as a Meaſure for Liquids, and then was the 4th part of the Cyathus; but in dry and heaped Grains or Powders it held half an Ounce. (a) But the Ligula found here being of a leſſer Capacity, could not be for this uſe.

(a) Columella de Re Ruſtic. Lib. 12. c. 21.

II. There was another Ligula, which was ſometimes uſed to deſpumate Honey, &c. and another, which ſerved as a kind of drenching Horn for Cattle. But this likewiſe was for neither of theſe Uſes: But perhaps it was rather uſed as a kind of Spoon to take up Sauce, or Salt at Meals. And Dr. Batteley very juſtly reflects on the Editor of the Dolphin Martial, Vincentius Coleſſus, for his trifling and unſatisfactory Explication of the Ligula, ſo often mentioned by that Epigrammatiſt (b.)

Here was found alſo the Roman Cochleare; which at one End had a Cavity like our Spoon; and the other a pointed handle, to pick the Meat out of Shell-fiſhes, or Marrow out of Bones; or to prick Holes in the Shells of Eggs after you had eaten them, to prevent Enchantments, according to the weak and ſuperſtitious Conceits of thoſe Times. See Plin. N. Hiſt. 28. 2. and Martial XIV. 121.

(b) Epigr. v. 18, 20. viii. 33. xiv. 120. viii. 59.

Here was taken up alſo another kind of Cochleare, which ſeems to have been either a Meaſure, or to have been uſed in emptying Liquors gently out of a Veſſel without puddling it, or diſturbing, or raiſing the Fæces at the bottom. Mich. Augellus Cauſæus will needs appoint it a Sacred uſe, and thinks it was employ'd to take Frankincenſe out of the Acerra. The Figures of both theſe Cochlearia are in the Plate; as is alſo that of a Roman Bulla, which (together with many Fibulæ) was here taken up alſo. And this having a Heart emboſſed upon it, as well as being it ſelf likewiſe formed into that ſhape, and being alſo hollow like a Box, comes up exactly to the deſcription which Macrobius (in his Saturnal. 6.) gives of the uſe of the Bullæ among the Romans.

(1.) Quod Ingenuis pueris attributum ſit, ut cordis figuram in Bullis ante peſtus annecterent, quam inſpicientes ita demum ſe homines cogitarent, ſi corde præſtarent. And

(2.) Quod geſtamen eſſet Triumphantium quod in Triumphis præſe gerebunt, incluſis intra illud remediis quæ crediderent adverſus Invidiam valentiſſima.

And Dr. Batteley thinks, that the Amulets which were contained within the hollow part, might be little Images of Harpocrates, the God of Silence. And this he collects from what Kircher and Cuperus ſay of Harpocrates in OEdipo Egyptiaco, p. 158. viz. that the Image of Harpocrates uſed to be worn as an Amulet by Children, to teach and inſpire them with Silence and Modeſty.

In theſe Auguſt Ruins of Antiquity, were found alſo ſome Knives with Braſs Handles, on which were wrought the Figures of a Dog purſuing a Hare.

Immobilis ſtantem fugitat Lepus ante Moloſſum.
Ennod. li. Epigr. xcviij.

And tho' Cæſar tells us, that the Britains in his time would eat neither Hares nor Geeſe, 'tis plain that the Romans liked the former ſo well, as to make it a principal Diſh at their Entertainments.

Inter quadrupedes gloria Prima Lepus.

I. Harris sculp:

This Plate is the Gift of IOHN GODFREY of Norton Court Esq^r

There were found here alſo vaſt quantities of Braſs Rings, about the ſize of thoſe we Ring our Swine withal, to keep them from digging up the Ground with their Noſes; and theſe the Judicious Author of the Antiqu. Rutupinæ, thinks rightly to have been the Hami of Virgil mentioned in this Verſe, Loricam conſertam Hamis, auroque trilicem.

Æn. 3.

And of Sidonius in his Panegyrick to Anthemium,

——— Neo ſutilis illi
Circulus impactis loricam texuit Hamis.

That is, they were made to compoſe the Coats of Mail which were uſed by the Romans in Battel as defenſive Armour: And which Choulius in his Book de Caſtrament. Vet. Rom. p. 15. calls very properly Loricæ annulatæ. And much after the ſame Manner have our modern Suits of Armour, or Coats of Mail, been uſually made here.

Many alſo of the Lunulæ were found here: or the Ornaments in the Form of an Half-Moon (See the Fig.) which the Romans uſed to wear on the Breaſt-Plates of their Horſes; as appears plainly by the Baſs-Relieves on Trajan's Pillar; the Icons of which have been publiſhed by Ciacconius and Petrus Bellorius.

Theſe, in Philoſ. Tranſ. N. 176. ſeem to be miſtaken for I know not what Ammulets or ἀμυλήματα which were to be hung about Boys Necks to ſave them from Inchantments, &c.

Very conſiderable Quantities of Gold alſo and Silver, wrought with little Chains, Wire, Earings, and other Ornaments, have been found in the Sands, waſhed out of the Cliff by the Sea; and the People have made it often worth their while to wait the proper Times to collect it. And a Gentleman at Margate ſhewed me a good deal of it, which the poor People had ſo picked up.

And ſo many Materials, Fragments, &c. both of Gold and Silver, have been taken up here, as ſhew that ſome very great Devaſtations either by War or Fire muſt have anciently happened at this Place; undoubtedly the latter Way, if not by both: For many Inſtances have there been of finding Maſſes of different Metal melted and run together; of which Dr. Battely had a fair and curious Specimen, which was a Piece of Gold and of Copper partly melted, and adhering to each other.

The Oyſters which are taken on this Coaſt, are eſteemed as excellently good: And when the Fiſhermen are fiſhing, or drudging for them near Reculver, they often meet with Roman Veſſels: The Ingenious and Studious John Godfrey, Eſq; of Norton Court by Feverſham, ſhewed me a Braſs Simpulum ſo found about 5 or 6 Years ago, with the Image of Apollo on the Handle; and he hath alſo in his valuable Collection two Pateræ of fine Red Earth; and a larger flat Earthen Diſh with the Verbena emboſſed round its Brim, which were all found after this Manner by the Fiſhermen.

As to the old Haven here, at one of whoſe Mouths Regulbium or Reculver was placed; I ſhall ſpeak of it more particularly under the Title of Richborough Caſtle, in Sandwich, and in the Iſle of Thanet, where a Map of its ancient State and Situation will be given.

The Roman Tiles or Bricks which ſo plentifully have been found here, are like thoſe lying in Rows in the Walls of Richborough Caſtle; and therefore I ſhall defer their Deſcriptions and Meaſures till I ſpeak of that Place.

REVER, or River, lies near the South Side of Kent by a Rivulet ariſing near it, about two Miles and a half North Weſt from Dover, in the Bailiwick of Stowting, Hundred of Bewsborough, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery of Dover, and Dioceſe of Canterbury: And the Church is dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul.

A Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 7 l. 1 s. 0 d. per Ann.

The Liberty of St. Auſtin claims here.

Places of Note here:

1. Kerſoney is a Place here which once was the Eſtate of a Family called Paganell or Paynell; for Iſolda, Wife of John Paynell, held it at her Death in the 17th Year of King Edward the IId; after this it went ſome-how into the Family of Phineux; the laſt of which was Sir John Phineux, Lord Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas, in King Henry the VIIth's Reign, one of whoſe Daughters and Coheirs Jane, by marrying John Roper of St. Dunſtan's Eſq; carried it into that Family; from whence it was ſold to Beſt, Anceſtor to Beſt of Canterbury, the Proprietor in Philpot's Time.

2. Archers-Court: which in King Edward the IId's Time was the Seat and Eſtate of a Family of the Name of Archer: Nicholas le Archer, being in Poſſeſſion of it in the firſt Year of that Prince, his Grandſon William paid Aid for it in the 20th Year of King Edward the IIId, as well as for more of his Lands at Coperland and at Atterton. From which Name it went into that of Bandrede, where it tarried till the 1ſt Year of King Edward the IVth, and then with Coperland was ſold to Thomas Doilie, Eſq;. In King Henry the VIIIth's Reign it was exchanged with the Crown: And that Prince in his 36th Year granted it to Sir James Hales: From whence about the End of King James the Iſt, part of it was ſold to Lee: And in the following Reign both Parts were ſold to Sir Hardreſs Waller.

Philpot ſaith, that Part of Archers-Court was in King Edward the IVth's Time conveyed by Bandred or Brandred to George Brown of Bechworth Caſtle in Surrey, whoſe Succeſſor ſold it to Mr. Iſaac Honeywood.

This Manor of Archers-Court, with its Demeſne, held in Grand Serjeantry on this Condition, That the Owner ſhould hold the King's Head, if he happened to be Sea-ſick, in his Paſſage over to Calais.

In the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, the Maiſon de Dieu at Dover claimed to have Lands, and the uſual Privileges of a Manor in this Pariſh, as appears by the Records. And the ſame Year the King claimed as his Right 100 Acres of Land in this Pariſh; but the Abbey of St. Radigunds claimed it likewiſe, and the Jury gave it for them; as they did alſo the Advowſon of the Church, which the King had likewiſe brought his Claim for.

RIDLEY, in the Textus Roffenſis Readlega, lies towards the Weſt ſide of Kent, about three Miles North from Wrotham, in the Bailiwick of Sutton-Dartford, Hundred of Axtone, Lath of Sutton-at-Hone, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and upper one of Juſtices in that Lath.

'Tis in the Deanery and Dioceſe of Rocheſter: A Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 3 l. 14 s. 8 d.

The Church is now without either Steeple or Tower; very ſmall, with no Monument or Tomb-ſtone within, and almoſt all ore-grown with Ivy without.

Places of Note here:

1. Ridley Manor, was anciently part of the Eſtate of the noble Family of Leybourn; and in the 55th Year of King Henry the IIId, Roger de Leybourn ſold this Manor, (excepting the Advowſon of the Church) to Bartholomew Wodeton; from which Name, in King Edward the IIId's Time, it went into the Name of Wallis; Auguſtine Wallis had a Charter of Freewarren for it in the 22d Year of King Edward the IIId, and died about ſix Years after: Thence it went to the Rickhills; but William Rickhill, about the 16th Year of King Henry the VIth, ſold it to Thomas Edingham or Engham, and he ſent it the ſame way to Robert Savery; from which Name it was alienated to Bevill, and in that Family ſtaid till the Beginning of King Henry the VIIIth, and then was ſold again to Fitz; and thence in the 27th Year of King Henry the VIIIth, it was ſold by Walter Fitz to William Sydley of Southfleet, Eſq; in which Family it was remaining in Philpot's Time.

The Country between this and Aſh, as well as from Horton-Kirby thither, is all up and down Hill; the Land Poor and Stoney, and the Ways Narrow and Bad; the like from Ridley to Hartley.

There is a Windmill on a Hill a little to the Eaſt of the Church, which is a good Way-mark.

RINGWOLD, Redingwold, Ridingſwold, lies at the Eaſt ſide of Kent adjoining to the Sea, about Five Miles North Eaſtward from Dover; in the Bailiwick of Eaſtry, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices of the Corporation of the Town and Port of Dover, (whereof it is a Member) the Liberties whereof, and of the Cinque Ports, claim over the ſame.

In the Deanery of Sandwich, and Dioceſe of Canterbury, and the Church is called St. Nicholas. A Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 13 l. 12 s. 6 d. per Ann.

In King Henry the VIIIth's Reign this Place having been aſſeſſed as lying in the Foreign, it was by Letters Patents united to Dover, as it appears formerly to have been in King Edward the Iſt, and in King Henry the VIIth's Reigns.

Places of Note here:

1. Ringwold Manor: This Place was of old held by Fulbert de Dover, as appears by Domeſday Book in the 20th Year of King William the Iſt. And in King Henry the IIId's Time Richard de Dover, and Roſſia his Wife, were in Poſſeſſion of it. After this it became part of the Eſtate of Bartholomew Lord Badeleſmer, who had a Charter of Freewarren for it in the 9th Year of King Edward the IId; and obtained both a Market and a Fair to this Place. He was Steward of the Houſhold to that King; but afterwards falling in with the Deſigns of Thomas Earl of Lancaſter, he loſt his Life, and forfeited this Eſtate to the Crown: But King Edward the IIId reſtored it to his Son of the ſame Name and Title, who died without Iſſue in the 12th Year of that Prince; and this Eſtate, by one of his Four Siſters, Matilda, went to John Vere Earl of Oxon; but it continued not long in this Family, for in King Richard the IId's Time it was become part of the Poſſeſſion of Robert Belknap, who died poſſeſs'd of it in the 2d Year of King Henry the IVth; and here it ſtaid till Sir Henrp Belknap dying without Iſſue-Male, his three Daughters had Joint-Intereſt in this Eſtate, who married to Sbelly, Wotton, and Coke; and who, in Queen Elizabeth's Time, all joined in a Conveyance to Edolph; and in Sir —— Edolph, of that Family, was the Poſſeſſion in Philpot's Time.

2. Oxney-Houſe in this Pariſh, was anciently a Seat of the great Family of the Criols; and Matilda, Widow of Simon de Criol, died poſſeſs'd of it in the 52d Year of King Henry the IIId: At length one John de Criol dying without Iſſue in King Edward the IId's Time, by his Siſter Joan it went to Sir Richard de Rokeſley; and by another Daughter of this Family it went to Thomas Lord Poynings; and Richard Lord Poynings died poſſeſs'd of it in the 15th Year of King Richard the IId; he left it to his Kinſman Robert de Poynings, who ſold it to one Tame in the Fourth Year of King Henry the IVth; from which Name it went into that of Sidley; and John Sidley, Eſq; who was Auditor to King Henry the VIIth, added much both to the Houſe and to the Eſtate; of which Family Sir Charles Sidley, Baronet, was in Poſſeſſion in Philpot's Time.

3. Kingſdowne; altho' this Village be in ſome Maps figured as a particular Pariſh, and probably hath been ſo in times paſt, yet it is now but a parcel of Ringwold. The Inhabitants here are poſſeſs'd with a Traditional Story of this Place, importing ſome ancient Worth and Eſteem of it, and thus I heard it.

Here Landed a King of this Land at ſuch time as Leather Money was currant with us, who was entertain'd by a Lady dwelling within a quarter of a Mile and leſs of the place of his Landing, at a Place called Hickleton Pitts (and therefore by the Inhabitants called the Lady of Hickleton,) in recompence of which Entertainment, and in favour of the Place where he Landed, he endowed it with many Privileges, from whence it was called, ſay they, Kingſdown; and which before was named Romny Coddy; from which Privileges, Dover (either by imitation or participation) had their Franchiſes, as they do confidently aver.

Near to this place of Landing, is now a Place for poor Fiſhermen, where by a Capſtand they wind up on Shore their little Boats, in a Valley between two Downs or Hill-ſides, and they are commonly called Kingſdown Boats, altho' it be in the Diviſion of the Pariſh of Walmer.

But yet this Kingſdown, together with Ringwould, is a Member of the Cinque Ports, and appendant unto Dover; which doth not perfectly overthrow their Tradition of Dover being once appendant unto it, (tho' I dare not affirm it); for we ſee the like plainly in Old Romney and Weſt-Hythe, which tho' far ancienter Ports, are notwithſtanding now but Members to Hyth and New Romney.

In the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, Alexander de Baliol had ſome Eſtate in this Pariſh of Ringwold; and claimed Liberty of Freewarren for it before the Juſtices in Eyre. Dering Manuſcript.

RIPPLE, Ripeley, lies towards the Eaſt End of Kent, about four Miles and a half Southward from Sandwich, in the Bailiwick of Eaſtry, Hundred of Cornilo, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. It is in the Deanery of Sandwich, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; a Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 5 l. 19 s. 4 d. The Church is dedicated to St. Mary.

Places of Note here:

1. Ripple Manor: This anciently and conſtantly belonged to the Abbey of St. Auſtin's in Canterbury, till the General Diſſolution of the Abbeys; but in the 29th Year of King Henry the VIIIth coming that way to the Crown, it ſtaid there till the 32d Year of Queen Elizabeth, and then was granted to Sir John Hall; who not long after after alienated it to Gokin, in which Family the Poſſeſſion continued in Philpot's Time.

In the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, there was a large quantity of Land in this Pariſh, viz. 160 Acres of Land, 10 of Paſture, and a Meſſuage, which belonged to a Family of the Name of Ripple; and Richard Ripple bringing his Claim for it againſt Ralph de Sandwich, before the Juſtices Itinerant, had it allowed as good.

2. Watling: This is a Manor here which in the 35th Year of King Edward the Iſt, appears to have been by Rot. Eſc. N. 10. in the Poſſeſſion of Thomas de Leybourn; his Son Sir Roger de Leybourn had no Iſſue Male, and therefore it went to his Daughter Juliana de Leybourn; but this Lady, tho' firſt Married to John de Haſtings, and after to William de Clinton Earl of Huntington, had no Iſſue by either; nor when ſhe died was any Relation found that could legally claim her Eſtate: Eſcheating therefore to the Crown in the 43d Year of King Edward the IIId, it tarried there till his Grandſon King Richard the Second granted it to the Abbey of Childrens Langley. And at the general Diſſolution of the Monaſteries, it was by King Henry the VIIIth, in his 35th Year, granted to Sir Thomas Moyle; then Juſtice of the Peace for this County; by whoſe Daughter and Coheir, Amy, it went in Marriage to Sir Thomas Kemp; whence in the beginning of Queen Elizabeth, it was alienated to William Sherley of Suſſex; and thence it went the ſame way to Crayford of Mongeham, and in his Deſcendant it continued in Philpot's Time. Tho' there was a great endeavour to have deprived him of it by the Claims of Durbon and Kidder.

ROCHESTER; the Names of this Place have been very various; the preſent one ſeems to have accrued to it from the Caſtle here, which probably was Eminent even in the Times of the Romans: For 'tis a juſt Obſervation of Cambden, and of Burton in his Notes upon the Itinerary of Antonine, that all Places that terminate in Cheſter, are derived from the Latin Caſtrum, and do expreſs that the Romans had formerly ſome Caſtrum or Fortification on the Ground where the new Place ſtands; as the Northern People near the Borders of Scotland call all the old Stations, Forts, or Caſtles in or near the Roman Wall, Cheſters to this Day. In old Records 'tis often written Rouveceſtria and Roveceſtria; and in the Saxon Chronicle Hroueceaſtre, & Rofecæſtre. In the Itinerary of Antoninus 'tis called Durobrovis and Durobrovæ, probably from the Britiſh Dor or Dyr, Water; and Bryff, ſwift; becauſe the Medway hath here a very Rapid Courſe; and corruptly from Durobrovis, hath it had the ſeveral Names of Duroprovis, Duropromis, Durobrivis, Durobrius, Dorobrevum, Dorobrevia, &c. In the Textus Roffenſis 'tis often written Hroſi and Hroſibrevis; perhaps from the Saxon word Hroſe, a Roof, Height, or Hill; becauſe of the covered lying of the City, Urbs tecta; or from the high Situation of the Caſtle; and hence comes its preſent Latin Name Roffa, and Roffenſis. But ſome chuſe to derive it from one Roſ, who was anciently a great Man here, or as Bede ſaith, Lord of the Place; tho' I think it much more probable that he took his Name from this Place; as Solomon de Roſ and de Roſcheſtere, as he is ſometimes written, and who flouriſhed here in King Edward the Iſt's Reign, certainly did. In the Peutingerian Tables 'tis called Roibis.

Burton, p. 36. &c. takes the ancient Bremenium of the Itinerary to have been Rocheſter in Northumberland, for ſuch a Rocheſter there is; and that Rocheſter is ſo called, quaſi Rock-cheſter Caſtrum in Rupe; which if allowable, will ſerve for Rocheſter in Kent as properly.

Tho' there be nothing particularly mention'd of the State of this Place in the Roman Writers, yet 'tis very probable, that it muſt have been conſiderable in their Time, and, as I believe, was then a Walled Town; becauſe its Situation is ſuch, that it muſt have always been a kind of Paſs upon the River, and as 'tis mentioned in the Itinerary as a Roman Station, ſo we find to this Day in ſome Parts of the old Walls, fair Rows of Roman Bricks, as well as many Fragments of them in the Walls of the Town, Church, &c. But the Caſtle hath met with ſo many Diſaſters, that I have hardly obſerved any there. I have ſeen alſo ſome Roman Coins which have been found here; particularly one in Copper found by Captain Coleman, with a Radiant Crown on the Head, and a Victory on the Reverſe.

This little City, which Bede calls Cantwaraburghe, the Caſtle of the Kentiſh Men, lies towards the North ſide of Kent, by the River Medway, about Seven Miles and a half Northward from Maidſtone, in the Bailiwick of Hoo, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices of the City; the Liberty whereof claims over it, as doth that of the Biſhop of Rocheſter over the Precincts of the Cathedral Church. 'Tis in the Deanery and Dioceſe of Rocheſter, and the proper Pariſh Church of the Town is dedicated to St. Nicholas; which is a Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 13 l. 15 s. 4 d. There was formerly another Church in the Town which was called St. Clements, of which ſome Ruins are ſtill remaining, tho' now 'tis turned into Dwelling-Houſes. It was a Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 6 l. 13 s. 4 d. and in King Edward the VIth's Reign was by Act of Parliament united to St. Nicholas above-mentioned; tho' I believe it had been deſolate a good while before.

A Market is kept in this City on Fridays, and it hath by Grant from King Henry the Iſt two Annual Fairs, viz. May 19. and Nov. 30.

I ſee no reaſon to conclude, that Rocheſter was ever much larger than it is at preſent; for as its chief Dependance was upon the Biſhop who anciently reſided here in the Priory, and on the Monks; ſo the Revenues of either were never great; tho' one Arthur Hopton, in a Book called A Concordance of Time, Printed A. D. 1615. ſaith, that A. D. 1137, which was the 2d Year of King Stephen, Rocheſter was burnt with 39 Pariſh Churches in it: But in no Book whatſoever beſides, have I ever met with an Account of any other Churches in it but St. Clements and St. Nicholas. On the contrary, there is good reaſon to believe, that anciently it was much leſs than it is now; for in the Text. Roffenſis, p. 134, 139. one Street is ſaid to be half the City; and Cambden juſtly infers its being a ſmall Place, from its being called by Bede but a Caſtle; and therefore he calls the Additional Buildings to it very properly, the Suburbs.

In Domeſday Book it was valued but at 100 Shillings.

However, I find it thus celebrated in an Epigram by John Johnſon, as cited by Wever in his Funeral Monuments, p. 308.

Urbs antiqua, ferox, bella eſt Roveceſtria Situ
Arx & finitimis imperioſa Locis:
Hic Deus è Ligno fabricavit Mœnia firma,
Quæ ſibi quæq; ſuis ſunt modo tuta ſalus:
Lata Racemiferis paſſimq; per Oppida Colles

As to its Eccleſiaſtick State, it vies with Canterbury for Antiquity; for it was made a Biſhop's See by Auſtin the Monk, A. D. 604, which was within Seven Years after his firſt coming over into England. And as London was the other

See, which he conſtituted at the ſame time with Rocheſter, it ſhews that Rocheſter was then look'd upon as no inconſiderable Place.

But of the Biſhops and the Cathedral here, I muſt treat particularly in another part of this Work; as I ſhall alſo of the Caſtle in its proper place.

This little City hath met with many Misfortunes formerly, more than enough to keep it ſo; for A. D. 680, Eldred King of Mercia, ambitiouſly, aiming at enlarging the Bounds of his Kingdom, invaded Lothair King of Kent, waſted and ſpoiled the whole Country, and ſacked this City in particular.

A. D. 884, or the Year after, according to the Saxon Chronicle, the Danes coming from France with their Navy, divided into two Parts, one of which went to the Eaſtward, but the other ſail'd up the Medway to Rocheſter, and laid a vigorous Siege to the City, building Forts and Mounts in order to get over its Walls; but by good luck King Ælfred came when the City was in the greateſt Diſtreſs, and juſt ready to ſurrender to the Enemy, beat off the Danes, and raiſed the Siege.

And about a Hundred Years after, this poor Place had the misfortune to be beſieged by King Ethelred, who quarrelling with the Biſhop, came and blocked up this Town, and forced the Inhabitants to give him 100 l. before he would decamp, which was a great Sum in thoſe Days.

A. D. 999, the Danes having cruelly haraſſed and pillaged all the Kingdom in that King's Reign, at laſt came to this City; which made as good a Defence as it could againſt them; but they attacked and ſtormed it with ſuch Rage and Fury, that after a ſevere Fight, the Citizens were forced to ſave themſelves by Flight; and leave the Town a Prey to the Enemy, who not only ravaged and ſpoiled it at pleaſure, but alſo along with it, almoſt all Weſt Kent.

Some of the old Daniſh Spurs have been found here.

Several other Injuries it ſuffered alſo by the Sieges which were laid to the Caſtle; as A. D. 1088, when the Nobility of England ſet up Robert Duke of Normandy to recover the Crown from the Uſurpation of his younger Brother William Rufus, his Uncle Odo Biſhop of Bayeux, and Earl of Kent, embarking heartily in the Deſign, betook himſelf, with the beſt of the Engliſh and Norman Nobility, to the Caſtle of Rocheſter, of which he was Governor. But Rufus gathering together a great Army, came and beſieged Odo here, and reduced him to ſuch Straits, that both himſelf and his Company were forced to ſubmit to the hard Conditions of abjuring the Realm. And thus from a Viceroy, as he was but a little before, he became a Fugitive; and being deprived of all his great Power and Dignity, had died poor and obſcure, if his Nephew Robert had not in pure Compaſſion to him, made him Governor of Normandy.

The People of England being a little backward to aſſiſt William Rufus (becauſe of his Precarious Title) in this Siege; he proclaimed that every Man ſhould be accounted a Niding (which was then a word of the higheſt Reproach, and ſignified as Paris and Malmsbury ſay, nequam; and is uſed in the Saxon Tongue for the vileſt Wretch that can be, one that robs the Dead) if they did not ſpeedily come in to help him; which brought in ſuch Numbers, that he ſoon took the Caſtle, and ſent Odo Priſoner to Tunbridge Caſtle; not forſooth as Biſhop of Bayeux, for that had been breaking in on the Privileges of the Church, but as Earl of Kent, and ſo ſubject to the Civil Power. See Somner in Gavelkind, p. 65. about this word Nidering, as Malmsbury; or Nithing, as Matt. Paris calls it, where he ſhews 'tis the ſame as Wealreaf in Saxon.

In King John's Time alſo ſome of the Barons got Poſſeſſion of this Caſtle, and making Dalbinett Governor, deſigned to have held it out againſt the King; but after three Months Siege, in which no doubt the Town ſuffered much, they were forced to Surrender.

And the very next Year, viz. 1216, Lewis, the French King's Son, with ſeveral of the Engliſh Nobility, ſtormed and took this Caſtle. Nay after this, in King Henry the IIId's Reign, Simon Montford ſtraitly beſieged Rocheſter, burnt the then Wooden Bridge over the River, together with a Tower of the ſame Matter, which was built for its Defence, and carried by Storm the firſt Gate of the Caſtle: He ſpoiled alſo the Church and the Priory. But after a vigorous Defence of Seven Days which was made againſt him by Earl Warren who was in the Caſtle; Montford hearing that the King was coming againſt him, thought fit to march off, and left others to carry on the Siege, who were ſoon driven off by the King's Forces.

And as if all kinds of Misfortunes were to attend this City, it hath been alſo ſeveral times deſtroyed by Fire.

A. D. 1130, King Henry the Iſt in Perſon, and a great Number of the Nobility and Biſhops being here with Archbiſhop William, to Conſecrate the great Church of the Priory here, which was then but newly finiſhed, a very great Fire happened, which did abundance of miſchief to the Town. The words in the Saxon Chronicle are, Se Burch forbernde æl-mæſt. The City was almoſt burnt down.

A. D. 1137, Kilburn ſaith it was almoſt all conſumed by Fire again, on June 3.

A. D. 1177, it was again almoſt deſtroyed by Fire, and the New-built Church very much damaged; and Kilburn ſaith that it continued deſolate till the Reign of King Henry the IIId; but then A. D. 1225, it was repaired again very well, and Ditched and Walled round: So that from hence we may, I ſuppoſe, date the Age of the preſent Walls of Rocheſter. And theſe three Deſtructions of this Place by Fire, make good what Archbiſhop Parker ſaith of it in his Antiqu. Britan. p. 291.

In the time of the Saxon Heptarchy, there were three Mints for coining of Money in this City, erected by King Ethelſtane; of which, two were the King's, and the other the Biſhop's, Vid. Text. Roff. 35, 96, 193, which laſt muſt have been ſituated near the Monaſtery, if not within its Walls; for 'tis ſaid in the laſt of thoſe Places cited from the Text. Roffenſis, That Geldewuthus Monetarius, in order to be admitted a Monk in the Priory of Rocheſter, gave his Houſe which ſtood by the Monks Burying-Place, and Ten Acres of Land at Borſtalle and Delce, to the Convent.

A. D. 1251. A Solemn Tournament was held in this City, and the Engliſh maintained their Ground againſt the Foreign Noblemen and Gentlemen, who were very numerous here in this Reign, with ſo much Gallantry, as to gain entirely the Honour of the Day.

In the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, John de Cobham held this City of the King; and when the Pleas of the Crown were held here in that Year, he produced a Leaſe of it for his Life before the Juſtices Itinerant.

The City hath now never a Gate to it, properly ſo called, or that can be opened and ſhut; there being of Southgate near Boly-Hill, only the Portal remaining; and Eaſtgate is quite taken away, ſo that only the Name is continued; and that is uſually now applied to the Street which that Gate formerly led into. There were formerly other Gates;

Gates; as one called Broadgate, which I take to be that which leads into the College Yard; and another called in the Cuſtumale Roffenſe, f. 75, and 79. Cheldgate or Chieldgate: Though where that ſtood, I am not yet certain.

There were alſo formely ſeveral Streets whoſe Names are now loſt or changed, as Dodinghorne, which I ſuppoſe was that leading from the great Street up to Boly-Hill.

There was a Place alſo which is ſaid to lie to the South of the Caſtle, which in old Deeds and Charters, particularly one of King Ethelwulf, is frequently called Haga, or the Haw; which doubtleſs is that Piece of Ground which is now corruptly called the Hog-Yard.

I can't determine, though I think it probable, that Rocheſter was walled in the Romans Time; but 'tis certain from the Textus Roffenſis that it had Walls before the Year 760; for in a Charter there recorded of Sigered King of Kent, whereby an Acre of Ground is given to the Monaſtery, it is expreſſed that it lay by the North Wall of the City.

The Ancient Title of the Governor of this City, about the Time of the Norman Conqueſt, ſeems to have been Præpoſitus; as appears by many Places in the Textus Roffenſis; as particularly in Folio 189. where are theſe Words, Gundulfus de Roveceſtre filius Grentonis Præpoſiti ejuſdem Villæ. For though I know Præpoſitus Villæ often ſignifies no more than a Reeve or Bailiff of the Lord of the Manor; and who therefore is ſometimes called Serviens Villæ; yet as I don't meet with the Title of any other Officer at that Time in the Town; ſo I fancy this muſt be the ſame who was afterwards called Bailiff, though Philpot ſaith his Title was Port-Reve: For Præpoſitus doth often ſignify ſuch an Officer as a Conſtable or a Bailiff, who under the King preſided over the Government of a Town.

And in a Charter of King Henry the IId to this City, which I ſaw in Mr. Head's Collections, kindly communicated to me by Francis Barell, Eſq; our Recorder; the chief Officer of the Town is called Præpoſitus Civitatis. This Charter is there ſaid to have been granted by King Henry the Iſt, but it was dated in the 12th Year of King Henry the IId.

This Charter grants to the City that it may be Gilda Mercatoria, and ſuch a Gild, Fraternity or Corporation aggregated, may be a Body without a Head; as moſt of our Corporations were at firſt, and were ſo conſtituted by the Force of theſe Words, Gilda Mercatoria.

A Copy of the Charter ſaid to be from King Henry the Iſt, but it is really from King Henry the IId.

From Mr. Head's Collections; who had this Charter from a Manuſcript of Dr. John Codd, Prebendary of Rocheſter.

In King Richard the IId's Time was a new Charter, reciting one of King Edward's, and another of King Henry the IIId, and of Liberties granted by them.

Another alſo they have, viz. The Charter of King Edward the IVth, which is extant A. D. 1461. But very long, ſo I ſhall only abſtract it.

1. It recites, that the City is ſituated in a Place moſt defenſible and fit for the Reſiſtance of Enemies, that would enter the Kingdom. Their Troths and their Services to King Edward the IVth, and his Noble Progenitors, &c. That if they have larger Liberties their Services and Readineſs will enlarge with them, &c.

2. And there it is granted, that inſtead of a Bailiff they ſhall have a Mayor and Twelve Aldermen, and as many Common-Council Men; and plead and be impleaded by the Title of the Mayor and Citizens of the City of Rocheſter --- The Mayor to be elected on the Monday after Michaelmas. The ſame Day alſo they are to chuſe a Coroner and Two Conſtables.

3. Their Bounds are alſo there determined, viz. from the City by Land to St. Bartholomew's Hoſpital, and from the Wharf of that Hoſpital to the Water of Medway in Circuit; i. e. To King's Ferry and Sheerneſs, Lancelane unto Horſted-ſtreet, and from thence in Circuit by the Lane that lieth between the Meſſuage of Gilbert Striche and William Horſted unto a Croſs called Kewlings Crouch, alias Paul's Croſs; and from the aforeſaid Croſs in Circuit to the Manor of Neſhinden; thence to the Mill-Hill next Neſhinden; and from thence in Circuit unto the Stone, and thence between the King's Way leading to Woldham and the Manor of Rings, on the Eaſt Part of the ſaid Manor; and from the ſaid Stone unto the Water of Medway there. And alſo from the ſaid City unto a Croſs ſeated in Littleborough in the Town of Strode; and alſo by the Water of Medway aforeſaid: That is to ſay, from Sheerneſs to Hawkwood.

4. They were to have alſo Power to ſearch all Merchandizes to be ſhipped there, and all Forfeitables, all Wrecks of the Sea and Fiſhes, with the Liberty and Precincts.

5. To have the Ferry over the Water, if the Bridge happen to be broken down.

6. To have the Power of Clerk of the Market, Aſſize of Bread, &c.

7. To be free by Land and Water throughout England.

8. To have Goods of Felons and Outlawries of Men reſident, &c.

9. To keep a Court from 15 Days to 15 Days.

10. To attach by Goods, arreſt by Body, and to Impriſon.

11. To have cognizance of all Pleas real, perſonal, and mix'd.

12. To have return of all Writs and Precepts.

13. To exempt the Sheriff and his Officers from doing any Office, &c.

14. To have all manner of Fines, Treſpaſſes, Deed-Bonds, &c.

15. To keep two Law-Days or Leets on the Bullis, and a Court of Pye-Powder.

16. A Fair on St. Dunſtan's Day.

17. The Paſturage of Cattle in the City Ditch, and Caſtle Ditch; and to build upon Eaſtgate-Bridge.

18. To have Juſtices of Peace within themſelves.

19. To direct their Writs to their own Miniſters, &c.

20. That Reſidents be exempted from bearing Offices out of the City.

21. That they may purchaſe Lands of 200 l. per Ann. to them and their Succeſſors.

Hiſce Teſtibus.

Tho. Canterbury, Primate of all England, and Legate of the Apoſtolical See, our Dear Couſin, &c. Cum multis aliis.

Dat. Ann. (1.) Regni Edw. 4. Annoq; Dom. 1461.

In Biſhop Gundulfus's Time there was a famous Mill here, which was then taxed by him at 30 s. Ad Veſtitum Monachorum; as this City was then taxed at 10 l. but I am not ſure it was deſigned to be annual; and rather think that it was a kind of voluntary Taxation, which they then came into, in order to cloath and equip the new Monks, which Gundulf had then placed here, in the Room of the Secular Canons, which which were Poſſeſſors of the Convent before. Textus Roffenſis, f. 196.

There was, I think ſomething peculiar to this City of Rocheſter, and to the Convent formerly ſituated in it, with regard to The Sealers of the King's Writs; theſe were called Spigurnelli, and the Office of Sealing, Eſpicurnuntia, which probably come from the Saxon Sparran, to ſhut up, ſeal, or ſecure. Of theſe Spigurnells I find this Note in our Cuſtumale Roffenſe.

Memoradum,

Quod primo die adventus Domini Regis ad Roffam debent Spigurnelli habere quatuor Panes de Pane Armigerum, & quatuor Panes de Pane Garcionum. Item debent habere quatuor Galones Cerviſiæ conventualis & quatuor Galones Cerviſiæ communis. Item de Coquina quatuor Fercula quibus conventus ſervitur & quatuor Fercula de communi, & 24 Alleces, & 24 Ova, item ad Prebendam 8 parvos bucell'.

Item debent habere 8 Obolos ad emendum Fænum. Et hoc proviſum & ſtatutum eſt per Dominum Regem Henricum Filium Regis Johannis, & per Hugonem de Burgo, & per G. de Greencombe pro iſtâ dictâ Proviſione & conceſſione debent Prior & Conventus Roffenſis ubicunque Dominus Rex fuerit quieti eſſe pro cera ad ſigillum.

Tamen ſi Dominus Rex faciat moram in Roffa per 2 Dies vel amplius non habebunt Spigurnelli de prædict. Convent. &c.

Si exierit & redierit habebunt ſicut in Primo Adventu, ut prædictum eſt.

As to the Famous Hoſpital and Charity of Mr. Watts, that of St. Catherine's, and the Schools of this City, they ſhall be diſcourſed of in their proper Places.

Here is now a very noble Stone-Bridge of Eleven Arches over the Medway, about which there hath been ſo much conſtant Care taken by the Publick, that its Hiſtory will be very well worth relating. We have no Account of any Bridge here in the Time of the Romans, nor did the Roman Way lead directly to it; but coming by Cobham Park, it ran away directly by Frinsbury Windmill, towards Chatham; where Dr. Plot ſaith there was a Tradition, That the River was anciently fordable; but of that I can ſay nothing certain; and I judge it to be much more probable, that there was a Paſſage over there by Boats, in the Nature of what we now call a Ferry.

And how ſoon after, or at what particular Time the firſt Bridge over the River was made here, I cannot find. There is no mention made of any Bridge at Rocheſter in the Time of the Daniſh Devaſtations made here; nor when King William the IId did here beſiege his Uncle Odo, Earl of Kent. The firſt mention that I find of this Bridge is in Stow's Annals, who ſaith when King John, A. D. 1215. beſieged and took Rocheſter Caſtle, he attempted alſo to burn the Bridge; but that Robert Fitzwalter put out the Fire and ſaved it.

This Bridge was of Wood, having a wooden Tower upon it, and was very ſtrong in its Way, being built with Nine Arches. It ſtood more to the North than the preſent Bridge, and its further End was where Stroud Hoſpital formerly ſtood.

To the Maintenance of this Bridge in the 2d Year of King Richard the IId, ſeveral Perſons, Pariſhes, and Tenants were liable as you will find below.

A. D. 1264. Simon, Earl of Leiceſter, burnt the wooden Tower down, and a good Part of the Bridge, when he engaged himſelf in the Barons Wars againſt King Henry the IIId.

And A. D. 1281. a very great and long Froſt with much Snow happened; the River Medway was entirely frozen over, ſo that People went over on Foot: But upon a ſudden Thaw, the Ice breaking almoſt all at once, carried away with the Stream almoſt all the Remains of this old Bridge. After this another Bridge (I ſuppoſe of Wood too) was built in the 10th Year of King Richard the IId. But on a Rumor of an intended Invaſion from France it was pulled down again.

In the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt's Reign the Bridge was ſo broken and out of Repair that People were forced to go over the River by Boats; and the Wharf at Rocheſter ſo bad, that all Veſſels uſed that at Stroud.

From a Manuſcript Book kindly communicated to me by Francis Barrel, Eſq; Recorder of Rocheſter; which Manuſcript is ſaid to be Collected and Written by Sir Roger Manwood, Knt. Chief Baron of the Exchequer, A. D. 1586, being then alſo one of the Wardens of the Bridge.

In A. D. 1277, and the 5th Year of King Edward the Iſt, the King ſends a Precept to the Sheriff of Kent, to enquire into the Merits of a Complaint made to him by the Maſter and Brethren of Strode Hoſpital, that they were diſtrained for the Repair of that Head of Rocheſter Bridge which was next to their Houſe; and orders Roger Northwood, and Ralph de Sandwich, to enquire into the Matter by the Oaths of proper Men in the Neighbourhood. The Sheriff impanels then 24 Men there named, and they return on their Oaths, That Gilbert Glanville Biſhop of Rocheſter, Founder of that Hoſpital, built a Key of Stone at the Head of the Weſtern End of the Bridge; towards the Repair of which, beſides the Alms and Contributions that he begged about in all Places adjacent, he built ſome Houſes on this Key, the Rents of which, and the ſmall Rents of ſome other Houſes adjacent, he appointed and appropriated for the Maintenance and Repair of the ſaid Weſtern End or Head of the Bridge; aſſigning the ſame to the Maſter and Brethren for that Purpoſe; who received theſe Rents, and did actually Maintain and Repair the Head of the ſaid Bridge, till the time of the Siege of Rocheſter, when Earl Warren and Roger de Leybourn, burnt down ſome of thoſe Houſes. After which the Maſter and Brethren carried the Remaining Materials and Ruins of the Houſes home, and Repaired their Chapel with the Stones of the ſaid Key, &c. So it went againſt the Hoſpital.

Again, in the 17th Year of King Edward the IIId, an Inquiſition was taken before John Vielſtone the King's Eſcheator for the County of Kent; by the Oaths of 12 Men there named, about the Repair of Rocheſter Bridge; who on their Oaths report, That the Inhabitants of Boreſtall, Cockleſtone, Frinsberie and Stoke, which are Tenements to the Biſhop of Rocheſter, ought to begin to make the ſaid Bridge, at the Eaſtern End of it next the City; and to make the Wharf, and all the Work of both Wood and Earth, as far as the ſecond Pere; and this part which they are to make good, is called the firſt Pere.

2d Pere, Is to be made by the Inhabitants of Chetham and Gillingham.

3d Pere, Is to be made by Halling, Trotteſclyve, Malling, Southfleet, Stone, Penynden, and Faukeham.

4th Pere, Is to be made by Ellesford, Feod, Enleſſe, Ovynbelle, Smallborne, Coſynton, Dodeſland, Gilberdeſtand, Wooldham, Burham, Horſtede, Farle, Torſtone, Chalk, Henhurſt and Orle.

5th Pere, Is to be made by Wrotham, Maidenſtone, Watringbury, Nettleſtede, Eaſt Peckham, Weſt Peckham, Haſellholte, Mereworth, Laybourne, Swantone, Offham, Weſtrom and Dittone.

6th

6th Pere, Is to be made by Holingborne and Egborne.

7th and 8th Peres, Are to be made by the Inhabitants or Men of Hoo.

9th Pere, Is to be made by Northfleet, Clywe, Higham, Denton, Meltone, Loddesdone, Mepham, Snodeland, Birling and Padlesworth.

The King is to make the Barbican and the Draw-Bridge; and the Major, so he is called, and the Brethren of the Hospital of St. Mary's in Strode, are to make the Bridge and Wharf from the Draw-Bridge as far as Strode, or to the Western End of the said Bridge.

Again, in the 29th Year of King Edward the IIId, a Precept was sent from the King to Galfrid de Saye, Thomas Colepeper, John Stoyle, and Robert Beaufitz, to enquire into the Defects and want of Repair of this Bridge, and what Persons or Places were obliged to make them good.

These made an Inquisition by the Oaths and Reports of 12 Men there named, and Report, that

There is a small Place of about 30 Feet in length adjoining to the Wharf, at the East End of the Bridge, which ought to be repaired on the North side by the Men of Friendsbury, and on the South by the City of Rochester; and that unless this Place be repaired well, no safe Passage will be for Carriages and Horses over the Bridge.

As to the first Pere they determine as above; and after the same manner for the second Pere and the third. For the fourth Pere they put in some new Names of Places, and leave out others: They say it ought to be Repaired by Eyllesford, Ickles, Ovenbill, Smalborne, Cosington, Doddeslonde, Gilberdeslong, Woldham, Burham, Horsted, Fairleigh, Terston, Chalke, Henhurst, and Orle.

The Places that are to maintain the fifth Pere, are the same as in the former Inquisition, only West Peckham is left out, and Swanscomb put instead of Swanton; and some differences in the spelling of Names. The 6th, 7th, and 8th Pere have the same Repairers as before; and so hath also the 9th, and the Draw-Bridge, Barbican and Wharf at the West End, &c. all as before.

After this in the Manuscript, follows a kind of Table; what the Contributary Lands are for the several Peres and Works of the Bridge; in which some new Places are mentioned; as for the 4th Pere, Homeden alias Eden, Bonebeld, Loose, Bydington, Stockberry, and Sineland alias Smateland; and many Names written after a different manner.

But notwithstanding all this Care, after the taking of Calais by King Edward the IIId, this Wooden Bridge was found to be so continually subject to Repairs, because of the great Breadth and Depth of the River, the Rapidity of the Stream, the continual fretting of the Salt-Water, the working and bearing of the Tides, and the mighty Concourse of Passengers to and fro from France, all which must pass over this Bridge, that it became very dangerous for Horses and Carriages to go over it. It was then resolved that a new Bridge of Stone should be built, and placed nearer to the Castle, which is the same with that which is now standing; the former wooden Bridge going over to the Newark Hospital in Strode. This great and useful Work was began, and in a manner compleated, at the Charge of Sir Robert Knolles, an Eminent Captain under King Edward the IIId in his Wars in France, and who having got thereby great Riches, laid them out this way in one of the most useful Services he could have performed to his Country.

This Gentleman, Sir Robert Knolles, raised himself, by his Valour and Conduct, from a private Soldier to a General; and he made himself so Famous in the Wars in France, for ravaging and spoiling their Cities, Towns, &c. that the ruined Gable Heads, Ends, or Remains of Churches, and other Buildings, were called by the People Knolles his Mitres. He died about the middle of King Henry the IVth's Reign.

In the 15th Year of King Richard the IId, Sir Robert Knolles, and Sir John de Cobham, petitioned the Parliament, that of certain Lands and Tenements in Kent, which were bound according to a certain Rate in the Exchequer, to maintain a Bridge between the City of Rochester and the Town of Stroud; they may among themselves yearly chuse two Guardians, or Wardens, as they are now called, who may be impowered to purchase and receive Lands and Tenements to the yearly value of 500 Marks; to Implead, and be Impleaded, &c. which was granted; only they were limited not to purchase Lands above 300 Marks per Ann. And in the 21st Year of King Richard the IId, an Act was made that all Rents and Customs due to the old Bridge, should now be paid to the new one, which was now built in a better place.

This Bridge also being much broken and out of Repair, A. D. 1489, John Moreton Archbishop of Canterbury, published a Remission from Purgatory for 40 Days, of all manner of Sin and Wickedness, to all such as would give any thing towards the Repair of this Bridge, Antiqu. Britan. p. 298.

In Aid of this Work, and towards the perpetual Maintenance of this new Stone Bridge in Repair, not only many Sums of Money were given by many good Persons of Kent, of London, and of other Places, but also divers Manors, Lands, Tenements, Rents, and Hereditaments, in the Counties of Kent, Essex, and in the City of London, now called the Lands Proper, and belonging to the said Bridge. As in Kent,

The Manor of Langden was given by the Bishop of Rochester and others.

The Manor of Little Delce near Rochester by Mr. Justice Kitebell, &c.

The Manor of Rose-Court at Greane by King Richard the IId, being forfeited to the Crown by John Cobham and others.

The Manor of Nashenden by John Peckham and others.

Tenements in Rochester, by the King, the Bishop of Durham and others.

Lands and Tenements in Frendsbury by John Double and others.

Lands and Tenements in Dartford by John Trelingham and others.

Lands and Rents in the Isle of Shepey, by the King and others.

Lands in Halstow by Lands in Hoo by

Forty Marks Rent out of Sharyngden and Nesse in the Isle of Elmeley by King Richard the IId, forfeited by John Cobham, &c.

A Rent of Eight Quarters of Barley out of great Delce near Rochester.

Lands of Mr. Richard Lee, belonging to the Manor of Nashenden.

Seven Acres of Land at Little Delce.

Sixteen Acres at Dartford.

Thirty Acres of Salt Mersh Land at Eastwick and Sparts, near Hoo and Greane.

A Grant from the King of a Rent of 5 l. per Ann. out of the Hundred of Blengate.

In Essex,

The Manor of Southall alias Tilbery, given by King Richard the IId, and forfeited to the Crown by John Cobham and his Feoffees.

In London,

The chief Messuage in Cornhill, given by King Richard IId.

Other Tenements in London given by Wayingford and others.

But leſt theſe Lands Proper ſhould be found unequal and inſufficient to defray the Charges of the Repairs this Bridge muſt neceſſarily be ſubject to; an Act of Parliament was made in the 21ſt Year of King Richard the IId, that the ancient Lands and Tenements formerly charged and called the Contributary Lands, ſhould ſtill continue ſo, and be liable to contribute towards the Repairs of this Stone-Bridge, if the Lands Proper ſhould prove deficient for that Purpoſe.

The ſaid King Richard the IId gave Licenſe alſo for Amortyzing unto the Wardens and Commonalty of the Lands Contributary, for Maintenance of this Bridge, Lands to the value of 200 l. per Ann.

In the 9th Year of King Henry the Vth, it was Enacted in Parliament, That the two Wardens, without the Commonalty, might Sue and be Sued; and that by the Death or other Remove of any Warden, the Writ or Suits ſhould not abate. Which was done for the better Recovery of ſuch Lands and Rents, as did belong to the Repairs of this Bridge; and that Actions and Suits of Law might duly proceed.

And it appears by an Inquiſition taken in the 17th Year of King Henry the VIth, that ſome more Lands were then given to the Repair of the Bridge by divers Perſons, in purſuance of that Licenſe of Mortmain above-mentioned.

Afterwards, becauſe the two Wardens of this Bridge only, without the Commonalty of the Lands Contributary, were by the Act of the 9th Year of King Henry the 5th aforeſaid, ſpecially enabled for all Suits, and were not every Year newly elected by the Commonalty, but continued for many Years together. In proceſs of Time, theſe Wardens came to let good Leaſes to their Friends and Servants for long Terms, and at the old Rents; without having any regard to the Increaſe of the Price of Timber and other Materials, and of the Wages of Maſons, Carpenters, Labourers, &c. which became triple or quadruple of what they were anciently. From hence it muſt and did happen, that the Charge of the Repair of the Bridge did annually exceed the Income and Revenue ſettled for that purpoſe; and conſequently the Structure grew into great decay, and was almoſt run to ruin.

Hence in Queen Mary's and in Queen Elizabeth's Reigns, in the Beginning, a Toll or Tax was impoſed and gathered of all Paſſengers and Carriages towards the Repair of the Bridge.

By a Commiſſion alſo from the Queen, a Tax, in nature of a Fifteenth, was Impoſed and Collected all over the County of Kent; but this was very oppreſſive and heavy upon the County, and after all, not equal to the Charges of the neceſſary Repairs.

This therefore that Excellent and Publick Spirited Man, Sir Roger Manwood, well conſidering; as alſo, that the long Leaſes above-mentioned, being let by the Wardens alone, without the Commonalties Conſent, were not good in Law; becauſe the Lands proper belonging to the Bridge, were by the Donors given and aſſured unto both: He firſt of all acquainted the Lord Treaſurer Burghley with the State of the Caſe: Who eſpouſed the matter with ſome Zeal, and declared, that the Queen had very much at Heart the Preſervation of the ſaid Bridge.

Having gained this Point, Sir Roger obtained a ſpecial and full Commiſſion from the Queen, directed to the Lord Treaſurer, Lord Admiral, Lord Bergavenny, Lord Cobham, Sir Walter Mildmay Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Privy Councellor; to himſelf, and to ſeveral others; as Edward Fynes Earl of Lincoln, Sir Thomas Kemp, Sir Richard Baker, Sir Thomas Fane, Deans of Canterbury and Rocheſter; Nicholas Barham, Queen's Serjeant at Law, William Lovelace, Serjeant at Law, Thomas Wotton, Eſq; John Brook, alias Cobham, Eſq;, Thomas Copinger, Eſq;, William Cromer, Eſq;, Robert Bing, Gent, Thomas Fludd, Gent. empowering them to inquire into, to hear and determine all matters relating to the Revenues, Accounts, or Repairs of the Bridge, &c. and this was confirmed under the Great Seal of England. The firſt opening of this Commiſſion, and Execution thereupon, was at Rocheſter, Feb. 8. A. D. 1574, and there they came to the following Reſolutions and Orders.

1. That before Eaſter next, all the Evidences and Writings relating to the Bridge, ſhould be brought to the Lord Cobham's Houſe; and there to be peruſed by the ſaid Sir Roger Manwood, Mr. Barham, Mr. Lovelace, Mr. Wotton, and Mr. Baker, or the Majority of them; who were to put into Writing what they found neceſſary for the due Performance of this Deſign.

2. That before Eaſter next, ſearch ſhould be made of the Records relating to the Bridge, which might be in the Exchequer, by Gilbert Hyde Auditor, and by Thomas Lane Attorney of the ſaid Bridge; and an Account in Writing to be given in to the Commiſſioners.

3. That before Eaſter next ſearches be made in the Cathedral Churches of Canterbury and Rocheſter, by the Deans of thoſe Places, of what Records could be found relating to this matter in their Archives.

4. That before that Time, a good and perfect Survey ſhould be made by the ſaid Mr. Cromer, Mr. Byng, and Mr. Fludd, or by two of them, of all the Lands, Tenements, and Hereditaments, in Kent, Eſſex, and London, or elſewhere belonging to the Bridge.

5. That before that Time, a good and perfect Survey be made by the Lords Bergavenny and Cobham, the Dean of Rocheſter, John Brook, alias Cobham, Mr. Kemp Baker, Wotton and Copynger, or the Majority of them, of the preſent State and Decay of the Bridge, and of the Foundation and Works thereof.

6. That before the ſaid Time, true and perfect Accounts be made before the Lords and Gentlemen laſt named, or a Majority of them, by the Accomptants and Officers of the ſaid Bridge, as well as of the late Tax in the manner of a XVth, and of the late Toll or Collection at the Bridge; as alſo of the Farms, Rents, Fines, and other Profits of the Lands, Tenements, &c. belonging to the ſaid Bridge, remaining not yet duly accounted and anſwered for.

7. That on the Day next after the next Quarter Seſſions at Maidſtone, 12 or more of theſe Commiſſioners ſhall meet at Rocheſter, in order to Summon in a ſufficient Jury, to enquire and preſent what Lands and Perſons are or ought to be Contributors to the Repair and Maintenance of the ſaid Bridge; as alſo to conſider of ſuch farther Proceedings as ſhall be thought neceſſary, on the Peruſal of the Surveys Accounts and Writings above-mentioned; all which were to lye there ready before them.

On April 13. A. D. 1575, Ten of the Commiſſioners above-named met at Rocheſter, and ſwore two Juries, one out of the County, and the other out of the City and Liberties of Rocheſter.

Theſe Juries had full Inſtructions given them to enquire,

1. As to the Contributary Lands, who is the Owner, and who the Farmer of the Manor in every ſuch Pariſh, and what the ſame is worth per Ann. at this Day; who is the Owner, and who who the Farmer of the Parſonage of every ſuch Pariſh; and what the ſame is worth to be letten at this Day. Who be the Owners, and who the Farmers of the reſt of the Lands in every ſuch Pariſh; and what they are worth to be lett at per Ann. now.

Whether any Manors or Eſtates are omitted in the Papers delivered to them, that they judge ought to be Contributary.

2. As to the Lands, Rents, and Tenements, properly belonging to the Bridge, they were to enquire, who were the particular Farmers of the ſame, for what Term they were Lett, and by what Intereſt; of what Kinds, and of what Quantities the Lands were, and how much per Ann. now to be letten.

3. They were to enquire what Decays there were in any particular Arches, or other Places, and what it will Coſt to Repair the ſame, particularly expreſſed.

4. What Timber, Stones, Boats, Anchors, or other Materials or Tools, are embezzled, which did belong to, or were provided for the Bridge.

N. B. I put down theſe Inſtructions, to ſhew what exact Care was then taken; and which may be a Preſident for future Enquiries.

Several Anſwers were returned in at this Meeting, in purſuance of the Orders given in February before; and ſome being imperfect, time was given them to make them more compleat by May 19 next enſuing, when alſo the Juries were ordered to bring in their Returns.

At that Time the former Commiſſioners met again, when the Juries gave in their Account of the Lands Proper belonging to the Bridge; and a Survey of its State and Condition, which were received, and ordered to be kept by the two Wardens, the Lords Bergavenny and Cobham. But their Account of the Contributary Lands being imperfect, they had further time given them to the 20th of September next.

Cromer and Fludd delivered in their Survey perfect.

But as for the Accounts of John Wilkins the Receiver, of Colepeper and others, they alſo were referred to September the 20th for a farther Examination.

In Wilkins's Hands there appeared to be about 500*l.*; ſo for the preſent Repair, (which Harper, the Carpenter of London-Bridge, judged would amount to 100*l.*) he was ordered to have ſo much ready immediately, and the reſidue as the Work ſhould require, according to the Direction of Harper, who undertook the Repairs. Colepeper the Accomptant being not able to make up his Accounts, was bound by Recogniſance to appear before the Lord Treaſurer, and other Commiſſioners, the firſt Day of the next Term, and to have his Accounts paſſed by ſome Auditor. The Jury alſo were commanded to enquire into the Concealments of Little Delce Quit-Rent, being 2*l.* 8*s.* 5*d.* per Ann. and many other things of that Nature.

Sept. 20. 1575, the Commiſſioners met again, and held a Seſſions at Rocheſter; where the Juries gave in their Preſentments about the Value, and other Circumſtances of the Contributary Lands.

Mr. Harper alſo delivered in a Survey of the preſent State of the Bridge: And a Day was appointed for the Farmers of the Bridge-Lands, to declare whether they wou'd take new Leaſes, or ſtand to their old ones as Law; the Inſufficiencies of which, and their Invalidities, were ſhewed unto them; in not having the concurrent Act and Conſent of the Commonalty, as well as of the Wardens, &c.

Nov. 14. 1575, a Seſſions of theſe Bridge Commiſſioners was held in Vintners-Hall in London; where the Council for the Farmers of the Bridge-Lands, deſired to peruſe the Records and Evidences, &c. of the Bridge, the ſight of which was granted them at Sir Reger Manwood's Chambers in Serjeants-Inn.

Nov. 21. 1575, Another Seſſions was held in Vintners-Hall, where the Farmers, by their Council, agreed to raiſe their Annual Rent by a Fifth Part.

Nov. 25. 1575, The Commiſſioners met in the Star-Chamber, before the Lord Treaſurer and Lord Chief Juſtice. Here Sir Roger Manwood urged, that the Charges of the Bridge in Wages and Neceſſaries, being three times double of what it was formerly, the Lands ought to be advanced proportionably; where alſo appeared the Lord Giles Pawlet, and other the Farmers of the Bridge-Houſe Lands. Here the Validity of the Leaſes was left to the Judgment of my Lord Chief Juſtice of England; who at his Chamber two Days after declared, that in his Opinion they were void: On which the Farmers would not ſtand in Defence, but ſubmitted their Leaſes to be reaſonably compounded and ordered by the Commiſſioners for the Bridge.

Nov. 29. following, the Lord Chief Juſtice reported the Farmers Anſwer to the Commiſſioners, and the Lord Treaſurer declared, that they ſhould compound for new Leaſes.

After this a Parliament ſitting in the 18th Year of Queen Elizabeth, Sir Roger Manwood obtained an Act in that Seſſion for the perpetual Maintenance of Rocheſter Bridge, which is extant in the Printed Statute Book. And here care was taken to prefix a Time for the Election of the Wardens and 12 Aſſiſtants Annually; and for Auditing the yearly Accounts, &c.

And afterwards, whereas an Arrear of 500*l.* and more, did depend in the Court of Exchequer upon the Wardens and Commonalty of the Bridge, for three Chantry Prieſts Salary or Stipends, ſometime Officiating in a Chapel at the Bridge-foot: Sir Roger Manwood brought this to an Iſſue; and the Cauſe being tried at the Aſſizes, and Judgment given alſo in the Court of Exchequer, the ſame was for ever diſcharged.

This Chapel was dedicated to the Trinity, and adjoins to Mr. Baldwin's Houſe; and it was built by Sir John Cobham. In it formerly was a Table of the Names of the Benefactors to the Bridge: Archbiſhop Warham gave the Iron Work, as the Bars, &c. and one John Warner of Rocheſter made the new Coping, and ſeveral of the Biſhops of Rocheſter have been great Benefactors.

But notwithſtanding all this great Pains and Care of Sir Roger Manwood, the Bridge, Wharfs, &c. were ſo out of Repair, that the Foundations were wholly made new; and the Charge was ſo great, that the improved Revenues of the Bridge Eſtate, not even with the Addition of many large Sums, which by the Diligence of Thomas Wotton, Eſq; had been obtained by way of Benevolence; would by any means anſwer the Charges of putting it into ſubſtantial and ſufficient Repair.

Indeed Proviſion was made by the Statute of the 18th Year of Queen Elizabeth above-mentioned, that in ſuch a Caſe of deficiency, the two Wardens and the majority of the 12 Aſſiſtants might Tax the Old Contributary Lands; but ſome of the Aſſiſtants fancied they had not Power to do this; and others, if not all, neglecting to hold proper Aſſemblies at the Times of Election of Wardens, &c. many great Inconveniences and Damages were apace enſuing.

In order to remedy which Diſorders, the ſaid Excellent Gentleman Sir Roger Manwood, without any Charge at all to the Bridge, by way of Fees

Fees either to the Lord Chancellor, or Speaker of the Lower House, or to any Clerks, &c. in either; (which also was the Case of the former Act) in the 27th Year of Queen Elizabeth, procured a New Act of Parliament to be made, explanatory of the former, and supplying its Defects; which Act is Printed also in our Statute Book.

Here is expresly provided, That in case of a Deficiency of the Lands proper for the Repairs of the Bridge; the two Wardens, and the majority of the Assistants, may Tax the Lands Contributary for defraying the extraordinary Charges.

And in pursuance of this Power, April 26, 1587, it was agreed at an Election for Wardens and Assistants, for Auditors, other Officers, &c. That the whole Contributary Lands should be divided into three Parts or Divisions, as followeth.

1. { 1. Burstall, Cuxton, and the rest, which by Ancient Custom were limited to the first Arch.
   { 5. Wrotham, and the rest limited to the fifth Arch.
   { 2. Gillingham, and the rest limited to the second Arch.
   { 9. Northfleet, Cliff, and the rest limited to the Ninth Arch.

2. { 7, 8. Hoo, and the rest limited to the 7th and 8th Arches.
   { 3. Halling, and the rest limited to the 3d Arch.
   { 4. Burham, Woldham, and the rest limited to the 4th.

3. { Boxley, Eyhorne, Lenham, and the rest limited to the 6th Arch.

This Tripartition was signed by Roger Manwood, John Lewston, Edward Bochery, Henry Hockhill, Henry Cutt, William Lambard, Thomas Duke.

The Reason why the Wardens and Commonalty, before this last Act of the 27th of Queen Elizabeth, doubted of, and so neglected to exercise their Power of Taxing the Contributary Lands, seems to me to be the want of expres Words, That the said Wardens, &c. should be Annually Elected by the Owners of the said Contributary Lands: But in this new Act, that was fully provided for; and a Fine of 10 s. laid on every Parish within Seven Miles of Rochester, in which any of the Contributary Lands lay, if they did not send two Housholders at least, (supposing above four to be in the said Parish) to attend on the said Annual Election.

In the Manuscript above-mentioned is also this perpetual Remembrance, (as 'tis there called) for the better Maintenance of Rochester Bridge.

1. That no Farmer or Occupier of any Bridge Lands or Houses, be ever chosen Warden or Assistant, during such his Interest or Occupation.

2. That on every Lease to be made of any of the Bridge-Houses in London, or Rochester, Bond, with able Sureties, be taken for making good the Reparations thereof.

3. That Perfect Plots of all the Bridge Lands, other than Houses in London and Rochester, be from time to time made and preserved; and the like to be done of all Lands holden of any of the Bridge Manors, and of all Lands charged with any Rent to the said Bridge.

4. That no Lease be made of any of the Bridge Lands or Houses, without a view thereof first taken by some of the Wardens or Assistants: That so the State of the Reparations being fully understood, convenient order may be taken for doing the same.

5. That the Terrier of each House and Land pertaining to this Bridge, be made and delivered once every Seven Years, by the Measurement of Acre, Perch, Foot and Inch; and that the same be accordingly covenanted to be done under a certain Penalty, with a Clause of Distress for it.

6. And also that the Timber Trees of the Bridge Lands be not felled nor wasted; and especially the Standles or Storers growing or to grow in those 225 Acres of Coppicewood at Nashenden; and in those 77 Acres in Little Delce, be carefully preserved according to the Law and the Statutes; because the same will alone, in a manner, yield sufficient Oaken Timber, for all the Necessaries of the Bridge-Works.

7. That the Wood-Reeve of this Bridge have a good Eye to the Marking and Preserving the Timber-Trees, Standles and Storers aforesaid; and that he make particular Report of the State of them at each Audit Day.

8. That the Courts Baron of the Manors of East Tilbury, Langden, Nashenden, Little Delce, and Roys-Court, be held at least once in three Years; and the Leet of East Tilbury twice in each Year; either by a proper Steward of the Bridge, or by the Steward of such Farmers as shall Covenant under some Penalty and Distress for it, to deliver from like time to time, true Court-Rolls, Rentalls, and Castumales thereof, orderly ingrossed in Parchment.

9. That no Farmer or Occupier of the Bridge-Lands suffer any of them to be occupied by any Person, occupying Lands next adjoining thereunto; nor make Exchange, for any Time, of any of the said Bridge-Lands with any Occupier of other Lands; unless that Exchange be made by Indenture in Writing; whereof one Counterpart under the Hand and Seal of such Occupier of the said other Lands, shall remain amongst the Evidences of the said Bridge.

10. That the Gullets of the said Bridge be sounded twice in every Year, and kept well filled with Rubbish, and smaller Chalk, as well towards the Land, as to the Sea-ward.

N. B. The time for the Election of Wardens and Assistants appointed by Act of Parliament in the 18th Year of Queen Elizabeth, being found very inconvenient and uncertain, a Clause was procured to be inserted in another Act, which passed in the 1st Year of Queen Anne, Entituled, An Act to Alter and explain the Act made in the 22d Year of King Henry the VIIIth, concerning Repairing and Amending Bridges in the Highways; by the Care of Francis Barnel, Esq; the present Recorder of Rochester, determining the Day of Election to be for the future on Friday, in the Week immediately succeeding the Easter Week.

Next follow the more Antient Evidences and Records about the Lands of Right Contributary to the Bridge, as I have found them in our Textus Roffensis, Lambard, &c.

The following Account of Rochester-Bridge is from Lambard's Perambulation of Kent, P. 416. who had it from a Book of Dr. Nicholas Wotton's, which he had exemplified out of an ancient Monument of Christ-Church in Canterbury.

By theſe Accounts it appears that the old wooden Bridge conſiſted of Nine Arches or Peers, and was in length about 26 Rods or Yards, as they are here called, i. e. about a hundred and forty three of our Yards. Towards the Repair and Maintenance of which, divers Lands and Townſhips were bound either by Tenure, Cuſtom, or both: And not only Towns and Manors were thus obliged, but alſo Yokes, and even Acres of Land were to be contributary towards carrying, pitching, and laying of Piles, Planks, &c. And as Lambard obſerves, That Part of the Work which was made of Stone and Earth, is here called a Pere, from the Latin, Petra: All great Ground-Poſts, Beams, or Plates, are called Sullivæ, from the Saxon Sylle; as we now ſay the Groundſel of any Building. The Planks or Boards laid over theſe, are denominated from the Saxon Thylle; which we uſe to this Day in the Thills of a Cart, nearly in the ſame Senſe.

It ought to be remembred to the Honour of Queen Elizabeth, that when in her 15th Year ſhe made a Progreſs into this County, and was thereby fully informed of the bad Condition the Stone-Bridge was then in; ſhe very vigorouſly exerted her ſelf in the Methods of its Repair, and every way encouraged thoſe that were concerned in helping it. And this noble Building is now in ſo good a Repair, and in ſo good away of of continuing ſo, that, without an Earthquake, it will probably laſt for very many Ages.

This City of Rocheſter hath often been called a Caſtle in the Saxon Times, as I find by many Charters granted to the Church of St. Andrew here, during the Heptarchy: And particularly in one of King Ecgbert King of Kent, granted to Eardulf, Biſhop of Rocheſter, and confirmed by Heabert, another King of Kent, at the ſame Time, as he is there called; where are theſe Words, Trado terram intra Caſtelli mœnia ſupra nominati (i. e.) Hroficeſtri unum viculum cum duobus jugeribus, &c.

There is now in this City a very handſome Court-Hall, for holding their uſual Courts, their Seſſions, and the Aſſizes; and a handſome Clock and Clock-Houſe; which were the Benefactions of Sir Cloudleſley Shovell, and Sir Stafford Fairborne, formerly Members of Parliament for this City.

The preſent Members are Sir John Jennings, one of the Commiſſioners of the Admiralty; and Sir Thomas Palmer Baronet, one of the Commiſſioners for ſtating the Accounts of the Army.

Places of Note within the Bounds of Rocheſter.

Theſe have been moſt of them mentioned already in the adjacent Pariſhes of Chetham and St. Margaret's; but one was omitted, viz.

Snodberſt, which is a Manor lying, ſaith Philpot, partly in Chetham, and partly within the Limits of Rocheſter. This anciently was Part of the Eſtate of the great Family of Badeleſmere: And though Bartholomew Lord Badeleſmere forfeited it to the Crown in King Edward the IId's Reign, yet the next King reſtored it to his Son Bartholomew Badeleſmere; but he having no Iſſue, left it to his Brother Giles; whoſe Siſter Margery carried it in Marriage to her Husband Sir John Tiptoft; he ſold it to Benedict de Fulham, where after ſtaying a while, it went to Love, Venour, Markham, Tate, as Great Delce did, and at laſt to Lea: And in Philpot's Time was in the Poſſeſſion of Richard Lea, Eſq;. See St. Margaret's.

RODMERSHAM, lies towards the North Part of Kent, about two Miles South Eaſtward from Milton, and as many from Sittingbourn, in the Bailiwick and Hundred of that Place, Lath of Scray, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and upper one of Juſtices in that Lath.

'Tis a Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 8 l. 6 ſ. 4 d. In the Deanery of Sittingbourn, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Church is dedicated to St. Nicholas; which is pretty large, and hath a Stone Tower. In the Chancel are remaining the Confeſſional Chair. And in the Church I ſaw a Memorial of William Perry, in the Year 1485; and in the Glaſs Windows, of William Somptere and John Cheyneſtere, who were good Benefactors to the Church; alſo of John Pordage, in 1568; of another of the ſame Name in 1589; of Solomon Pordage, in 1599; and of William Pordage, in 1569; all of New-Houſe: Which I ſuppoſe was formerly St. Johns.

Places of Note here:

1. St. Johns. This is a Manor which formerly belonged to the Knights Hoſpitallers.

An Order, ſaith Philpot, which was firſt brought into England, A. D. 1100, by a Kentiſh Man, at leaſt one that had an Eſtate here, John de Briſet, Lord of Wellhall in Eltham: He and his Lady, whoſe Name was Muriel, founded the Hoſpital of St. Johns in Clerkenwell, London; which was the Head of their Alberge; and to it was this Manor united as a Part of their Demeſne, till the Time of the general Diſſolution of the Monaſteries: But then it was granted to William Pordage, Eſq;, and in Philpot's Time it was in the Poſſeſſion of his Deſcendant, Thomas Pordage, Eſq; whence it went by Purchaſe to Thomas Luſhington, Eſq;, Father to the Worthy Stephen Luſhington, Eſq; the preſent Poſſeſſor.

This Order of Knights Hoſpitallers, ſaith Philpot, was firſt inſtituted by one Gerardus, but brought into Rule and Order by Raimundus a Podio. Their firſt Riſe was this: A little before Godfrey of Bullen went into the Holy Land, ſome Merchants of Melphis in Naples, Traders to the Levant, had gotten leave of the Caliph of Egypt to build a Houſe for themſelves, and ſuch of their Nation as ſhould come hither in Pilgrimage; and for this they were to pay a ſettled Rent: On this they built two Churches; and afterwards a Third, in Honour to St. John; as alſo an Hoſpital for the Sick; and hence they took the Name of Hoſpitallers: After Godfrey had taken Jeruſalem, they diſtinguiſhed themſelves by wearing black Habits, and a Croſs with eight Points: And beſides the ordinary Vows, they undertook to defend Pilgrims, &c. and afterwards they were called Knights, upon ſome Men of Quality's coming into their Order; which henceforth became a Military one; and by Degrees growing great, they divided it into three Ranks; viz. Knights, Chaplains, and Servants at Arms. In the Wars of ſeveral Princes growing famous, they got ſtill new Acceſſions of Riches and Power; and eſpecially after their taking of Rhodes, A. D. 1310; for then they were called Knights of Rhodes: And thus they continued ſometimes in Candia, ſometimes in Sicily and Viterbo; but in A. D. 1530. the Emperor Charles the Vth gave them Maltha; and from thence they came to be called Knights of Maltha.

Their Method of Inveſtiture was by the Delivery of a Sword, guarded with a Croſs Hilt; with this Sword they were thrice ſtruck on the Shoulders, and then the Sword was wiped: Next they had guilt Spurs put on, and a lighted Taper placed in their Hands; and their Habit was a black Cloak; under which on their Coat they wore a red Belt, and on that a white Croſs. On their Cloak alſo they wore a Croſs Potent between 4 Croſſes Patee; which as Philpot ſaith, was deſigned to expreſs the Five Wounds of Chriſt. They were to receive the Sacrament thrice a Year, and to hear Maſs once a Day.

But enough of theſe Military Religious, of whom I have before ſaid ſomething under Ewell.

In the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, I find the Prior of St. Johns of Jeruſalem claiming the uſual Liberties and Privileges for his Manor of Rodmerſham; and the Jury allowed it.

2. Rodmerſham Manor. This was anciently Part of the Inheritance of a Family of the Name of Pine: John de la Pine held it in the 20th Year of King Henry the IIId, and his Grandſon James de la Pine, who died in the 37th Year of King Edward the IIId, and left a Son of his own Name, of Nine Years old: He enjoyed it, and continued in Poſſeſſion till about the latter End of King Richard the IId, and then ſold it to Podach, vulgarly called Pordage; a Deſcendant of an ancient Family of that Name in Devonſhire: And in the Poſſeſſion of Thomas Pordage, alias Podach, Eſq;, did this Manor continue in Philpot's Time; but is now become the Inheritance of Stephen Luſhington, Eſq; in the ſame Way as the former Manor did.

3. Pi-

3. Piſtock; This is a ſmall Manor here, which anciently belonged to the Nunnery of Minſter, in the Iſle of Sheppey; and upon the Diſſolution of the Abbeys, was, in the 29th Year of King Henry the VIIIth, granted to Sir Thomas Cheyney: but his Extravagant Son, Henry Lord Cheyney, alienated it in 13th Year of Queen Elizabeth, to Richard Thornhill, Eſq;, who on his Deceaſe gave it to his ſecond Son, Sir John Thornhill; and his Deſcendant and Heir Charles Thornhill, Eſq; was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

4. Newburgh anciently was a Manor, and had Poſſeſſors of its own Name: But in the 24th Year of King Edward the Iſt, it was got into the Name of Apuldrefield; and by Elizabeth, one of the Coheirs of Sir William Apuldrefield, it went in Marriage to Sir John Phineux; and by Jane, another of his Coheirs, to John Roper, Eſq; and is now in the Poſſeſſion of his Deſcendant the Right Honourable the Lord Roper Baron of Tenham.

ROKESLE. This I find in the Textus Roffenſis to have been anciently the Name of a Pariſh, which lay within the Dioceſe of Rocheſter: But the Church having been long diſuſed and decayed, it was by Cardinal Pole, A. D. 1557, united to the Pariſh of North Crey. Which ſee. It was ſo eminent once, as to give Name to the Hundred of Rokeſley.

In the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, John de Rokeſle would fain have gotten his Burgh of Rokeſle to have been exempted from Suit and Service at the Hundred Court; but the Jury gave it againſt him.

ROLVENDEN, uſually called Rowenden; anciently ſo conſiderable as to give Name to the whole Hundred, lies at the South Side of Kent, by the River Rother, about two Miles South Weſtward from Tenterden, in the Bailiwick of the Seven Hundreds, Lath of Scray, Hundred of Rolvenden, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and lower one of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery of Charing, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Church is dedicated to St. Mary. A Vicarage, and valued in the King's Books at 10 l. per Ann.

The Liberty of the Dean of Canterbury claims here; and that of the Biſhop of Rocheſter, over the Rectory of Rolvenden.

In the great Chancel of the Church are Five Windows; in the firſt is, or was, the Picture of Carew, Eſq;, in the ſecond, that of Sir John Guldeford; the third defaced; in the fourth is the Effigies of Aucher; and in the fifth, that of Moor; all Men formerly of great Eſtates in this Pariſh.

The South Chancel or Chapel was founded by Edward Guldeford, Eſq; An. 1444, and dedicated to St. Anne, and St. Catherine; as appeared by an Inſcription on a Braſs Plate, which once was remaining on the South Wall of the ſaid Chancel.

At Forſham or Ferſham in this Pariſh are the Ruins of a little Chapel, ſhewing it to have been an Ancient Stone Structure, and is ſuppoſed to have been once a Chapel belonging to a Seat of this Name: The Remainders of which, and of the Moat round it, are ſtill viſible.

Places of Note here:

1. Halden in this Pariſh is a Place of Note, and is uſually called in the Records the Manor of Lambin, alias Halden; taking the firſt Name from Lambin de Langham, who held it as an entire Knight's Fee, in the 20th Year of King Henry the IIId, at the Marriage of Iſabel, that King's Siſter: (Vid. Teſta de Nevil.) But about the Beginning of King Edward the IIId, this Eſtate went from that Family by Sale to the Haldens: For William, Son of John de Halden, died poſſeſs'd of it in the 50th Year of King Edward the IIId, Rot. Eſc. N. 45. But by the Marriage of Joan, this Gentleman's Son's Daughter, with John Guldeford, Eſq; it went in to that Family.

Sir Richard Guldeford was Knighted at Milford-Haven, by King Henry the VIIth, and after made one of his Privy Council. In the 8th Year of that Prince, he behaved himſelf with great Bravery againſt James Lord Audley, and his Corniſhmen, in the Battel near Deptford-Bridge; and was made a Banneret for it on Blackheath. His Son Henry Guldeford, Eſq; for his Valour and Conduct under Ferdinand and Iſabella, King and Queen of Aragon and Caſtile, in their Wars againſt the Moors; was honoured with an Augmentation to his Coat of Arms; viz. On a Canton a Pomgranate ſlips; being the Arms of Granada; and was Knighted there alſo. This was in the 1ſt or 2d Year of King Henry the VIIIth; in the 4th Year of King Henry the VIIIth, he was Knighted here at Home; and in the 5th Year of that King was made Standard-Bearer of England, and carried it at the Siege of Terwin.

His Son Sir Edward Guldeford was Knighted for his Service at Tournay, in the 15th Year of King Henry the VIIIth, and was Captain of the Horſe under the Duke of Somerſet, at the ſecond Siege of Terwin: But dying without Iſſue-Male, Jane his Daughter carried this Manor of Halden to her Husband John Dudley, Duke of Northumberland. He was beheaded in the 1ſt Year of Queen Mary, for the Affair of the Excellent Lady Jane Grey; and conſequently his Eſtate was confiſcated to the Crown; and that Princeſs granted this Manor to Sir John Baker, her Attorney-General; whoſe Son Sir John Baker enjoyed it, in Philpot's Time; but the Demeſne of it was granted to Sir Henry Sydney; whoſe Grandſon Robert Earl of Leiceſter parted with it to Sir Thomas Smith of London; and his Grandſon Robert Smith died poſſeſs'd of it in Philpot's Time.

There are Twelve Places called Dens, which hold of this Manor, and at the Court Day Elect Twelve Officers called Beadles, to gather the Quit Rents which belong to it, viz. Midſellden in Rolvenden, Stollenden of the ſame; Ramſden in Benenden, Weſt Biſhopſden of the ſame: Folkingden in Benenden and Sandhurſt, Holnhurſt in Benenden, Elderhurſt in Halden and Tenterden, Itchinden in Woodchurch, Menſden in Tenterden, Strenchden of the the ſame; Smeeth in Stone of the Iſle of Oxney, Blackbrooks and Piſenden in Witterſham.

Note, Den or Dene in Saxon, ſignifies a Valley or low Place; and the Names of all Places having that Termination, are ſo given to expreſs their Situation.

2. Caſingham, now called Keinſham, is a Place here which anciently had Owners of that Name; for it appears by Teſta de Nevil, that William de Caſingham held it at the Marriage of Iſabel, Siſter to King Henry the IIId. From this Family, about King Henry the IVth's Time, the Moors had the Poſſeſſion of it, and kept it till King Henry the VIIIth's Time, and then it was ſold to Gibbons of Rolvenden; and from thence about the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, it paſſed to the Hays of Suſſex; and from thence in King James the Iſt's Time, was ſold to Everinden or Everden of Biddenden; from hence it went again the ſame way to Mills, and at length to Muns, in which Name the Poſſeſſion was in Philpot's Time.

3. Frenſham, anciently Farſingham and Freſingham, was in the 20th Year of King Henry the IIId, in the Poſſeſſion of a Family of this Name, and and ſtaid in it till King Edward the IIId's Reign, and then was ſold to Northwood; from whence, in King Edward the IVth's Time, it was ſold to Guldeford; but in the Beginning of King James the Iſt's Reign, Sir Edward Guldeford ſold it to Fowle, and from thence it went the ſame way to Sir Edward Hales, in which Family it was in Philpot's Time.

4. Hole, is a Seat in this Pariſh which anciently had Owners of this Name; for Ann. 1340, Henry At-Hole was in Poſſeſſion of it, and demiſed it to his two Siſters Honor and Alice. But ſince for many Deſcents, it hath been the Patrimony of the Gibbons, who held Land in this Pariſh, A. D. 1336; and Philpot ſaith all the other Gibbons's in Kent are Originally derived from hence. And from a Glaſs Window in this Place of Hole, he ſtates the ancient Arms of that Family to be, Or, a Lyon Rampant Sable, charged with a Carbuncle of the firſt. And that Edmund Gibbons, who Founded the Free-School at Benenden, endowing it with 30 l. per Ann. was of this Family.

5. Perſham, was long ago the Eſtate of one Sir John de Perſhem; one of whoſe Deſcendants was ſo conſiderable, as to find a whole Man-at-Arms for the Defence of the Coaſt in the 11th Year of King Edward the IIId. But about the time of King Henry the IVth, this Eſtate came into the Guildford Family, and there continued till near the End of Queen Elizabeth, and then was ſold to Dyke of Suſſex, whoſe Deſcendants by their Truſtees and Commiſſioners, ſaith Philpot, conveyed it in King Charles the Iſt's Time, to Mr. Thomas Bromfield, Merchant of London.

In the 17th, 18th, and 19th Years of King Edward the Iſt, ſeveral Commiſſions of Sewers were, upon Complaint, granted to enquire into the State of the Merſhes of Newbrooke and Rolvenden: and between Smallhithe and Mayhamme; as alſo between That and Newenden, and about Weſtbrook. But Mr. Dugdale (a) doth not tell us what Returns were made upon them.

(a) Hiſt. of Imbark. and Drain.

ROMNEY New, corruptly Romenal, Romual, Rumenea, perhaps from the Saxon Rumian or Rýman, to open a Place, or afford Room; and ea, Water; the Place where the Water yielded a Paſſage for Ships; which I think agrees more with the Peculiar Circumſtances of this Place than Mr. Lambard's Etymology, tho' derived alike. Twyne will have it to be Romanorum Mare; and perhaps it might be all Sea hereabouts in the Romans Time. Somner ſuggeſts it came from Rumino, as the Tyber was called Rumon, from its overflowing its Banks, and ſo this from the Seas breaking in and overflowing. It lies at the South-Eaſt part of Kent, adjoining to the Sea, about Two Miles and a half North Eaſtward from Lidd, in the Bailiwick and Lath of Shipway, and Eaſt Diviſion of the County. 'Tis in the Deanery of Limpne, and Dioceſe of Canterbury, and there were anciently in it, Kilburn ſaith, Five, ſome ſay Seven, and Dr. Plott Eight Pariſh Churches; they name St. Laurence Poultney, St. Martins Poultney, St. John Baptiſt's Poultney, and St. Nicholas's, the preſent Church, which ſtands in the Town.

This is a Vicarage, and with the Chapel annexed, is valued in the King's Books at 6*l.* 16*s.* 2*d. per Ann.* the Names of the other Churches are loſt.

The preſent Church is a large handſome Building, and hath lately been very much Repaired and Beautified by the two preſent worthy Members of Parliament for this Port, the Lord Sondes and Sir Robert Furneſe. In it are Memorials of the Interment of William Hollingbrook, 1375, the Inſcription in old French, the Arms a Chevron between three Etoiles; As alſo of Tooky, Gulſton, Lambard, Brett, Freebody, Durant, Norman and Wilcocks.

This Town is one of the Cinque Ports, and was made a Mayor Town by Queen Elizabeth, Aug. 4. in her 5th Year, by Letters Patents; and their Stile is the Mayor, Jurats, and Commonalty of the Town and Port of New Romney; as before this, they were incorporated by the Name of the Jurats and Commonalty of the Town and Port of New Romney; and before that, by the ſame Title without the word New; and even before that, by the Name of Barons of the Town and Port of Romney, in the Time of King Edward the IIId. Their Charter in Queen Elizabeth's Time, Ratifies to them all the Privileges they enjoyed in the Reigns of King Edward the Confeſſor, King William the Iſt, or in any other Reigns: And ſhe alſo granted to them the Soil of the River Rother, from the Entrance of the Haven to Red-Hill beyond Apuldre. The Time of the Election of the Mayor is on Lady-Day.

This Town is within the Diviſion of the Juſtices of its own Corporation; and the Liberties of it and of the Cinque Ports claim over it. Some part of the Pariſh is in the Hundred of St. Martin, and part of it in the Diviſion of the Juſtices of the Corporation of Romney Marſh; and the reſt in the Diviſion of Juſtices in the Lath of Shipway.

The Two great Meetings of the Cinque Ports, called the Geſtling, for all the Ports, and the two Ancient Towns of Rye and Winchelſey, and their Members; And the Brotherhood or Brotheryeld for the Cinque-Ports, and the ſaid Ancient Towns only, are uſually once a Year held at this Town; the Day is the Tueſday after the 20th of July.

A Market is here kept on Saturdays, and an Annual Fair on St. Laurence's Day, Aug. 10.

Of the Religious Houſes and Hoſpitals here ſee the proper Chapter.

The following Abſtract of their ancient Cuſtumale, I had from a Manuſcript obligingly communicated to me by Sir Baſil Dixwell, Baronet, and written in the 30th Year of King Edward the IIId.

Romney Cuſtumal.

Twelve Jurats are elected every Year, the Commons being aſſembled by the blowing the common Horn.

If any one refuſe to ſerve the Office of Jurat, the Bailiff (now Mayor) ſhall go to his Houſe, turn his Family out of Door, and ſhut up his Windows, and he is Sequeſter'd until he will ſerve the Office; and if he, or any of his, violate the Sequeſtration, he or they ſhall be impriſoned.

Formerly, when there was no Bailiff, the Archbiſhop of Canterbury might ſend one Commiſſioned by him; but he muſt have the Great Seal too, or elſe they would not admit him.

The Bailiff and Jurats may Try and Determine all Pleas, but ſuch as relate to the Court of Shipway.

Romney Bounds are from the Entrance of the Haven, to Read-Hill by Apuldre.

If a Man be found Dead within the Town, the Bailiff, as Coroner, may make an Inqueſt of the next Neighbours, and put them in ward, ſo that no one may come to them, till they have given an account how the Man came by his Death. If the Queſt in the Neighbourhood accuſe any one, the Bailiff ſhall Impriſon him and ſeize his Goods, which ſhall be forfeited if he be Convict, but reſtored if Acquitted; but he may be Bailed till the next Hundred Court; which ſhall not be ſooner than 15 Days: If no one Proſecute ſecute him after two Hundreds more, he ſhall be diſcharged: If any do Proſecute, or as it is there expreſs'd, purſue him by Appeal, he ſhall give ſufficient Bail to go on with it, or go to Priſon till the Tryal is over.

If any one fly to Holy Church, the Bailiff, as Coroner, ſhall examine him; if he own Felony, let it be Inrolled; then let him loſe his Goods and Chattels to the King, and abide in the Church, if he will, 40 Days; and then abjure the Land before the Bailiff and Jurats; and then he may chuſe his Port to go out at, and no one ſhall moleſt him in the King's Highway to it.

A Man found cutting a Purſe within the Franchiſe, to be ſet in the Pillory, and loſe one Ear, be Fined, and forſwear the Town for ever: If he be taken a ſecond time in the ſame Fact, to loſe the other Ear; and for the third Offence, to be put to Death.

All Strangers living within the Franchiſe, ſhall pay all Scotts in a proportion double to a Freeman.

If a Man be made Free, he muſt have, within a Year after, Lands, Goods, or Chattels, to the value of 40*s.* within the Town; or elſe his Franchiſe is forfeited. And the Jurats may not grant the Freedom to any one that is not Reſiant within the Franchiſe.

No Man may hold any Market from Sun-ſetting to Sun-riſing, except Fiſhermen.

In the 30th Year of King Edward the IIId, this Cuſtumale was returned into the Caſtle of Dover, under the Common Seal of Romney, by the Command of Sir Roger Mortimer Conſtable of Dover, and Warden of the Five Ports. And then alſo all the other Ports, Towns, and Members, returned in theirs.

In the Tower Records of the 18th Year of King Edward the Iſt, is mention made of a Place called Ingmaries, which is there ſaid to be a Member of this Port, and to have the ſame Privileges and Immunities with it, and the reſt of the Ports.

This new Town was doubtleſs once, tho' probably not of any great Antiquity, but ariſing when the Sea left the Old one, a very conſiderable Place, before the Harbour here was ſpoiled; of which more by and by: For there are a great many round Mounts of Earth caſt up about it, like the Sepulchral Lows or Tumuli; but they were certainly deſigned to ſet Wind-Mills upon to grind Corn, &c. for the Service of the Town, or for the Supply of ſome Trade here: And Lambard ſaith, that in King Edward the IIId's Reign, there were 300 Mills here, or rather at Old Romney. Kilburn ſaith, at the Time of the Conqueſt it had in it 12 Wards, a Priory, and an Hoſpital; Sir Robert Romney being then its Owner: I ſuppoſe he means Chief Lord of the Town. But according to Lambard, this muſt be underſtood of Old Romney; for of the New Romney he ſaith, he hath nothing to ſay, either from Records or Hiſtories, having in neither found any Thing about it, and Philpot mentions nothing at all of it. I muſt therefore refer all I have to ſay about the Harbour or Haven here to Old Romney, whither alſo the Cuſtumale abovementioned ought of Right rather to be referred.

But there is one Thing to be ſaid of this Town of New Romney, which, beſides its giving a Title to that Worthy Patriot, and ſteddy Aſſertor of the Laws and Conſtitution of our Countrey, the Preſent Lord Romney, ought to be recorded to the Honour of the Corporation of this Place, which is this:

In the laſt Year of King Charles the IId, a pretty large Stretch of Prerogative was exerciſed by the Crown.

There being then no Lord-Warden, becauſe the Duke of York, on the paſſing the Teſt Act, had laid down his Commiſſion; the King therefore himſelf, as Lord Warden, claimed a pretended Right of Recommending one Baron to Parliament in each of the Cinque Ports, and ſuch of their Members as were Parliamentary Burghs. And accordingly Colonel Strode, then Governor of Dover-Caſtle, ſent the following Circular Letter to all thoſe Places. Which was this:

A True Copy extracted by the Reverend Mr. Richard Forſter, Miniſter of Crundale, from the Records of New Romney.

Whitehall, Octob. 6. 1683.

"SINCE I return'd from my Circuit, I "have attended the King, and given his "Majeſty an Account of the good Condition "in which I found and left moſt of his Ports; "and of the Repeated Proteſtations many of "you had made, to perform thoſe Aſſurances of "Duty and Loyalty, expreſs'd in your late Ad-"dreſs. "It is his Majeſty's Pleaſure, that your juſt "Rights and Privileges be continued to, and "enjoy'd by you; and that thoſe of the Lord-"Warden may not be invaded by your ſelves or "others.

"The Privileges which attend that great Of-"fice, are ſo very well known to you all, that "if any of them receive a Diminution by your "Means or Conſents, you cannot hope to ex-"cuſe your ſelves, under a Pretence of Igno-"rance. The Anſwer from the Town of Romney.

Honoured Collonel,

" YOUR Letter dated at Whitehall, the 6th " Inſtant October, and to us, with o- " thers, directed, we have this Day communi- " cated to the Corporation of this Town and " Port, at their common Aſſembly; and in the " Name and by the Direction of the ſaid As- " ſembly, We do aſſure your Honour, that We, " and all the Free-Men of this Place, are abun- " dantly ſatisfied with, and unanimouſly thank- " ful for his Sacred Majeſty's Approbation of " the Addreſs, made in our Names, by the late " Brotherhood and Gueſtling; whereunto we " reſolve to adhere, and to perform the ſame in " every Particular. We do likewiſe moſt thank- " fully acquieſce in his Majeſty's Gracious Plea- " ſure, that We ſhall enjoy all our Rights and " Privileges. We have always been very tender " of the Lord Warden's Rights, and will by no " Means invade, violate, or deny any Privilege, " Power, or Pre-eminence of Right belonging " to that Honourable Office. But if any En- " croachments have been made by any Perſons, " acting under that great Officer, upon the An- " cient Cuſtoms and Conſtitutions of the Ports, " contrary to Right, We reſt ſatisfied with his " Majeſty's Royal Word, That the Law ſhall be " the Rule of his Government. And therefore " doubt not but our ancient and undoubted Pri- " vileges ſhall be fully and abſolutely continued " to us. What Power or Pre-eminence former " Lord Wardens have had or enjoy'd, in any " other of the Cinque Ports, Towns, or Mem- " bers, to recommend or nominate one Baron for each " Port to any Parliament, We know not. But We " are very well aſſur'd upon a diligent and im- " partial Survey of our ancient Books and Re- " cords, that former Lord-Wardens never had " any Power of Nomination in this Town, that " could or ever did exclude the Mayor, Jurats, " and Freemen from their free Election of " whom they by a Majority of Voices thought " fit according to the Law, and the uſual Te- " nor of Writs to ſummon Parliaments: or that " could oblige them to chuſe the Perſons ſo no- " minated, and no other. And though ſome " former Lord-Wardens have ſent Letters re- " queſting or deſiring ſome particular Man's Election; " and this Corporation liking the Perſon ſo no- " minated, have elected him accordingly: Yet " at other Times, they have according to their " ancient Right, refuſed the Party ſo recom- " mended, and choſe another. And therefore " We take it to be our ancient and undoubted Right " and Privilege, as well by the eſtabliſh'd Laws, " as by the Cuſtoms of this Town and Port, " that We in this Town are freely to chuſe two " of our Com-barons to every Parliament. And " that as We humbly conceive, no Perſon what- " ſoever, according to our Conſtitution, hath " had, or lawfully ought to have any Power of " Nomination, to controul the Freedom of our " Elections; which Right and Privilege We may " not depart from, but are oblig'd by our Oaths " (amongſt others) in a due Submiſſion to his " Majeſty's Laws, and with Reſolutions of Duty " and Obedience to our dread Sovereign, and his " Authority, to ſtand by: having no Deſigns ſo " much as to endeavour the leaſt Diminution of " any juſt Right appertaining to the Lord-War- " den's Office; but rendring our Thanks to your " Honour for your continued Favour to this " Town; We ſubſcribe our ſelves,

Your Honour's moſt humble Servants,

From Romney, under the Seal of Office of Mayoralty there, this 19*th of* October, 1683.

The Mayor and Jurats of the Town and Port of New-Romney.

Anno 1. Jac. 2. 1684. Sir Benjamin Bathurſt was recommended from the King by Colonel Strode's Letter to the Town and Port of New Romney, for one of their Barons to ſerve in Parliament —— In their Anſwer to which, they inſiſt upon the Freedom of their Election, according to their late Plea, in 1683. many Particulars whereof they repeat, but at laſt conclude:

" We do aſſure your Honour, that we ſhall " have a tender Regard to his Majeſty's Letter " of Recommendation, as becomes his Maje- " ſty's Dutiful and Loyal Subjects: ſaving to " our ſelves our juſt Rights and Properties, we " remain, &c.

20. Mar. 1684.

After which indeed, Sir Benjamin Bathurſt was choſen here to that Parliament.

This was a very honeſt Effort in thoſe terrible Times: After the Revolution, a Proviſion was made to prevent ſuch Breaches as theſe upon the Freedom of Elections. In the 1ſt Year of King William and Queen Mary, the Bill of Rights provides in general for the ſaid Freedoms of Elections to Parliament; but in the 2d Year of King William and Queen Mary, there paſſed an Act which had an expreſs and particular Regard to this bold Invaſion upon the ancient Rights and Privileges of the whole Ports; for it provides for ever hereafter againſt all Pretenſions in the Lord-Warden to nominate or recommend Perſons to be choſen Members in any of the Ports, Two ancient Towns, or their Members, &c.

How many, or whether any of the Ports, beſides this gallant Town, refuſed to comply with this Demand of the Crown, I can't find: I am informed none of them did. But in the next Parliament, which was ſummoned in the 2d Year of King James the IId, this Pretenſion of the Crown took effect in Rye and Winchelſea; for thoſe two ancient Towns returned Sir Thomas Jenner from the former, and Lord Middleton from the latter, in Purſuance of that Claim in the Crown to recommend.

Old Romney and Lidd are both Members of this Port; which as Camden obſerves, is ſeated on an Hill of Gravel and Sand; and had formerly on the Weſt of it a pretty good and large Haven, which was guarded againſt moſt Winds, before the Sea left it. And it appears by Domeſday Book, that the Inhabitants of this, or rather indeed of the Old Romney, on the Account of their Sea Services, were exempt from all Cuſtoms, except Robbery, Breach of the Peace, and Foreſtall.

Leland in his Collect. Vol. 3. ſaith, that New Romney was once a meetly good Haven; inſomuch, as within the Remembrance of Men, Ships have come up hard to the Town, and caſt Anchor in one of the (deſolate) Church-yards: But ſaith he, the Harbour is now two Miles from the Town; which is ſo ſorely decayed thereby, that where there were three great Pariſhes and Churches ſome Time, there is now ſcant one well maintained.

Such double Miſchief hath the Sea often done to the Towns in the Marſh, both by overflowing and deſerting them.

In the Charter of King Eadbriht to the Priory of Canterbury, ſaith Somner, R. Port. p. 53, it appears that at Romney was then the Mouth of the River Rother: And there is mention made of a Place called St. Martin's Oratory, which was one of the Pariſh Churches: But it ſeems to have ſtood ſo near it, as rather to have belonged to Old Romney; and I believe New Romney was not then in Being.

ROMNEY Old, lies at the South East Side of Kent, about a Mile and an half towards the West from New Romney, in the Bailiwick and Lath of Shipway, and East Diviſion of the County.

It was, ſaith Kilburn, anciently a principal Port; and its Antiquity gave Occaſion for the Addition of the Word New, to the preſent Port of Romney: This was a Port in the Time of King Edward the Confeſſor; for then Earl Godwin, A. D. 1053. came into the Harbour here, and carried off all the Ships, and other Veſſels. At the Time of the Norman Invaſion, a Ship of Duke William's put in here, but was ſo ill uſed by the Inhabitants, that after the Battel of Haſtings, he came hither on purpoſe to revenge it. The Account of this Town in Domeſday ſtands thus:

In Romenal ſunt 85 Burgenſes, qui pertinent ad Aldington Manerium Archiepiſcopi & valuerunt, & modo valent Domino, 6 lib.

It was then in the Poſſeſſion of Robert de Romney, who held it of Odo, Brother to King William the Iſt; in it he had 13 Burgeſſes. In King Henry the IId's Time when Becket thought it beſt to fly from that Prince's Diſpleaſure, he came hither to take Shipping for France, but was driven back again by contrary Winds; which ſhews that it was then a good Port; but by the Sea's withdrawing it ſelf from it, and as Kilburn ſaith, by a dreadful Tempeſt which happened in the Night of Nov. 23. A. D. 1334. was ſo damaged, as thereby to become impoveriſhed, and could never after recover. Lambard ſaith this Storm carried away above 300 Mills and Houſes; and did alſo great Injury to the Marſh.

So much of it as in the Liberty of the Cinque Ports, is a Member of the Town and Port of New Romney, and in the Diviſion of the Juſtices of the ſame. But the Burgh of Orwelſton, which is alſo within the Liberty of the Ports, is claimed to belong to the Corporation of Lidd, though reputed a Member of New Romney; and is in the Hundred of Long-Port, and in the Diviſion of Juſtices of the Corporation aforeſaid, which hath Right to the ſame.

The Liberty of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury claims over ſo much of this Pariſh as is in the Manor of Aghne, otherwiſe called Agonbee; which was granted to that Church by King Offa, A. D. 791.

The Liberty alſo of Romney Marſh claims over a Part of this Pariſh, which Part is in the Diviſion of the Juſtices of the Corporation of the Marſh. And the reſt of the Pariſh, which is out of all the Corporations aforeſaid, is Part of it in the Hundred of Long-Port, and Part in the Hundred of St. Martin's, and all in the Diviſion of Juſtices in the Lath of Shipway.

It is all of it in the Deanery of Limpne, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. And the Church which is dedicated to St. Clement, with the Houſes and Street adjacent, is in the aforeſaid Liberty of New Romney.

This Pariſh is a Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 15 l. 19 s. 2 d. per Ann.

I am inclined to think that Two of the Seven or Eight Churches, ſaid to have been formerly in New Romney, did in Reality belong to the Old; for they are much nearer to this than to New Romney; the famous Part of which Town no doubt lay more down towards the Sea: So that this Place may have been alſo much more conſiderable formerly, than it hath been of late Years. Though I don't take either of them to have had any very great Antiquity; I mean as early as the Romans Time; for no Remains of the Settlements of thoſe People have been ever here found, neither Veſſels, Weapons, Urns, nor Coins, that ever I could hear of: And it is very probable that the whole Marſh was then all under Water, eſpecially at full Sea. Though perhaps the Romans about the Time of their going off from this Iſland, might have taught the Britains the Way of it, and put them upon draining Romney Marſh: And alſo how to keep the Sea off from it, and to gain the Land.

Places of Note here:

1. Agne Court, which Philpot makes the ſame with Orgarſwicke; a Place not far from this Town, and which was anciently a Pariſh by it ſelf, and hath been ſpoken of before in its proper Place. He thinks the Unhealthfulneſs of its Situation made it be deſerted; which is not improbable. He ſaith this, as well as Old Romney, was given to the Priory of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury by King Offa, as above-mentioned; and I ſuppoſe with that, was, at the general Diſſolution of the Abbeys, ſettled by King Henry the VIIIth, on his new founded Cathedral Church there.

2. Bere, or Berry-Court; this is but a ſmall Manor, but hath been eminent, ſaith Philpot, for its large Quit-Rents, and other appendant Services. In the 20th Year of King Henry the IIId, it had a Poſſeſſor of its own Name, Nicholas de Bere, whoſe Father Richard de Bere was one of the Recognitores Magnæ Aſſiſæ, in the 2d Year of King John, and ſat to determine the great Controverſy between Richard de Garwinton and Theobald de Twitham, concerning Lands in Ilding in Kingſton Pariſh in this County. But in the 20th Year of King Edward the IIId, Robert Forneaux, Robert Atwood, and Thomas Tutwiſe, paid Aid for it at making the Black Prince Knight; and in or before the Beginning of King Richard the IId, it was got into the Poſſeſſion of Sir Robert Belknap the Judge; and on his Attainder and Baniſhment it came to the Crown, where it ſtaid till the 13th Year of King Richard the IIId, and then was granted to John Brockman; from which Name it went ſome-how, in King Henry the VIIIth's Reign, into the Poſſeſſion of John Newland, and about the End of Queen Elizabeth was alienated to Sir George Perkins, and thence it paſſed the ſame Way in the next Reign to Mr. —— Aldridge of Tilers near Reading, who was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

The Judicious Mr. Somner in his Roman Ports and Forts, labours hard to prove that New Romney was the ancient Portus Lemanis; and becauſe the Diſtance from Canterbury in the Itinerary of Antoninus, will not agree hereunto; he corrects the Numbers, and inſtead of XVI, would have it read XXI Miles; which is indeed the Diſtance between Canterbury and New Romney: He thinks alſo that the Name of New Romney, came from its being the καινὸν λιμὴν, or Novus Portus; but Mr. Camden and Mr. Burton think that καινὸν was not Part of the ancient Name, but thruſt in by the Librarians. And Mr. Somner himſelf ſaith alſo, that he thinks the Epithet of New to have been rather given to this Place long ſince that, and to diſtinguiſh it from Old Romney: though he finds, he ſaith, this Diſtinction to have been above 500 Years old. And it is not unlikely, that the River Rother, which anciently ran along under the Hills, and diſembogu'd into the Sea, near Stutfall Caſtle, under Limne Hill, where was the ancient Portus Lemanis, might in Courſe of Time, by the terrible Alterations which the Sea made in and about that large Tract of Ground, called Romney Marſh, come to run out into the Sea firſt at Old and afterwards at

New Romney: And I agree with Somner in believing that here might be then a large and commodious Harbour; but this will not make good his Notion, that the Old Portus Lemanis was at New Romney. I agree with him also, that this River Rother was anciently called Limene; as it is in the Grant of Ethelbert, Son of Wightred King of Kent, about the Year 721; as also in another of King Eadbright, dated 741; and in the Saxon Annals, An. 893. And I doubt not but that this is the River which in Archbishop Plegmund's Grant, and which is cited by Mr. Somner, is called Rumenea. And he shews from a Charter of King Offa about the Year 774, that the Sea flowed in between Lidd and Romney, with a wide and spacious Opening into the Mouth of the Limene; for in the Year 893, it was capacious enough to hold a Fleet of 250 Sail of Danes; as I shall take notice of in another Place. And from another Charter of King Eadbright to the Church of Canterbury, he makes it probable, that the Mouth of the River Limen or the Rother, was then near to New Romney.

But as he observes also from Matthew Paris, A. D. 1250, there was such a terrible Inundation of the Sea on this Coast, that at Old Winchelsea above 300 Houses and some Churches were overthrown by it. And he cites an ancient French Chronicle, which he saw in Sir Simon D'ewes his Library: That again, A. D. 1286. on the 2d of the Nones of February, the Sea here in Romney Marsh, as well as in the Isle of Thanet, and other Places, came in so as to overflow all the Grounds and break down all the Walls; so that from the great Wall at Apuldre, as far as Old Winchelsea, towards the South and West, all the Land lay under Water. And this last falls in with what Camden saith; viz. that in the 15th Year of King Edward the Ist, the Sea being driven by the Violence of the Winds, did overflow this Tract of Land, and made pitiful Waste of the People, Houses, and Cattle in every Place; quite drowning Promehill (or Bromehill) a pretty Town well frequented, and making the Rother forsake his former Channel, which before ran into the Sea here, quite stopp'd up its Mouth, and opened a new and nearer Way for it into the Sea, at Rye.

It appears also from the Letters Patents of King Edward the IIId, in his 11th Year, to the Archbishop and Prior of Christ-Church in Canterbury, that the old Channel between Romney and Appledre, had been then unserviceable and stopp'd up for about 30 Years, (which falls in with the Time of the Inundation above-mentioned:) And afterwards A. D. 1334, a new one was made.

The old Chanel of the Rother, which came from Apuldre hither, is in Part visible to this Day; and it seems to have entred the Sea in or near Belgar Grounds, by Linkhook Gate; as you will find it described in the Map of Romney Marsh, which I have given you from Mr. Dugdale's History of Imbanking and Draining.

And from the same Author I find that in the 42d, and 43d Year of King Henry the IIId, the King being informed that his Haven of Rumenale, alias Romney in Kent, was in Danger of being destroyed by the Stoppage of the River of Newenden; (i. e. the Rother or Limen which runs by Newenden, the ancient Anderida) sent into these Parts with Power to enquire into the true State of them, Nicholas de Handloe, soon after made Lord Borstall; but there being no great Matters done by him, the King by another Precept dated at Oxford, June 21. commanded him to repair hither in Person; and in Consort with the Sheriff of Kent, and Twenty four Knights, to examine into, and to remedy the Damage done, and likely farther to be done, by the above-said Stoppage: For 'tis said that the Course of the River was diverted from going to Romney by the overflowings of the Sea, from the Parts about Old Winchelsea. Handlo reported that the said River could not be brought again to this Town, by its former Channel; nor could any New one be made, except the Stoppages and Obstructions in the former Course of the River were removed, and a new one dug near the old Course; viz. from a certain Cross belonging to the Hospital of infirm People at Rumenale to Effetone and thence to Malepind, and thence descending unto the said Port; so that a Sluice be laid under the Town of Apuldre, for the Reception of the Salt Water, entring into the said River by the Inundation of the Sea from the Parts of Winchelsea, &c. p. 20.

And as to the Letters-Patents of the 11th Year of King Edward the IIId above-mentioned, thus the Matter stands in Dugdale, pag. 43, 44.

In the 11th Year of King Edward the IIId, upon a Writ, Ad quod Dampnum, the Jury certified, That it would not be prejudicial to the King, or any other, if License were given to John, then Archbishop of Canterbury, to suffer an ancient Trench leading from and to the Priory of Christ-Church, from an Arm of the Sea, called Apuldre, towards the Town of Romney, which passed through the proper Soil of the said Archbishop and Prior, and which was then newly so obstructed by the Sea Sands, that Ships could not pass thereby to the said Town of Romney, as they had used; to be wholly stopp'd up and filled; so that the Archbishop and Prior might make their Benefit thereof, as they thought fit, in regard that there was a certain other Trench leading from the said Arm unto Romney, lately made by the Force of the Sea, by which Ships and Boats might pass without Impediment to the said Town, as they had wont to do by the other, before it was so filled up. And they said also that the said ancient Trench was the proper Soil of the Archbishop and Prior, and of Margaret de Basinges; and that it had been so obstructed for more than 30 Years last past, by the Silt and Sea Sands, as that Ships could not conveniently pass that Way; and that the new Trench was more proper and sufficient, whilst it was open, than the old one, for the Passage of Ships to Romney above-mentioned, and did so remain at that Time; also that the new Trench was the Soil of the Archbishop, Prior, and Margaret de Basinges, and of the Abbot of Roberts-Bridge: And lastly that the said old Trench was in Length 700 Perches, and in Breadth 10; and the new one 500 Perches, and in Breadth 20.

I judge these two Trenches to have tended towards Lidd; because I find in Dugdale's Map the Remains of a Place called Romney Gutt, lying that Way; and perhaps after the Sea had left passing by the Rhee Wall, as it seems anciently to have done, it made it self (in that great Disorder and Inundation which then happened in the Marsh) some other Channels to meet the Rother, before it came to fix it self at last at Rye, where it is now.

Mr. Somner thinks also that the Place called Holme, where, according to the Saxon Chron. A. D. 902, or as some other Authors have it, 904, a signal Victory was obtained by the Kentish Men over the Danes, near this Town of New Romney; because he saith there is a Place there called the Holms, but I know of no such Place near Romney: There is indeed a Place South Westward from Lidd, which is called Holmstone, which we ride by, when we go between Lidd and Rye, the Sea Coast Way: This is to this Day pretty thick set with Holly or Holm-Trees, though the Ground be nothing but a stony ny Beach; and therefore it juſtly deſerves that Name of Holmſtone: And 'tis probable enough this might be the Place where the great Slaughter of the Danes happen'd; (if the Scene of that Action lay hereabouts); for 'tis ſaid the Engliſh purſued them to their Ships, which 'tis likely might lye off of the Mouth of the Rother or Limen, which then opened into the Sea, not far from hence, between Lidd and Romney.

RUCKING, Roking, Rocinge, lies towards the South Eaſt Part of Kent, about Five Miles North Weſtward from New Romney, in the Bailiwick and Lath of Shipway, and Eaſt Diviſion of the County. Part of it is in the Hundred of Ham, and the reſt in that of Newchurch. 'Tis all in the Deanery of Limpne, and Dioceſe of Canterbury: The Church ſtands in the Hundred of Newchurch, out of the Liberty of the Marſh; and is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen. A Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 14*l.* 13 s. 5 d.

The Liberty of Romney Marſh claims over ſome Part of the Pariſh, as Wye Liberty doth over another; and That of the Dean of Canterbury claims over ſo much of it as is in the Manors of Ickham and Rucking; which were given to that Church by King Henry the VIIIth in his 33d Year.

That Part which is in the Liberty of the Marſh is in the Diviſion of the Juſtices of the Corporation of Romney Marſh, and the reſt in that of the Juſtices of the Lath of Shipway.

Places of Note here:

1. Rucking Manor was firſt given to the Church of Canterbury by King Offa, A. D. 791. ad Paſcua Porcorum for the Feeding of their Hogs.

A Fair was granted to this Place on St. Mary Magdalen's Day; and allowed by the Juſtices Itinerant in the 7th Year of King Edward the Iſt's Reign.

2. Barbodinden is a Manor here, which had anciently Owners of that Name; for William de Barbodinden died poſſeſs'd of it in the 9th Year of King Edward the IIId; and his Son John de Barbodinden paid Aid for it at making the Black Prince Knight. After theſe were gone, it was in the Poſſeſſion of Sir Robert Belknap the Judge, who died in the 2d Year of King Henry the IVth, and left it by Will to his Son John Belknap; and he about the Beginning of King Henry the VIth, alienated it to Engham; and from thence it went the ſame Way to Sir Matthew Brown; whoſe Son Thomas Brown, Eſq; in the laſt Year of King Edward the VIth, ſold it to Anthony Lovelace, Eſq; whoſe Succeſſor Richard Lovelace in King Charles the Iſt's Time, parted with it the ſame Way to Mr. Richard Hulſe, deſcended from the ancient Family of Hulſe, of the Burgh of Hulſe, in Namptwich in the County of Cheſter, who was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

In the 21ſt Year of King Edward the Iſt, a Complaint was made to the Juſtices Itinerant, that the Inhabitants of the Burgh of Roking, which were Tenants to the Prior of Chriſt-Church, had not paid their accuſtomed Attendance at the Hundred Courts as they uſed to do; and the Prior could not excuſe them; ſo they were ordered to pay their uſual Service.

RYARSH, Reyerſh, vulgarly Raſh; in the Textus Roffenſis Reierſcæ, lies towards the Middle of Kent, by the River Medway, about a Mile Northward from Weſt-Malling, in the Bailiwick of Hoo, Hundred of Larkfield, Lath of Aylesford, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and South one of Juſtices in that Lath.

It is in the Deanery of Malling, and Dioceſe of Rocheſter; and the Church is dedicated to St. Martin. 'Tis a ſmall one with a Tower Steeple; in it are no Monuments nor Inſcriptions; but there are the Stairs which went up to, and ſome Remainders of, a Roodloft ſtill in Being.

A Vicarage and valued in the King's Books at 8*l.* 10*s.* 10*d.*

Places of Note here.

1. Ryarſh Manor. This Place did anciently belong to the Family of the Creſcies: Hugh de Creſcie died poſſeſſed of it in the 47th Year of King Henry the IIId; and probably deſcended from that Creſcie, who is mentioned in the Battel Abbey Roll. Next it came into the Poſſeſſion of the Says of Coldham; and Geoffery de Say died ſeized of it in the 15th Year of King Edward the IId: After this it came into the Family of the Mowbrays; for Elizabeth, Relict of Thomas Duke of Norfolk, and Daughter of Richard Earl of Arundel, held it at her Death, in the 3d Year of King Henry the VIth; and her Son John Mowbray Duke of Norfolk died alſo poſſeſſed of it eight Years after. Next the Nevils Barons of Bergavenny, had it in Poſſeſſion; and here it continued till the 29th Year of Queen Elizabeth, and then Henry Lord Nevill, dying without Iſſue, it went with much other Land to his Brother Sir Edward Nevill; and his Grandſon John Lord Nevil was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time; and in that Noble Family I ſuppoſe it ſtill continues.

2. Carews-Court. This was for many Deſcents the Inheritance of an Eminent Family of the Name of Carew; but in the Reign of King Henry the VIth, Nicholas Carew ſold it to Thomas Watton; and he on his Deceaſe ſettled it on his Nephew William Watton; and in his Deſcendant of the ſame Name William Watton of Addington did the Poſſeſſion continue in Philpot's Time.

The Countrey hereabouts is very pleaſant, and finely watered with good Springs and Brooks.

There was in the 7th Year of King Edward the Iſt, an Eſtate in this Pariſh, which was claimed by one John de Ryerſh; but he was not able to make good his Claim before the Juſtices Itinerant; who adjudged the Land to belong to Felicia the Relict of William Falinchewalle.

SALTWOOD lies near the South Eaſt Side of Kent, about a Mile North Weſtward from Hithe, in the Bailiwick of Stouting, Hundred of Heane, Lath of Shipway, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of Juſtices in that Lath. In the Deanery of Elebam, and Dioceſe of Canterbury. The Church is dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul. 'Tis a Rectory, and with the Chapel of Hithe annexed, is valued in the King's Books at 34*l. per Ann.*

In the Church is a Memorial of the Interment of Thomas Brokhill, in 1437.

The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims here over the Manor of Saltwood, which was given to that Church by a certain Prince called Halden, A. D. 1036.

Places of Note here:

1. Saltwood-Caſtle. This will be ſpoken of in the Chapter of Caſtles; only let me obſerve now, that there is a Paved Way made after the Manner of the Roman Conſular Ways; not only all the Way up the Hill to the Caſtle, but alſo above a Mile further on towards the old Stone-ſtreet Cauſey; which ſeems to indicate, as Dr. Plott in a Manuſcript which I have of his, obſerves, That the Romans after having loſt their old Portus Lemanis manis under Stutfall Caſtle, and even that at Weſt Hithe, and at Buttolph's Bridge afterward, and being now come to make uſe of Hithe, as ſuch, did endeavour to join it into their former Way from Stutfall to the old Duroverum or Canterbury, for the better Convenience of Travelling. And if it be true, what is generally reported as ſuch, that an Anchor was plowed up in the Valley near Saltwood Caſtle, about 30 or 40 Years ago, 'tis probable that formerly the Sea ran or flowed up into that Valley, and made there by that Means the firſt Port of Hithe, about the Time of Old Romney's being made a Port; as the preſent Port of Hithe perhaps was made one, about the Time of New Romney's being ſo.

And Philpot takes the Name of this Place, which in Latin is written de Salſo Boſco, to be a good Reaſon to conclude that the Sea once came up much nearer to it than it doth at preſent.

2. Saltwood Manor. This, as is above-mentioned, was given to the Priory of Chriſt-Church, in Canterbury, A. D. 1036; Philpot ſaith 1096. And thus the Entry of it ſtands in the Book of Domeſday.

In Limwarlæd in Hundred. de Hede habet Hugo de Munford de terrâ Monachorum j. Manerium de Saltwoode de Archiepiſcopo; & Comes Godwinus tenuit illud & tunc ſe defendebat pro vij. Sulling. & nunc ſunt v. & tamen non Scottent niſi pro iij. & in Burgo de Hede ſunt cc. & xxv. Burgenſes qui pertinent huic Manerio, de quibus non habet Hugo niſi iij. forisfacta. Et eſt appretiatum xxviij. lib. & vj. ſol. & iv. den.

This Manor was formerly accounted as an Honour, becauſe a great many other Manors in this Tract held of it in Knight's Service; and the Archbiſhops of Canterbury had here a magnificent Caſtle, and a Park well ſtored with Deer.

3. Brochill. This is an old Manſion Houſe of Stone, ſituate on the Side of a ſteep Hill, and was anciently the Seat of the Eminent Family of Brochull or Brockhill; ſeveral of which were Knights, and ſerved as Knights of the Shire for this County in Parliament, in the Reigns of King Edward the IIId and IVth. Margaret the Wife of William Brochill, built the Iſle in the North Side of the Church: Of which there was a Memorial in the Eaſtern Glaſs Window of the ſame in an old Character, and thus preſerved by Philpot, viz. Margareta la Femma Gillam de Brockhilla fio fera ſata ſhapella. From this Place the Brochills or Brockhulls of Calehill, and Aldington Septvans in Thornham were derived: But this Eſtate left the Name by means of Elizabeth Daughter of Thomas Brockhull, who as his Heir carried it in Marriage to Richard Selling; and from thence by another Marriage of a Female Heir, it went into the Name of Tournay; and there I ſuppoſe the Poſſeſſion continued in Philpot's Time.

SANDHERST, lies about the Middle of the South Side of Kent, by the River Rother, adjoining to Suſſex, about Four Miles South Eaſtward from Cranbrook, in the Bailiwick of the Seven Hundreds, in the Hundred of Selbrittenden, Lath of Scray, Weſt Diviſion of the County, and Lower one of Juſtices in that Lath. 'Tis in the Deanery of Charing, and Dioceſe of Canterbury; and the Church is dedicated to St. Nicholas.

A Rectory, and valued in the King's Books at 20 l. per Ann.

In the North Chancel of this Church was formerly the Picture and the Arms of Betherinden: But they are now quite gone.

The Liberty of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury claims here over the Manor of Betheringden, otherwiſe called Sandhurſt; as being given to that Church by Offa King of Mercia, A. D. 791.

A Fair is kept here annually on December the 6th, being St. Nicholas's Day.

Places of Note here:

1. Sandherſt Place, as is above-ſaid belonged antiently to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury. This is the principal Seat in the Pariſh.

2. Betherinden; this had formerly Poſſeſſors of that Name. John de Betherinden died ſeized of it in the Reign of King Edward the IIId; but by a Daughter it went into the Family of Finch; where it remained till the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth, and then was ſold to Pelham; from which Name it went the ſame Way to Fowle; one of whoſe Deſcendants was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

3. Aldrinden is a Manor here, which alſo had formerly Owners of that Name: Of which Roger de Aldrinden, as Philpot ſaith, was the laſt here: By his Daughter and Heir Chriſtian Aldrinden, it went by Sale in the 22d Year of King Edward the IIId. to John Selbrittenden; who not long after ſold it to Thomas Bourn; whoſe Deſcendant John Bourn, in the 4th Year of King Edward the IVth, deviſed it by Will to Joan his Female Heir, and ſhe carried it in Marriage to Thomas Allard; whoſe Grandſon John Allard alienated it to Mr. John Twiſden, in the 30th Year of King Henry the VIIIth. And his Deſcendant Mr. William Twiſden, in the Beginning of King James the Iſt, ſold it to Thomas Downton, Eſq; whoſe Son Richard Downton, Eſq; of Middleſex, was the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

4. Cambden. This Manor was anciently Part of the Poſſeſſions of Fulk de Ballard, who paid Aid for it in the 20th Year of King Henry the IIId. But in King Richard the IId's Reign it was got into the Poſſeſſion of the Whitfields; in which Name it continued till Sir Ralph Whitfield ſettling it by Will on his Daughter Dorothy; it went by her in Marriage to John Fotherby, Eſq; the Poſſeſſor in Philpot's Time.

5. Twiſden-Street or Burgh; which anciently hath been the Seat of ſome of the Family of that Name: And Philpot thinks that they lived here, when they wrote themſelves, as it ſeems formerly they did in Latin, De Denna fractâ; and he thinks their Name of Twiſden came from hence; it ſignifying a Valley broken into two Parts.

SANDWICH, Sondwic, Sabulovicum, the Sandy Town. But Darell in his Manuſcript of Dover-Caſtle, ſaith, that this Name of Sandwich was not uſed till King Cnute's Time; but in that you will find below he was miſtaken: And that the Sea here was called Mare Wantſummum; (i. e. perhaps,) the deficient Sea, becauſe it had left the Town.

In the Saxon Time it was called Lundenwic or the Port of London; becauſe it was the Place where ſuch as were bound to London from France firſt landed at.

It lies at the Eaſtern Side of Kent, very near the Sea, and ſeparated only by a ſmall Chanel, wherein the Sea flows up, from the Iſle of Thanet: about Nine Miles and an half Eaſtward from Canterbury; in the Bailiwick of Eaſtry, Lath of St. Auſtin, Eaſt Diviſion of the County, and Diviſion of the Town and Port of Sandwich. (For it is one of the Cinque Ports.) The Liberties whereof, and of the Five Ports, claim over the ſame: The Liberty of St. Auſtin alſo claimeth here.

Anciently it was an Hundred by it ſelf; and in the Time of King Edward the Confeſſor there were 307 Houſes in it.

It now is, and for many Years paſt, hath been a Corporation; incorporated in the Time of King Edward the IIId, by the Name of the Mayor, Jurats, and Commonalty of the Town and and Port of Sandwich; and before that, by the Name of Barons of the Town of Sandwich. And they were then Endowed with all thoſe Liberties which they had granted to them from King Edward the Confeſſor, and King William the Firſt.

The Mayor was Anciently Elected on the Monday after St. Andrew's Day, in St. Clement's Church, where a Bell was Rung for that Purpoſe: But on Occaſion of ſome Riots and Diſorders there, by a Royal Mandate, Dated 1683, it was ordered for the future, to be in the Court-Hall.

Their Seal hath on one Side a Ship; and on the other, a Lion Paſſant Guardant and Crowned.

The Town is in the Deanery of Sandwich, and Dioceſe of Canterbury: And in it there were Anciently Four Churches; viz. St. James, which is now Demoliſhed. This Ancient Church, which they called alſo St. Jacobs, was Situated on the South Side of the Town, not far from St. Maries; and a long while after it was down, its Church-yard remained, (as I find by ſome Manuſcripts kindly communicated to me by Mr. Fellows of this Town;) and was a Burying-Place for Strangers.

In this Church there was always an Hermit; and the laſt of them, in King Henry the VIIIth's Reign, was one John Steward, who was made Miniſter of St. Maries.

N. B. This Church was not quite Demoliſhed till King Edward the VIth's Reign.

The other Churches are St. Clements, St. Peters, and St. Maries, which are now Standing, and have been treated of already under their proper Names.

A Market is here kept on Wedneſday and Saturday; and a Fair for Three Days, at November 23, being St. Clement's Day.

This Place hath formerly been a ſtrong Town, being to this Day Walled in on the North and Weſt Sides, and on the others is defended with a Rampart and Ditch.

Philpot makes no Mention at all of Sandwich.

A. D 979, King Egelred, or Ethelred, gave Sandwich to the Priory of Canterbury, and in this Grant, Somner ſaith that the Name of Sandwich is firſt uſed; and that he had not met with it in any Writing before.

Alſo A. D. 1023, King Cnute gave the Port of Sandwich to the Priory of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury, with the Toll of the Village, Wreck of the Sea, and all other Cuſtoms belonging to the Port; which Gift was afterwards renewed and enlarged by King Henry the IId, who granted them the Cuſtoms of the Port of Sandwich on both Sides the Water; i. e. from Eadburgate unto Merkſfleet, and the Benefit of the Ferry-Boat, &c. excepting their Houſe and Keys; and a free Paſſage in the Haven, in a little Boat, there called a Vere-Boat. And he finiſhed the Buildings and Walls of this Town, which his Father Swayn had begun.

And A. D. 1031, he gave again this Port, and all its Royalties, to Chriſt-Church, as above: Which he did to make Expiation, (as the Notion then was, and ſtill is in Popiſh Countries,) for the Havock his Countrymen the Danes had made here before, of which below. He gave them alſo his Golden Crown, and St. Bartholomew's Arms, and a Rich Pall; and the Royalty of the Sea all about the Harbour, as far as a Man could throw a Hatchet, from on Board a Ship at high Water, to the Bank on Shore.

But A. D. 1290, the Priory of Chriſt-Church, in Exchange for Sixty Librates of Land elſewhere in Kent, and the Advowſons of Weſtclive and Weſtram, &c. ſurrendred all their Right in this Town, except ſome Houſes, and the Keys for Ships, to King Edward the Iſt.

And afterwards in King Edward the IIId's Reign, A. D. 1364, they again conveyed all their remaining Right here to the Crown, in Exchange for a Manor in Eſſex, called Borley.

This is the Account of this Town, as it ſtood in Domeſday-Book.

Sandwic eſt Manerium Sanctæ Trinitatis & de Veſtitu Monochorum & eſt Leth & Hundredus in Seipſo; & reddit Regi Servitium in Mare ſicut Dovera; qualitate ſcilicet non quantitate. Et Homines illius villæ antequam Rex eis dedit ſuas Conſuetudines reddebant xv l. Quando Archiepiſcopus recuperavit reddebat xi l. and xl millia de Alecibus. I find by ſome old Manuſcripts, that Anciently there were theſe Gates in Sandwich.

Canterbury-Gate,
Wodensbury-Gate,
Sandown-Gate,
Fiſhers-Gate,
New-Gate,
} which are ſtill Standing.

David's-Gate, over againſt which was a Place called the Barbican.

Fryers-Gate, which was at one End of the Corn-Market, and led down to the Friery of the Carmelites.

And I find alſo Mention of theſe following Streets, Lanes, &c. here, viz.

Strand-Street, Guild-Court-Street,
Butchery, Vicarage-Lane,
Hurnet-Street, Paradice-Lane,
Dolph-Street Moats-Soale,
Church-Street, Bowling-Alley.

King Edward the IId, by his Letters Patents, in the Thirteenth Year of his Reign, mentions a Licenſe before granted to the Barons of Sandwich, for the digging of a certain Trench over the Lands lying between Geſtling and Stonefleet, and from Stonefleet to Sandwich; to the Intent that the Paſſage of the Water called North-Brook, which was at Geſtling, ſhould be diverted ſo, that it might run to Sandwich, for the perpetual Commodity of the Town: And accordingly he aſſigned Solomon de Rocheſter, and Roger de Norwode, to enquire, by the Oaths of Honeſt and Lawful Men of the Country, in what Place the ſaid Trench, and over whoſe Lands, and to the leaſt Damage of the ſaid Landholders, it might be moſt fitly made: And that the turning of the ſaid Trench might do the Owners of the Lands, over which it was to paſs, no Damage.

But in the Sixth of King Edward the IId, the Jury of the Hundred of Cornilo, brought a Preſentment unto Harvie de Stantone, and his Fellow Juſtices Itinerant, at their Seſſions at Canterbury; Importing, that the Prior of Chriſt-Church did, about Ten Years before, divert the Courſe of a certain Water, called Geſtling, into which ſuch (a) Felons as were condemned to Death within the Hundred, ought to ſuffer Judgment by Drowning: But by his turning the Stream, they could not be ſo Drowned, which was to the Prejudice of the King, &c.

(a) She-felons, ſee Southfleet.

On

On this the Sheriff ſummoned a Jury; who gave upon their Oaths, that a certain Gutter, which the Prior had raiſed for Conveyance of Water from the upper Parts of the Country, (I ſuppoſe towards Sandwich, as above,) was both a Loſs to the King in a ſmall Fiſhery, which he had thereabouts before; and alſo that now there was not Water as formerly, enough to carry the dead Bodies of ſuch Felons as were drowned in the Geſtling out to Sea.

Whereupon the Sheriff had Orders to put the ſaid Trench or Gutter, into the State it was formerly in: And that the Earth raiſed without the Gutter, ſhould be thrown down at the Charge of the ſaid Prior, that ſo the Courſe of the Water might run as it did formerly. See Dugdale's Hiſtory of Inbanking, p. 36, 37, 41, 42.

A. D. 1286, a Precept was delivered to Three Juſtices, and to the Sheriff, to bring before them Twenty Four Men of Monkton and Minſter, in Thanet, which was done, and a Common Bailiff and Twelve Overſeers appointed to hold a Laſt here, as they do in Romney Marſh.

And the Year following, the ſame was done for the Hundreds of Eaſtry and Cornilo.

This Place hath been the Scene of a great deal of Action formerly; in many Inſtances of which, it hath been a great Sufferer.

A. D. 851, Ethelſtane, Son of Ethelwolfe, or as ſome ſay, his Brother, and youngeſt Son to Egbert, King of Kent; (who had the Kingdom of Kent, and of the South Saxons, left him by his Father's Will.) This Prince, with Ealker, or Ealchere, his General, gave a great Overthrow here, to a mighty Fleet and Army of the Danes, taking Nine of their Ships, and driving the reſt off.

993, Unlafe, the Dane, with 93 Ships, came to Sandwich, and did much Miſchief upon the Coaſts.

1006, A very great Fleet of the Danes lay in the Road, and their Men landed at Sandwich, and Ravaged Kent and Suſſex; upon which King Ethelred provided, that every Three Hundred and Ten Hides of Land ſhould furniſh out One Ship, and that every Eight Hides ſhould find One Jack and Sallet for the Defence of the Realm: And by this Means he fitted out a great Fleet, but they had no good Succeſs.

The Saxon Chronicle ſaith alſo, that A. D. 1009, the biggeſt Fleet and Army that had ever been raiſed in England, came hither; and here they reſolved to fix, and defend it againſt all Invaſions from Abroad; but the Expedition was unſucceſsful, and came to nothing: The Danes came hither, and drove them away.

1011, The Danes leaving their Winter Station about London, came to this Town with a great Fleet and Army, both becauſe the Haven was then very commodious, and alſo becauſe it was near Canterbury, which they deſign'd to Plunder and Ravage: And accordingly they put their Deſign in Execution in a moſt Barbarous and Savage Manner, as I ſhall more fully ſhew you in another Place.

1013, Swain, King of Denmark, landed firſt here, and then Sailed into the North of England.

A. D. 1015, Swane's Son Canutus, after having been beaten in Lincolnſhire, arrived here, and acted an Inhumane Tragedy upon King Ethelred's Friends and Hoſtages, ſlitting the Noſes of ſome, cutting off the Hands of others, &c. and then left them, and went Home to Denmark. But afterwards, as he landed here again, when he obtained the Kingdom of England, ſo he finiſhed the Buildings of this Town, which his Father had begun, and granted it a Charter, with many Privileges.

A. D. 1040, Hardicnute landed here with Sixty Ships, and an Army from Denmark; for on Harold's Death, the Engliſh had invited him to accept the Crown; and at this Town he was received with great Joy.

1046, Lochen and Irlinge, Two Daniſh Pirates, landed here with Thirty Five Ships, and loaded their Ships with Rich Spoils, which they carried over into Flanders, and there ſold them: They made alſo great Havock and Deſtruction here; and would have done ſo at Thanet, but there they were driven back.

1048, A Fleet of Daniſh Pirates landed here, and miſerably ſpoiled the Town.

1049, King Edward the Confeſſor Reſided here for a great while.

1052, Earl Godwin, and his Sons, Rendezvouzed here with their Fleet, and landed their Men, who marched to Southwark, where they were met by Godwin himſelf, who with the Fleet had ſailed up the Thames.

1052, King Edward fitted out a Fleet here againſt Godwin and his Sons; but a Tempeſt ſhattered it, and ill Management attended it, ſo that it did nothing, the Ships returning up the River.

But Godwin and Harold took all the Ships they could find in Romney, Hithe and Folkſtone; and landing here, and at Dover, they took many Priſoners out of both theſe Places; and then Sailing through Sandwich Harbour, out at Northmouth, towards London, ſome of their Fleet ſpoiled Shepey, and wholly burnt Milton, then called the King's Town.

1194. King Richard the Iſt landed here, after his Return from having been taken Priſoner, and was met at Rocheſter by Hubert, Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

1216, Lewis, the Dolphin of France, landed Firſt in the Iſle of Thanet, and then here at Sandwich, with a Fleet of Six Hundred Sail of Ships, and Eighty Boats; and here he tarried till the Barons came to him.

King John lay then with his Army at Dover; and as he marched off to Wincheſter, Lewis went on to Rocheſter. Kilburn ſaith, that at this Time he burnt this Town.

In the Reign of King Richard the IId, certain French Ships were taken, which had on Board ready Framed, and fitted to ſet up, a Timber Caſtle, (like that which King William the Firſt Erected at Haſtings, as ſoon as he Landed;) this they deſigned to have ſet up in ſome one of our Ports, where they could have gotten on Shore, in order to defend their Ships, and to ſecure themſelves a ſafe Paſſage to and from them. But after it was taken, it was ſet up here at Sandwich; where it did good Service to defend the Town and Harbour againſt the French.

As all theſe Hiſtorical Inſtances render this Place Famous formerly, and ſhew the various Accidents it hath been expoſed to, ſo they are good Proofs of the Town's having been Anciently very conſiderable; the Author of Queen Emma's Life, Printed at Paris 1619, ſpeaking of King Cnute's Landing here; he ſaith, Expectabili ordine, flatu ſecundo Sandwich, qui eſt omnium Anglorum Portuum famoſiſſimus appulſi, &c. And indeed it was then, and a long while after, the Principal Port in which the Royal Navy did uſe to lie; as it might very ſecurely do, in the State the Ancient Harbour of Sandwich was; of which more hereafter.

In King Edward the IVth's Reign, this Town had Ninety Five Ships belonging to it, and above above One Thouſand Five Hundred Sailors; and yielded the Crown between 16 and 17000 l. per Annum in its Cuſtoms: Nay, ſo late as the Beginning of King James the Firſt's Reign, the Cuſtoms here amounted to 2926 l. per Ann. but by that Prince's ſetting up the Company of Merchant Adventurers, and appropriating to them the Trade to Germany, the Low-Countries, &c. it ſoon fell to Decay. This I find repreſented in a Petition preſented to the Parliament, A. D. 1642.

In King Edward the Firſt's Reign, the Staple for Wool was placed here for a while; as it was alſo brought hither again in the Firſt of King Richard the IId. And it appears by our Chronicles, that in King Edward the IIId's Reign, the Proviſions and Stores for the Royal Navy were brought hither.

About the Year 1453, it appears to have been a very conſiderable Place for Trade: For in the Thirty Firſt Year of King Henry the VIth, it was Enacted in Parliament, that Edmund, Duke of Somerſet, late Captain of Calais, ſhould be paid 21648 l. 10 s. out of the Cuſtoms of the Staple Wares, which were carried out of the Port of Sandwich: And but a few Years after, the King ordered 20000 l. more to be paid out of the Cuſtoms here, and at Southampton.

About the Year 1457, Fifteen Thouſand French, under the Command of Sir Peter Breſſy; (Lambard calls him Price) Landed at Sandwich, killed the Mayor, and other Officers, ſpoiled and burnt the Town, and ſlew almoſt all the Inhabitants.

And but Two Years after, the Earl of Warwick, Governor of Calais, being in the York Intereſt againſt King Henry the VIth, ſent Sir John Denham, with ſome Ships, and Soldiers, hither; who entred the Haven and Town in the Night, took the Lord Rivers, and his Son the Lord Scales, Priſoners in their Beds, made himſelf Maſter of the King's Ships, and carried them with him into Ireland.

And the ſame Year, Five Hundred of the King's Soldiers waiting here to be Ship'd off for Calais, were Seized by the Earl of Warwick's Men; and Montford, their Captain, was killed.

In the Firſt and Second of Queen Elizabeth, a Petition was offered to her Majeſty, about mending the Haven, and One Thouſand Marks agreed on by the Town, to be levied there on the Inhabitants, for this Purpoſe. And,

A. D. 1573, That great Princeſs came in Perſon to this Town, and had a Gold Cup of 100 l. Value, preſented to her; and was entertained by the Mayor and Jurats Wives, in the Free-School, with One Hundred and Sixty Diſhes of Meat. But the Sand at the Mouth by degrees choaking up the Haven, it ſoon after fell into a State of Decay; and had done ſo much ſooner, but that it was in a good Meaſure ſupported by the Walloons, and other Proteſtant Refugees, who here ſet up, the firſt of any in England, publick Gardening, Sowing Canary-Seeds, &c. and by that Means kept the Town from running to Ruin. But it is now a very poor Place; though ſtill famous for Carrots, Beans, Artichokes, &c. and indeed the Soil is very good for all Sorts of Garden-Stuff.

Mr. John Somner, in his Roman Ports and Forts, p. 8. obſerves, that as between this Town and the Ancient Geſſoriacum, now doubtleſs Bolen in France, and which ſeems to have been the Portus Iccius, was the old and uſual Paſſage from France to England; as afterwards it came to be between Whitſand and Dover, and at laſt between Calais and Dover; ſo that the Diſtance in the Itinerary of Four Hundred and Fifty Stadia, agrees well with Modern Obſervations and Experience.

And he ſhews farther, that this Port of Sandwich, being the uſual Place of Landing for ſuch as were bound to London from France, loſt its old Name of Ritupium. (This will be fully diſcuſſed under Richborough,) and was by the Saxons called Lundenwic, or the Port of London.

And in the Book of St. Auſtin's in Canterbury, there is Mention made of a Charter granted by Ethelbald and Offa, and after confirmed by King Ethelbert, to St. Mildred, then Abbeſs of the Nunnery of Minſtre, in the Iſle of Thanet; of the Duties of all Ships coming into the Port of Lunden; by which, no doubt, is meant Sandwich.

In the Textus Roffenſis alſo is this Paſſage out of the Laws of King Lothair and Eadrick;

Gif Cantwara ænig in Lundenwic feoh ge bỹc ge hæbbe him thon twegen oth threo unfacne Ceorles to gewitneſſe, oth Cỹninges Wic-gerefan, &c.
